

MILTON

PARADES

LOST

828

M66p

V52

1910

cop. 2

PROPERTY OF
University of Michigan Libraries
1817

---

ARTES SCIENTIA VERITAS

---

MILTON, John

PARADISE LOST

Edited by

A. W. VERITY, M.A.

Sometime Scholar of Trinity College

Cambridge :
at the University Press

1910

828
M66p
V52
1910
Cop. 2

Cambridge:

PRINTED BY JOHN CLAY, M.A.

AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

M.C.

PREFACE

THIS edition of Paradise Lost is based on the smaller editions edited by me for the Pitt Press Series and issued between the years 1892 and 1896. All the editorial matter has been set up afresh and much of it recast; and a considerable amount of fresh material has been added.

I desire to repeat with emphasis the acknowledgment made in my earlier editions of my great indebtedness to previous editors. It is a pious pleasure to make special mention of the immortal labours of Todd and Masson; nor should Newton and Keightley be forgotten. An editor is powerless to estimate what he owes to them (above all, to Masson), and to others who have wrestled with the allusions of a poem that for its full elucidation would exhaust the last resources of scholarship. Some specific items, however, of my own obligations may be recorded here, while many instances are indicated in the course of the volume.

The text is founded on that of Masson's "Globe" edition, but with a simpler system of punctuation, such as I thought might be in rather closer conformity with the original.

Nearly all the biblical and classical references given in this volume have been pointed out by, and taken from, other editors.

A large proportion of the Milton references had their origin in the Concordance to Milton's poems by the American student Cleveland, a work of immense labour and great accuracy which has never, I think, received its due. I may mention in passing that, to prevent misconception, I avoided consulting at all the Milton Lexicon published recently by another American student. On the other hand, I have used with much profit the scholarly and exhaustive dictionary of The Classical Mythology of Milton's English Poems, by Mr C. G. Osgood, one of those fine studies in English literature for which we have to thank the University of Yale.

The extracts from the Milton mss. are quoted (without, of course, any modernisation) from the beautiful facsimile published by the University Press, under the editorship of the Vice-Master of Trinity College. The textual variations are shown so simply by the editor's very ingenious typographical arrangement that the work of collating is practically done away.

The extracts from Milton's prose works are taken from the edition published in "Bohn's Standard Library." Apart from my general indebtedness to this edition, I must note that its footnotes are the source of many of my references to Milton's Christian Doctrine.

All the translations of passages from Dante, and most of the Dante information, come from the editions of the "Temple" series. Except in a few specified cases, the passages are such as had struck me.

The etymological material of the Glossary, together with a great deal of other miscellaneous information throughout the volume, is summarised from standard works of reference. Unfortunately, in attempting to edit a vast work like Paradise Lost, one has to "get up" all sorts of subjects outside the scope of one's own circumscribed interests, and this rather involves the affectation of knowledge.

I owe not a little to the suggestions and criticisms of many unknown correspondents; and in going through examination-answers I have sometimes come across things that I was very glad to make a note of—which is not surprising, now that English is taught so well in many schools. I recollect that the note on II. 497—502 came in a schoolboy's answer.

The Indexes, apart from some expansion of the second, were compiled for me at the University Press; and it is a very great satisfaction to express my gratitude to the reader, or readers, of the Press whose vigilance over the proof-sheets has saved me from many slips.

I hope now that I have made adequate acknowledgment of my obligations; and perhaps it will not be undue egotism to add that in the course of twenty years of editing one necessarily accumulates a good deal of material and miscellanea.

A. W. VERITY.

BOSCOMBE,
November 16, 1909.

CONTENTS

	PAGES
INTRODUCTION . . . . .	xi—lxxii
PARADISE LOST . . . . .	1—362
NOTES . . . . .	363—658
APPENDIX . . . . .	659—692
GLOSSARY . . . . .	693—724
INDEXES . . . . .	725—750

INTRODUCTION

LIFE OF MILTON.

MILTON'S life falls into three clearly defined divisions. The first period ends with the poet's return from Italy in 1639; the second at the Restoration in 1660, when release from the fetters of politics enabled him to remind the world that he was a great poet; the third is brought to a close with his death in 1674. Paradise Lost belongs to the last of these periods; but we propose to summarise briefly the main events of all three.

John Milton was born on December 9, 1608, in London. He came, in his own words, ex genere honesto. A family of Miltons had been settled in Oxfordshire since the reign of Elizabeth. The poet's father had been educated at an Oxford school, possibly as a chorister in one of the College choir-schools, and imbibing Anglican sympathies had conformed to the Established Church. For this he was disinherited by his Roman Catholic father. He settled in London, following the profession of scrivener. A scrivener combined the occupations of lawyer and law-stationer. It appears to have been a lucrative calling; certainly John Milton (the poet was named after the father) attained to easy circumstances. He married about 1600, and had six children, of whom several died young. The third child was the poet.

The elder Milton was evidently a man of considerable culture, in particular an accomplished musician, and a composer whose madrigals were deemed worthy of being printed side by side with those of Byrd, Orlando Gibbons and other leading musicians of the time. To him, no doubt, the poet owed the love of music of which we see frequent indications in the poems<sup>1</sup>. Realising, too, that in his son lay the promise and possibility of future greatness, John Milton took the utmost pains to have the boy adequately educated; and the lines Ad Patrem show that the ties of affection between father and child were of more than ordinary closeness.

Milton was sent to St Paul's School about the year 1620. Here two influences, apart from those of ordinary school-life, may have affected him particularly. The headmaster was a good English scholar; he published a grammar containing many extracts from English poets, notably Spenser; it is reasonable to assume that he had not a little to do with the encouragement and guidance of Milton's early taste for English poetry<sup>2</sup>. Also, the founder of St Paul's School, Colet, had prescribed as part of the school-course the study of certain early Christian writers, whose influence is said to be directly traceable in Milton's poems and may in some cases have suggested his choice of sacred themes<sup>2</sup>. While at St Paul's, Milton also had a tutor at home, Thomas Young, a Scotchman, afterwards an eminent Puritan divine—the inspirer, doubtless, of much of his pupil's Puritan sympathies. And Milton enjoyed the signal advantage of growing up in the stimulating atmosphere of cultured home-life. Most men do not realise that the word 'culture' signifies anything very definite or desirable before they pass to the University; for Milton, however, home-life meant, from the first, not only broad interests and refinement, but active encouragement towards literature and study. In 1625 he left St Paul's. Of his extant English poems<sup>3</sup> only one, On the

<sup>1</sup> Milton was very fond of the organ; see Il Penseroso, 161, note. During his residence at Horton Milton made occasional journeys to London to hear, and obtain instruction (probably from Henry Lawes) in, music. It was an age of great musical development. See "Milton's Knowledge of Music" by Mr W. H. Hadow, in Milton Memorial Lectures (1908).

<sup>2</sup> See the paper "Milton as Schoolboy and Schoolmaster" by Mr A. F. Leach, read before the British Academy, Dec. 10, 1908.

<sup>3</sup> His paraphrases of Psalms cxiv. cxxxvi. scarcely come under this heading. Aubrey says in his quaint Life of Milton: "Anno Domini 1619 he was ten yeares old, as by his picture [the portrait by Cornelius Jansen]: and was then a poet."

Death of a Fair Infant, dates from his school-days ; but we are told that he had written much verse, English and Latin. And his early training had done that which was all-important : it had laid the foundation of the far-ranging knowledge which makes Paradise Lost unique for diversity of suggestion and interest.

Milton went to Christ's College, Cambridge, in the Easter term of 1625, took his B.A. degree in 1629, proceeded M.A. in 1632, and in the latter year left Cambridge. The popular view of Milton's connection with the University will be coloured for all time by Johnson's unfortunate story that for some unknown offence he "suffered the public indignity of corporal correction." For various reasons this story is now discredited by the best judges. It is certain, however, that early in 1626 Milton did have some serious difficulty with his tutor, which led to his removal from Cambridge for a few weeks and his transference to another tutor on his return later in the term. He spoke of the incident bitterly at the time in one of his Latin poems, and he spoke of Cambridge bitterly in after years. On the other hand he voluntarily passed seven years at the University, and resented strongly the imputations brought against him in the "Smectymnuus" controversy that he had been in ill-favour with the authorities of his college. Writing in 1642, he takes the opportunity "to acknowledge publicly with all grateful mind, that more than ordinary favour and respect, which I found above any of my equals at the hands of those courteous and learned men, the fellows of that college wherein I spent some years : who at my parting, after I had taken two degrees, as the manner is, signified many ways how much better it would content them that I would stay ; as by many letters full of kindness and loving respect, both before that time, and long after, I was assured of their singular good affection towards me<sup>1</sup>." And if we look into those uncomplimentary allusions to Cambridge which date from the controversial period of his life we see that the feeling they represent is hardly more than a phase of his theological bias. He detested ecclesiasticism, and for him the two Universities (there is a fine impartiality in his diatribes) are the strongholds of what he detested: "nurseries of superstition"—"not yet well recovered from the scholastic grossness of barbarous ages"—given up to "monkish and miserable sophistry," and unprogressive in their educational methods. But it may fairly be assumed that Milton the scholar and poet, who chose to spend seven years at Cambridge, owed to her more than Milton the fierce controversialist admitted or knew. A poet he had proved himself before leaving the University in 1632. The short but exquisite ode At a Solemn Music, and the Nativity Hymn (1629), were already written.

<sup>1</sup> An Apology for Smectymnuus, P. W. III. III. Perhaps Cambridge would have been more congenial to Milton had he been sent to Emmanuel College, long a centre of Puritanism. Dr John Preston, then Master of the college, was a noted leader of the Puritan party.

Milton's father had settled at Horton in Buckinghamshire. Thither the son retired in July, 1632. He had gone to Cambridge with the intention of qualifying for some profession, perhaps the Church<sup>1</sup>. This purpose was soon given up, and when Milton returned to his father's house he seems to have made up his mind that there was no profession which he cared to enter. He would choose the better part of studying and preparing himself, by rigorous self-discipline and application, for the far-off divine event to which his whole life moved.

It was Milton's constant resolve to achieve something that should vindicate the ways of God to men, something great that should justify his own possession of unique powers—powers of which, with no trace of egotism, he proclaims himself proudly conscious. The feeling finds repeated expression in his prose; it is the guiding-star that shines clear and steadfast even through the mists of politics. He has a mission to fulfil, a purpose to accomplish, no less than the most fanatic of religious enthusiasts; and the means whereby this end is to be attained are devotion to religion, devotion to learning, and ascetic purity of life.

<sup>1</sup> Cf. Milton's own words: "the church, to whose service, by the intentions of my parents and friends, I was destined of a child, and in my own resolutions" (The Reason of Church Government, P. W. II. 482). What kept him from taking orders was primarily his objection to Church discipline and government: he spoke of himself as "Church-outed by the prelates."

This period of self-centred isolation lasted from 1632 to 1638. Gibbon tells us among the many wise things contained in that most wise book the Autobiography, that every man has two educations: that which he receives from his teachers and that which he owes to himself; the latter being infinitely the more important. During these five years Milton completed his second education; ranging the whole world of classical<sup>1</sup> antiquity and absorbing the classical genius so thoroughly that the ancients were to him what they afterwards became to Landor, what they have never become to any other English poet in the same degree, even as the very breath of his being; pursuing, too, other interests, such as music, astronomy<sup>2</sup> and the study of Italian literature; and combining these vast and diverse influences into a splendid equipment of hard-won, well-ordered culture. The world has known many greater scholars in the technical, limited sense than Milton, but few men, if any, who have mastered more things worth mastering in art, letters and scholarship<sup>3</sup>. It says much for the poet that he was sustained through this period of study, pursued ohne Hast, ohne Rast, by the full consciousness that all would be crowned by a masterpiece which should add one more testimony to the belief in that God who ordains the fates of men. It says also a very great deal for the father who suffered his son to follow in this manner the path of learning.

<sup>1</sup> He was closely familiar too with post-classical writers like Philo and the neo-Platonists; nor must we forget the mediæval element in his learning, due often to Rabbinical teaching.

<sup>2</sup> Science—"natural philosophy," as he terms it—is one of the branches of study advocated in his treatise On Education. Of his early interest in astronomy there is a reminiscence in Paradise Lost, II. 708—11; where "Milton is not referring to an imaginary comet, but to one which actually did appear when he was a boy of 10 (1618), in the constellation called Ophiuchus. It was of enormous size, the tail being recorded as longer even than that of 1858. It was held responsible by educated and learned men of the day for disasters. Evelyn says in his diary, 'The effects of that comet, 1618, still working in the prodigious revolutions now beginning in Europe, especially in Germany'" (Professor Ray Lankester).

<sup>3</sup> Milton's poems with their undercurrent of perpetual allusion are the best proof of the width of his reading; but interesting supplementary evidence is afforded by the Common-place Book discovered in 1874, and printed by the Camden Society, 1876. It contains extracts from about 80 different authors whose works Milton had studied. The entries seem to have been made in the period 1637—46.

True, Milton gave more than one earnest of his future fame. The dates of the early pieces—L'Allegro, Il Penseroso, Arcades, Comus and Lycidas—are not all certain; but probably each was composed at Horton before 1638. Four of them have great autobiographic value as an indirect commentary, written from Milton's coign of seclusion, upon the moral crisis through which English life and thought were passing, the clash between the careless hedonism of the Cavalier world and the deepening austerity of Puritanism. In L'Allegro the poet holds the balance almost equal between the two opposing tendencies. In Il Penseroso it becomes clear to which side his sympathies are leaning. Comus is a covert prophecy of the downfall of the Court-party, while Lycidas openly "foretells the ruine" of the Established Church. The latter poem is the final utterance of Milton's lyric genius. Here he reaches, in Mr Mark Pattison's words, the high-water mark of English verse; and then—the pity of it—he resigns that place among the lyrici vates of which the Roman singer was ambitious, and for nearly twenty years suffers his lyre to hang mute and rusty in the temple of the Muses.

The composition of Lycidas may be assigned to the year 1637. In the spring of the next year Milton started for Italy. It was natural that he should seek inspiration in the land where many English poets, from Chaucer to Shelley, have found it. Milton remained abroad some fifteen months. Originally he had intended to include Sicily and Greece in his travels, but news of the troubles in England hastened his return. He was brought face to face with the question whether or not he should bear his part in the coming struggle; whether without self-reproach he could lead any longer this life of learning and indifference to the public weal. He decided as we might have expected that he would decide, though some good critics see cause to regret the decision. Milton puts his position very clearly in his Defensio Secunda: "I thought it base to be travelling for amusement abroad, while my fellow-citizens were fighting for liberty at home." And later: "I determined to relinquish the other pursuits in which I was engaged, and to transfer the whole force of my talents and my industry to this one important object" (i.e. the vindication of liberty).

The summer of 1639 (July) found Milton back in England. Immediately after his return he wrote the Epitaphium Damonis, the beautiful elegy in which he lamented the death of his school friend, Diodati. Lycidas was the last of the English lyrics: the Epitaphium, which should be studied in close connection with Lycidas, the last of the long Latin poems. Thenceforth, for a long spell, the rest was silence, so far as concerned poetry. The period which for all men represents the strength and maturity of manhood, which in the cases of other poets produces the best and most characteristic work, is with Milton a blank. In twenty years he composed no more than a bare handful of Sonnets, and even some of these are infected by the taint of political animus. Other interests claimed him—the question of Church-reform, education, marriage, and, above all, politics.

Milton's first treatise upon the government of the Church (Of Reformation in England) appeared in 1641. Others followed in quick succession. The abolition of Episcopacy was the watchword of the enemies of the Anglican Church—the delenda est Carthago cry of Puritanism, and no one enforced the point with greater eloquence than Milton. During 1641 and 1642 he wrote five pamphlets on the subject. Meanwhile he was studying the principles of education. On his return from Italy he had undertaken the training of his nephews. This led to consideration of the best educational methods; and in the Tractate of Education, 1644, Milton assumed the part of educational theorist. In the previous year, May, 1643, he married<sup>1</sup>. The marriage proved unfortunate.

<sup>1</sup> His wife (who was only seventeen) was Mary Powell, eldest daughter of Richard Powell, of Forest Hill, a village some little distance from Oxford. She went to stay with her father in July,

Its immediate outcome was the pamphlets on divorce. Clearly he had little leisure for literature proper.

The finest of Milton's prose works, the Areopagitica, a plea for the free expression of opinion, was published in 1644. In 1645<sup>1</sup> appeared the first collection of his poems. In 1649 his advocacy of the anti-royalist cause was recognised by the offer of a post under the newly appointed Council of State. His bold vindication of the trial of Charles I., The Tenure of Kings, had appeared earlier in the same year. Milton accepted the offer, becoming Latin<sup>2</sup> Secretary to the Committee of Foreign Affairs.

1643, and refused to return to Milton; why, it is not certain. She was reconciled to her husband in 1645, bore him four children, and died in 1652, in her twenty-seventh year. No doubt, the scene in P. L. x. 909—36, in which Eve begs forgiveness of Adam, reproduced the poet's personal experience, while many passages in Samson Agonistes must have been inspired by the same cause.

<sup>1</sup> i.e. old style. The volume was entered on the registers of the Stationers' Company under the date of October 6th, 1645. It was published on Jan. 2, 1645—46, with the following title-page:

"Poems of Mr. John Milton, both English and Latin, Compos'd at several times. Printed by his true Copies. The Songs were set in Musick by Mr. Henry Lawes Gentleman of the Kings Chappel, and one of His Majesties Private Musick.

' ————— Baccare frontem

Cingite, ne vati noceat mala lingua futuro.' VIRGIL, Eclog. 7.
Printed and publish'd according to Order. London, Printed by Ruth Raworth for Humphrey Moseley, and are to be sold at the signe of the Princes Arms in Pauls Churchyard. 1645."

From the prefatory Address to the Reader it is clear that the collection was due to the initiative of the publisher. Milton's own feeling is expressed by the motto, where the words "vati futuro" show that, as he judged, his great achievement was yet to come. The volume was divided into two parts, the first containing the English, the second the Latin poems. Comus was printed at the close of the former, with a separate title-page to mark its importance. The prominence given to the name of Henry Lawes reflects Milton's friendship.

<sup>2</sup> A Latin Secretary was required because the Council scorned, as Edward Phillips says, "to carry on their affairs in the wheedling, lisping jargon of the cringing French." Milton's salary was £288, in modern money about £900.

There was nothing distasteful about his duties. He drew up the despatches to foreign governments, translated state-papers, and served as interpreter to foreign envoys. Had his duties stopped here his acceptance of the post would, I think, have proved an unqualified gain. It brought him into contact with the first men in the state, gave him a practical insight into the working of national affairs and the motives of human action ; in a word, furnished him with that experience of life which is essential to all poets who aspire to be something more than "the idle singers of an empty day." But unfortunately the secretaryship entailed the necessity of defending at every turn the past course of the revolution and the present policy of the Council. Milton, in fact, held a perpetual brief as advocate for his party. Hence the endless and unedifying controversies into which he drifted ; controversies which wasted the most precious years of his life, warped, as some critics think, his nature, and eventually cost him his eyesight.

Between 1649 and 1660 Milton produced no less than eleven pamphlets. Several of these arose out of the publication of the famous Eikon Basilike. The book was printed in 1649 and created so extraordinary a sensation that Milton was asked to reply to it ; and did so with Eikonoklastes. Controversy of this barren type has the inherent disadvantage that once started it may never end. The Royalists commissioned the Leyden professor, Salmasius, to prepare a counterblast, the Defensio Regia, and this in turn was met by Milton's Pro Populo Anglicano Defensio, 1651, over the preparation of which he lost what little power of eyesight remained<sup>1</sup>. Salmasius retorted, and died before his second farrago of scurrilities was issued : Milton was bound to answer, and the Defensio Secunda appeared in 1654. Neither of the combatants gained anything by the dispute ; while the subsequent development of the controversy in which Milton crushed the Amsterdam pastor and professor, Morus, goes far to prove the contention of Mr Mark Pattison, that it was an evil day when the poet left his study at Horton to do battle for the Commonwealth amid the vulgar brawls of the market-place .

<sup>1</sup> Perhaps this was the saddest part of the episode. Milton tells us in the Defensio Secunda that his eyesight was injured by excessive study in boyhood : "from twelve years of age I hardly ever left my studies or went to bed before midnight." Continual reading and writing increased the infirmity, and by 1650 the sight of the left eye had gone. He was warned that he must not use the other for book-work. Unfortunately this was just the time when the Commonwealth stood most in need of his services. If Milton had not written the first Defence he might have retained his partial vision, at least for a time. The choice lay between

“ Not here, O Apollo,
Were haunts meet for thee.”

Fortunately this poetic interregnum in Milton's life was not destined to last much longer. The Restoration came, a blessing in disguise, and in 1660<sup>1</sup> the ruin of Milton's political party and of his personal hopes, the absolute overthrow of the cause for which he had fought for twenty years, left him free. The author of Lycidas could once more become a poet.

Much has been written upon this second period, 1639—60. We saw what parting of the ways confronted Milton on his return from Italy. Did he choose aright? Should he have continued upon the path of learned leisure? There are writers who argue that Milton made a mistake. A poet, they say, should keep clear of political strife : fierce controversy can benefit no man : who touches pitch must expect to be, certainly will be, defiled : Milton sacrificed twenty of the best years of his life, doing work which an underling could have done and which was not worth doing : another Comus might have been written, a loftier Lycidas : that literature should be the poorer for the absence of these possible masterpieces, that the second period was devoted to private good and public duty. He repeated in 1650 the sacrifice of 1639. This is brought out in his Second Defence. By the spring of 1652 Milton was quite blind. He was then in his forty-fourth year. Probably the disease from which he suffered was amaurosis. See the Appendix (pp. 2, 683) on P. L. III. 22—26. Throughout P. L. and Samson Agonistes there are frequent references to his affliction.

Milton probably began Paradise Lost in 1658 ; but it was not till the Restoration in 1660 that he definitely resigned all his political duties and became quite free to realise his poetical ambition.

greatest genius which England has produced should in a way be the "inheritor of unfulfilled renown," is and must be a thing entirely and terribly deplorable. This is the view of the purely literary critic.

There remains the other side of the question. It may fairly be contended that had Milton elected in 1639 to live the scholar's life apart from "the action of men," Paradise Lost, as we have it, or Samson Agonistes could never have been written. Knowledge of life and human nature, insight into the problems of men's motives and emotions, grasp of the broader issues of the human tragedy, all these were essential to the author of an epic poem; they could only be obtained through commerce with the world; they would have remained beyond the reach of a recluse. Dryden complained that Milton saw nature through the spectacles of books: we might have had to complain that he saw men through the same medium. Fortunately it is not so: and it is not so because at the age of thirty-two he threw in his fortunes with those of his country; like the diver in Schiller's ballad he took the plunge which was to cost him so dear. The mere man of letters will never move the world. Æschylus fought at Marathon: Shakespeare was practical to the tips of his fingers; a better business man than Goethe there was not within a radius of a hundred miles of Weimar.

This aspect of the question is emphasised by Milton himself. The man, he says, "who would not be frustrate of his hope to write well hereafter in laudable things, ought himself to be a true poem; that is, a composition and pattern of the best and honourable things; not presuming to sing high praises of heroic men, or famous cities, unless he have in himself the experience and the practice of all that which is praiseworthy<sup>1</sup>." Again, in estimating the qualifications which the writer of an epic such as he contemplated should possess, he is careful to include "insight into all seemly and generous arts and affairs<sup>2</sup>."

Truth usually lies half-way between extremes: perhaps it does so here. No doubt, Milton did gain very greatly by breathing awhile the larger air of public life, even though that air was often tainted by much impurity. No doubt, too, twenty years of contention must have left their mark even on Milton. In one of the very few places where he "abides our question," Shakespeare writes (Sonnet CXI.):

<sup>1</sup> An Apology for Smectymnuus, P. W. III. 118.

<sup>2</sup> The Reason of Church Government, P. W. II. 481.

"O! for my sake do you with Fortune chide,
The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
That did not better for my life provide,
Than public means, which public manners breeds:
Thence comes it that my name receives a brand;
And almost thence my nature is subdued
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand."

Milton's genius was subdued in this way. If we compare him, the Milton of the great epics and of Samson Agonistes, with Homer or Shakespeare—and none but the greatest can be his parallel—we find in him a certain want of humanity, a touch of narrowness. He lacks the large-heartedness, the genial, generous breadth of Shakespeare; the sympathy and sense of the lacrimæ rerum that even in Troilus and Cressida or Timon of Athens are there for those who have eyes wherewith to see them. Milton reflects in some degree the less gracious aspects of Puritanism, its intolerance, want of humour, one-sided intensity; and it seems natural to assume that this narrowness was to a great extent the price he paid for twenty years of ceaseless special pleading and dispute. The real misfortune of his life lay in the fact that he fell on evil, angry days when there was no place for moderate men. He had to be one of two things: either a controversialist or a student: there was no via media. Probably he chose aright; but we could wish that the conditions under which he chose had been different. And he is so great, so majestic in the nobleness of his life, in the purity of his motives, in the self-sacrifice of his indomitable devotion to his ideals, that we could wish not even to seem to pronounce judgment at all.

The last part of Milton's life, 1660—74, passed quietly. At the age of fifty-two he was thrown back upon poetry, and could at length discharge his self-imposed obligation. The early poems he had never regarded as a fulfilment of the debt due to his Creator. Even when the fire of political strife burned at its hottest, Milton did not forget the purpose which he had conceived in his boyhood. Of that purpose Paradise Lost was the attainment. Begun about 1658, it was finished in 1663, the year of Milton's third<sup>1</sup> marriage; revised from 1663 to 1665; and eventually issued in 1667. Before its publication Milton had commenced (in the autumn of 1665) its sequel Paradise Regained, which in turn was closely followed by Samson Agonistes. The completion of Paradise Regained may be assigned to the year 1666—that of Samson Agonistes to 1667. Some time was spent in their revision; and in January, 1671, they were published together, in a single volume.

In 1673 Milton brought out a reprint of the 1645 edition of his Poems, adding most of the sonnets<sup>2</sup> written in the interval<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Milton's second marriage took place in the autumn of 1656, i.e. after he had become blind. His wife died in February, 1658. Cf. the Sonnet, "Methought I saw my late espoused saint," the pathos of which is heightened by the fact that he had never seen her.

<sup>2</sup> The number of Milton's sonnets is twenty-three (if we exclude the piece "On the New Forcers of Conscience"), five of which were written in Italian, probably during the time of his travels in Italy. 1638, 1639. Ten sonnets were printed in the edition of 1645, the last of them being that entitled (from the Cambridge ms.) "To the Lady Margaret Ley." The remaining thirteen were composed between 1645 and 1658. The concluding sonnet, therefore (to the memory of Milton's second wife), immediately preceded his commencement of Paradise Lost. Four of these poems (xv. xvi. xvii. xxii.) could not, on account of their political tone, be included in the edition of 1673. They were published by Edward Phillips together with his memoir of Milton, 1694 (Sonnet xvii. having previously appeared in a Life of Vane). The sonnet on the "Massacre in Piedmont" is usually considered the finest of the collection, of which Mr Mark Pattison edited a well-known edition, 1883. The sonnet inscribed with a diamond on a window pane in the cottage at Chalfont where the poet stayed in 1665 is (in the judgment of a good critic) Miltonic, if not Milton's (Garnett, Life of Milton, p. 175).

<sup>3</sup> The 1673 edition also gave the juvenile piece On the Death of a Fair Infant and At a Vacation Exercise, which for some reason had been omitted from the 1645 edition.

The last four years of his life were devoted to prose works of no particular interest<sup>1</sup>. He continued to live in London. His third marriage had proved happy, and he enjoyed something of the renown which was rightly his. Various well-known men used to visit him—notably Dryden<sup>2</sup>, who on one of his visits asked and received permission to dramatise<sup>3</sup> Paradise Lost. It does not often happen that a university can point to two such poets among her living sons, each without rival in his generation.

Milton died in 1674, November 8th. He was buried in St Giles' Church, Cripplegate. When we think of him we have to think of a man who lived a life of very singular purity and devotion to duty; who for what he conceived to be his country's good sacrificed—and no one can well estimate the sacrifice—during twenty years the aim that was nearest to his heart and best suited to his genius; who, however, eventually realised his desire of writing a great work in gloriam Dei.

<sup>1</sup> The treatise on Christian Doctrine (unpublished during Milton's lifetime and dating, it is thought, mainly from the period of his theological treatises) is valuable as throwing much light on the theological views expressed in the two epic poems and Samson Agonistes. See Milton Memorial Lectures (1908), pp. 109—42. The discovery of the MS. of this treatise in 1823 gave Macaulay an opportunity of writing his famous essay on Milton, which has been happily described as a Whig counterblast to Johnson's Tory depreciation of the poet.

Milton's History of Britain, though not published till 1670, had been written many years earlier; four of the six books, we know, were composed between 1646 and 1649.

<sup>2</sup> The lines by Dryden which were printed beneath the portrait of Milton in Tonson's folio edition of Paradise Lost published in 1688 are too familiar to need quotation; but it is worth noting that the younger poet had in Milton's lifetime described the great epic as "one of the most noble, and most sublime poems which either this age or nation has produced" (prefatory essay to The State of Innocence, 1674). Further, tradition assigned to Dryden (a Roman Catholic and a Royalist) the remark, "this fellow (Milton) cuts us all out and the ancients too."

<sup>3</sup> See Marvell's "Commendatory Verses," 17—30, and the Notes, pp. 72, 73.

PARADISE LOST.

We have seen that the dominating idea of Milton's life was his resolve to write a great poem—great in theme, in style, in attainment. To this purpose was he dedicated as a boy: as Hannibal was dedicated, at the altar of patriotism, to the cause of his country's revenge, or Pitt to a life of political ambition. Milton's works—particularly his letters and prose pamphlets—enable us to trace the growth of the idea which was shaping his intellectual destinies; and as every poet is best interpreted by his own words, Milton shall speak for himself.

Two of the earliest indications of his cherished plan are the Vacation Exercise and the second Sonnet. The Exercise commences with an invocation (not without significance, as we shall see) to his "native language," to assist him in giving utterance to the teeming thoughts that knock at the portal of his lips, fain to find an issue thence. The bent of these thoughts is towards the loftiest themes. Might he choose for himself, he would select some "grave subject":

"Such where the deep transported mind may soar
Above the wheeling poles, and at Heaven's door
Look in, and see each blissful deity.
.....
Then sing of secret things that came to pass
When beldam Nature in her cradle was."

But recognising soon that such matters are inappropriate to the occasion—a College festivity—he arrests the flight of his muse with a grave descende cælo, and declines on a lower range of subject, more fitting to the social scene and the audience. This Exercise was composed in 1628, in Milton's twentieth year, or, according to his method of dating, anno ætatis XIX. It is important as revealing—firstly, the poet's consciousness of the divine impulse within, for which poetry is the natural outlet; secondly, the elevation of theme with which that poetry must deal. A boy in years, he would like to handle the highest 'arguments,' challenging thereby comparison with the sacri vates of inspired verse, the elect few whose poetic appeal is to the whole world. A vision of Heaven itself must be unrolled before his steadfast eagle-gaze : he will win a knowledge of the causes of things such as even Vergil, his master, modestly disclaimed. Little wonder, therefore, that, filled with these ambitions, Milton did not shrink, only two years later (1629—30), from attempting to sound the deepest mysteries of Christianity—the Nativity and the Passion of Christ ; howbeit, sensible of his immaturity, he left his poem on the latter subject unfinished<sup>1</sup>.

The Sonnet to which reference has been made deserves quotation at length :

“ How soon hath Time, the subtle thief of youth,
 Stolen on his wing my three-and-twentieth year !
 My hasting days fly on with full career,
 But my late spring no bud or blossom shew’th.
 Perhaps my semblance might deceive the truth,
 That I to manhood am arrived so near ;
 And inward ripeness doth much less appear,
 That some more timely-happy spirits endu’th.
 Yet be it less or more, or soon or slow,
 It shall be still in strictest measure even
 To that same lot, however mean or high,
 Toward which Time leads me, and the will of Heaven ;
 All is, if I have grace to use it so,
 As ever in my great Task-Master’s eye.”

Mr Mark Pattison justly calls these lines “an inseparable part of Milton’s biography” : they bring out so clearly the poet’s solemn devotion to his self-selected task, and his determination not to essay the execution of that task until the time of complete “inward ripeness” has arrived. The Sonnet was one of the last poems composed by Milton during his residence at Cambridge.

<sup>1</sup> A passage in the sixth Elegy shows that the Nativity Ode (a prelude in some respects to Paradise Lost) was begun on Christmas morning, 1629. The Passion may have been composed for the following Easter ; it breaks off with the notice—“This Subject the Author finding to be above the years he had when he wrote it, and nothing satisfied with what was begun, left it unfinished.” Evidently Milton was minded to recur to both subjects ; see later.

The date is 1631. From 1632 to 1638 was a period of almost unbroken self-preparation, such as the Sonnet foreshadows. Of the intensity of his application to literature a letter written in 1637 (the exact day being Sept. 7, 1637) enables us to judge.

"It is my way," he says to Carlo Diodati, in excuse for remissness as a correspondent, "to suffer no impediment, no love of ease, no avocation whatever, to chill the ardour, to break the continuity, or divert the completion of my literary pursuits. From this and no other reasons it often happens that I do not readily employ my pen in any gratuitous exertions<sup>1</sup>." But these exertions were not sufficient: the probation must last longer. In the same month, on the 23rd, he writes to the same friend, who had made enquiry as to his occupations and plans: "I am sure that you wish me to gratify your curiosity, and to let you know what I have been doing, or am meditating to do. Hear me, my Diodati, and suffer me for a moment to speak without blushing in a more lofty strain. Do you ask what I am meditating? By the help of Heaven, an immortality of fame. But what am I doing? πτεροφύω, I am letting my wings grow and preparing to fly; but my Pegasus has not yet feathers enough to soar aloft in the fields of air<sup>2</sup>." Four years later we find a similar admission—"I have neither yet completed to my mind the full circle of my private studies...<sup>3</sup>."

This last sentence was written in 1640 (or 1641). Meanwhile his resolution had been confirmed by the friendly and flattering encouragement of Italian savants—a stimulus which he records in an oft-cited passage<sup>4</sup>:

"In the private academies<sup>5</sup> of Italy, whither I was favoured

<sup>1</sup> P. W. III. 492.

<sup>2</sup> P. W. III. 495.

<sup>3</sup> P. W. II. 476.

<sup>4</sup> The Reason of Church Government, P. W. II. 477, 478; a few lines have been quoted in the Life of Milton. A passage similar to the concluding sentence might be quoted from the pamphlet Animadversions, published the same year (1641) as the Church Government; see P. W. III. 72.

<sup>5</sup> He refers to literary societies or clubs, of which there were several at Florence, e.g. the Della Crusca, the Svogliati, etc.

to resort, perceiving that some trifles<sup>1</sup> which I had in memory, composed at under twenty or thereabout, (for the manner is, that every one must give some proof of his wit and reading there,) met with acceptance above what was looked for; and other things<sup>2</sup>, which I had shifted in scarcity of books and conveniences to patch up amongst them, were received with written encomiums, which the Italian is not forward to bestow on men of this side the Alps; I began thus far to assent both to them and divers of my friends here at home, and not less to an inward prompting which now grew daily upon me, that by labour and intense study (which I take to be my portion in this life), joined with the strong propensity of nature, I might perhaps leave something so written to aftertimes, as they should not willingly let it die."

It was during this Italian journey (1638—39) that Milton first gave a hint of the particular direction in which this ambition was setting: at least we are vouchsafed a glimpse of the possible subject-matter of the contemplated poem, and there is that on which may be built conjecture as to its style. He had enjoyed at Naples the hospitality of the then famous writer Giovanni Battista Manso, whose courteous reception the young English traveller, ut ne ingratum se ostenderet, acknowledged in the piece of Latin hexameters afterwards printed in his Sylvæ under the title Mansus. In the course of the poem Milton definitely speaks of the remote legends of British history—more especially, the Arthurian legend—as the theme which he might some day treat. "May I," he says, "find such a friend<sup>3</sup> as Manso,"

<sup>1</sup> i.e. Latin pieces; the Elegies, as well as some of the poems included in his Sylvæ, were written before he was twenty-one.

<sup>2</sup> Among the Latin poems which date from his Italian journey are the lines Ad Salsillum, a few of the Epigrams, and Mansus. Perhaps, too, the "other things" comprehended those essays in Italian verse which he had the courage to read before a Florentine audience, and they the indulgence to praise.

<sup>3</sup> i.e. a friend who would pay honour to him as Manso had paid honour to the poet Marini. Manso had helped in the erection of a monument to Marini at Naples; and Milton alludes to this at the beginning of the poem. From Manso he would hear about Tasso.

“Siquando<sup>1</sup> indigenas revocabo in carmina reges,
Arturumque etiam sub terris bella moventem,
Aut dicam invictæ sociali federe mensæ
Magnanimos heroas, et (O modo spiritus adsit)
Frangam Saxonicas Britonum sub Marte phalanges!”

This was in 1638. In the next year, after his return to England, he recurs to the project in the Epitaphium Damonis (162—71), his account being far more detailed :

“Ipse<sup>2</sup> ego Dardaniæ Rutupina per æquora puppes
Dicam, et Pandrasidos regnum vetus Inogeniæ,
Brennumque Arviragumque duces, priscumque Belinum,
Et tandem Armoricos Britonum sub lege colonos ;
Tum gravidam Arturo fatali fraude Iogernem ;
Mendaces vultus, assumptaque Gorlois arma,
Merlini dolus. O, mihi tum si vita supersit,
Tu procul annosa pendebis, fistula, pini,
Multum . . . mihi, aut patriis mutata Camænis
Brittonicum strides !”

Here, as before, he first glances at the stories which date from the very dawn of British myth and romance, and then

<sup>1</sup> “If ever I shall revive in verse our native kings, and Arthur levying war in the world below ; or tell of the heroic company of the resistless Table Round, and—be the inspiration mine!—break the Saxon bands neath the might of British chivalry” (Mansus, 80—84). His Common-place Book has a quaint reference to “Arturs round table.”

<sup>2</sup> “I will tell of the Trojan fleet sailing our southern seas, and the ancient realm of Imogen, Pandrasus’ daughter, and of Brennus, Arviragus, and Belinus old, and the Armoric settlers subject to British laws. Then will I sing of Iogerne, fatally pregnant with Arthur—how Uther feigned the features and assumed the armour of Gorlois, through Merlin’s craft. And you, my pastoral pipe, an life be lent me, shall hang on some sere pine, forgotten of me ; or changed to native notes shall shrill forth British strains.” In the first lines he alludes to the legend of Brutus and the Trojans landing in England. Rutupina = Kentish. The story of Arthur’s birth at which he glances is referred to in the Idylls of the King. The general drift of the last verses is that he will give up Latin for English verse ; strides is a future, from strido (cf. Æneid iv. 689).

passes to the most fascinating of the later cycles of national legend—the grey traditions that cluster round the hero of the Idylls of the King, the son of mythic Uther. And this passage, albeit the subject which it indicates was afterwards rejected by Milton, possesses a twofold value for those who would follow, step by step, the development of the idea which had as its final issue the composition of Paradise Lost. For, first, the concluding verses show that whatever the theme of the poem, whatever the style, the instrument of expression would be English. Just as Dante had weighed the merits of the vernacular and Latin and chosen the former, though the choice imposed on him the creation of an ideal, transfigured Italian out of the baser elements of many competing dialects, so Milton—more fortunate than Dante in that he found an instrument ready to use—will use that “native language” whose help he had petitioned in the Vacation Exercise. An illustration of his feeling on this point is furnished by the treatise on Church Government. He says there that his work must make for “the honour and instruction” of his country: “I applied myself to that resolution which Ariosto followed...to fix all the industry and art I could unite to the adorning of my native tongue; not to make verbal curiosities the end (that were a toilsome vanity), but to be an interpreter and relater of the best and sagest things among mine own citizens throughout this island in the mother dialect. That what the greatest and choicest wits of Athens, Rome, or modern Italy, and those Hebrews of old did for their country, I, in my proportion, with this over and above, of being a Christian, might do for mine<sup>1</sup>; not caring to be once named abroad, though perhaps I could attain to that, but content with these British islands as my world." Here is a clear announcement of his ambition to take rank as a great national poet. The note struck is patriotism. He will produce that which shall set English on a level with the more favoured Italian, and give his countrymen cause to be proud of their

<sup>1</sup> P. W. II. 478. Reference has been made so frequently to this pamphlet on The Reason of Church Government urged against Prelaty, (1641), that it may be well to explain that the introduction to the second book is entirely autobiographical. Milton shows why he embarked on such controversies, how much it cost him to do so, what hopes he had of returning to poetry, what was his view of the poet's mission and of his own capacity to discharge that mission. His prose works contain nothing more valuable than these ten pages of self-criticism.

"dear dear land,
Dear for her reputation through the world<sup>1</sup>."

To us indeed it may appear strange that Milton should have thought it worth while to emphasise what would now be considered a self-evident necessity: what modern poet, with a serious conception of his office and duty, would dream of employing any other language than his own? But we must remember that in those days the empire of the classics was unquestioned: scholarship was accorded a higher dignity than now: the composition of long poems in Latin was still a custom honoured in the observance: and whoso sought to appeal to the "laureate fraternity" of scholars and men of letters, independently of race and country, would naturally turn to the lingua franca of the learned. At any rate, the use of English—less known than either Italian or French—placed a poet at a great disadvantage, so far as concerned acceptance in foreign lands; and when Milton determined to rely on his patriæ Camæna, he foresaw that this would circumscribe his audience, and that he might have to rest content with the applause of his own countrymen.

Again, these lines in the Epitaphium give us some grounds of surmise as to the proposed form of his poem. The historic events—or traditions—epitomised in the passage were too far separated in point of time, and too devoid of internal coherence and connection, to admit of dramatic treatment. Milton evidently contemplated a narrative poem, and for one who had drunk so deep of the classical spirit a narrative could scarce have meant aught else than an epic. Indeed thus much is implied by some sentences in The Reason of Church Govern- ment, which represent him as considering whether to attempt "that epic form whereof the two poems of Homer, and those other two of Virgil and Tasso, are a diffuse, and the book of Job a brief model...or whether those dramatic constitutions, wherein Sophocles and Euripides reign, shall be found more doctrinal and exemplary to a nation<sup>1</sup>."

<sup>1</sup> Richard II. II. 1. 57, 58.

But 'dramatic' introduces a fresh phase; and as the first period of the history of Paradise Lost, or rather of the idea which finally took shape in that poem, closes with the Epitaphium (1639), it may not be amiss to summarise the impressions deduced up to this point from the various passages which we have quoted from Milton. We have seen, then, Milton's early resolve; its ambitious scope; his self-preparation; the encouragement he received in Italy and from friends at home; his announcement in 1638, repeated in 1639, that he has discovered a suitable subject in British fable—more especially, in the legend of the Coming and Passing of Arthur; his formal farewell to Latin verse, in favour of his native tongue; his desire to win recognition as a great national vates; and his selection of the epic style.

In respect of chronology we have reached the year 1639—40. The second period extends from 1640 to 1642. We shall see that some verses of Paradise Lost were written about 1642: after 1642, up till 1658, we hear no more of the poem—proof that the idea has been temporarily abandoned under stress of politics. Therefore 1642 may be regarded as the ulterior limit of this second period. And it is not, I think, fanciful to consider that Paradise Lost entered on a fresh stage about 1640, because between that year and 1642 Milton's plans underwent a twofold change by which the character of the poem was entirely altered.

First, the subject for which he had shown so decided a bias is discarded: after 1639 no mention is made of King Arthur. We have no hint of the cause which led Milton to drop the subject; but it may well have lain in his increasing republicanism. He could not have treated the theme from an unfavourable standpoint. The hero of the poem must have been for him, as for the Milton of our own age, a type of all kingly grandeur and worth; and it would have gone sore against the grain with the future apologist for regicide to exercise his powers in creating a royal figure that would shed lustre on monarchy, and in a measure plead for the institution which Milton detested so heartily<sup>1</sup>. Only a Royalist could have retold the story, making it illustrate "the divine right of kings," and embodying in the character of the blameless monarch the Cavalier conception of Charles I. Perhaps too he was influenced by discovering, after fuller research, the mythical character of the legend. So much is rather implied by some remarks in his History of Britain. Milton with his intense earnestness was not the poet to build a long work on what he had found to be mainly fiction. Be this as it may, Milton rejected the subject, and it finds no place in a list of one hundred possible subjects of his poem.

<sup>1</sup> P. W. II. 478, 479.

Secondly, from this period, 1640—42, dates an alteration in the design of the contemplated work. Hitherto his tendency has been towards the epic form: now (1640 or 1641) we find him preferring the dramatic. Shall he imitate Sophocles and Euripides? Shall he transplant to English soil the art of the "lofty grave tragedians" of Greece? The question is answered in a decided affirmative. Had Milton continued the poem of which the opening lines were written in 1642 we should have had—not an epic but—a drama, or possibly a trilogy of dramas, cast in a particular manner, as will be observed presently. This transference of his inclinations from the epic to the dramatic style appears to date from 1641. It is manifested in the Milton MSS. at Trinity College.

When the present library of Trinity College, the erection of which was begun during the Mastership of Isaac Barrow, was completed, one of its earliest benefactors was a former member of Trinity, Sir Henry Newton Puckering. Among his gifts was a thin MS. volume of fifty-four pages, which had served Milton as a common-place book. How it came into the possession of Sir Henry Puckering is not known. He was contemporary with, though junior to, Milton, and may possibly have been one of the admirers who visited the poet in the closing years of his life, and discharged the office of amanuensis; or perhaps there was some family connection by means of which the MS. passed into his hands. But if the history of the book be obscure, its value is not; for it contains—now in Milton's autograph, now in other, unidentified handwritings—the original drafts of several of his early poems: notably of Arcades, Lycidas and Comus, together with many of the Sonnets. The volume is not a random collection of scattered papers bound together after Milton's death: it exists (apart from its sumptuous modern investiture) exactly in the same form as that wherein Milton knew and used it two centuries and a half ago. And this point is important because the order of the pages, and, by consequence, of their contents, is an index to the order of the composition of the poems. Milton, about the year 1631, had had the sheets of paper stitched together and then worked through the little volume, page on page, inserting his pieces as they were written. They cover a long period, from 16 to 1658: the earlier date being marked by the second Sonnet, the later by the last of the series—"Methought I saw." It is rather more than half way through the MS. that we light on the entries which have so direct a bearing on the history of Paradise Lost.

<sup>1</sup> See the notes on P. L. XII. 24, 36.

These are notes, written by Milton himself (probably in 1641), and occupying seven pages of the manuscript, on subjects which seemed to him suitable, in varying degrees of appropriateness, for his poem. Some of the entries are very brief—concise jottings down, in two or three words, of any theme that struck him. Others are more detailed: the salient features of some episode in history are selected, and a sketch of the best method of treating them added. In a few instances these sketches are filled in with much minuteness and care: the 'economy' or arrangement of the poem is marked out—the action traced from point to point. But, Paradise Lost apart, this has been done in only a few cases—a half dozen, at most. As a rule, the source whence the material of the work might be drawn is indicated. The subjects themselves, numbering just one hundred, fall, in a rough classification, under two headings—Scriptural and British:

and by 'British' are meant those which Milton drew from the chronicles of British history prior to the Norman Conquest. The former are the more numerous class: sixty-two being derived from the Bible, of which the Old Testament claims fifty-four. Their character will be best illustrated by quotation of a few typical examples :

Abram in Ægypt.
 Josuah in Gibeon.      Josu. 10.
 Jonathan rescu'd      Sam. 1. 14.
 Saul in Gilboa      1 Sam. 28. 31.
 Gideon Idoloclastes      Jud. 6. 7.
 Abimelech the usurper.      Jud. 9.
 Samaria liberata<sup>1</sup>      2 Reg. 7.
 Asa or Æthiopes.      2 chron. 14. with the deposing his mother, and burning her Idol.

These are some of the subjects drawn from the New Testament :

Christ bound
 Christ crucifi'd
 Christ risen.
 Lazarus      Joan. 11.
 Christus patiens

The Scene in y<sup>e</sup> garden beginning frō y<sup>e</sup> comming thither till Judas betraies & y<sup>e</sup> officers lead him away y<sup>e</sup> rest by message & chorus. his agony may receav noble expressions

Of British subjects<sup>2</sup> there are thirty-three. The last page is assigned to "Scotch stories or rather british of the north parts." Among these Macbeth is conspicuous. Practically they may be grouped with the thirty-three, and the combined list is remarkable—first, because it does not include the Arthurian legend,

<sup>1</sup> The title is an obvious allusion to Tasso's Gerusalemme Liberata.

<sup>2</sup> Milton's attitude towards them is illustrated indirectly by his History of Britain. In his paper on "Milton as an Historian" read before the British Academy recently (Nov. 25, 1908) Professor Frith says: "It was not only by his treatment of the mythical period of English history that Milton's interest in the legendary and anecdotic side of history was revealed. It appeared in the later books as well as the earlier, and the introduction of certain episodes, or the space devoted to them, might often be explained by their inclusion in the list of suggested subjects for his 'British Tragedies.'" " which had once exercised so powerful a fascination on Milton ; secondly, because in its brevity, as compared with the list of Scriptural subjects, it suggests his preference for a sacred poem.

Of the Scriptural subjects the story of the Creation and Fall assumes the most prominent place. Any friend of Milton glancing through these papers in 1641 could have conjectured, with tolerable certainty, where the poet's final choice would fall. For no less than four of the entries refer to Paradise Lost. Three of these stand at the head of the list of sacred themes. In two at least his intention to treat the subject in dramatic form is patent. The two first—mere enumerations of possible dramatis personæ—run thus<sup>1</sup> ; it will be seen that the longer list is simply an expansion of the other :

the Persons	the Persons
Michael.	Moses <sup>2</sup>
Heavenly Love	Justice <sup>3</sup> . Mercie Wisdome
Chorus of Angels	Heavenly Love
Lucifer	Hesperus the Evening Starre
Adam } with the serpent	Chorus of Angels
Eve }	Lucifer
Conscience	Adam
Death	Eve
Labour	Conscience <sup>4</sup>
Sickness	Labour
Discontent	Sickness
Ignorance	Discontent
with others	Ignorance
Faith	Feare
Hope	Death
Charity	Faith
	Hope
	Charity

<sup>1</sup> Neither is introduced with any title.

<sup>2</sup> Milton first wrote "Michael," as in the other list, but substituted "Moses."

<sup>3</sup> The epithet Divine, qualifying Justice, was inserted and then crossed out again. "Wisdome" was added.

<sup>4</sup> After Conscience Milton added Death, as in the first list ; then deleted it, and placed Death among the 'mutes' (mutæ personæ, characters who appeared without speaking).

These lists are crossed out ; and underneath stands a much fuller sketch, in which the action of the tragedy is shown, and the division into acts observed. Here, too, we first meet with the title Paradise Lost. The scheme is as follows :

Paradise Lost

The Persons

Moses προλογίζει recounting how he assum'd his true bodie, that it corrupts not because of his with god in the mount declares the like of Enoch and Eliah, besides the purity of y<sup>e</sup> pl<sup>1</sup> that certaine pure winds, dues, and clouds præserve it from corruption whence horts<sup>1</sup> to the sight of god, tells they<sup>2</sup> cannot se Adam in the state of innocence by reason of thire sin<sup>3</sup>

Justice }
Mercie } debating what should become of man if he fall
Wisdom }
Chorus of Angels sing a hymne of y<sup>e</sup> creation<sup>4</sup>

Act 2.

Heavenly Love

Evening starre

chorus sing the mariage song<sup>5</sup> and describe Paradise

Act 3.

Lucifer contriving Adams ruine

Chorus feares for Adam and relates Lucifers rebellion and fall<sup>6</sup>

Act 4.

Adam }
Eve } fallen

Conscience cites them to Gods examination<sup>7</sup>

Chorus bewails and tells the good Adā hath lost

<sup>1</sup> The margin of the MS. is frayed here.

<sup>2</sup> they, i.e. the imaginary audience to whom the prologue is addressed. Cf. the commencement of Comus.

<sup>3</sup> After this the first act begins.

<sup>4</sup> Cf. VII. 253—60, note.

<sup>5</sup> Cf. IV. 711. <sup>6</sup> Cf. bks. V—VI.

<sup>7</sup> Cf. X. 97 et seq.

Act 5

Adam and Eve, driven out of Paradise presented by an angel with<sup>1</sup>

Labour	}	mutes to whome he gives thire names likewise winter, heat Tempest <sup>2</sup> &c greife hatred Envie
warre famine Pestilence sicknesse discontent
Ignorance
Feare
Death enterd into y <sup>e</sup> world
Faith	}	comfort him and istruct him
Hope
Charity

Chorus breifly concludes

This draft of the tragedy, which occurs on page 35 of the MS., is not deleted; but Milton was still dissatisfied, and later on, page 40, we come to a fourth, and concluding, scheme—which reads thus:

Adam unparadiz'd<sup>3</sup>

The angel Gabriel, either descending or entering<sup>4</sup>, shewing since this globe was created, his frequency as much on earth, as in heavn, describes Paradise. next the Chorus shewing the reason of his<sup>5</sup> comming to keep his watch in Paradise after Lucifers rebellion by command from god, & withall expressing his desire to see, & know more concerning this excellent new creature man. the angel Gabriel as by his name

<sup>1</sup> Cf. bks. XI—XII.

<sup>2</sup> See x. 651, note.

<sup>3</sup> Underneath was written, and crossed out, an alternative title—Adams Banishment.

<sup>4</sup> Cf. Comus, "The Attendant Spirit descends or enters" (ad init.).

<sup>5</sup> his, i.e. the chorus's; he makes the chorus now a singular, now a plural, noun.

signifying a prince of power tracing<sup>1</sup> paradise with a more free office passes by the station of y<sup>e</sup> chorus & desired by them relates what he knew of man as the creation of Eve with thire love, & mariage. after this Lucifer appears after his overthrow, bemoans himself, seeks revenge on man the Chorus prepare resistance at his first approach at last after discourse of enmity on either side he departs wherat the chorus sings of the battell, & victorie in heavn against him & his accomplices, as before after the first act<sup>2</sup> was sung a hymn of the creation. heer<sup>3</sup> again may appear Lucifer relating, & insulting in what he had don to the destruction of man. man next & Eve having by this time bin seduc't by the serpent appears confusedly cover'd with leaves conscience in a shape accuses him, Justice cites him to the place whither Jehova call'd for him in the mean while the chorus entertains<sup>4</sup> the stage, & his [sic] inform'd by some angel the manner of his fall heer<sup>3</sup> the chorus bewailes Adams fall. Adam then & Eve returne accuse one another but especially Adam layes the blame to his wife, is stubborn in his offence Justice appeares reason<sup>5</sup> with him convinces him the<sup>3</sup> chorus admonisheth Adam, & bids him beware by Lucifers example of impenitence the Angel is sent to banish them out of paradise but before causes to passe before his eyes in shapes a mask of all the evils<sup>6</sup> of this life & world he is humbl'd relents, dispaire. at last appeares Mercy comforts him promises the Messiah, then calls in faith, hope, & charity, instructs him he repents gives god the glory, submitts to his penalty the chorus breifly concludes. compare this with the former draught.

"It appears plain," says Todd, "that Milton intended to have marked the division of the Acts in this sketch, as well as in the preceding. Peck has divided them; and closes the first Act with Adam and Eve's love." The other Acts may be supposed to conclude at the following points: Act 2 at "sung a hymn of the creation"; Act 3 at "inform'd...the manner of his fall"; Act 4 at "bids him beware...impenitence"; Act 5 at "the chorus breifly concludes."

It is in regard to the first Act that this fourth draft, which

<sup>1</sup> passing through; cf. Comus, 423.

<sup>2</sup> i.e. in the third draft.

<sup>3</sup> Each of these sentences was an after-thought, added below or in the margin.

<sup>4</sup> occupies.

<sup>5</sup> i.e. reasons; or 'to reason.'

<sup>6</sup> See XI. 477—93, note.

Milton bids us "compare with the former," marks a distinct advance. Milton made Moses the speaker of the prologue in the third draft because so much of the subject-matter of Paradise Lost is drawn from the Mosaic books of the Old Testament. But the appearance of a descendant of Adam, even in a prologue, where much latitude is allowed by convention, seems an awkward prelude to scenes coincident with Adam's own creation. It is far more natural that, before the subject of man's fall is touched upon at all, we should be told who man is, and that this first mention of him should come from the supernatural beings who had, or might have, witnessed the actual creation of the universe and its inhabitants. The explanation, too, why Moses is able to assume his natural body is very forced. And altogether this fourth draft exhibits more of drama, less of spectacle, than its predecessor.

With regard to the subject, therefore, thus much is clear: as early as 1641—2 Milton has manifested an unmistakeable preference for the story of the lost Paradise, and the evidence of the Trinity MSS. coincides with the testimony of Aubrey and Phillips, who say that the poet did, about 1642, commence the composition of a drama on this theme—of which drama the opening verses of Paradise Lost, book IV. (Satan's address to the sun), formed the exordium. It is, I think, by no means improbable that some other portions of the epic are really fragments of this unfinished work. Milton may have written two or three hundred lines, have kept them in his desk, and then, years afterward, when the project was resumed, have made use of them where opportunity offered. Had the poem, however, been completed in accordance with his original conception we should have had a tragedy, not an epic.

Of this there is abundant proof. The third and fourth sketches, as has been observed, are dramatic. On the first page of these entries, besides those lists of dramatis personæ which we have treated as the first and second sketches, stand the words "other Tragedies," followed by the enumeration of several feasible subjects. The list of British subjects is prefaced with the heading—"British Trag." (i.e. tragedies).

Wherever Milton has outlined the treatment of any of the Scriptural themes a tragedy is clearly indicated. Twice, indeed, another form is mentioned—the pastoral, and probably a dramatic pastoral was intended<sup>1</sup>. These, however, are exceptions, serving to emphasise his leaning towards tragedy.

But what sort of tragedy? I think we may fairly conclude that, if carried out on the lines laid down in the fourth sketch, Adam unparadis'd would have borne a very marked resemblance to Samson Agonistes: it would have conformed, in the main, to the same type—that, namely, of the ancient Greek drama. With the romantic stage of the Elizabethans Milton appears to have felt little sympathy<sup>2</sup>: else he would scarce have written Il Penseroso, 101, 102. Nor do I believe that his youthful enthusiasm for Shakespeare remained unmodified<sup>3</sup>: certainly, the condemnation of one important aspect of Shakespearian tragedy in the preface to Samson Agonistes is too plain to be misinterpreted. So had Milton been minded to dramatise the story of Macbeth—we have marked its presence in the list of Scottish subjects—his Macbeth would have differed toto cælo from Shakespeare's. In the same way, his tragedy of Paradise Lost would have been wholly un-Shakespearian, wholly un-Elizabethan. Nor would it have had any affinity to the drama of Milton's contemporaries<sup>4</sup>, those belated Elizabethans bungling with exhausted materials and forms that had lost all vitality. Tragedy for Milton could mean but one thing—the tragic stage of the Greeks, the “dramatic constitutions” of Sophocles and Euripides: and when we examine these sketches of Paradise

<sup>1</sup> These are the two entries in the MS.: “Theristria. a Pastoral out of Ruth”; and—“the sheepshearers in Carmel a Pastoral. 1 Sam. 25.” There is but one glance at the epical style; in the list of “British Trag.” after mentioning an episode in the life of King Alfred appropriate to dramatic handling, he adds—“A Heroicall Poem may be founded somewhere in Alfreds reign. especially at his issuing out of Edelingsey on the Danes. whose actions are wel like those of Ulysses.”

<sup>2</sup> See Appendix to Samson Agonistes.

<sup>3</sup> See note on L'Allegro, 133, 134.

<sup>4</sup> In the treatise On Education, 1644, he speaks of “our common rhymers and play-writers” as “despicable creatures,” P. W. III. 474.

Lost we find in them the familiar features of Athenian drama—certain signs eloquent of the source on which the poet has drawn.

Let us, for example, glance at the draft of Adam unparadis'd. Milton has kept the 'unities' of place and time. The scene does not change; it is set in some part of Eden, and everything represented before the eyes of the audience occurs at the same spot. But whoso regards the unity of place must suffer a portion of the action to happen off the stage—not enacted in the presence of the audience (as in a modern play where the scene changes), but reported. In Samson Agonistes Milton employs the traditional device of the Greek tragedians—he relates the catastrophe by the mouth of a messenger. So here: the temptation by the serpent is not represented on the scene: it is described—partly by Lucifer, "relating, and insulting in what he had don to the destruction of man"; partly by an angel who informs the Chorus of the manner of the fall. Again, the unity of time is observed. The time over which the action of a tragedy might extend, according to the usual practice of the Greek dramatists, was twenty-four hours. In Samson Agonistes the action begins at sunrise and ends at noon, thus occupying seven or eight hours. In Adam unparadis'd the action would certainly not exceed the customary twenty-four hours. Again a Chorus is introduced (sure sign of classical influence), and not only introduced, but handled exactly as Milton, following his Greek models, has handled it in Samson Agonistes: that is to say, closely identified with the action of the tragedy, even as Aristotle recommends that it should be. Further, in the fourth scheme the division into acts is carefully avoided—an advance this on the third scheme. Similarly, in Samson Agonistes Milton avoids splitting up the play into scenes and acts, calling attention to the fact in his preface. Proofs<sup>1</sup> of Milton's classical bias might be multiplied from these Milton MSS.; and personally I have no doubt that when he began the tragedy of which Aubrey and Phillips speak, he meant to revive in English the methods and style of his favourite Greek poets. But the scheme soon had to be abandoned; and not till a quarter of a century later was it executed in Samson Agonistes<sup>1</sup>. With Milton as with Dante the greatest came last—after long delay: the life's work of each marked the life's close: and, the work done, release soon came to each, though to Dante sooner<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Thus, apart from P. L., the Scriptural themes whereof the fullest sketches are given, are three tragedies severally entitled "Abram from Morea, or Isack redeemed—Baptistes" (i.e. on the subject of John the Baptist and Herod)—and "Sodom Burning." In each two unities (time and place) are kept, and a Chorus used. In "Isack redeemed" the

The third period in the genesis of Paradise Lost dates from 1658. In that year, according to Aubrey, Milton began the poem as we know it. By then he had gone back to the epic style. He was still Secretary, but his duties were very light, and allowed him to devote himself to poetry. At the Restoration he was in danger, for some time, of his life, and was imprisoned for a few months. But in spite of this interruption, and of his blindness<sup>3</sup>, the epic was finished about 1663. The history of incident of the sacrifice is reported, and the description of the character of the hero Abraham as Milton meant to depict him is simply a paraphrase on Aristotle's definition of the ideal tragic hero. Most of the other subjects have a title such as the Greek tragedians employed—e.g. "Elias Polemistes," "Elisæus Hydrochóos," "Zedechiah νεοτερίζων."

<sup>1</sup> The point is important because it disposes of the notion that Milton borrowed the idea of writing a tragedy on the classical model from the play of Samson by the Dutch poet Vondel.

<sup>2</sup> "There is at once similarity and difference in the causes which made each postpone the execution of his undertaking till a comparatively late period in his life; and a curious parallel may be observed in the length of time between the first conception and the completion of their monumental works, as well as in the period that elapsed between the end of their labours and their death." (Courthope.)

<sup>3</sup> According to Edward Phillips, Milton dictated the poem to any one who chanced to be present and was willing to act as amanuensis; afterwards Phillips would go over the MS., correcting errors, under his uncle's direction. The original transcript submitted to the Licenser is extant, and is one of the many literary treasures that have gone to each of his longer poems shows that he was exceedingly careful in revising his works—loth to let them go forth to the world till all that was possible had been done to achieve perfection<sup>1</sup>. It is Aubrey's statement that Paradise Lost was completed in 1663; while Milton's friend Thomas Ellwood, the Quaker, describes in a famous passage of his Autobiography, how in 1665 the poet placed a manuscript in his hands—"bidding me take it home with me and read it at my leisure, and, when I had so done, return it to him with my judgment thereupon. When I came home, and had set myself to read it, I found it was that excellent poem which he intituled Paradise Lost." Ellwood's account may be reconciled with Aubrey's on the reasonable supposition that the interval between 1663 and 1665 was spent in revision. Still, some delay in publishing the poem ensued. On the outbreak of the Plague in 1665 Milton had left London, retiring to Chalfont in Buckinghamshire, where Ellwood had rented a cottage for him. He returned in the next year, 1666; but again there was delay—this time through the great Fire of London which disorganised business. Not till 1667 did Paradise Lost appear in print. The agreement (now in the possession of the British Museum) drawn up between Milton and his publisher—by which he received an immediate payment of £5, and retained certain rights over the future sale of the book—is dated April 27, 1667. The date on which Paradise Lost was entered in the Stationers' Register is August 20, 1667. No doubt, copies were in circulation in the autumn of this year.

America. It "passed from the possession of the first printer of the poem, Samuel Simmons, to Jacob Tonson [the publisher], and thence to his collateral descendants, remaining in the same family...until 1904," when it was bought by an American collector. (From an article in The Athenæum on "Miltoniana in America.")

<sup>1</sup> "When we look at his earlier manuscripts, with all their erasures and corrections, we may well wonder what the Paradise Lost would have been if he had been able to give it the final touches of a faultless and fastidious hand. When we think of it composed in darkness, preserved in memory, dictated in fragments, it may well seem to us the most astonishing of all the products of high genius guided by unconquerable will" (J. W. Mackail).

The system of licensing publications, against which Milton had protested so vehemently in his Areopagitica, had been revived by the Press Act of 1662 and was now strongly enforced. "By that act," says Dr Masson, "the duty of licensing books of general literature had been assigned to the Secretaries of State, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Bishop of London; but it was exceptional for any of those dignitaries to perform the duty in person. It was chiefly performed for them by a staff of under-licensors, paid by fees." Five or six of his chaplains acted so for the Archbishop; and according to tradition one of them, to whom Paradise Lost was submitted, hesitated to give his imprimatur on account of the lines in the first book about eclipses perplexing monarchs with fear of change (l. 594—99). Milton must have remembered grimly the bitter gibes in his pamphlets, e.g. in the Animadversions (1641) against "monkish prohibitions, and expurgatorious indexes," and "proud Imprimaturs not to be obtained without the shallow surview, but not shallow hand of some mercenary, narrow-souled, and illiterate chaplain." The wheel had come full circle with a vengeance.

This first edition of Paradise Lost raises curious points<sup>1</sup> of bibliography into which there is no need to enter here; but we must note three things. The poem was divided into—not twelve books but—ten. In the earlier copies issued to the public there were no prose Arguments; these (written, we may suppose, by Milton himself) were printed all together and inserted at the commencement of each of the later volumes of this first edition—an awkward arrangement changed in the second edition. Milton prefixed to the later copies the brief prefatory note on The Verse, explaining why he had used blank verse; and it was preceded by the address of The Printer to the Reader. It seems that the number of copies printed in the first edition was 1500; and the statement of another payment made by the publisher to Milton on account of the sale of the book shows that by April 26, 1669, i.e. a year and a half after the date of publication, 1300 copies had been disposed of.

<sup>1</sup> For example, no less than nine distinct title-pages of this edition have been traced. This means that, though the whole edition was printed in 1667, only a limited number of copies were bound up and issued in that year. The rest would be kept in stock, unbound, and published in instalments, as required. Hence new matter could be inserted (such as the prose Arguments), and in each instalment it would be just as easy to bind up a new title-page as to use the old one. Often the date had to be changed: and we find that two of these pages bear the year 1667; four, 1668; and three, 1669. Seven have Milton's name in full; two, only his initials. Mr Leigh Sotheby collated them carefully in his book on Milton's autograph, pp. 81—84.

In 1674 the second edition was issued—with several changes. First, the epic (said to be 670 lines longer than the Æneid) was divided into twelve books, a more Vergilian number, by the subdivision of books VII. and X. Secondly, the prose Arguments were transferred from the beginning and prefixed to their respective books. Thirdly, a few changes were introduced into the text—few of any great significance. It was to the second edition that the commendatory verses by Samuel Barrow and Andrew Marvell were prefixed. Four years later, 1678, came the third edition, and in 1688 the fourth. This last was the well-known folio published by Tonson; Paradise Regained and Samson Agonistes were bound up with some copies of it, so that Milton's three great works were obtainable in a single volume. The first annotated edition of Paradise Lost was that edited by Patrick Hume in 1695, being the sixth reprint. And during the 18th century editions<sup>1</sup> were numerous. "Milton scholarship<sup>2</sup>," it has been justly said, "was active throughout the whole period."

There is, indeed, little (if any) ground for the view which one so frequently comes across—that Paradise Lost met with scant appreciation, and that Milton was neglected by his contem-

<sup>1</sup> Pre-eminent among them is Bishop Newton's edition (1749). He was the first editor who took pains to secure accuracy of text, doing, on a smaller scale, for Milton what Theobald did for Shakespeare. His services too in the elucidation of certain aspects (notably the Scriptural) of Milton's learning have never been surpassed.

<sup>2</sup> See Professor Dowden's Tercentenary paper "Milton in the Eighteenth Century (1701—1750)."

poraries, and without honour in his lifetime. To the general public epic poetry will never appeal, more especially if it be steeped in the classical feeling that pervades Paradise Lost; but there must have been a goodly number of scholars and lettered readers to welcome the work—else why these successive editions, appearing at no very lengthy intervals? One thing, doubtless, which prejudiced its popularity was the personal resentment of the Royalist classes at Milton's political actions. They could not forget his long identification with republicanism; and there was much in the poem itself—covert sneers and gibes—which would repel many who were loyal to the Church and the Court. Further, the style of Paradise Lost was something very different from the prevailing tone of the literature then current and popular. Milton was the last of the Elizabethans, a lonely survival lingering on into days when French influence was beginning to dominate English taste. Even the metre of his poem must have sounded strange to ears familiarised to the crisp clearness and epigrammatic ring of the rhymed couplet<sup>1</sup>. Yet, in spite of these obstacles, many whose praise was worth the having were proud of Milton: they felt that he had done honour to his country. He was accorded that which he had sought so earnestly—acceptance as a great national poet; and it is pleasant to read how men of letters and social distinction would pay visits of respect to him, and how the white-winged Fame bore his name and reputation abroad, so that foreigners came to England for the especial purpose of seeing him. And their visits were the prelude of that foreign renown and influence from which he seemed to have cut himself off when he made his native tongue the medium of his great work. "Milton was the first English poet to inspire respect and win fame for our literature on the Continent, and to his poetry was due, to an extent that has not yet been fully recognised, the change which came over European ideas in the eighteenth century with regard to the nature and scope of the epic. Paradise Lost was the mainstay of those critics who dared to vindicate, in the face of French classicism, the rights of the imagination over the reason in poetry<sup>1</sup>."

<sup>1</sup> Cf. Marvell's "Commendatory Verses," 45—54.

There has been much discussion about the 'sources' of Paradise Lost, and writers well nigh as countless as Vallombrosa's autumn leaves have been thrust forth from their obscurity to claim the honour of having 'inspired' (as the phrase is) the great epic. Most of these unconscious claimants were, like enough, unknown to Milton; but some of them do seem to stand in a relation which demands recognition.

I should place first the Latin tragedy Adamus Exul (1601), written in his youth by the great jurist Hugo Grotius after the model of Seneca. Apart from the question of actual resemblances to Paradise Lost, it might fairly be conjectured, if not assumed, that Milton read this tragedy. He knew Grotius personally and knew his works. Describing, in the Second Defence, his Italian tour in 1638, Milton mentions his stay in Paris and friendly reception by the English ambassador, and adds: "His lordship gave me a card of introduction to the learned Hugo Grotius, at that time ambassador from the Queen of Sweden to the French court; whose acquaintance I anxiously desired<sup>2</sup>." He quotes the opinions of Grotius with high respect in his treatise on divorce<sup>3</sup>. The alternative titles of the fourth draft of Milton's own contemplated tragedy, viz. Adam unparadiz'd and Adams Banishment, certainly recall the title Adamus Exul; and it may be

<sup>1</sup> Professor J. G. Robertson, "Milton's Fame on the Continent," a paper read before the British Academy, Dec. 10, 1908.

Perhaps the strangest and most delightful evidence of Milton's acceptance among foreigners was Mr Maurice Baring's discovery of the popularity of Paradise Lost, in a prose translation, amongst the Russian peasantry and private soldiers:

"The schoolmaster said that after all his experience the taste of the peasants in literature baffled him. 'They will not read modern stories,' he said. 'When I ask them why they like Paradise Lost they point to their heart and say, "It is near to the heart; it speaks; you read, and a sweetness comes to you."'" noted that this draft was sketched in that period (about 1641) of Milton's life to which his meeting with Grotius belongs. Of the likeness between Paradise Lost and the Adamus Exul, and other works dealing with the same theme, it is impossible to say how much, if not all, is due to identity of subject and (what is no less important) identity of convention as to the machinery proper for its treatment. But I do not think that community of subject accounts entirely for the resemblances between Paradise Lost and Grotius's tragedy. The conception of Satan's character and motives unfolded in his long introductory speech in the Adamus, the general idea of his escaping from Hell and surveying Eden, his invocation of the powers of evil (amongst them Chaos and Night)—these things and some others, such as the Angel's narrative to Adam of the Creation, seem like far-off embryonic drawings of the splendours of the epic. It should be added that Grotius's other religious plays were known in England. A free rendering of his Christus Patiens into rhymed heroics was published in London in 1640 under the title Christ's Passion; while his tragedy Sophompaneas, or Joseph, appeared in an English version in 1650. And a sidelight may be thrown not merely on the contemporary estimate of Grotius by the exceptionally eulogistic mention of his works in the Theatrum Poetarum (1675) of Milton's nephew Edward Phillips. The Theatrum is commonly supposed to reflect in some degree Milton's own views<sup>1</sup> and it is significant therefore to find Grotius described as one "whose equal in fame for Wit & Learning, Christendom of late Ages hath rarely produc'd, particularly of so happy a Genius in Poetry, that had his Annals, <sup>1</sup> See v. 177, 673, notes. Other touches in the Theatrum of Miltonic interest are the accounts of Spenser and Sylvester, and the praise of Henry Lawes in the notice of Waller. One may conjecture, too, that the obscure Erycus Puteanus would not have had his niche but for Comus. The Theatrum includes also Andreini—but not Vondel. Phillips's account of Milton himself is admirably discreet: and he expressly terms Paradise Lost and Paradise Regained "Heroic Poems." The relations between uncle and nephew were more than ordinarily close.

<sup>2</sup> P. W. I. 255.

<sup>3</sup> See chapters xvii., xviii. of The Doctrine and Discipline.

his Book De Veritate Christianæ Religionis...and other his extolled works in Prose, never come to Light, his extant and universally approved Latin Poems, had been sufficient to gain him a Living Name."

It is an easy transition from the Adamus Exul to the Adamo of the Italian poet Giovanni Battista Andreini (1578—1652), a Florentine, which is said to owe something to Grotius's tragedy. Voltaire, in his Essai sur la Poésie Epique written in 1727, related that Milton during his residence at Florence saw "a comedy called Adamo<sup>1</sup>.....The subject of the play was the Fall of Man: the actors, the Devils, the Angels, Adam, Eve, the Serpent, Death, and the Seven Mortal Sins.....Milton pierced through the absurdity of that performance to the hidden majesty of the subject; which, being altogether unfit for the stage, yet might be, for the genius of Milton, and his only, the foundation of an epick poem." What authority he had for this legend Voltaire does not say. It is not alluded to by any of Milton's contemporary biographers. It may have been a mere invention by some ill-wisher of the poet, a piece of malicious gossip circulated out of political spite against the great champion of republicanism. But the authenticity of the story is not perhaps very important, for independently there seems to be evidence in the Adamo itself that Milton was acquainted with it even before his visit to Italy. One cannot read the scene of the Adamo (v. 5) in which the World, personified, tempts Eve with all its pomps and vanities, without being reminded of the scene in Comus of the temptation of the Lady. And, as with the Adamus Exul, some of the coincidences of incident and treatment between the Adamo and Paradise Lost, or Milton's early dramatic sketches of the action, seem to constitute a residuum of resemblance after full allowance has been made for the influence of practical identity of theme. Thus the list of characters in the Adamo has abstractions like the World, Famine, Labour, Despair, Death: and the appearance of these and kindred evils of life to Adam and Eve (Act IV., scenes 6 and 7) recalls the early drafts of the scheme of Paradise Lost and also the vision shown to Adam in the eleventh (477—99) book of the poem. Andreini makes Michael drive Adam and Eve out of Paradise and depicts a final struggle between Michael and Lucifer. Andreini's representation of the Serpent's temptation of Eve has been thought to have left some impression on the parallel scene in Paradise Lost. After the Fall Lucifer summons the spirits of air and fire, earth and water—a counterpart to Paradise Regained, II. 115 et seq. And occasionally a verbal similarity arrests—as where Lucifer says (IV. 2, end)

<sup>1</sup> It had been printed in 1613 (Milan), and again in 1617. The title-page of the first edition describes the work as "L'Adamo, Sacra Rappresentatione." It is more "a hybrid between a miracle play and an opera" (Courthope) than a "comedy." A translation by Cowper and Hayley was printed in their edition of Milton; and it is in this translation that the work is known to me. The fact that Cowper took the Adamo theory seriously is significant.

“ Let us remain in hell!
 Since there is more content
 To live in liberty, tho' all condemn'd,
 Than, as his vassals, blest<sup>1</sup> ” (“ Poi, ch' è maggior contento
viver in libertà tutti dannati, che sudditi beati”);

and inveighs (IV. 2):

“ Ahi luce, ahi luce odiata! ”

or where the Angels describe Man (II. 1):

“ For contemplation of his Maker form'd ”
 (“ Per contemplar del suo gran Fabro il merto ”).

<sup>1</sup> See I. 263, note; but of course the idea was not peculiar to any writer. So tradition, literary or theological, may explain the following similarity, which is at least an interesting illustration of P. L. v. 688, 699. Andreini makes Lucifer (I. 3) address his followers:

“ I am that Spirit, I, who for your sake
 Collecting dauntless courage, to the north Led you far distant from the senseless will
 Of him who boasts to have created heav'n.”

The reference occurs again in the Adamo, III. 8.

Tradition also may account for another feature common to the Adamo, the Adamus and Paradise Lost, viz. the long description of the convulsions and deterioration in the physical universe after the Fall of Man.

Leaving the matter for a moment we will pass to the third claimant, the Dutch poet, Joost van den Vondel. He was contemporary with Milton, and the author of a great number of works. Among them were several dramas on Scriptural subjects. With three of them Milton is supposed by some writers to have been acquainted. These are Lucifer (1654), a drama on the revolt of the angels and their fall from heaven; John the Messenger (1662), and Adam in Banishment (1664). In a work published a few years since it was contended that Milton borrowed a good deal from these three poems.

That Milton had heard of Vondel may be conceded. Vondel enjoyed a great reputation; beside which, there was in the 17th century much intercourse between England and Holland, and Milton from his position as Secretary, no less than from his controversies with Salmasius and Morus, must have had his thoughts constantly directed towards the Netherlands. Also, we learn that he had some knowledge of the Dutch language. But it will be observed that the earliest of the poems with which he is thought to have been too conversant, namely Lucifer, was not published till after his blindness, while by the time that the last of them, Adam in Banishment, appeared, Paradise Lost was almost completed. It is impossible that Milton read a line of the works himself; if he knew them at all, it must have been through the assistance of some reader or translator; and considering how many details concerning the last years of Milton's life have survived, it is exceeding curious that this reader or translator should have escaped mention, and that the Vondelian theory should not have been heard of till a century after the poet's death. For there were plenty of people ready to do him an ill-turn and damage his repute; and plagiarism from his Dutch contemporary would have been an excellent cry to raise. As it is, Milton's biographers—and contemporaries—Phillips, Aubrey, Toland, Antony à Wood, are absolutely silent on the subject. Phillips indeed and Toland expressly mention the languages in which Milton used to have works read to him. The list is extensive: it includes Hebrew, Syriac, Greek, Latin, Italian, Spanish and French:

and it does not include Dutch. I think that this fact tells heavily against the hypothesis of Milton's indebtedness to Vondel. Still, it must be admitted that critics of eminence accept it.

There remains the so-called Cædmon Paraphrase. In the Bodleian is the manuscript of an Old English metrical Paraphrase of parts<sup>1</sup> of the Old Testament. This work was long attributed to the Northumbrian religious writer Cædmon, of whom Bede speaks. Cædmon lived in the seventh century. He is supposed to have died about 670. There is no reason for thinking that he was not the author of sacred poems, as Bede represents him to have been; but there is also no possibility of believing that the Paraphrase, as we have it, was written by him. It is a composite work in which several hands may be traced, and the different styles belong to a date long subsequent to Cædmon<sup>2</sup>. The MS. was once in the possession of Archbishop Ussher. He presented it in 1651 to his secretary, the Teutonic scholar, Francis Dujon, commonly called Franciscus Junius. Junius published the MS. at Amsterdam in 1655. Milton never saw the Paraphrase in print, for the same reason that he never saw Vondel's Lucifer. But inasmuch as Junius had been settled in England since 1620, it is quite likely that he knew Milton<sup>3</sup>; if so, he may have mentioned the Paraphrase, and even translated<sup>4</sup> parts of it. Here, however, as in the previous cases of Andreini and Vondel, we cannot get beyond conjecture, <sup>1</sup> Namely Genesis, Exodus and Daniel. It is the paraphrase of Genesis that would have concerned Milton most.

<sup>2</sup> See the article by Mr Henry Bradley in the Dictionary of National Biography. There is also a good discussion of the authorship of the work in the Appendix to Professor Ten Brink's Early English Literature.

<sup>3</sup> This was first pointed out by Sharon Turner; see also Masson, Life, VI. 557.

<sup>4</sup> In a very ingenious paper in Anglia, IV. pp. 401—405, Professor Wuelcker argues that Milton had not much knowledge of Anglo-Saxon. In his History of Britain he habitually quotes Latin Chronicles, and in one place virtually admits that an Old English chronicle was not intelligible to him.

since there is no actual record or external evidence of Milton's acquaintance with the Paraphrase or its translator.

These then are the four possible 'sources' of Paradise Lost seemingly most deserving of mention ; and of them the Adamus Exul and the Adamo strike me as unquestionably the most important, for various reasons. Milton's acquaintance with them may be referred to the early period when the influence on him of other writers would be greatest. The Adamus and the Adamo both present some points of resemblance to the early drafts of Paradise Lost. With the Adamus there is the special consideration of Milton's personal knowledge and admiration of its author. With the Adamo, apart from the possibility that Voltaire's story had some basis, there is the consideration of Milton's special devotion to Italian literature. With neither is there, at least not in the same degree as in the case of Vondel's works and the Cædmon Paraphrase, the difficulty involved by the poet's blindness. That he knew the Adamus<sup>1</sup> and the Adamo appears to me, now, hardly an open question. In these and similar works disinterred by the industry of Milton's editors lay the general conception, the theological machinery, the cosmic and supra-cosmic scene of a poem on the Fall of Man. So much is simply a matter of history ; and to claim for Milton or any other writer who chose this theme the merit of absolute originality is simply to ignore history. The composition of religious poetry was the great literary activity of the earlier part of the 17th century, and Milton did on the grand scale what others did on the lower. The work of these lesser writers could not be without its influence on him, since no poet can detach himself from the conditions of his age or the associations of a subject that has become common property and passed into a convention. But that the qualities which have made Paradise Lost immortal were due, in the faintest degree, to any other genius than that of Milton himself: this is a fond delusion, vainly imagined, without warranty, and altogether to be cast out.

<sup>1</sup> As regards the Adamus Exul William Lauder had some case, but spoilt it by his forgeries ; for a sample of his libellous malevolence see i. 261—63, note. Todd (ii. 585—89) has an Appendix on "Lauder's Interpolations."

We must indeed recognise in Paradise Lost, the meeting-point of Renaissance and Reformation, the impress of four great influences: the Bible, the classics, the Italian poets, and English literature. Of the Bible Milton possessed a knowledge such as few have had. There are hundreds of allusions to it: the words of Scripture underlie some part of the text of every page of Paradise Lost; and apart from verbal reminiscences there is much of the spirit that pervades that noblest achievement of the English tongue. Scarcely less powerful was the influence of the classics. Milton's allusiveness extends over the whole empire of classical humanity and letters, and to the scholar his work is full of the exquisite charm of endless reference to the noblest things that the ancients have thought and said. That he was deeply versed in Italian poetry the labours of his early editors have abundantly proved; and their comparative studies are confirmed by the frequent mention of Dante<sup>1</sup>, Petrarch, Tasso, Ariosto and others in his prose works and correspondence. In English literature I imagine that he had read everything worth reading. Without doubt, he was impatient

<sup>1</sup> See Dr Paget Toynbee's Dante in English Literature, I. 2, 120, 486, II. 587. Among the points noted are these: Dante resemblances occur in Milton's early poems before his visit to Italy; in his Commonplace Book Milton illustrates his views several times by references to Dante; his rendering of three lines of the Inferno in his treatise Of Reformation (see P. L. III. 444—97, note) is the first instance of the use of blank verse as a medium for the translation of Dante and may have suggested the use of that metre to Cary; Milton was one of the first English poets to use Dante's terza rima—see his translation of Psalm ii., headed "Done August 8, 1653. Terzetti." Dr Toynbee also states that Milton's copy (the 3rd ed., Venice, 1529) of the Convivio is extant: "Milton has written his name in the book and the date, 1629. The volume belonged to Heber [the book-collector, half-brother of the bishop], and was sold at his sale in 1834." It contained also the Sonnets (1563) of the Italian poet Casa and the marginal markings, if made by Milton, show that he had "read the Sonnets with great attention."

most affected by "our admired Spenser<sup>1</sup>." He was, says Dryden, "the poetical son of Spenser. Milton has acknowledged to me that Spenser was his original." And there was a Spenserian school of poets, mostly Cambridge men, and some of them contemporary with Milton at the University, with whose works he evidently had a considerable acquaintance. Among these the two Fletchers were conspicuous—Giles Fletcher, author of the sacred poems Christ's Victorie on Earth and Christ's Triumph in Heaven; and Phineas Fletcher, author of The Purple Island. The influence of the Fletchers is manifest in Milton's early poems<sup>2</sup>, and it is traceable in Paradise Lost. Finally, we must not forget Sylvester. Joshua Sylvester (of whom little is known beyond that he was born in 1563, died in 1618, and diversified the profession of merchant with the making of much rhyme) translated into exceedingly Spenserian verse The Divine Weeks and Works of the French poet, Du Bartas<sup>3</sup>. The subject of this very lengthy work is the story of Creation, with the early history of the Jews. The translation was amazingly popular. Dryden confessed that he had once preferred Sylvester to Spenser<sup>4</sup>. There is no doubt

<sup>1</sup> Animadversions, P. W. III. 84. On Milton's feeling for Spenser see the note to Il Penseroso, 116—20.

<sup>2</sup> See the Introductions to Comus and Lycidas. Phineas Fletcher's Apollyonists might also be mentioned (see II. 650, 746, notes). Besides the Fletchers, there was Henry More, the famous "Cambridge Platonist." Milton must have known him at Christ's College.

<sup>3</sup> Sylvester translated a good deal from Du Bartas beside the Divine Weeks; and rhymed on his own account. The first collected edition of his translation of the Divine Weeks was published in 1605—1606, instalments having appeared between 1592 and 1599. Dr Grosart collected Sylvester's works into two bulky volumes.

<sup>4</sup> Spenser himself admired Du Bartas greatly; see the Envoy addressed to the French poet Bellay at the end of The Ruines of Rome.

In a paper read before the British Academy on some MS. notes, "dealing mainly with the place of astronomy in poetry," by Spenser's Cambridge friend Gabriel Harvey, Professor Gollancz gave the following extract referring to Du Bartas and Spenser:

"Mr Digges hath the whole Aquarius of Palingenius by heart, that Milton studied The Divine Weeks in his youth. "That Poem hath ever had many great admirers among us" is the suggestive comment of his nephew Edward Phillips. It is certainly one of the works<sup>1</sup> whereof account must be taken in any attempt to estimate the literary influences that moulded Milton's style.

But a writer may be influenced by others, and not 'plagiarise'; and it is well to remember that from Vergil downwards the great poets have exercised their royal right of adapting the words of their forerunners and infusing into them a fresh charm and suggestion, since in allusion lies one of the chief delights of literature. It is well, also, to realise wherein lies the greatness of Paradise Lost, and to understand that all the borrowing in the world could not contribute a jot to the qualities which have rendered the epic "a possession for ever." What has made the poem live is not the story, nobly though that illustrates the eternal antagonism of righteousness and wrong, and the overthrow of evil; nor the construction, though this is sufficiently architectonic; nor the learning, though this is vast; nor the characterisation, for which there is little scope: not these things, though all are factors in the greatness of the poem, and in all Milton rises to the height of his argument—but the incomparable elevation of the style, "the shaping spirit of Imagination," and the mere majesty of the music.

and takes much delight to repeat it often. Mr Spenser conceives the like pleasure in the fourth day of the first Week of Bartas which he esteems as the proper profession of Urania."

<sup>1</sup> See some remarks and illustrations in Professor Mackail's The Springs of Helicon (1909), pp. 195, 196.

THE STORY OF THE POEM.

A sketch of the action of the whole poem, following the sequence of the twelve books, may be useful to those who are acquainted only with parts of Paradise Lost :—

I. The scene Hell—the time nine days after the expulsion of Satan and his followers from Heaven. They lie on the burning lake, stupefied. Satan first recovers, rouses Beëlzebub, discusses with him their position, and then makes his way from the lake to a “dreary plain” of dry land. Beëlzebub follows; Satan calls to his comrades to do likewise. Rising on the wing they reach the same firm land. Their numbers and names described. They range themselves in battle-array before Satan, who addresses them. They may still (he says) regain Heaven; or there may be other worlds to win—in particular, a new world, inhabited by new-created beings, of which report had spoken: let these matters be duly conferred of. Straightway, a vast palace—Pandemonium—is made, to serve as council-chamber. Here a council is held; only the great Angels are present.

II. The scene—at first—Pandemonium; the debate begins. Satan invites their counsel—“who can advise may speak.” Moloch, Belial and Mammon speak—their several counsels: last Beëlzebub, who reverts to Satan’s hint of the new world. Why not ruin it? or make it their own? or win its inhabitants to their side? What better revenge against the Almighty? The plan approved—but who will discover this world? None volunteer: and then Satan offers to undertake the journey. His offer accepted; the council leaving Pandemonium breaks up; the result announced to the rest of the Angels. How they pass the time till his return—some exploring Hell (now more closely described). Meanwhile he reaches Hell-gates, is suffered to pass by Sin and Death, voyages through Chaos (described), and at last comes within sight of the Universe hung in space (i.e. Chaos). We leave him directing his course towards the World.

III. The scene—at first—Heaven. The Almighty perceives Satan, points him out to the Son, tells what his design is, and its destined success; tells also that Man will be saved ultimately—if he can find a Redeemer. “The Son of God freely offers himself a ransom for Man”; is accepted by the Father, and praised by the Angelic host. Meanwhile—the scene changing—Satan, having reached the outer surface (described) of the Universe, wanders through various regions (described), until, coming to the single opening in the surface, he descends into the inside of the Universe. He arrives at the sphere of the Sun; disguising himself as a young Angel from Heaven, enquires from Uriel, the Sun-spirit, the way to Earth—pretending “desire to behold the new Creation”; is directed by Uriel, descends again, and alights on Mt Niphates.

IV. There, pausing awhile, he gives way to regret that he has rebelled, and rage at his outcast state; passion distorts his face, so that Uriel, watching, now knows him for an evil spirit. Thence, recovering self-control, Satan journeys on towards Eden, the main scene (described); sees Adam and Eve (famous description of them); overhears what they say concerning the Tree of Knowledge, and perceives at once the means whereby to compass their fall. At nightfall he essays to tempt Eve in a dream; is discovered by Gabriel, who, warned by Uriel, has descended to Eden to defend Man. A battle between Satan and Gabriel imminent, but averted. Satan flies.

V The scene still Eden. A further picture of Adam and Eve—their worship and work. Raphael (the scene having changed for a brief space to Heaven) comes to warn them of their danger, at the bidding of the Almighty—so that Man, if he falls, may fall knowingly, by his own fault. Raphael received and entertained; admonishes Adam; explains who his enemy is, and why. which leads to an account of the rebellion in Heaven—its beginning described.

VI. The scene of the events narrated by Raphael Heaven. He describes the three days’ war in Heaven, at the end of which Satan and his followers were cast into Hell. The warning to Adam repeated.

VII. The scene Eden. Raphael describes the Creation of the World, which is accomplished by the Son of God.

VIII. The scene the same. Adam enquires concerning the stars and Heavenly bodies; Raphael answers doubtfully. Adam recounts his own first experience of Eden—how the Almighty forbade him to touch the Tree of Knowledge, under pain of what penalty; how he first saw Eve. The day declines, and Raphael departs—once more warning Adam.

IX. The scene the same. “Adam and Eve...go forth to their labours, which Eve proposes to divide in several places, each labouring apart.” Adam dissuades; she persisting, he yields. So Satan (in the form of a serpent) finds her alone and tempts her. She eats of the fruit and induces Adam to do so. Their sense of sin and shame.

X. The Son of God descends to Eden, and pronounces doom on Adam and Eve and the Serpent. Meanwhile Satan, returning to Pandemonium, announces the result of his journey, and lo! on a sudden he and his followers are changed to reptiles. Sin and Death now ascend from Hell to Eden, to claim the World as theirs; but the Almighty foretells their ultimate overthrow by the Son, and commands the Angels to make changes in the elements and stars, whereby the Earth becomes less fair. The repentance of Adam and Eve, who seek comfort in supplication of the Deity. The scene has changed often.

XI. The Son interceding, the Father sends Michael to Eden (henceforth the scene) to reveal the future to Adam—above all, his hope of redemption. After announcing to Adam his approaching banishment from Eden, Michael takes him to a high mountain and unrolls before him a vision of the World's history till the Flood.

XII. Then he traces the history of Israel after the Flood, till the coming of Christ, with the subsequent progress of Christianity; ending with renewed promise of redemption. The fiery Cherubim now descend, Michael leads Adam and Eve to the gates of Eden, and they go forth, sad yet consoled with the hope of salvation at the last.

MILTON'S PREFACE ON "THE VERSE" OF
PARADISE LOST.

Milton's attitude towards rhyme reminds us of the condemnations showered on it by Elizabethan critics. Ascham in the Schoolmaster (1570) sneers at "our rude beggerly ryming, brought first into Italie by Gothes and Hunnes, whan all good verses and all good learning to, were destroyed by them...and at last receyued into England by men of excellent wit indeede, but of small learning, and lesse judgement in that behalfe." "Barbarous" is his darling epithet for rhymed verse. Puttenham is of a like mind, waving aside "the rhyming poesie of the barbarians," and Webbe in his Discourse of English Poetry (1586) takes up the tale, ridiculing it as "tinkerly verse"—"brutish poesie"—"a great decay of the good order of versifying." Why Milton should have adopted the same position as these Elizabethan critics who approached the question in a spirit of the merest pedantry, and based their objections to rhyme solely on the fact that, as a metrical principle, it was not employed by the ancients, it is not easy to say. He uses rhyme occasionally in Samson Agonistes, in spite of his denunciation of it here; and his own early poems are sufficient refutation of the heresy that therein lies "no true musical delight." Moreover, though he appeals to the example of some European poets "of prime note" in support of his view, yet he must have foreseen the obvious and just retort that the weight of "custom" was against him, and that, in particular, the Italian exponents of versi sciolti whom he could cite on his side made a poor showing beside those great masters of rhyme—Dante, Ariosto, Tasso<sup>1</sup>—to whom he himself owed so much. His contemptuous dismissal of what "in every country of modern Europe had been adopted as the basis of metrical composition"<sup>2</sup> was a characteristic touch of his resentment of criticism and defiance of authority.

<sup>1</sup> See, however, p. 367.

<sup>2</sup> Courthope.

There is a polemical tone in his remarks, as though he were replying to some unnamed antagonist; and I cannot help thinking that this preface was meant to be his contribution to the controversy then raging over the comparative advantages of rhymed and unrhymed metres on the stage. In fact, significant in itself, Milton's opinion becomes doubly so if regarded from the standpoint of his contemporaries. Hardly could they fail to see in it a retort to what Dryden had written in the behalf of rhyme—notably in his Essay of Dramatic Poesy (1665), in which the rhymed couplet had been set forth as the best vehicle of dramatic expression. In play after play Dryden had put his theory into practice: others had followed his example: to rhyme or not to rhyme—that had become the great question; and here was Milton brushing the matter on one side as of no moment, with the autocratic dictum that rhyme was a vain and fond thing with which a “sage and serious” poet need have no commerce. His readers must have detected the contemporary application of his words—just as later on they must have interpreted his preface to Samson Agonistes, with its pointed eulogy of the Greek stage and its depreciation of Restoration tragedy (and “other common interludes”), as a counterblast to the comparison which Dryden had drawn between the modern and the classical drama, in the interests of the former. There is force too in the suggestion that the association of rhyme with the amatory Caroline poets (Lycidas, 67–69) would not make Milton more favourable to it.

Curiously enough, Paradise Lost and Paradise Regained both contain a good deal of rhyme. We may compare it with the rare rhymed verse, accidental or designed (“leonine”), in the Latin poets. Cowper noted some instances in his fragment of a commentary on Paradise Lost. “Rhyme,” he said, “is apt to come uncalled, and to writers of blank verse is often extremely troublesome<sup>1</sup>.” Indeed complete absence of rhyme argues some artificiality. To quote Mr Robert Bridges: “Rhyme occurs in Paradise

<sup>1</sup> “The blank verse Italians have often done this [i.e. rhymed]: in fact, it is excessively difficult to prevent in Italian” (Saintsbury).

Lost (see I. 146, 8, 51; II. 220, 1; IV. 24—27), but only as a natural richness among the varieties of speech; and it would seem that it cannot be forbidden in a long poem but by the scrupulosity which betrays art." Possibly, however, the amount of rhyme in the two epics exceeds what Milton would have desired. It illustrates, I think, the terrible difficulty of revision imposed by his blindness. Yet such is the spell of the rhythm of his verse that one may be unconscious of the rhyme till its presence is pointed out. Of consecutive rhymed lines, some being actual rhymed couplets, the following passages are examples: Paradise Lost, II. 220, 221; IV. 956, 957; VI. 709, 710; IX. 105, 106, 477, 478; XI. 230, 231, 597, 598, 671, 672; Paradise Regained, III. 214, 215; IV. 591, 592. In II. 893, 894, a slight difference of pronunciation, indicated by Milton's spelling, may account for what appears to the eye as a couplet. In v. 167, 168, 274, 275, IX. 191, 192, the assonance has the effect of rhyme. Of course, the most frequent rhyme is that which comes with an interval of one or two intervening lines, as in two out of the three passages remarked by Mr Bridges. Other examples<sup>1</sup> are: Paradise Lost, I. 274, 276, 711, 713, 764, 767; II. 390, 393, 942, 944; III. 140, 142, 168, 170; IV. 222, 224, 288, 290, 678, 680; V. 160, 162, 383, 385, 857, 859; VI. 14, 16, 161, 163, 174, 176; VIII. 1, 3, 171, 173, 229, 231; IX. 590, 591, 606, 608; XI. 201, 204, 206, 637, 639, 740, 741; XII. 353, 355, 366, 368; Paradise Regained, II. 206, 208, 245, 247, 250; IV. 25, 27, 145, 147, 222, 224. As remarked before, I cannot help thinking that a portion of this rhyme represents Milton's inability to focus the full measure of his fastidious taste<sup>2</sup> on the revision of his work.

Superfluous as it may seem to us that he should justify his adoption of blank verse—wherein his surpassing skill is the best of all justifications—we have cause to be grateful to the "stumbleings" of the unlettered which led him to write this preface, since it happily defines the qualities for which the metre of Paradise Lost is remarkable.

<sup>1</sup> The list is illustrative, not exhaustive.

<sup>2</sup> It would have resented surely the substitution of Chersonese in most modern texts for the Chersoness of the original editions in Paradise Regained, IV. 74. See the termination of the previous line.

The distinguishing characteristic of Milton's blank verse is his use of what Mr Saintsbury calls the verse-paragraph. Blank verse is exposed to two dangers: it may be formal and stiff by being circumscribed in single lines or couplets; or diffuse and formless through the sense and rhythm being carried on beyond the couplet. In its earlier stages, exemplified by works like Gorboduc, the metre suffered from the former tendency. It either closed with a strong pause at the end of every line, or just struggled to the climax of the couplet. Further it never extended until Marlowe took the "drumming decasyllabon" into his hands, broke up the fetters of the couplet-form, and by the process of overflow carried on the rhythm from verse to verse according as the sense required. It is in his plays that we first get verse in which variety of cadence and pause and beat takes the place of rhyme. Milton entered on the heritage that Marlowe and Shakespeare bequeathed, and brought blank verse to its highest pitch of perfection as an instrument of narration.

Briefly, that perfection lies herein: if we examine a page of Paradise Lost we find that what the poet has to say is, for the most part, conveyed, not in single lines, nor in rigid couplets—but in flexible combinations of verses, which wait upon his meaning, not twisting or constraining the sense, but suffering it to be "variously drawn out," so that the thought is merged in its expression.

These combinations, or paragraphs, are informed by a perfect internal concert and rhythm<sup>1</sup>—held together by a chain of harmony. With a writer less sensitive to sound this free method of versifying would result in mere chaos. But Milton's ear is so delicate, that he steers unfaltering through the long, involved passages, distributing the pauses and rests and allitera-tive balance with a cunning which knits the paragraph into a coherent, regulated whole. He combines, in fact, the two essential qualities of blank verse—freedom and form: the freedom that admits variety of effect, without which a long narrative becomes intolerably monotonous; and the form which saves an unrhymed measure from drifting into that which is nearer to bad prose than to good verse. And restoration of form was precisely what the metre needed. With the later Jacobean and Caroline dramatists metrical freedom had turned to “licence and slipshodness...then comes Milton,...takes non-dramatic blank verse in hand once for all, and introduces into it the order, proportion, and finish which dramatic blank verse had then lost<sup>1</sup>.” Milton in fact was the re-creator of blank verse, “the first to establish this peculiarly English form of metre in non-dramatic poetry<sup>1</sup>.” Nor was he unconscious of the character of his achievement. Here, in the last lines of his preface, he congratulates himself upon “an example set”; and many years before, in the grand passage apostrophising the Divine Goodness at the end of the treatise Of Reformation, he had written, with obvious reference to the great design that ruled his whole life: “Then, amidst the hymns and hallelujahs of saints, some one may perhaps be heard offering at high strains in new and lofty measure to sing and celebrate thy divine mercies and marvellous judgments in this land throughout all ages<sup>2</sup>.” It were hard to frame an apter summary of the metre of Paradise Lost than “new and lofty.”

<sup>1</sup> Cf. Professor Mackail's fine metaphor for it—"the planetary wheeling of the long period"—"that continuous planetary movement" (Lecture II. on Milton in The Springs of Helicon, pp. 156, 196).

As he lays such stress upon the internal economy and balance of his verse-paragraphs, much must depend on the pause or rest which in English prosody answers, to some extent, to the classical cæsura. Dr Masson notes that Milton's favourite pause is at the end of the third foot. These are typical specimens:

“I, at first, with two fair gifts
Created him endowed | —with happiness

<sup>1</sup> Saintsbury, History of English Prosody, II. pp. 208, 224.

<sup>2</sup> P. W. II. 418.

And immortality; | that fondly lost,
 This other served but to eternize woe,
 Till I provided death: | so death becomes
 His final remedy" | (XI. 57—62).

Next in frequency comes the pause after the second foot; cf.

"ere fallen
 From innocence" | (XI. 29, 30).

"Made one with me, | as I with thee am one" (XI. 44).

Scarcely need we say that in this, as in everything else, Milton never forgets that variety of effect is essential.

It remains to note two other remarks made by Milton. One of the elements, he says, of "true musical delight" is "fit quantity of syllables." By this, I think, he meant that every word should bear its natural accent, i.e. that a word should not be forced by the exigence of the metre to bear an accent alien to it. Rather, a poet should be careful to "span words with just note and accent<sup>1</sup>," so that each stress should fall naturally, and the "fit quantity" of the component parts of a line not be violated. Considering the length of Paradise Lost, it is marvellous how he maintains an unflinching appropriateness of accent. But another interpretation of his words is possible, namely that by "fit quantity of syllables" he meant "that blank verse might be extended beyond the usual number of ten syllables when its sense and feeling so required<sup>2</sup>." Taken in this way, "quantity" would have reference to the trisyllabic element in his verse by which the number of syllables in a line is increased, and perhaps more obviously to the hypermetrical element.

One peculiarity of the metre of Paradise Lost, pointed out by Coleridge, is the rarity of verses with an extra syllable (or two extra syllables) at the close. Shakespeare, of course, uses

<sup>1</sup> Sonnet to Henry Lawes.

<sup>2</sup> Courthope, History of English Poetry, III. 428. Personally I think that in a specifically metrical context "quantity" conveys the notion "long" or "short," i.e. with or without accent (stress).

them freely—especially in his later plays, and the percentage of them in Comus and Samson Agonistes is high. But in Paradise Lost Milton avoids them. There are several varieties of this extra-syllable verse—e.g. lines (i) where the supernumerary syllable comes at the close; (ii) where it comes in the course of the line, particularly after the second foot; (iii) where there are two extra syllables at the end, as in the line, “Like one | that means | his proper harm, | in mánacles” (Coriolanus, I. 9. 57); and (iv) where there are two extra syllables in the middle, as in Coriolanus, I. 1. 230, “Our must|y su|perflu|ity |. See our | best elders.” In Comus there are examples of all four varieties: in Paradise Lost of only two<sup>1</sup>—(i) and (iii). This paucity is an illustration of what must be recognised as the great metrical feature of the epic—that its metre is mainly iambic, and consequently decasyllabic in character. Such verse has a slower, statelier movement, and is therefore appropriate to a narrative poem that deals with the loftiest themes in an elevated, solemn style. Verse, on the other hand, that admits the supernumerary syllable at the close of the line tends towards a conversational rapidity of rhythm which makes it suitable for the purposes of the dramatist. It is typical of Milton’s “inevitable,” almost infallible, art that he should vary his style so precisely to fit the several characteristics and requirements of the drama and of epic narration. Such variation illustrates “a quality for which he seldom or never gets the full credit due to him, a dramatic sense of extreme delicacy. With him, as with Sophocles, this quality is so fine that it may easily elude observation<sup>2</sup>.”

Again, another element of the pleasure offered by poetry lies in “apt numbers.” Here Milton referred to that adaptation of expression to subject whereby the sound becomes an echo to the sense. This adaptation is shown in its simplest form by the suggestion of specific effects such as movement or sound<sup>1</sup>. But it dominates the whole relation of the manner to the matter. No one has understood the art of blending the thought with its expression better than Milton. "What other poets effect," says Dr Guest<sup>2</sup>, "as it were by chance, Milton achieved by the aid of science and art; he studied the aptness of his numbers, and diligently tutored an ear which nature had gifted with the most delicate sensibility. In the flow of his rhythm, in the quality of his letter sounds, in the disposition of his pauses, his verse almost ever fits the subject, and so insensibly does poetry blend with this—the last beauty of exquisite versification—that the reader may sometimes doubt whether it be the thought itself, or merely the happiness of its expression, which is the source of a gratification so deeply felt."

<sup>1</sup> In most of the cases of one extra syllable it is a present participle that is affected. I believe that the cases with two such syllables are—in Milton—confined to words like society; cf. P. R. I. 302, “Such solitude before choicest society.” So in P. L. VIII. 216. Of course in these cases an “Alexandrine” solves the difficulty.

<sup>2</sup> The Springs of Helicon, p. 175 (see also p. 178).

We have seen that Milton may have had in view the scansion of his verse when he referred to the "fit quantity of syllables." That scansion has as its basic principle the "pure iambic"—carmen iambicum—so much canvassed by Elizabethan metricists. This stately, self-contained line of five feet in rising rhythm—"O Prince, O chief of many throned powers—" lies at the centre of the prosody of Paradise Lost. So much is patent; nor are the main means by which it is varied obscure. By letting the lines run on so that the rhythm of the unit of five feet passes into the richer harmony of groups of units Milton gives us the "verse-paragraph." And by substituting each of the possible variations of the disyllabic foot—namely, the trochee (or inversion of rhythm), the spondee and the pyrrhic—he tempers the monotony of a single-foot measure to "stops of various quills." But these foot-modifications had become part of the machinery of blank verse as developed since the pioneer days. There is nothing specifically Miltonic about the use of them in Paradise Lost, except possibly as regards the spondee. Cowper was inclined to think that "the grand secret to which his [Milton's] verse is principally indebted for its stately movement" is the frequent employment of spondaic feet: "the more long syllables there are in a verse, the more the line of it is protracted, and consequently the pace, with which it moves, is the more majestic." That Milton's use of the trochee (or rare double trochee) was due to the partiality of the Italians for this foot seems a needless assumption, the trochee having been firmly established by Marlowe. And "pyrrhic" is merely a rather pedantic-sounding term for a quite ordinary feature of blank verse—namely, the occurrence of a foot with a weak stress. Dr Abbott estimates that of Shakespeare's lines "rather less than one of three has the full number of five emphatic accents." I doubt whether the instances are so frequent in Milton; but they are sufficiently common to make it desirable to remember that five stresses are not indispensable—rather that for variety's sake it is necessary that one or more should occasionally be remitted. Taken as a whole, the obviously disyllabic element of Milton's poetry does not present much difficulty: the crux lies in the less obviously trisyllabic strata.

<sup>1</sup> Cf. e.g. I. 742—46, 768, II. 947—50, 1021, 1022, VII. 495 (note), X. 521—28 (note). So in II. 641 we get the sense of vast space; in II. 879—83 of combined movement and jarring noise; in II. 890—906 of confusion; in IV. 181 (note) of scornful laughter; in VII. 480 of length. A very elaborate example (admirably analysed in Mayor's Modern English Metre, pp. 99—106) is the description of the march of the fallen angels in I. 549—62.

<sup>2</sup> English Rhythms, p. 530.

This is a subject on which irreconcilable opinions are held; the Miltonic blank verse described by Dr Masson is simply a different thing from the Miltonic blank verse described by Mr Bridges; and the essential truth seems to me to lie very much nearer to the views of the latter critic. I think that Milton himself would have been astonished at the elaborate trisyllabic apparatus—bacchics and amphibrachs and cretics rare—with which the verse of Paradise Lost has been credited. The base-principle of the slow-moving, majestic iambic decasyllable is lost in the mazes of so complex a system. On the other hand, to attempt to ban the trisyllabic foot altogether from his metre involves impossible twistings and distortions. We shall not be far astray if we steer a middle course and admit the anapæst

("the foot-of-all-work of English prosody") and (to a much less important share) the dactyl and the tribrach<sup>1</sup>. These may be taken to represent collectively "the trisyllabic foot, which was inherent in the nature of the [English] language, and had been recognised by long poetical usage<sup>2</sup>." It reproduces "the swift triple rhythm<sup>2</sup>" of Old English poetry, while the iambic element corresponds with the typical movement of the Greek senarius. And in the verse of Paradise Lost it is the iambic movement that prevails, especially perhaps in the first six books, which are cast more in the typically grand Miltonic manner than the second half of the poem, where the less impressive and less coherent interest of the subject is reflected in the style. But the measure of this iambic predominance depends on the degree to which the principle of elision of vowels applies.

"Elision" comprehends not merely the cases where a vowel must be dropped altogether in pronunciation, but those more numerous cases where the metre indicates, or seems to indicate, that a vowel has something less than its normal quantitative value, so that it is either slurred or made almost to coalesce with a preceding or succeeding vowel. Such elision resolves itself practically into cases of the open vowel and the vowel (or double vowel) followed by a liquid. Elision of the former type belongs to poetic usage, of the latter to the currency of everyday speech; and each is permissive, not obligatory. Moreover, elision is a matter of scansion, not necessarily of pronunciation and reading. It is, I think, perfectly true to say that "Milton came to scan his verses one way, and read them another." But is it not true of all poetic elision? Who knows what precisely happened to the elided vowels of Greek and Latin verse? Metrically their suppression may have been absolute, as it is (I am told) in Greek MSS.: but in actual declamation? Similarly, though I cannot doubt that Milton scanned "th' Aonian mount" and "th' oblivious pool," yet I should not like to say that he read the words so. Nor should I like to have to determine whether in scansion he extended this principle of the elision of the open vowel beyond monosyllables like the and to and the terminal y which slides so easily into a vowel at the beginning of the next word. Thus it satisfies my "gross unpurged ear" to scan "Who highly thus t' entitle me vouchsaf'st" (X. 170); but to wrest an iambus out of the second foot of the line "Virtue in her shape how lovely; saw and pined" (IV. 848) by eliding the double vowel ue ("Virtue in | her shape") seems a needless violence, when the easy access of the anapæst ("Virtue | in her shape") solves all. And so with many another line.

<sup>1</sup> See Saintsbury, A History of English Prosody, I. 403, II. 259, 260.

<sup>2</sup> Courthope. Compare also Mayor (Modern English Metre, p. 15): "Anapaestic rhythm was familiar to the Elizabethan poets, not merely from its use by older writers, such as the author of Piers Ploughman, but from the later 'tumbling verse' as used by Skelton and Udall." And again (p. 44): "Trisyllabic rhythm is a marked feature of the Old English alliterative verse, and of the 'tumbling measure' which followed it."

Some light is thrown on this difficult question of Milton's elisions by the Cambridge autographs of his earlier poems. The evidence, indeed, is not conclusive because the MSS. are not consistent in giving always an elided form where the metre requires one as an alternative to a trisyllabic scansion. But one cannot help drawing some inference from elisions like "Temper'd to th' oaten flute," and elided forms such as watrie—westring—batning—wandring—toured, and the many contractions of the inflections of verbs, such as honour'st—tun'st—forc't—nur'st—stoopt—stolne—dan'ct<sup>1</sup>. With some of these examples before us, it is not hard to conjecture how Milton would have scanned, say, Paradise Lost, XI. 779, "Wandering that watery desert; I had hope." Similarly when we come across lines of the epic in which Heaven appears to be equivalent to a monosyllable, it is apposite to remember that his autograph has heavn in the prose draft of Adam unparadiz'd (line 2).

<sup>1</sup> Cf. Lycidas, 4, 12, 23, 29, 31, 33; Arcades, 21; Comus, 39; Sonnets II. and XIII.

And faIn in the prose draft of Isaac redeemed serves as a metrical gloss on l. 84, "If thou beest he—but Oh how fallen! how changed!" The drift of such elisions and contractions is obviously to diminish the trisyllabic element, and maintain that iambic rhythm which was ever present<sup>1</sup> to Milton's ear and ever wafting the proud full sail of his verse.

<sup>1</sup> Two groups of exceptions to the general movement of his lines have been remarked, viz. passages where he indulges his taste for sonorous proper names, and passages "where he follows the Authorised Version of the Bible—especially where the speaker is the Deity."

COMMENDATORY VERSES.

IN PARADISUM AMISSAM SUMMI POETÆ
JOHANNIS MILTONI.

QUI legis Amissam Paradisum, grandia magni
Carmina Miltoni, quid nisi cuncta legis?
Res cunctas, et cunctarum primordia rerum,
Et fata, et fines, continet iste liber.
Intima panduntur magni penetralia mundi,
Scribitur et toto quicquid in orbe latet;
Terræque, tractusque maris, cœlumque profundum,
Sulphureumque Erebi flammivomumque specus;
Quæque colunt terras, pontumque, et Tartara cæca,
Quæque colunt summi lucida regna poli; 10
Et quodcunque ullis conclusum est finibus usquam;
Et sine fine Chaos, et sine fine Deus;
Et sine fine magis, si quid magis est sine fine,
In Christo erga homines conciliatus amor.
Hæc qui speraret quis crederet esse futurum?
Et tamen hæc hodie terra Britannia legit.
O quantos in bella duces, quæ protulit arma!
Quæ canit, et quanta, prælia dira tuba!
Cœlestes acies, atque in certamine cœlum!
Et quæ cœlestes pugna deceret agros! 20
Quantus in ætheriis tollit se Lucifer armis,
Atque ipso graditur vix Michaelæ minor!

Quantis et quam funestis concurrir iris,
 Dum ferus hic stellas protegit, ille rapit!
 Dum vulsos montes ceu tela reciproca torquent,
 Et non mortali desuper igne pluunt:
 Stat dubius cui se parti concedat Olympus,
 Et metuit pugnae non superesse suae.
 At simul in caelis Messiae insignia fulgent,
 Et currus animes, armaque digna Deo, 30
 Horrendumque rotae strident, et saeva rotarum
 Erumpunt torvis fulgura luminibus,
 Et flammæ vibrant, et vera tonitrua rauco
 Admistis flammis insonuere polo,
 Excidit attonitis mens omnis, et impetus omnis,
 Et cassis dextris irrita tela cadunt;
 Ad poenas fugiunt, et, ceu foret Orcus asyllum,
 Infernis certant condere se tenebris.
 Cedite, Romani Scriptorum; cedite, Graii;
 Et quos fama recens vel celebravit anus: 40
 Haec quicumque leget tantum cecinisse putabit
 Maenidem ranas, Virgilium culices.

S. B., M.D.

ON PARADISE LOST.

WHEN I beheld the Poet blind, yet bold,
 In slender book his vast design unfold,
 Messiah crowned, God's reconciled decree,
 Rebelling Angels, the Forbidden Tree,
 Heaven, Hell, Earth, Chaos, all; the argument
 Held me a while misdoubting his intent,
 That he would ruin (for I saw him strong)
 The sacred truths to fable and old song
 (So Samson groped the temple's posts in spite),
 The world o'erwhelming to revenge his sight. 10

Yet as I read, soon growing less severe,
 I liked his project, the success did fear;
 Through that wide field how he his way should find
 O'er which lame Faith leads Understanding blind;
 Lest he perplexed the things he would explain,
 And what was easy he should render vain.

Or, if a work so infinite he spanned,
 Jealous I was that some less skilful hand
 (Such as disquiet always what is well,
 And by ill imitating would excel) 20
 Might hence presume the whole Creation's day
 To change in scenes, and show it in a play.

Pardon me, mighty Poet; nor despise
 My causeless, yet not impious, surmise.
 But I am now convinced, and none will dare
 Within thy labours to pretend a share.
 Thou hast not missed one thought that could be fit,
 And all that was improper dost omit;
 So that no room is here for writers left,
 But to detect their ignorance or theft. 30

That majesty which through thy work doth reign
 Draws the devout, deterring the profane.
 And things divine thou treat'st of in such state
 As them preserves, and thee, inviolate.
 At once delight and horror on us seize;
 Thou sing'st with so much gravity and ease,
 And above human flight dost soar aloft
 With plume so strong, so equal, and so soft.
 The bird named from that Paradise you sing
 So never flags, but always keeps on wing. 40

Where could'st thou words of such a compass find?
 Whence furnish such a vast expense of mind?
 Just Heaven, thee like Tiresias to requite,
 Rewards with prophecy thy loss of sight.

Well might'st thou scorn thy readers to allure
 With tinkling rime, of thy own sense secure;

While the Town-Bayes writes all the while and spells,
And, like a pack-horse, tires without his bells.
Their fancies like our bushy points appear; —
The poets tag them, we for fashion wear. 50
I too, transported by the mode, offend,
And while I meant to praise thee, must commend.
Thy verse created like thy theme sublime,
In number, weight, and measure, needs not rime.

A. M.

THE VERSE<sup>1</sup>.

The measure is English heroic verse, without rime, as that of Homer in Greek, and of Virgil in Latin; rime being no necessary adjunct or true ornament of poem or good verse, in longer works especially, but the invention of a barbarous age, to set off wretched matter and lame metre; graced indeed since by the use of some famous modern poets, carried away by custom, but much to their own vexation, hindrance, and constraint to express many things otherwise, and for the most part worse, than else they would have expressed them. Not without cause, therefore, some both Italian and Spanish poets of prime note have rejected rime both in longer and shorter works, as have also, long since, our best English tragedies; as a thing of itself, to all judicious ears, trivial and of no true musical delight; which consists only in apt numbers, fit quantity of syllables, and the sense variously drawn out from one verse into another, not in the jingling sound of like endings, a fault avoided by the

<sup>1</sup> Preceded by some remarks from the publisher:

The Printer to the Reader.

Courteous Reader, there was no Argument at first intended to the book; but for the satisfaction of many that have desired it, I have procured it, and withal a reason of that which stumbled many others, why the poem rimes not.—S. Simmons.

learned ancients both in poetry and all good oratory. This neglect then of rime so little is to be taken for a defect, though it may seem so perhaps to vulgar readers, that it rather is to be esteemed an example set, the first in English, of ancient liberty recovered to heroic poem from the troublesome and modern bondage of riming.

BOOK I.

THE ARGUMENT.

This First Book proposes, first in brief, the whole subject, Man's disobedience, and the loss thereupon of Paradise, wherein he was placed: then touches the prime cause of his fall, the Serpent, or rather Satan in the Serpent; who revolting from God, and drawing to his side many legions of Angels, was by the command of God driven out of Heaven with all his crew into the great Deep. Which action passed over, the Poem hastes into the midst of things; presenting Satan with his Angels now fallen into Hell, described here, not in the Centre (for Heaven and Earth may be supposed as yet not made, certainly not yet accursed) but in a place of utter darkness, fitliest called Chaos: here Satan with his Angels lying on the burning lake, thunderstruck and astonished, after a certain space recovers, as from confusion; calls up him who, next in order and dignity, lay by him; they confer of their miserable fall. Satan awakens all his legions, who lay till then in the same manner confounded; they rise: their numbers, array of battle, their chief leaders named, according to the idols known afterwards in Canaan and the countries adjoining. To these Satan directs his speech; comforts them with hope yet of regaining Heaven; but tells them lastly of a new world and new kind of creature to be created, according to an ancient prophecy or report in Heaven; for that Angels were long before this visible creation was the opinion of many ancient Fathers. To find out the truth of this prophecy, and what to determine thereon, he refers to a full council. What his associates thence attempt. Pandemonium, the palace of Satan, rises, suddenly built out of the Deep: the infernal Peers there sit in council.

BOOK I.

OF Man's first disobedience, and the fruit
Of that forbidden Tree, whose mortal taste
Brought death into the world, and all our woe,
With loss of Eden, till one greater Man
Restore us, and regain the blissful seat,
Sing, Heavenly Muse, that on the secret top
Of Oreb, or of Sinai, didst inspire
That shepherd, who first taught the chosen seed
In the beginning how the Heavens and Earth
Rose out of Chaos: or, if Sion hill
Delight thee more, and Siloa's brook that flowed Fast by the oracle of God, I thence Invoke thy aid to my adventurous song,
That with no middle flight intends to soar
Above the Aonian mount, while it pursues
Things unattempted yet in prose or rhyme.
And chiefly thou, O Spirit, that dost prefer
Before all temples the upright heart and pure,
Instruct me, for thou know'st; thou from the first
Wast present, and, with mighty wings outspread,
Dove-like sat'st brooding on the vast Abyss,
And mad'st it pregnant: what in me is dark

10

20

Illumine, what is low raise and support ;
 That to the highth of this great argument
 I may assert Eternal Providence,
 And justify the ways of God to men.

Say first (for Heaven hides nothing from thy view, Nor the deep tract of Hell) say first what cause
 Moved our grand parents, in that happy state,
 Favoured of Heaven so highly, to fall off 30
 From their Creator, and transgress his will
 For one restraint, lords of the world besides.
 Who first seduced them to that foul revolt?
 The infernal Serpent; he it was, whose guile,
 Stirred up with envy and revenge, deceived
 The Mother of Mankind, what time his pride
 Had cast him out from Heaven, with all his host
 Of rebel Angels, by whose aid, aspiring
 To set himself in glory above his peers,
 He trusted to have equalled the Most High, 40
 If he opposed; and with ambitious aim
 Against the throne and monarchy of God
 Raised impious war in Heaven and battle proud,
 With vain attempt. Him the Almighty Power
 Hurl'd headlong flaming from the ethereal sky,
 With hideous ruin and combustion, down
 To bottomless perdition; there to dwell
 In adamantine chains and penal fire,
 Who durst defy the Omnipotent to arms.

Nine times the space that measures day and night 50
 To mortal men, he with his horrid crew
 Lay vanquished, rolling in the fiery gulf,
 Confounded though immortal. But his doom
 Reserved him to more wrath; for now the thought
 Both of lost happiness and lasting pain

Torments him ; round he throws his baleful eyes,
 That witnessed huge affliction and dismay,
 Mixed with obdurate pride and steadfast hate.
 At once, as far as Angels ken, he views
 The dismal situation waste and wild : 60

A dungeon horrible, on all sides round,
 As one great furnace flamed ; yet from those flames
 No light, but rather darkness visible
 Served only to discover sights of woe,
 Regions of sorrow, doleful shades, where peace
 And rest can never dwell, hope never comes
 That comes to all ; but torture without end
 Still urges, and a fiery deluge, fed
 With ever-burning sulphur unconsumed.
 Such place Eternal Justice had prepared 70

For those rebellious ; here their prison ordained
 In utter darkness, and their portion set,
 As far removed from God and light of Heaven
 As from the centre thrice to the utmost pole.
 Oh how unlike the place from whence they fell !
 There the companions of his fall, o'erwhelmed
 With floods and whirlwinds of tempestuous fire,
 He soon discerns ; and, weltering by his side, rolling
 One next himself in power, and next in crime,
 Long after known in Palestine, and named 80
 Beëlzebub. To whom the Arch-Enemy,

And thence in Heaven called Satan, with bold words
 Breaking the horrid silence, thus began :

“If thou beest he—but Oh how fallen ! how changed
 From him, who in the happy realms of light,
 Clothed with transcendent brightness, didst outshine
 Myriads, though bright ! if he whom mutual league,
 United thoughts and counsels, equal hope

And hazard in the glorious enterprize,
 Joined with me once, now misery hath joined 90
 In equal ruin: into what pit thou seest
 From what highth fallen, so much the stronger proved
 He with his thunder: and till then who knew
 The force of those dire arms? Yet not for those,
 Nor what the potent victor in his rage
 Can else inflict, do I repent, or change,
 Though changed in outward lustre, that fixed mind,
 And high disdain from sense of injured merit,
 That with the Mightiest raised me to contend,
 And to the fierce contention brought along 100
 Innumerable force of Spirits armed,
 That durst dislike his reign, and, me preferring,
 His utmost power with adverse power opposed
 In dubious battle on the plains of Heaven,
 And shook his throne. What though the field (be lost?
 All is not lost: the unconquerable will,
 And study of revenge, immortal hate,
 And courage never to submit or yield:
 And what is else not to be overcome?
 That glory never shall his wrath or might 110
 Extort from me. To bow and sue for grace
 With suppliant knee, and deify his power
 Who, from the terror of this arm, so late
 Doubted his empire—that were low indeed;
 That were an ignominy and shame beneath
 This downfall; since by fate the strength of gods
 And this empyreal substance cannot fail;
 Since, through experience of this great event,
 In arms not worse, in foresight much advanced,
 We may with more successful hope resolve 120
 To wage by force or guile eternal war,

Irreconcilable to our grand foe,
 Who now triumphs, and in the excess of joy
 Sole reigning holds the tyranny of Heaven."

So spake the apostate Angel, though in pain,
 Vaunting aloud, but racked with deep despair;
 And him thus answered soon his bold compeer:

"O Prince, O Chief of many throned powers,
 That led the embattled Seraphim to war
 Under thy conduct, and, in dreadful deeds 130

Fearless, endangered Heaven's perpetual King,
 And put to proof his high supremacy,
 Whether upheld by strength, or chance, or fate!

Too well I see and rue the dire event
 That with sad overthrow and foul defeat
 Hath lost us Heaven, and all this mighty host
 In horrible destruction laid thus low,

As far as gods and Heavenly essences
 Can perish: for the mind and spirit remains Invincible, and vigour soon returns, 140

Though all our glory extinct, and happy state
 Here swallowed up in endless misery.

But what if he our conqueror (whom I now
 Of force believe almighty, since no less Than such could have o'erpowered such force as ours)

Have left us this our spirit and strength entire,
 Strongly to suffer and support our pains,
 That we may so suffice his vengeful ire;

Or do him mightier service, as his thralls
 By right of war, whate'er his business be, 150
 Here in the heart of Hell to work in fire,
 Or do his errands in the gloomy deep?

What can it then avail, though yet we feel Strength undiminished, or eternal being

To undergo eternal punishment?"

Whereto with speedy words the Arch-Fiend replied :

"Fallen Cherub, to be weak is miserable,
Doing or suffering: but of this be sure,
To do aught good never will be our task,
But ever to do ill our sole delight,

160

As being the contrary to his high will
Whom we resist. If then his providence
Out of our evil seek to bring forth good,
Our labour must be to pervert that end,
And out of good still to find means of evil;
Which oft times may succeed, so as perhaps Shall grieve him, if I fail not, and disturb
His inmost counsels from their destined aim.

But see! the angry victor hath recalled

His ministers of vengeance and pursuit

170

Back to the gates of Heaven; the sulphurous hail,
Shot after us in storm, o'erblown hath laid
The fiery surge that from the precipice
Of Heaven received us falling; and the thunder,
Winged with red lightning and impetuous rage,
Perhaps hath spent his shafts, and ceases now
To bellow through the vast and boundless deep.

Let us not slip the occasion, whether scorn

Or satiate fury yield it from our foe.

Seest thou yon dreary plain, forlorn and wild,

180

The seat of desolation, void of light,

Save what the glimmering of these livid flames

Casts pale and dreadful? Thither let us tend

From off the tossing of these fiery waves;

There rest, if any rest can harbour there;

And, re-assembling our afflicted powers,

Consult how we may henceforth most offend

Our enemy, our own loss how repair,
 How overcome this dire calamity,
 What reinforcement we may gain from hope, 190
 If not what resolution from despair.”

Thus Satan, talking to his nearest mate,
 With head uplift above the wave, and eyes
 That sparkling blazed ; his other parts besides,
 Prone on the flood, extended long and large,
 Lay floating many a rood, in bulk as huge
 As whom the fables name of monstrous size,
 Titanian, or Earth-born, that warred on Jove,
 Briareos or Typhon, whom the den
 By ancient Tarsus held, or that sea-beast 200
 Leviathan, which God of all his works
 Created hugest that swim the ocean-stream.
 Him, haply, slumbering on the Norway foam,
 The pilot of some small night-foundered skiff
 Deeming some island, oft, as seamen tell,
 With fixèd anchor in his scaly rind,
 Moors by his side under the lee, while night
 Invests the sea, and wished morn delays.
 So stretched out huge in length the Arch-Fiend lay,
 Chained on the burning lake ; nor ever thence 210
 Had risen or heaved his head, but that the will
 And high permission of all-ruling Heaven
 Left him at large to his own dark designs,
 That with reiterated crimes he might
 Heap on himself damnation, while he sought
 Evil to others, and enraged might see
 How all his malice served but to bring forth
 Infinite goodness, grace and mercy shewn
 On Man by him seduced, but on himself
 Treble confusion, wrath and vengeance poured. 220

Forthwith upright he rears from off the pool
 His mighty stature; on each hand the flames
 Driven backward slope their pointing spires, and, rolled
 In billows, leave i' the midst a horrid vale.
 Then with expanded wings he steers his flight
 Aloft, incumbent on the dusky air,
 That felt unusual weight; till on dry land
 He lights—if it were land that ever burned
 With solid, as the lake with liquid fire,
 And such appeared in hue, as when the force                   230
 Of subterranean wind transports a hill
 Torn from Pelorus, or 'the shattered side
 Of thundering Ætna, whose combustible
 And fuelled entrails thence conceiving fire,
 Sublimed with mineral fury, aid the winds,
 And leave a singed bottom all involved
 With stench and smoke: such resting found the sole
 Of unblest feet. Him followed his next mate,
 Both glorying to have scaped the Stygian flood
 As gods, and by their own recovered strength,                   240
 Not by the sufferance of supernal power.

“Is this the region, this the soil, the clime,”
 Said then the lost Archangel, “this the seat
 That we must change for Heaven? this mournful gloom
 For that celestial light? Be it so, since he Who now is sovran can dispose and bid
 What shall be right: farthest from him is best,
 Whom reason hath equalled, force hath made supreme Above his equals. Farewell, happy fields,
 Where joy for ever dwells! Hail, horrors! hail,                   250
 Infernal world! and thou, profoundest Hell,
 Receive thy new possessor, one who brings
 A mind not to be changed by place or time.

The mind is its own place, and in itself
 Can make a Heaven of Hell, a Hell of Heaven.
 What matter where, if I be still the same,
 And what I should be, all but less than he Whom thunder hath made greater? Here at least
 We shall be free; the Almighty hath not built
 Here for his envy, will not drive us hence: 260
 Here we may reign secure, and in my choice
 To reign is worth ambition, though in Hell:
 Better to reign in Hell, than serve in Heaven.
 But wherefore let we then our faithful friends,
 The associates and co-partners of our loss,
 Lie thus astonished on the oblivious pool,
 And call them not to share with us their part
 In this unhappy mansion, or once more
 With rallied arms to try what may be yet
 Regained in Heaven, or what more lost in Hell?" 270

So Satan spake; and him Beëlzebub
 Thus answered: "Leader of those armies bright
 Which but the Omnipotent none could have foiled,
 If once they hear that voice, their liveliest pledge
 Of hope in fears and dangers—heard so oft
 In worst extremes, and on the perilous edge
 Of battle when it raged, in all assaults
 Their surest signal—they will soon resume
 New courage and revive, though now they lie
 Grovelling and prostrate on yon lake of fire, 280
 As we erewhile, astounded and amazed—
 No wonder, fallen such a pernicious highth!"

He scarce had ceased when the superior Fiend
 Was moving toward the shore; his ponderous shield,
 Ethereal temper, massy, large, and round,
 Behind him cast. The broad circumference

Hung on his shoulders like the moon, whose orb
 Through optic glass the Tuscan artist views Miltonice
 At evening from the top of Fesole, vagine
 Or in Valdarno, to descry new lands, 290
 Rivers, or mountains, in her spotty globe.
 His spear—to equal which the tallest pine
 Hewn on Norwegian hills, to be the mast
 Of some great ammiral, were but a wand—
 He walked with, to support uneasy steps
 Over the burning marle, not like those steps
 On Heaven's azure; and the torrid clime
 Smote on him sore besides, vaulted with fire.
 Nathless he so endured, till on the beach
 Of that inflamed sea he stood, and called 300
 His legions, Angel forms, who lay entranced,
 Thick as autumnal leaves that strow the brooks
 In Vallombrosa, where the Etrurian shades
 High over-arched embower; or scattered sedge
 Afloat, when with fierce winds Orion armed Hath vexed the Red-Sea coast, whose waves o'erthrew Busiris and his Memphian chivalry,
 While with perfidious hatred they pursued
 The sojourners of Goshen, who beheld
 From the safe shore their floating carcasses 310
 And broken chariot-wheels: so thick bestrown,
 Abject and lost, lay these, covering the flood,
 Under amazement of their hideous change.
 He called so loud that all the hollow deep
 Of Hell resounded: "Princes, Potentates,
 Warriors, the flower of Heaven, once yours, now lost,
 If such astonishment as this can seize Eternal Spirits: or have ye chosen this place
 After the toil of battle to repose

Your wearied virtue, for the ease you find 320

To slumber here, as in the vales of Heaven?

Or in this abject posture have ye sworn
To adore the conqueror, who now beholds
Cherub and Seraph rolling in the flood

With scattered arms and ensigns, till anon
His swift pursuers from Heaven-gates discern
The advantage, and descending tread us down
Thus drooping, or with linked thunderbolts
Transfix us to the bottom of this gulf?
Awake, arise, or be for ever fallen!" 330 -

They heard, and were abashed, and up they sprung

Upon the wing, as when men went to watch
On duty, sleeping found by whom they dread,
Rouse and bestir themselves ere well awake.

Nor did they not perceive the evil plight
In which they were, or the fierce pains not feel;
Yet to their General's voice they soon obeyed
Innumerable. As when the potent rod

Of Amram's son, in Egypt's evil day,
Waved round the coast, up called a pitchy cloud 340

Of locusts, warping on the eastern wind,
That o'er the realm of impious Pharaoh hung
Like night, and darkened all the land of Nile:

So numberless were those bad Angels seen
Hovering on wing under the cope of Hell,
'Twixt upper, nether, and surrounding fires;

Till, as a signal given, the uplifted spear
Of their great Sultan waving to direct
Their course, in even balance down they light
On the firm brimstone, and fill all the plain: 350

A multitude, like which the populous North
Poured never from her frozen loins, to pass

Rhene or the Danaw, when her barbarous sons
 Came like a deluge on the South, and spread Beneath Gibraltar to the Libyan sands.
 Forthwith, from every squadron and each band,
 The heads and leaders thither haste where stood
 Their great Commander; godlike shapes, and forms
 Excelling human, princely dignities,
 And powers that erst in Heaven sat on thrones; 360
 Though of their names in Heavenly records now
 Be no memorial, blotted out and rased
 By their rebellion from the Books of Life.
 Nor had they yet among the sons of Eve
 Got them new names, till, wandering o'er the Earth,
 Through God's high sufferance for the trial of Man,
 By falsities and lies the greatest part
 Of Mankind they corrupted to forsake
 God their Creator, and the invisible
 Glory of him that made them to transform 370
 Oft to the image of a brute, adorned
 With gay religions full of pomp and gold,
 And devils to adore for deities.
 Then were they known to men by various names,
 And various idols through the heathen world.

Say, Muse, their names then known, who first, who last,
 Roused from the slumber on that fiery couch,
 At their great Emperor's call, as next in worth
 Came singly where he stood on the bare strand,
 While the promiscuous crowd stood yet aloof. 380

> The chief were those who, from the pit of Hell
 Roaming to seek their prey on Earth, durst fix
 Their seats long after next the seat of God,
 Their altars by his altar, gods adored
 Among the nations round, and durst abide

Jehovah thundering out of Sion, throned
Between the Cherubim; yea, often placed Within his sanctuary itself their shrines,
Abominations; and with cursed things
His holy rites and solemn feasts profaned, 390
And with their darkness durst affront his light.
First, Moloch, horrid king, besmeared with blood
Of human sacrifice, and parents' tears,
Though, for the noise of drums and timbrels loud,
Their children's cries unheard, that passed through fire
To his grim idol. Him the Ammonite
Worshiped in Rabba and her watery plain,
In Argob and in Basan, to the stream
Of utmost Arnon. Nor content with such Audacious neighbourhood, the wisest heart 400
Of Solomon he led by fraud to build
His temple right against the temple of God
On that opprobrious hill, and made his grove
The pleasant valley of Hinnom, Tophet thence
And black Gehenna called, the type of Hell.
Next Chemos, the obscene dread of Moab's sons,
From Aroer to Nebo, and the wild
Of southmost Abarim; in Hesebon
And Horonaim, Seon's realm, beyond
The flowery dale of Sibma clad with vines, 410
And Eleale to the Asphaltic pool.
Peor his other name, when he enticed
Israel in Sittim, on their march from Nile,
To do him wanton rites, which cost them woe.
Yet thence his lustful orgies he enlarged
Even to that hill of scandal, by the grove
Of Moloch homicide, lust hard by hate;
Till good Josiah drove them thence to Hell.

With these came they who, from the bordering flood
 Of old Euphrates to the brook that parts 420
 Egypt from Syrian ground, had general names
 Of Baalim and Ashtaroth—those male,
 These feminine. For Spirits, when they please,
 Can either sex assume, or both; so soft
 And uncompounded is their essence pure,
 Not tied or manacled with joint or limb,
 Nor founded on the brittle strength of bones,
 Like cumbrous flesh; but, in what shape they choose,
 Dilated or condensed, bright or obscure,
 Can execute their aery purposes, 430
 And works of love or enmity fulfil.
 For those the race of Israel oft forsook
 Their living Strength, and unfrequented left
 His righteous altar, bowing lowly down
 To bestial gods; for which their heads as low
 Bowed down in battle, sunk before the spear
 Of despicable foes. With these in troop Came Astoreth, whom the Phoenicians called Astarte, Queen of Heaven, with crescent horns;
 To whose bright image nighly by the moon 440
 Sidonian virgins paid their vows and songs;
 In Sion also not unsung, where stood
 Her temple on the offensive mountain, built
 By that uxorious king whose heart, though large,
 Beguiled by fair idolatresses, fell
 To idols foul. Thammuz came next behind,
 Whose annual wound in Lebanon allured
 The Syrian damsels to lament his fate
 In amorous ditties all a summer's day,
 While smooth Adonis from his native rock 450
 Ran purple to the sea, supposed with blood

Of Thammuz yearly wounded : the love-tale
 Infected Sion's daughters with like heat,
 Whose wanton passions in the sacred porch
 Ezekiel saw, when, by the vision led,
 His eye surveyed the dark idolatries
 Of alienated Judah. Next came one
 Who mourned in earnest, when the captive ark
 Maimed his brute image, head and hands lopt off
 In his own temple, on the grunsel-edge, 460
 Where he fell flat, and shamed his worshipers :
 Dagon his name, sea-monster, upward man
 And downward fish ; yet had his temple high
 Reared in Azotus, dreaded through the coast
 Of Palestine, in Gath and Ascalon,
 And Accaron and Gaza's frontier bounds.
 Him followed Rimmon, whose delightful seat
 Was fair Damascus, on the fertile banks
 Of Abbana and Pharphar, lucid streams.
 He also against the house of God was bold : 470
 A leper once he lost and gained a king,
 Ahaz, his sottish conqueror, whom he drew
 God's altar to disparage and displace
 For one of Syrian mode, whereon to burn
 His odious offerings, and adore the gods
 Whom he had vanquished. After these appeared
 A crew who, under names of old renown,
 Osiris, Isis, Orus, and their train,
 With monstrous shapes and sorceries abused
 Fanatic Egypt and her priests, to seek 480
 Their wandering gods disguised in brutish forms
 Rather than human. Nor did Israel scape
 The infection, when their borrowed gold composed
 The calf in Oreb ; and the rebel king

Doubled that sin in Bethel and in Dan,
 Likening his Maker to the grazed ox—
 Jehovah, who, in one night, when he passed
 From Egypt marching, equalled with one stroke
 Both her first-born and all her bleating gods.
 Belial came last, than whom a Spirit more lewd 490
 Fell not from Heaven, or more gross to love
 Vice for itself. To him no temple stood
 Or altar smoked; yet who more oft than he
 In temples and at altars, when the priest
 Turns atheist, as did Eli's sons, who filled
 With lust and violence the house of God?
 In courts and palaces he also reigns,
 And in luxurious cities, where the noise
 Of riot ascends above their loftiest towers,
 And injury and outrage; and when night 500
 Darkens the streets, then wander forth the sons
 Of Belial, flown with insolence and wine.
 Witness the streets of Sodom, and that night
 In Gibeah, when the hospitable door
 Exposed a matron, to avoid worse rape.

These were the prime in order and in might;
 The rest were long to tell, though far renowned,
 The Ionian gods—of Javan's issue held
 Gods, yet confessed later than Heaven and Earth,
 Their boasted parents: Titan, Heaven's first-born, 510
 With his enormous brood, and birthright seized
 By younger Saturn; he from mightier Jove,
 His own and Rhea's son, like measure found;
 So Jove usurping reigned. These, first in Crete
 And Ida known, thence on the snowy top
 Of cold Olympus ruled the middle air,
 Their highest Heaven; or on the Delphian cliff,

Or in Dodona, and through all the bounds
 Of Doric land; or who with Saturn old
 Fled over Adria to the Hesperian fields, 520
 And o'er the Celtic roamed the utmost isles. ✓

All these and more came flocking; but with looks Downcast and damp, yet such wherein appeared Obscure some glimpse of joy, to have found their Chief
 Not in despair, to have found themselves not lost
 In loss itself; which on his countenance cast
 Like doubtful hue. But he, his wonted pride
 Soon recollecting, with high words, that bore
 Semblance of worth, not substance, gently raised 530
 Their fainting courage, and dispelled their fears:
 Then straight commands that, at the warlike sound
 Of trumpets loud and clarions, be upreared
 His mighty standard. That proud honour claimed Azazel as his right, a Cherub tall:
 Who forthwith from the glittering staff unfurled
 The imperial ensign, which, full high advanced,
 Shone like a meteor streaming to the wind,
 With gems and golden lustre rich emblazed,
 Seraphic arms and trophies; all the while
 Sonorous metal blowing martial sounds: 540
 At which the universal host up-sent
 A shout that tore Hell's concave, and beyond
 Frighted the reign of Chaos and old Night.
 All in a moment through the gloom were seen
 Ten thousand banners rise into the air,
 With orient colours waving; with them rose
 A forest huge of spears; and thronging helms
 Appeared, and serried shields in thick array
 Of depth immeasurable. Anon they move
 In perfect phalanx to the Dorian mood 550

Of flutes and soft recorders ; such as raised
 To highth of noblest temper heroes old
 Arming to battle, and instead of rage
 Deliberate valour breathed, firm and unmoved
 With dread of death to flight or foul retreat ;
 Nor wanting power to mitigate and swage,
 With solemn touches, troubled thoughts, and chase
 Anguish and doubt and fear and sorrow and pain
 From mortal or immortal minds. Thus they,
 Breathing united force with fixed thought, 560
 Moved on in silence to soft pipes that charmed
 Their painful steps o'er the burnt soil ; and now
 Advanced in view they stand, a horrid front
 Of dreadful length and dazzling arms, in guise
 Of warriors old, with ordered spear and shield,
 Awaiting what command their mighty Chief
 Had to impose. He through the armed files
 Darts his experienced eye, and soon traverse
 The whole battalion views—their order due,
 Their visages and stature as of gods ; 570
 Their number last he sums. And now his heart
 Distends with pride, and hardening in his strength
 Glories ; for never, since created Man,
 Met such embodied force as, named with these,
 Could merit more than that small infantry
 Warred on by cranes : though all the giant brood
 Of Phlegra with the heroic race were joined
 That fought at Thebes and Ilium, on each side
 Mixed with auxiliar gods ; and what resounds
 In fable or romance of Uther's son, 580
 Begirt with British and Armoric knights ;
 And all who since, baptized or infidel,
 Josted in Aspramont, or Montalban,

Damasco, or Marocco, or Trebisond;
 Or whom Biserta sent from Afric shore
 When Charlemain with all his peerage fell
 By Fontarabbia. Thus far these beyond
 Compare of mortal prowess, yet observed
 Their dread Commander. He, above the rest
 In shape and gesture proudly eminent, 590
 Stood like a tower; his form had yet not lost
 All her original brightness, nor appeared
 Less than Archangel ruined, and the excess
 Of glory obscured: as when the sun new-risen
 Looks through the horizontal misty air
 Shorn of his beams, or from behind the moon,
 In dim eclipse, disastrous twilight sheds
 On half the nations, and with fear of change
 Perplexes monarchs. Darkened so, yet shone 600
 Above them all the Archangel; but his face
 Deep scars of thunder had intrenched, and care
 Sat on his faded cheek, but under brows
 Of dauntless courage, and considerate pride
 Waiting revenge. Cruel his eye, but cast
 Signs of remorse and passion, to behold
 The fellows of his crime, the followers rather (Far other once beheld in bliss), condemned
 For ever now to have their lot in pain;
 Millions of Spirits for his fault amerced
 Of Heaven, and from eternal splendours flung 610
 For his revolt; yet faithful how they stood,
 Their glory withered: as, when Heaven's fire
 Hath scathed the forest oaks or mountain pines,
 With singed top their stately growth, though bare,
 Stands on the blasted heath. He now prepared
 To speak; whereat their doubled ranks they bend

From wing to wing, and half enclose him round
 With all his peers: attention held them mute.
 Thrice he assayed, and thrice, in spite of scorn,
 Tears, such as Angels weep, burst forth: at last Words interwove with sighs found out their way:

620

“O myriads of immortal Spirits! O Powers
 Matchless, but with the Almighty!—and that strife
 Was not inglorious, though the event was dire,
 As this place testifies, and this dire change,
 Hateful to utter. But what power of mind,
 Foreseeing or presaging, from the depth
 Of knowledge past or present, could have feared
 How such united force of gods, how such
 As stood like these, could ever know repulse?

630

For who can yet believe, though after loss,
 That all these puissant legions, whose exile
 Hath emptied Heaven, shall fail to re-ascend,
 Self-raised, and re-possess their native seat?
 For me, be witness all the host of Heaven,
 If counsels different, or danger shunned
 By me, have lost our hopes. But he who reigns Monarch in Heaven, till then as one secure
 Sat on his throne, upheld by old repute,
 Consent or custom, and his regal state
 Put forth at full, but still his strength concealed,
 Which tempted our attempt, and wrought our fall.
 Henceforth his might we know, and know our own,
 So as not either to provoke, or dread
 New war, provoked; our better part remains
 To work in close design, by fraud or guile,
 What force effected not; that he no less
 At length from us may find, who overcomes
 By force hath overcome but half his foe.

640

Space may produce new worlds ; whereof so rife
 There went a fame in Heaven that he ere long Intended to create, and therein plant
 A generation whom his choice regard
 Should favour equal to the Sons of Heaven.
 Thither, if but to pry, shall be perhaps
 Our first eruption, thither or elsewhere ;
 For this infernal pit shall never hold
 Celestial Spirits in bondage, nor the Abyss
 Long under darkness cover. But these thoughts
 Full counsel must mature. Peace is despaired,
 For who can think submission? War, then, war
 Open or understood, must be resolved.”

He spake ; and, to confirm his words, out-flew Millions of flaming swords, drawn from the thighs
 Of mighty Cherubim ; the sudden blaze
 Far round illumined Hell. Highly they raged
 Against the Highest, and fierce with graspèd arms
 Clashed on their sounding shields the din of war,
 Hurling defiance toward the vault of Heaven.

There stood a hill not far, whose grisly top Belched fire and rolling smoke ; the rest entire Shone with a glossy scurf, undoubted sign
 That in his womb was hid metallic ore,
 The work of sulphur. Thither, winged with speed,
 A numerous brigad hastened : as when bands
 Of pioners, with spade and pickaxe armed,
 Forerun the royal camp, to trench a field,
 Or cast a rampart. Mammon led them on,
 Mammon, the least erected Spirit that fell
 From Heaven, for even in Heaven his looks and thoughts
 Were always downward bent, admiring more
 The riches of Heaven's pavement, trodden gold,

Than aught divine or holy else enjoyed
 In vision beatific. By him first
 Men also, and by his suggestion taught,
 Ransacked the centre, and with impious hands
 Rifled the bowels of their mother Earth
 For treasures better hid. Soon had his crew Opened into the hill a spacious wound,
 And digged out ribs of gold. Let none admire 690
 That riches grow in Hell; that soil may best Deserve the precious bane. And here let those Who boast in mortal things, and wondering tell
 Of Babel, and the works of Memphian kings,
 Learn how their greatest monuments of fame,
 And strength, and art, are easily outdone
 By Spirits reprobate, and in an hour
 What in an age they, with incessant toil
 And hands innumerable, scarce perform.
 Nigh on the plain, in many cells prepared, 700
 That underneath had veins of liquid fire
 Sluiced from the lake, a second multitude
 With wondrous art founded the massy ore,
 Severing each kind, and scummed the bullion-dross.
 A third as soon had formed within the ground
 A various mould, and from the boiling cells
 By strange conveyance filled each hollow nook:
 As in an organ, from one blast of wind,
 To many a row of pipes the sound-board breathes.
 Anon out of the earth a fabric huge 710
 Rose like an exhalation, with the sound
 Of dulcet symphonies and voices sweet,
 Built like a temple, where pilasters round
 Were set, and Doric pillars overlaid
 With golden architrave; nor did there want

Cornice or frieze, with bossy sculptures graven ;
 The roof was fretted gold. Not Babylon,
 Nor great Alcairo, such magnificence
 Equalled in all their glories, to enshrine
 Belus or Serapis their gods, or seat 720
 Their kings, when Egypt with Assyria strove
 In wealth and luxury. The ascending pile
 Stood fixed her stately highth, and straight the doors,
 Opening their brazen folds, discover, wide
 Within, her ample spaces o'er the smooth
 And level pavement: from the arched roof,
 Pendent by subtle magic, many a row
 Of starry lamps and blazing cressets, fed
 With naphtha and asphaltus, yielded light
 As from a sky. The hasty multitude 730
 Admiring entered, and the work some praise,
 And some the architect: his hand was known
 In Heaven by many a towered structure high,
 Where sceptred Angels held their residence,
 And sat as princes, whom the supreme King
 Exalted to such power, and gave to rule,
 Each in his Hierarchy, the Orders bright.
 Nor was his name unheard or unadored
 In ancient Greece; and in Ausonian land
 Men called him Mulciber; and how he fell 740
 From Heaven they fabled, thrown by angry Jove
 Sheer o'er the crystal battlements: from morn
 To noon he fell, from noon to dewy eve,
 A summer's day; and with the setting sun
 Dropt from the zenith, like a falling star, ]
 On Lemnos, the Ægæan isle. Thus they relate,
 Erring; for he with this rebellious rout
 Fell long before; nor aught availed him now

To have built in Heaven high towers; nor did he scape
 By all his engines, but was headlong sent 750
 With his industrious crew to build in Hell.

Meanwhile the winged haralds, by command
 Of sovran power, with awful ceremony
 And trumpet's sound, throughout the host proclaim
 A solemn council forthwith to be held
 At Pandemonium, the high capital
 Of Satan and his peers. Their summons called
 From every band and squared regiment
 By place or choice the worthiest; they anon
 With hundreds and with thousands trooping came 760
 Attended. All access was thronged, the gates
 And porches wide, but chief the spacious hall
 (Though like a covered field, where champions bold
 Wont ride in armed, and at the Soldan's chair
 Defied the best of Panim chivalry
 To mortal combat, or career with lance)
 Thick swarmed, both on the ground and in the air,
 Brushed with the hiss of rustling wings. As bees
 In spring-time, when the Sun with Taurus rides,
 Pour forth their populous youth about the hive 770
 In clusters; they among fresh dews and flowers
 Fly to and fro, or on the smoothed plank,
 The suburb of their straw-built citadel,
 New rubbed with balm, expatiate and confer
 Their state-affairs. So thick the aery crowd
 Swarmed and were straitened; till, the signal given,
 Behold a wonder! they but now who seemed
 In bigness to surpass Earth's giant sons,
 Now less than smallest dwarfs, in narrow room
 Throng numberless, like that pygmean race 780
 Beyond the Indian mount; or faery elves,

Whose midnight revels, by a forest-side
Or fountain, some belated peasant sees,
Or dreams he sees, while overhead the moon
Sits arbitress, and nearer to the Earth
Wheels her pale course; they, on their mirth and dance
Intent, with jocund music charm his ear;
At once with joy and fear his heart rebounds.
Thus incorporeal Spirits to smallest forms
Reduced their shapes immense, and were at large, 790
Though without number still, amidst the hall
Of that infernal court. But far within,
And in their own dimensions like themselves,
The great Seraphic Lords and Cherubim
In close recess and secret conclave sat,
A thousand demi-gods on golden seats,
Frequent and full. After short silence then,
And summons read, the great consult began.

BOOK II.

THE ARGUMENT.

The consultation begun, Satan debates whether another battle be to be hazarded for the recovery of Heaven : some advise it, others dissuade. A third proposal is preferred, mentioned before by Satan, to search the truth of that prophecy or tradition in Heaven concerning another world, and another kind of creature, equal, or not much inferior, to themselves, about this time to be created. Their doubt who shall be sent on this difficult search : Satan, their chief, undertakes alone the voyage ; is honoured and applauded. The council thus ended, the rest betake them several ways and to several employments, as their inclinations lead them, to entertain the time till Satan return. He passes on his journey to Hell-gates, finds them shut, and who sat there to guard them ; by whom at length they are opened, and discover to him the great gulf between Hell and Heaven ; with what difficulty he passes through, directed by Chaos, the Power of that place, to the sight of this new world which he sought.

MS
2
v. 1

X

“ BOOK II. ”

HIGH on a throne of royal state, which far
Outshone the wealth of Ormus and of Ind,
Or where the gorgeous East with richest hand
Showers on her kings barbaric pearl and gold,
Satan exalted sat, by merit raised
To that bad eminence; and, from despair
Thus high uplifted beyond hope, aspires
Beyond thus high, insatiate to pursue
Vain war with Heaven; and, by success untaught,
His proud imaginations thus displayed: 10

“ Powers and Dominions, Deities of Heaven!
For since no deep within her gulf can hold
Immortal vigour, though oppressed and fallen,
I give not Heaven for lost: from this descent
Celestial Virtues rising will appear
More glorious and more dread than from no fall,
And trust themselves to fear no second fate.
Me though just right, and the fixed laws of Heaven,
Did first create your leader, next, free choice,
With what besides, in counsel or in fight, 20
Hath been achieved of merit, yet this loss,
Thus far at least recovered, hath much more

Established in a safe unenvied throne,
 Yielded with full consent. The happier state
 In Heaven, which follows dignity, might draw
 Envy from each inferior; but who here
 Will envy whom the highest place exposes
 Foremost to stand against the Thunderer's aim
 Your bulwark, and condemns to greatest share
 Of endless pain? Where there is then no good
 For which to strive, no strife can grow up there
 From faction; for none sure will claim in Hell
 Precedence, none whose portion is so small
 Of present pain that with ambitious mind
 Will covet more. With this advantage then
 To union, and firm faith, and firm accord,
 More than can be in Heaven, we now return
 To claim our just inheritance of old,
 Surer to prosper than prosperity
 Could have assured us; and by what best way,
 Whether of open war or covert guile,
 We now debate; who can advise may speak.”

30

40

He ceased; and next him Moloch, sceptred king,
 Stood up, the strongest and the fiercest Spirit
 That fought in Heaven, now fiercer by despair.
 His trust was with the Eternal to be deemed Equal in strength, and rather than be less
 Cared not to be at all; with that care lost
 Went all his fear: of God, or Hell, or worse,
 He recked not, and these words thereafter spake:

50

“My sentence is for open war: of wiles,
 More unexpert, I boast not: them let those Contrive who need, or when they need, not now.
 For while they sit contriving, shall the rest,
 Millions that stand in arms, and longing wait

The signal to ascend, sit lingering here
Heaven's fugitives, and for their dwelling-place
Accept this dark opprobrious den of shame,
The prison of his tyranny who reigns
By our delay? No! let us rather choose, 60
Armed with Hell-flames and fury, all at once
O'er Heaven's high towers to force resistless way,
Turning our tortures into horrid arms
Against the Torturer; when to meet the noise
Of his almighty engine he shall hear
Infernal thunder, and for lightning see
Black fire and horror shot with equal rage
Among his Angels, and his throne itself
Mixed with Tartarean sulphur and strange fire,
His own invented torments. But perhaps 70
The way seems difficult and steep to scale
With upright wing against a higher foe.
Let such bethink them, if the sleepy drench
Of that forgetful lake benumb not still,
That in our proper motion we ascend
Up to our native seat; descent and fall
To us is adverse. Who but felt of late,
When the fierce foe hung on our broken rear
Insulting, and pursued us through the deep,
With what compulsion and laborious flight 80
We sunk thus low? The ascent is easy then;
The event is feared: should we again provoke
Our stronger, some worse way his wrath may find
To our destruction—if there be in Hell
Fear to be worse destroyed! What can be worse
Than to dwell here, driven out from bliss, condemned
In this abhorred deep to utter woe;
Where pain of unextinguishable fire

Must exercise us without hope of end,
 The vassals of his anger, when the scourge 90
 Inexorably, and the torturing hour,
 Calls us to penance? More destroyed than thus,
 We should be quite abolished, and expire.
 What fear we then? what doubt we to incense
 His utmost ire? which, to the highth enraged,
 Will either quite consume us, and reduce
 To nothing this essential—happier far
 Than miserable to have eternal being!—
 Or if our substance be indeed divine,
 And cannot cease to be, we are at worst 100
 On this side nothing; and by proof we feel
 Our power sufficient to disturb his Heaven,
 And with perpetual inroads to alarm,
 Though inaccessible, his fatal throne:
 Which, if not victory, is yet revenge.”

He ended frowning, and his look denounced Desperate revenge, and battle dangerous
 To less than gods. On the other side up rose Belial, in act more graceful and humane;
 A fairer person lost not Heaven; he seemed 110
 For dignity composed, and high exploit.
 But all was false and hollow; though his tongue
 Dropt manna, and could make the worse appear
 The better reason, to perplex and dash
 Maturest counsels: for his thoughts were low;
 To vice industrious, but to nobler deeds
 Timorous and slothful: yet he pleased the ear,
 And with persuasive accent thus began:

“I should be much for open war, O Peers,
 As not behind in hate, if what was urged 120
 Main reason to persuade immediate war

Did not dissuade me most, and seem to cast
 Ominous conjecture on the whole success;
 When he who most excels in fact of arms,
 In what he counsels and in what excels
 Mistrustful, grounds his courage on despair
 And utter dissolution, as the scope
 Of all his aim, after some dire revenge.
 First, what revenge? The towers of Heaven are filled
 With armed watch, that render all access 130
 Impregnable; oft on the bordering deep
 Encamp their legions, or with obscure wing
 Scout far and wide into the realm of Night,
 Scorning surprise. Or could we break our way
 By force, and at our heels all Hell should rise
 With blackest insurrection, to confound
 Heaven's purest light, yet our great enemy
 All incorruptible would on his throne
 Sit unpolluted, and the ethereal mould
 Incapable of stain would soon expel 140
 Her mischief, and purge off the baser fire,
 Victorious. Thus repulsed, our final hope
 Is flat despair: we must exasperate
 The almighty victor to spend all his rage,
 And that must end us, that must be our cure—
 To be no more. Sad cure! for who would lose,
 Though full of pain, this intellectual being,
 Those thoughts that wander through eternity,
 To perish rather, swallowed up and lost
 In the wide womb of uncreated Night, 150
 Devoid of sense and motion? And who knows,
 Let this be good, whether our angry foe
 Can give it, or will ever? How he can
 Is doubtful; that he never will is sure.

Will he, so wise, let loose at once his ire,
 Belike through impotence, or unaware,
 To give his enemies their wish, and end
 Them in his anger, whom his anger saves
 To punish endless? 'Wherefore cease we, then?'
 Say they who counsel war; 'we are decreed, 160
 Reserved, and destined to eternal woe;
 Whatever doing, what can we suffer more,
 What can we suffer worse?' Is this then worst,
 Thus sitting, thus consulting, thus in arms?
 What when we fled amain, pursued and strook
 With Heaven's afflicting thunder, and besought
 The deep to shelter us? this Hell then seemed
 A refuge from those wounds. Or when we lay Chained on the burning lake? that sure was worse.
 What if the breath that kindled those grim fires, 170
 Awaked, should blow them into sevenfold rage,
 And plunge us in the flames? or from above
 Should intermitted vengeance arm again
 His red right hand to plague us? What if all
 Her stores were opened, and this firmament
 Of Hell should spout her cataracts of fire,
 Impendent horrors, threatening hideous fall
 One day upon our heads; while we perhaps,
 Designing or exhorting glorious war,
 Caught in a fiery tempest shall be hurled, 180
 Each on his rock transfixed, the sport and prey
 Of racking whirlwinds, or for ever sunk
 Under yon boiling ocean, wrapt in chains;
 There to converse with everlasting groans,
 Unrespited, unpitied, unreprieved,
 Ages of hopeless end! This would be worse.
 War therefore, open or concealed, alike

My voice dissuades ; for what can force or guile
 With him, or who deceive his mind, whose eye
 Views all things at one view? He from Heaven's highth
 All these our motions vain sees and derides,           191
 Not more almighty to resist our might
 Than wise to frustrate all our plots and wiles.
 Shall we then live thus vile, the race of Heaven
 Thus trampled, thus expelled to suffer here
 Chains and these torments? Better these than worse,
 By my advice ; since fate inevitable
 Subdues us, and omnipotent decree,
 The victor's will. To suffer, as to do,
 Our strength is equal, nor the law unjust           200
 That so ordains : this was at first resolved,
 If we were wise, against so great a foe
 Contending, and so doubtful what might fall.
 I laugh, when those who at the spear are bold
 And vent'rous, if that fail them, shrink, and fear
 What yet they know must follow—to endure
 Exile, or ignominy, or bonds, or pain,
 The sentence of their conqueror. This is now
 Our doom ; which if we can sustain and bear,
 Our supreme foe in time may much remit           210
 His anger, and perhaps, thus far removed,
 Not mind us not offending, satisfied
 With what is punished ; whence these raging fires
 Will slacken, if his breath stir not their flames.
 Our purer essence then will overcome
 Their noxious vapour, or inured not feel,
 Or changed at length, and to the place conformed
 In temper and in nature, will receive
 Familiar the fierce heat, and void of pain ;
 This horror will grow mild, this darkness light ;           220

Besides what hope the never-ending flight
 Of future days may bring, what chance, what change
 Worth waiting, since our present lot appears
 For happy though but ill, for ill not worst,
 If we procure not to ourselves more woe."

Thus Belial, with words clothed in reason's garb,
 Counsell'd ignoble ease, and peaceful sloth,
 Not peace; and after him thus Mammon spake:

"Either to disenthroned the King of Heaven
 We war, if war be best, or to regain 230
 Our own right lost: him to unthroned we then
 May hope, when everlasting Fate shall yield
 To fickle Chance, and Chaos judge the strife.
 The former, vain to hope, argues as vain
 The latter; for what place can be for us
 Within Heaven's bound, unless Heaven's Lord supreme
 We overpower? Suppose he should relent
 And publish grace to all, on promise made
 Of new subjection; with what eyes could we Stand in his presence humble, and receive 240
 Strict laws imposed, to celebrate his throne
 With warbled hymns, and to his Godhead sing
 Forced Halleluiahs; while he lordly sits
 Our envied sovrán, and his altar breathes
 Ambrosial odours and ambrosial flowers,
 Our servile offerings? This must be our task
 In Heaven, this our delight; how wearisome
 Eternity so spent in worship paid
 To whom we hate! Let us not then pursue,
 By force impossible, by leave obtained 250
 Unacceptable, though in Heaven, our state
 Of splendid vassalage; but rather seek
 Our own good from ourselves, and from our own

Live to ourselves, though in this vast recess,
 Free, and to none accountable, preferring Hard liberty before the easy yoke
 Of servile pomp. Our greatness will appear
 Then most conspicuous, when great things of small,
 Useful of hurtful, prosperous of adverse,
 We can create, and in what place so'er 260
 Thrive under evil, and work ease out of pain
 Through labour and endurance. This deep world
 Of darkness do we dread? How oft amidst Thick clouds and dark doth Heaven's all-ruling Sire
 Choose to reside, his glory unobscured,
 And with the majesty of darkness round
 Covers his throne, from whence deep thunders roar,
 Mustering their rage, and Heaven resembles Hell!
 As he our darkness, cannot we his light
 Imitate when we please? This desert soil 270
 Wants not her hidden lustre, gems and gold;
 Nor want we skill or art, from whence to raise Magnificence; and what can Heaven show more?
 Our torments also may in length of time
 Become our elements, these piercing fires
 As soft as now severe, our temper changed
 Into their temper; which must needs remove
 The sensible of pain. All things invite
 To peaceful counsels, and the settled state
 Of order, how in safety best we may 280
 Compose our present evils, with regard
 Of what we are and where, dismissing quite
 All thoughts of war. Ye have what I advise."
 He scarce had finished, when such murmur filled
 The assembly, as when hollow rocks retain
 The sound of blustering winds, which all night long

Had roused the sea, now with hoarse cadence lull
 Seafaring men o'erwatched, whose bark by chance,
 Or pinnace, anchors in a craggy bay
 After the tempest: such applause was heard 290
 As Mammon ended, and his sentence pleased,
 Advising peace; for such another field
 They dreaded worse than Hell; so much the fear
 Of thunder and the sword of Michaël
 Wrought still within them; and no less desire
 To found this nether empire, which might rise,
 By policy, and long process of time,
 In emulation opposite to Heaven.
 Which when Beëlzebub perceived, than whom,
 Satan except, none higher sat, with grave 300
 Aspect he rose, and in his rising seemed
 A pillar of state; deep on his front engraven
 Deliberation sat and public care;
 And princely counsel in his face yet shone,
 Majestic though in ruin. Sage he stood,
 With Atlantean shoulders fit to bear
 The weight of mightiest monarchies; his look
 Drew audience and attention still as night
 Or summer's noontide air, while thus he spake:
 "Thrones and imperial Powers, Offspring of Heaven,
 Ethereal Virtues! or these titles now 311
 Must we renounce, and, changing style, be called Princes of Hell? for so the popular vote
 Inclines, here to continue, and build up here
 A growing empire—doubtless! while we dream,
 And know not that the King of Heaven hath doomed
 This place our dungeon, not our safe retreat
 Beyond his potent arm, to live exempt
 From Heaven's high jurisdiction, in new league

Banded against his throne, but to remain 320
 In strictest bondage, though thus far removed,
 Under the inevitable curb, reserved
 His captive multitude. For he, be sure,
 In highth or depth, still first and last will reign
 Sole king, and of his kingdom lose no part
 By our revolt, but over Hell extend
 His empire, and with iron sceptre rule
 Us here, as with his golden those in Heaven.
 What sit we then projecting peace and war?
 War hath determined us, and foiled with loss 330
 Irreparable; terms of peace yet none
 Vouchsafed or sought; for what peace will be given
 To us enslaved, but custody severe,
 And stripes, and arbitrary punishment
 Inflicted? and what peace can we return,
 But, to our power, hostility and hate,
 Untamed reluctance, and revenge, though slow,
 Yet ever plotting how the conqueror least ✓
 May reap his conquest, and may least rejoice
 In doing what we most in suffering feel? 340
 Nor will occasion want, nor shall we need
 With dangerous expedition to invade
 Heaven, whose high walls fear no assault or siege,
 Or ambush from the deep. What if we find
 Some easier enterprise? There is a place
 (If ancient and prophetic fame in Heaven Err not), another world, the happy seat
 Of some new race called Man, about this time
 To be created like to us, though less
 In power and excellence, but favoured more 350
 Of him who rules above; so was his will Pronounced among the gods, and by an oath,

That shook Heaven's whole circumference, confirmed.
 Thither let us bend all our thoughts, to learn
 What creatures there inhabit, of what mould,
 Or substance, how endued, and what their power,
 And where their weakness, how attempted best,
 By force or subtlety. Though Heaven be shut,
 And Heaven's high Arbitrator sit secure
 In his own strength, this place may lie exposed, 360
 The utmost border of his kingdom, left
 To their defence who hold it; here, perhaps,
 Some advantageous act may be achieved
 By sudden onset: either with Hell-fire
 To waste his whole creation, or possess
 All as our own, and drive, as we are driven,
 The puny habitants; or if not drive,
 Seduce them to our party, that their God
 May prove their foe, and with repenting hand
 Abolish his own works. This would surpass 370
 Common revenge, and interrupt his joy
 In our confusion, and our joy upraise
 In his disturbance; when his darling sons,
 Hurl'd headlong to partake with us, shall curse
 Their frail original, and faded bliss,
 Faded so soon! Advise if this be worth
 Attempting, or to sit in darkness here
 Hatching vain empires." Thus Beëlzebub
 Pleaded his devilish counsel, first devised
 By Satan, and in part proposed; for whence, 380
 But from the author of all ill, could spring
 So deep a malice, to confound the race
 Of Mankind in one root, and Earth with Hell
 To mingle and involve, done all to spite
 The great Creator? But their spite still serves

His glory to augment. The bold design
 Pleas'd highly those infernal States, and joy
 Sparkled in all their eyes; with full assent
 They vote: whereat his speech he thus renews:

“Well have ye judged, well ended long debate, 390
 Synod of gods, and, like to what ye are,
 Great things resolved; which from the lowest deep
 Will once more lift us up, in spite of fate,
 Nearer our ancient seat; perhaps in view
 Of those bright confines, whence, with neighbouring arms
 And opportune excursion, we may chance
 Re-enter Heaven; or else in some mild zone
 Dwell not unvisited of Heaven's fair light,
 Secure, and at the brightening orient beam
 Purge off this gloom; the soft delicious air, 400
 To heal the scar of these corrosive fires,
 Shall breathe her balm. But first, whom shall we send
 In search of this new world? whom shall we find Sufficient? who shall tempt with wandering feet
 The dark, unbottomed, infinite Abyss,
 And through the palpable obscure find out
 His uncouth way, or spread his aery flight,
 Upborne with indefatigable wings
 Over the vast abrupt, ere he arrive
 The happy isle? What strength, what art, can then 410
 Suffice, or what evasion bear him safe
 Through the strict senteries and stations thick
 Of Angels watching round? Here he had need
 All circumspection, and we now no less Choice in our suffrage; for on whom we send
 The weight of all, and our last hope, relies.”

This said, he sat; and expectation held
 His look suspense, awaiting who appeared

To second, or oppose, or undertake
 The perilous attempt ; but all sat mute, 420
 Pondering the danger with deep thoughts ; and each
 In other's countenance read his own dismay, Astonished. None among the choice and prime
 Of those Heaven-warring champions could be found
 So hardy as to proffer or accept,
 Alone, the dreadful voyage ; till at last
 Satan, whom now transcendent glory raised
 Above his fellows, with monarchal pride
 Conscious of highest worth, unmoved thus spake :
 "O Progeny of Heaven, empyreal Thrones ! 430
 With reason hath deep silence and demur
 Seized us, though undismayed. Long is the way
 And hard, that out of Hell leads up to light ;
 Our prison strong, this huge convex of fire,
 Outrageous to devour, immures us round
 Ninefold, and gates of burning adamant,
 Barred over us, prohibit all egress.
 These passed, if any pass, the void profound
 Of unessential Night receives him next,
 Wide-gaping, and with utter loss of being 440
 Threatens him, plunged in that abortive gulf.
 If thence he scape into whatever world,
 Or unknown region, what remains him less
 Than unknown dangers and as hard escape ?
 But I should ill become this throne, O Peers,
 And this imperial sovranity, adorned
 With splendour, armed with power, if aught proposed
 And judged of public moment, in the shape
 Of difficulty or danger, could deter
 Me from attempting. Wherefore do I assume 450
 These royalties, and not refuse to reign,

Refusing to accept as great a share
 Of hazard as of honour, due alike
 To him who reigns, and so much to him due
 Of hazard more, as he above the rest
 High honoured sits? Go therefore, mighty Powers, Terror of Heaven, though fallen; intend at home,
 While here shall be our home, what best may ease
 The present misery, and render Hell
 More tolerable; if there be cure or charm 460
 To respite, or deceive, or slack the pain
 Of this ill mansion; intermit no watch
 Against a wakeful foe, while I abroad
 Through all the coasts of dark destruction seek Deliverance for us all: this enterprise
 None shall partake with me." Thus saying, rose
 The Monarch, and prevented all reply;
 Prudent, lest, from his resolution raised,
 Others among the chief might offer now
 (Certain to be refused) what erst they feared, 470
 And, so refused, might in opinion stand
 His rivals, winning cheap the high repute
 Which he through hazard huge must earn. But they Dreaded not more the adventure than his voice
 Forbidding; and at once with him they rose;
 Their rising all at once was as the sound
 Of thunder heard remote. Towards him they bend
 With awful reverence prone; and as a god
 Extol him equal to the Highest in Heaven.
 Nor failed they to express how much they praised 480
 That for the general safety he despised
 His own; for neither do the Spirits damned
 Lose all their virtue; lest bad men should boast
 Their specious deeds on Earth, which glory excites,

Or close ambition varnished o'er with zeal.

Thus they their doubtful consultations dark
 Ended, rejoicing in their matchless Chief:
 As when from mountain-tops the dusky clouds
 Ascending, while the North-wind sleeps, o'erspread
 Heaven's cheerful face, the louring element 490
 Scowls o'er the darkened landskip snow or shower;
 If chance the radiant sun with farewell sweet
 Extend his evening beam, the fields revive,
 The birds their notes renew, and bleating herds
 Attest their joy, that hill and valley rings.
 O shame to men! Devil with devil damned
 Firm concord holds, men only disagree
 \ Of creatures rational, though under hope
 Of heavenly grace; and, God proclaiming peace,
 Yet live in hatred, enmity, and strife 500
 Among themselves, and levy cruel wars,
 Wasting the Earth, each other to destroy:
 As if (which might induce us to accord)
 Man had not hellish foes enow besides,
 That day and night for his destruction wait!

The Stygian council thus dissolved; and forth
 In order came the grand infernal Peers;
 Midst came their mighty Paramount, and seemed Alone the antagonist of Heaven, nor less
 Than Hell's dread Emperor, with pomp supreme, 510
 And god-like imitated state; him round
 A globe of fiery Seraphim enclosed
 With bright emblazonry, and horrent arms.
 Then of their session ended they bid cry
 With trumpet's regal sound the great result:
 Toward the four winds four speedy Cherubim
 Put to their mouths the sounding alchymy,

By harald's voice explained; the hollow Abyss
 Heard far and wide, and all the host of Hell
 With deafening shout returned them loud acclaim. 520
 Thence more at ease their minds and somewhat raised
 By false presumptuous hope, the rangèd powers
 Disband; and, wandering, each his several way
 Pursues, as inclination or sad choice
 Leads him perplexed, where he may likeliest find Truce to his restless thoughts, and entertain
 The irksome hours, till his great Chief return.
 Part on the plain, or in the air sublime,
 Upon the wing or in swift race contend,
 As at the Olympian games or Pythian fields; 530
 Part curb their fiery steeds, or shun the goal
 With rapid wheels, or fronted brigads form:
 As when, to warn proud cities, war appears
 Waged in the troubled sky, and armies rush
 To battle in the clouds; before each van
 Prick forth the aery knights, and couch their spears,
 Till thickest legions close; with feats of arms
 From either end of Heaven the welkin burns.
 Others, with vast Typhœan rage more fell,
 Rend up both rocks and hills, and ride the air 540
 In whirlwind; Hell scarce holds the wild uproar:
 As when Alcides, from Cœchalia crowned
 With conquest, felt the envenomed robe, and tore
 Through pain up by the roots Thessalian pines,
 And Lichas from the top of Cœta threw
 Into the Euboic sea. Others more mild,
 Retreated in a silent valley, sing
 With notes angelical to many a harp
 Their own heroic deeds and hapless fall
 By doom of battle; and complain that Fate 550

Free Virtue should enthrall to Force or Chance.
 Their song was partial, but the harmony
 (What could it less when Spirits immortal sing?)
 Suspended Hell, and took with ravishment
 The thronging audience. In discourse more sweet (For eloquence the soul, song charms the sense)
 Others apart sat on a hill retired,
 In thoughts more elevate, and reasoned high
 Of providence, foreknowledge, will, and fate,
 Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute, 560
 And found no end, in wandering mazes lost.
 Of good and evil much they argued then,
 Of happiness and final misery,
 Passion and apathy, and glory and shame,
 Vain wisdom all, and false philosophy!
 Yet with a pleasing sorcery could charm
 Pain for a while or anguish, and excite
 Fallacious hope, or arm the obdured breast
 With stubborn patience as with triple steel.
 Another part, in squadrons and gross bands, 570
 On bold adventure to discover wide
 That dismal world, if any clime perhaps Might yield them easier habitation, bend
 Four ways their flying march, along the banks
 Of four infernal rivers that disgorge
 Into the burning lake their baleful streams:
 Abhorred Styx, the flood of deadly hate;
 Sad Acheron of sorrow, black and deep;
 Cocytus, named of lamentation loud
 Heard on the rueful stream; fierce Phlegethon, 580
 Whose waves of torrent fire inflame with rage.
 Far off from these a slow and silent stream,
 Lethe, the river of oblivion, rolls

Her watery labyrinth, whereof who drinks
 Forthwith his former state and being forgets,
 Forgets both joy and grief, pleasure and pain.
 Beyond this flood a frozen continent
 Lies dark and wild, beat with perpetual storms
 Of whirlwind and dire hail, which on firm land
 Thaws not, but gathers heap, and ruin seems 590
 Of ancient pile; all else deep snow and ice,
 A gulf profound as that Serbonian bog
 Betwixt Damiata and Mount Casius old,
 Where armies whole have sunk: the parching air
 Burns froze, and cold performs the effect of fire.
 Thither, by harpy-footed Furies haled,
 At certain revolutions all the damned
 Are brought; and feel by turns the bitter change
 Of fierce extremes, extremes by change more fierce,
 From beds of raging fire to starve in ice 600
 Their soft ethereal warmth, and there to pine
 Immovable, infixed, and frozen round
 Periods of time; thence hurried back to fire.
 They ferry over this Lethean sound
 Both to and fro, their sorrow to augment,
 And wish and struggle, as they pass, to reach
 The tempting stream, with one small drop to lose
 In sweet forgetfulness all pain and woe,
 All in one moment, and so near the brink;
 But Fate withstands, and, to oppose the attempt, 610
 Medusa with Gorgonian terror guards
 The ford, and of itself the water flies
 All taste of living wight, as once it fled
 The lip of Tantalus. Thus roving on
 In confused march forlorn, the adventrous bands,
 With shuddering horror pale, and eyes aghast,

Viewed first their lamentable lot, and found
 No rest. Through many a dark and dreary vale
 They passed, and many a region dolorous,
 O'er many a frozen, many a fiery Alp, 620
 Rocks, caves, lakes, fens, bogs, dens, and shades of death,
 A universe of death, which God by curse
 Created evil, for evil only good,
 Where all life dies, death lives, and Nature breeds,
 Perverse, all monstrous, all prodigious things,
 Abominable, inutterable, and worse
 Than fables yet have feigned, or fear conceived,
 Gorgons, and Hydras, and Chimæras dire.

Meanwhile the Adversary of God and Man,
 Satan, with thoughts inflamed of highest design, 630
 Puts on swift wings, and toward the gates of Hell
 Explores his solitary flight; sometimes
 He scours the right hand coast, sometimes the left;
 Now shaves with level wing the deep, then soars
 Up to the fiery concave towering high.
 As when far off at sea a fleet descried
 Hangs in the clouds, by equinoctial winds
 Close sailing from Bengala, or the isles
 Of Ternate and Tidore, whence merchants bring
 Their spicy drugs; they on the trading flood, 640
 Through the wide Ethiopian to the Cape,
 Ply stemming nightly toward the pole: so seemed Far off the flying Fiend. At last appear
 Hell-bounds, high reaching to the horrid roof,
 And thrice threefold the gates; three folds were brass,
 Three iron, three of adamantine rock,
 Impenetrable, impaled with circling fire,
 Yet unconsumed. Before the gates there sat
 On either side a formidable Shape.

The one seemed woman to the waist, and fair, 650
 But ended foul in many a scaly fold
 Voluminous and vast, a serpent armed
 With mortal sting. About her middle round
 A cry of Hell-hounds never-ceasing barked
 With wide Cerberean mouths full loud, and rung
 A hideous peal; yet, when they list, would creep,
 If aught disturbed their noise, into her womb,
 And kennel there, yet there still barked and howled Within unseen. Far less abhorred than these Vexed Scylla, bathing in the sea that parts 660
 Calabria from the hoarse Trinacrian shore;
 Nor uglier follow the night-hag, when, called
 In secret, riding through the air she comes,
 Lured with the smell of infant blood, to dance
 With Lapland witches, while the labouring moon
 Eclipses at their charms. The other Shape—
 If shape it might be called that shape had none
 Distinguishable in member, joint, or limb;
 Or substance might be called that shadow seemed,
 For each seemed either—black it stood as Night, 670
 Fierce as ten Furies, terrible as Hell,
 And shook a dreadful dart; what seemed his head
 The likeness of a kingly crown had on.
 Satan was now at hand, and from his seat
 The monster moving onward came as fast,
 With horrid strides; Hell trembled as he strode.
 The undaunted Fiend what this might be admired, Admired, not feared—God and his Son except,
 Created thing naught valued he nor shunned—
 And with disdainful look thus first began: 680
 “Whence and what art thou, execrable Shape,
 That dar’st, though grim and terrible, advance

Thy miscreated front athwart my way —
 To yonder gates? Through them I mean to pass,
 That be assured, without leave asked of thee.
 Retire, or taste thy folly, and learn by proof,
 Hell-born, not to contend with Spirits of Heaven.”

To whom the Goblin, full of wrath, replied :
 “ Art thou that Traitor-Angel, art thou he,
 Who first broke peace in Heaven and faith, till then 690
 Unbroken, and in proud rebellious arms
 Drew after him the third part of Heaven’s sons,
 Conjured against the Highest, for which both thou
 And they, outcast from God, are here condemned
 To waste eternal days in woe and pain?
 And reckon’st thou thyself with Spirits of Heaven,
 Hell-doomed, and breath’st defiance here and scorn,
 Where I reign king, and, to enrage thee more,
 Thy king and lord? Back to thy punishment,
 False fugitive, and to thy speed add wings, 700
 Lest with a whip of scorpions I pursue
 Thy lingering, or with one stroke of this dart
 Strange horror seize thee, and pangs unfelt before.”

So spake the grisly Terror, and in shape,
 So speaking and so threatening, grew tenfold
 More dreadful and deform. On the other side,
 Incensed with indignation, Satan stood
 Unterrified, and like a comet burned,
 That fires the length of Ophiuchus huge
 In the arctic sky, and from his horrid hair 710
 Shakes pestilence and war. Each at the head
 Levelled his deadly aim ; their fatal hands
 No second stroke intend ; and such a frown
 Each cast at the other, as when two black clouds,
 With Heaven’s artillery fraught, come rattling on

Over the Caspian, then stand front to front
 Hovering a space, till winds the signal blow
 To join their dark encounter in mid-air :
 So frowned the mighty combatants, that Hell
 Grew darker at their frown ; so matched they stood ; 720
 For never but once more was either like
 To meet so great a foe. And now great deeds
 Had been achieved, whereof all Hell had rung,
 Had not the snaky Sorceress, that sat
 Fast by Hell-gate and kept the fatal key,
 Risen, and with hideous outcry rushed between.

“O father, what intends thy hand,” she cried,
 “Against thy only son? What fury, O son,
 Possesses thee to bend that mortal dart
 Against thy father’s head? and know’st for whom ; 730
 For him who sits above, and laughs the while
 At thee ordained his drudge, to execute
 Whate’er his wrath, which he calls justice, bids—
 His wrath, which one day will destroy ye both !”

She spake, and at her words the hellish Pest Forbore ; then these to her Satan returned :

“So strange thy outcry, and thy words so strange
 Thou interposest, that my sudden hand,
 Prevented, spares to tell thee yet by deeds
 What it intends, till first I know of thee 740
 What thing thou art, thus double-formed, and why,
 In this infernal vale first met, thou call’st
 Me father, and that phantasm call’st my son.
 I know thee not, nor ever saw till now
 Sight more detestable than him and thee.”

To whom thus the Portress of Hell-gate replied :
 “Hast thou forgot me then, and do I seem
 Now in thine eye so foul? once deemed so fair

In Heaven, when at the assembly, and in sight
 Of all the Seraphim with thee combined 750
 In bold conspiracy against Heaven's King,
 All on a sudden miserable pain
 Surprised thee; dim thine eyes, and dizzy swum
 In darkness, while thy head flames thick and fast
 Threw forth, till on the left side opening wide,
 Likest to thee in shape and countenance bright,
 Then shining Heavenly-fair, a goddess armed,
 Out of thy head I sprung. Amazement seized
 All the host of Heaven; back they recoiled afraid
 At first, and called me Sin, and for a sign 760
 Portentous held me; but, familiar grown,
 I pleased, and with attractive graces won
 The most averse, thee chiefly, who full oft
 Thyself in me thy perfect image viewing
 Becam'st enamoured; and such joy thou took'st
 With me in secret, that my womb conceived
 A growing burden. Meanwhile war arose,
 And fields were fought in Heaven; wherein remained (For what could else?) to our almighty foe
 Clear victory, to our part loss and rout 770
 Through all the Empyrean. Down they fell,
 Driven headlong from the pitch of Heaven, down
 Into this deep, and in the general fall
 I also; at which time this powerful key
 Into my hands was given, with charge to keep
 These gates for ever shut, which none can pass Without my opening. Pensive here I sat
 Alone; but long I sat not, till my womb,
 Pregnant by thee, and now excessive grown,
 Prodigious motion felt and rueful throes. 780
 At last this odious offspring whom thou seest,

Thine own begotten, breaking violent way,
 Tore through my entrails, that, with fear and pain
 Distorted, all my nether shape thus grew
 Transformed; but he, my inbred enemy,
 Forth issued, brandishing his fatal dart,
 Made to destroy. I fled, and cried out Death!
 Hell trembled at the hideous name, and sighed
 From all her caves, and back resounded Death!
 I fled; but he pursued (though more, it seems, 790 Inflamed with lust than rage) and, swifter far,
 Me overtook, his mother, all dismayed,
 And, in embraces forcible and foul
 Engendering with me, of that rape begot
 These yelling monsters, that with ceaseless cry
 Surround me, as thou saw'st, hourly conceived
 And hourly born, with sorrow infinite
 To me; for, when they list, into the womb
 That bred them they return, and howl, and gnaw
 My bowels, their repast; then, bursting forth 800
 Afresh, with conscious terrors vex me round,
 That rest or intermission none I find.
 Before mine eyes in opposition sits
 Grim Death, my son and foe, who sets them on,
 And me, his parent, would full soon devour
 For want of other prey, but that he knows
 His end with mine involved, and knows that I Should prove a bitter morsel, and his bane,
 Whenever that shall be; so Fate pronounced.
 But thou, O father, I forewarn thee, shun 810
 His deadly arrow; neither vainly hope
 To be invulnerable in those bright arms,
 Though tempered heavenly; for that mortal dint,
 Save he who reigns above, none can resist."

She finished ; and the subtle Fiend his lore
 Soon learned, now milder, and thus answered smooth :
 “ Dear daughter—since thou claim’st me for thy sire,
 And my fair son here show’st me, the dear pledge
 Of dalliance had with thee in Heaven, and joys
 Then sweet, now sad to mention, through dire change 820
 Befallen us unforeseen, unthought of—know,
 I come no enemy, but to set free
 From out this dark and dismal house of pain
 Both him and thee, and all the Heavenly host
 Of Spirits that, in our just pretences armed,
 Fell with us from on high. From them I go
 This uncouth errand sole, and one for all Myself expose, with lonely steps to tread
 The unfounded deep, and through the void immense
 To search with wandering quest a place foretold— 830
 Should be, and, by concurring signs, ere now
 Created vast and round, a place of bliss
 In the purlieus of Heaven, and therein placed
 A race of upstart creatures, to supply
 Perhaps our vacant room, though more removed,
 Lest Heaven, surcharged with potent multitude,
 Might hap to move new broils. Be this, or aught
 Than this more secret, now designed, I haste
 To know ; and, this once known, shall soon return,
 And bring ye to the place where thou and Death 840
 Shall dwell at ease, and up and down unseen
 Wing silently the buxom air, embalmed
 With odours : there ye shall be fed and filled Immeasurably ; all things shall be your prey.”

He ceased, for both seemed highly pleased, and Death
 Grinned horrible a ghastly smile, to hear
 His famine should be filled, and blessed his maw

Destined to that good hour. No less rejoiced
His mother bad, and thus bespake her sire :

“The key of this infernal pit, by due 850
And by command of Heaven’s all-powerful King,
I keep, by him forbidden to unlock
These adamantine gates ; against all force
Death ready stands to interpose his dart,
Fearless to be o’ermatched by living might.
But what owe I to his commands above,
Who hates me, and hath hither thrust me down
Into this gloom of Tartarus profound,
To sit in hateful office here confined,
Inhabitant of Heaven and Heavenly-born, 860
Here in perpetual agony and pain,
With terrors and with clamours compassed round
Of mine own brood, that on my bowels feed ?
Thou art my father, thou my author, thou
My being gav’st me ; whom should I obey
But thee ? whom follow ? Thou wilt bring me soon
To that new world of light and bliss, among
The gods who live at ease, where I shall reign
At thy right hand voluptuous, as beseems
Thy daughter and thy darling, without end.” 870

Thus saying, from her side the fatal key,
Sad instrument of all our woe, she took ;
And, towards the gate rolling her bestial train,
Forthwith the huge portcullis high up-drew,
Which but herself not all the Stygian powers
Could once have moved ; then in the key-hole turns
The intricate wards, and every bolt and bar
Of massy iron or solid rock with ease
Unfastens : on a sudden open fly,
With impetuous recoil and jarring sound, 880

The infernal doors, and on their hinges grate
 Harsh thunder, that the lowest bottom shook
 Of Erebus. She opened, but to shut
 Excelled her power; the gates wide open stood,
 That with extended wings a bannered host,
 Under spread ensigns marching, might pass through
 With horse and chariots ranked in loose array;
 So wide they stood, and like a furnace-mouth
 Cast forth redounding smoke and ruddy flame.
 Before their eyes in sudden view appear 890
 The secrets of the hoary deep, a dark
 Illimitable ocean, without bound,
 Without dimension; where length, breadth, and highth,
 And time, and place, are lost; where eldest Night
 And Chaos, ancestors of Nature, hold Eternal anarchy, amidst the noise
 Of endless wars, and by confusion stand.
 For Hot, Cold, Moist, and Dry, four champions fierce, Strive here for mastery, and to battle bring
 Their embryon atoms; they around the flag 900
 Of each his faction, in their several clans,
 Light-armed or heavy, sharp, smooth, swift, or slow,
 Swarm populous, unnumbered as the sands
 Of Barca or Cyrene's torrid soil,
 Levied to side with warring winds, and poise
 Their lighter wings. To whom these most adhere
 He rules a moment; Chaos umpire sits,
 And by decision more embroils the fray
 By which he reigns; next him, high arbiter,
 Chance governs all. Into this wild Abyss, 910
 The womb of Nature, and perhaps her grave,
 Of neither sea, nor shore, nor air, nor fire,
 But all these in their pregnant causes mixed

Confusedly, and which thus must ever fight,
 Unless the Almighty Maker them ordain
 His dark materials to create more worlds—
 Into this wild Abyss the wary Fiend
 Stood on the brink of Hell and looked a while,
 Pondering his voyage; for no narrow frith
 He had to cross. Nor was his ear less pealed 920
 With noises loud and ruinous (to compare Great things with small) than when Bellona storms,
 With all her battering engines bent to rase
 Some capital city; or less than if this frame
 Of Heaven were falling, and these elements
 In mutiny had from her axle torn
 The steadfast Earth. At last his sail-broad vans
 He spreads for flight, and in the surging smoke-Uplifted spurns the ground; thence many a league,
 As in a cloudy chair, ascending rides 930
Audacious; but, that seat soon failing, meets
 A vast vacuity: all unawares,
 Fluttering his pennons vain, plumb-down he drops
 Ten thousand fathom deep, and to this hour
 Down had been falling, had not by ill chance
 The strong rebuff of some tumultuous cloud,
 Instinct with fire and nitre, hurried him
 As many miles aloft; that fury stayed—
 Quenched in a boggy Syrtis, neither sea,
 Nor good dry land—nigh foundered, on he fares, 940
 Treading the crude consistence, half on foot,
 Half flying; behoves him now both oar and sail.
 As when a gryphon through the wilderness
 With winged course, o'er hill or moory dale,
 Pursues the Arimasian, who by stealth
 Had from his wakeful custody purloined

The guarded gold : so eagerly the Fiend
 O'er bog or steep, through strait, rough, dense, or rare,
 With head, hands, wings, or feet, pursues his way,
 And swims, or sinks, or wades, or creeps, or flies. 950
 At length a universal hubbub wild
 Of stunning sounds and voices all confused,
 Borne through the hollow dark, assaults his ear
 With loudest vehemence. Thither he plies
 Undaunted, to meet there whatever Power
 Or Spirit of the nethermost Abyss
 Might in that noise reside, of whom to ask
 Which way the nearest coast of darkness lies
 Bordering on light ; when straight behold the throne
 Of Chaos, and his dark pavilion spread 960
 Wide on the wasteful Deep ! With him enthroned
 Sat sable-vested Night, eldest of things,
 The consort of his reign ; and by them stood
 Orcus and Ades, and the dreaded name
 Of Demogorgon ; Rumour next and Chance,
 And Tumult and Confusion all embroiled,
 And Discord with a thousand various mouths.
 To whom Satan, turning boldly, thus : "Ye Powers
 And Spirits of this nethermost Abyss,
 Chaos and ancient Night, I come no spy, 970
 With purpose to explore or to disturb
 The secrets of your realm ; but, by constraint
 Wandering this darksome desert, as my way
 Lies through your spacious empire up to light,
 Alone and without guide, half lost, I seek,
 What readiest path leads where your gloomy bounds
 Confine with Heaven ; or if some other place,
 From your dominion won, the Ethereal King
 Possesses lately, thither to arrive

I travel this profound. Direct my course : 980

Directed, no mean recompense it brings
 To your behoof, if I that region lost,
 All usurpation thence expelled, reduce
 To her original darkness and your sway
 (Which is my present journey), and once more Erect the standard there of ancient Night.
 Yours be the advantage all, mine the revenge!"

Thus Satan ; and him thus the Anarch old,
 With faltering speech and visage incomposed,
 Answered: "I know thee, stranger, who thou art, 990

That mighty leading Angel, who of late
 Made head against Heaven's King, though overthrown.

I saw and heard ; for such a numerous host Fled not in silence through the frightened deep,
 With ruin upon ruin, rout on rout,
 Confusion worse confounded ; and Heaven-gates
 Poured out by millions her victorious bands,
 Pursuing. I upon my frontiers here

Keep residence ; if all I can will serve
 That little which is left so to defend, 1000

Encroached on still through our intestine broils
 Weakening the sceptre of old Night : first Hell,
 Your dungeon, stretching far and wide beneath ;
 Now lately Heaven and Earth, another world
 Hung o'er my realm, linked in a golden chain
 To that side Heaven from whence your legions fell.
 If that way be your walk, you have not far ;
 So much the nearer danger. Go, and speed !
 Havoc, and spoil, and ruin, are my gain."

He ceased ; and Satan stayed not to reply, 1010
 But, glad that now his sea should find a shore,
 With fresh alacrity and force renewed

Springs upward, like a pyramid of fire,
 Into the wild expanse, and through the shock -
 Of fighting elements, on all sides round
 Environed, wins his way; harder beset
 And more endangered, than when Argo passed Through Bosphorus betwixt the justling rocks;
 Or when Ulysses on the larboard shunned
 Charybdis, and by the other whirlpool steered: 1020
 So he with difficulty and labour hard
 Moved on: with difficulty and labour he;
 But, he once passed, soon after, when Man fell,
 Strange alteration! Sin and Death amain,
 Following his track (such was the will of Heaven)
 Paved after him a broad and beaten way
 Over the dark Abyss, whose boiling gulf
 Tamely endured a bridge of wondrous length,
 From Hell continued, reaching the utmost orb
 Of this frail world; by which the Spirits perverse 1030
 With easy intercourse pass to and fro
 To tempt or punish mortals, except whom
 God and good Angels guard by special grace.

But now at last the sacred influence
 Of light appears, and from the walls of Heaven
 Shoots far into the bosom of dim Night
 A glimmering dawn. Here Nature first begins
 Her farthest verge, and Chaos to retire,
 As from her outmost works, a broken foe,
 With tumult less and with less hostile din; 1040
 That Satan with less toil, and now with ease,
 Wafts on the calmer wave by dubious light,
 And, like a weather-beaten vessel, holds
 Gladly the port, though shrouds and tackle torn;
 Or in the emptier waste, resembling air,

Weighs his spread wings, at leisure to behold
Far off the empyreal Heaven, extended wide
In circuit, undetermined square or round,
With opal towers and battlements adorned
Of living sapphire, once his native seat;
And fast by, hanging in a golden chain,
This pendent world, in bigness as a star
Of smallest magnitude close by the moon.
Thither, full fraught with mischievous revenge,
Accurst, and in a cursed hour, he hies.

1050

BOOK III.

THE ARGUMENT.

God, sitting on his throne, sees Satan flying towards this World, then newly created; shows him to the Son, who sat at his right hand; foretells the success of Satan in perverting mankind; clears his own justice and wisdom from all imputation, having created Man free, and able enough to have withstood his Tempter; yet declares his purpose of grace towards him, in regard he fell not of his own malice, as did Satan, but by him seduced. The Son of God renders praises to his Father for the manifestation of his gracious purpose towards Man; but God again declares that grace cannot be extended towards Man without the satisfaction of Divine Justice: Man hath offended the majesty of God by aspiring to Godhead, and therefore, with all his progeny, devoted to death, must die, unless some one can be found sufficient to answer for his offence, and undergo his punishment. The Son of God freely offers himself a ransom for Man: the Father accepts him, ordains his incarnation, pronounces his exaltation above all names in Heaven and Earth; commands all the Angels to adore him: they obey, and, hymning to their harps in full quire, celebrate the Father and the Son. Meanwhile Satan alights upon the bare convex of this World's outermost orb; where wandering he first finds a place since called the Limbo of Vanity; what persons and things fly up thither: thence comes to the gate of Heaven, described ascending by stairs, and the waters above the firmament that flow about it. His passage thence to the orb of the Sun: he finds there Uriel, the regent of that orb, but first changes himself into the shape of a meaner Angel, and pretending a zealous desire to behold the new Creation, and Man whom God had placed here, inquires of him the place of his habitation, and is directed: alights first on Mount Niphates.

BOOK III.

HAIL, holy Light, offspring of Heaven first-born!
Or of the Eternal coeternal beam
May I express thee unblamed? since God is light,
And never but in unapproached light
Dwelt from eternity, dwelt then in thee,
Bright effluence of bright essence increate!
Or hear'st thou rather pure Ethereal stream,
Whose fountain who shall tell? Before the sun,
Before the Heavens, thou wert, and at the voice
Of God, as with a mantle, didst invest
The rising World of waters dark and deep,
Won from the void and formless infinite!
Thee I revisit now with bolder wing,
Escaped the Stygian pool, though long detained
In that obscure sojourn, while in my flight,
Through utter and through middle darkness borne,
With other notes than to the Orphean lyre
I sung of Chaos and eternal Night;
Taught by the Heavenly Muse to venture down
The dark descent, and up to re-ascend,
Though hard and rare: thee I revisit safe,
And feel thy sovran vital lamp; but thou

10

20

Revisit'st not these eyes, that roll in vain
 To find thy piercing ray, and find no dawn;
 So thick a drop serene hath quenched their orbs,
 Or dim suffusion veiled. Yet not the more
 Cease I to wander where the Muses haunt Clear spring, or shady grove, or sunny hill,
 Smit with the love of sacred song; but chief
 Thee, Sion, and the flowery brooks beneath, 30
 That wash thy hallowed feet, and warbling flow,
 Nightly I visit; nor sometimes forget
 Those other two equalled with me in fate,
 So were I equalled with them in renown,
 Blind Thamyris and blind Mæonides,
 And Tiresias and Phineus, prophets old:
 Then feed on thoughts that voluntary move
 Harmonious numbers; as the wakeful bird
 Sings darkling, and in shadiest covert hid Tunes her nocturnal note. Thus with the year 40
 Seasons return; but not to me returns
 Day, or the sweet approach of even or morn,
 Or sight of vernal bloom, or summer's rose,
 Or flocks, or herds, or human face divine;
 But cloud instead and ever-during dark
 Surrounds me, from the cheerful ways of men
 Cut off, and, for the book of knowledge fair,
 Presented with a universal blank
 Of Nature's works, to me expunged and rased,
 And wisdom at one entrance quite shut out. 50
 So much the rather thou, celestial Light,
 Shine inward, and the mind through all her powers
 Irradiate: there plant eyes, all mist from thence Purge and disperse, that I may see and tell
 Of things invisible to mortal sight.

Now had the Almighty Father from above,
From the pure Empyrean where he sits
High throned above all highth, bent down his eye,
His own works and their works at once to view:
About him all the Sanctities of Heaven
Stood thick as stars, and from his sight received
Beatitude past utterance; on his right
The radiant image of his glory sat,
His only Son. On Earth he first beheld
Our two first parents, yet the only two
Of mankind, in the Happy Garden placed,
Reaping immortal fruits of joy and love,
Uninterrupted joy, unrivalled love,
In blissful solitude. He then surveyed
Hell and the gulf between, and Satan there,
Coasting the wall of Heaven on this side Night
In the dun air sublime, and ready now
To stoop with wearied wings and willing feet
On the bare outside of this World, that seemed Firm land imbosomed without firmament,
Uncertain which, in ocean or in air.
Him God beholding from his prospect high,
Wherein past, present, future, he beholds,
Thus to his only Son foreseeing spake:

60

70

“Only-begotten Son, seest thou what rage
Transports our Adversary? whom no bounds
Prescribed, no bars of Hell, nor all the chains
Heaped on him there, nor yet the main Abyss Wide interrupt, can hold; so bent he seems
On desperate revenge, that shall redound
Upon his own rebellious head. And now,
Through all restraint broke loose, he wings his way
Not far off Heaven, in the precincts of light,

80

Directly towards the new-created World,
 And Man there placed, with purpose to assay 90
 If him by force he can destroy, or, worse,
 By some false guile pervert: and shall pervert;
 For Man will hearken to his glozing lies,
 And easily transgress the sole command,
 Sole pledge of his obedience; so will fall
 He and his faithless progeny. Whose fault?
 Whose but his own? Ingrate, he had of me
 All he could have; I made him just and right, Sufficient to have stood, though free to fall.)
 Such I created all the ethereal powers 100
 And Spirits, both them who stood and them who failed:
 Freely they stood who stood, and fell who fell.
 Not free, what proof could they have given sincere
 Of true allegiance, constant faith, or love,
 Where only what they needs must do appeared,
 Not what they would? what praise could they receive,
 What pleasure I, from such obedience paid,
 When will and reason—reason also is choice—
 Useless and vain, of freedom both despoiled,
 Made passive both, had served necessity, 110
 Not me? They therefore, as to right belonged,
 So were created, nor can justly accuse
 Their Maker, or their making, or their fate,
 As if predestination overruled
 Their will, disposed by absolute decree
 Or high foreknowledge. They themselves decreed
 Their own revolt, not I: if I foreknew,
 Foreknowledge had no influence on their fault,
 Which had no less proved certain unforeknown.
 So without least impulse or shadow of fate, 120
 Or aught by me immutably foreseen,

They trespass, authors to themselves in all,
 Both what they judge and what they choose; / for so
 I formed them free, and free they must remain
 Till they enthrall themselves: I else must change
 Their nature, and revoke the high decree
 Unchangeable, eternal, which ordained
 Their freedom; they themselves ordained their fall. /
 The first sort by their own suggestion fell,
 Self-tempted, self-depraved; (Man falls, deceived 130
 By the other first: Man therefore shall find grace;)
 The other, none. (In mercy and justice both,
 Through Heaven and Earth, so shall my glory excel;
 But mercy, first and last, shall brightest shine.)

Thus while God spake ambrosial fragrance filled
 All Heaven, and in the blessed Spirits elect
 Sense of new joy ineffable diffused.
 Beyond compare the Son of God was seen
 Most glorious; in him all his Father shone
 Substantially expressed; and in his face 140
 Divine compassion visibly appeared,
 Love without end, and without measure grace;
 Which uttering, thus he to his Father spake:

“O Father, gracious was that word which closed
 Thy sovran sentence, that Man should find grace;
 For which both Heaven and Earth shall high extol
 Thy praises, with the innumerable sound
 Of hymns and sacred songs, wherewith thy throne
 Encompassed shall resound thee ever blest.
 For should Man finally be lost, should Man, 150
 Thy creature late so loved, thy youngest son,
 Fall circumvented thus by fraud, though joined
 With his own folly? that be from thee far,
 That far be from thee, Father, who art judge

Of all things made, and judgest only right!
 Or shall the Adversary thus obtain
 His end, and frustrate thine? shall he fulfil
 His malice, and thy goodness bring to naught?
 Or proud return, though to his heavier doom,
 Yet with revenge accomplished, and to Hell
 Draw after him the whole race of mankind,
 By him corrupted? or wilt thou thyself
 Abolish thy creation, and unmake,
 For him, what for thy glory thou hast made?
 So should thy goodness and thy greatness both
 Be questioned and blasphemed without defence."

160

To whom the great Creator thus replied:
 "O Son, in whom my soul hath chief delight,
 Son of my bosom,<sup>1</sup> Son who art alone
 My word, my wisdom, and effectual might,
 All hast thou spoken as my thoughts are, all
 As my eternal purpose hath decreed.
 Man shall not quite be lost, but saved who will;
 Yet not of will in him, but grace in me
 Freely vouchsafed. Once more I will renew
 His lapsed powers, though forfeit, and enthralled
 By sin to foul exorbitant desires:
 Upheld by me, yet once more he shall stand
 On even ground against his mortal foe;
 By me upheld, that he may know how frail
 His fallen condition is, and to me owe
 All his deliverance, and to none but me.
 Some I have chosen of peculiar grace,
 Elect above the rest; so is my will:
 The rest shall hear me call, and oft be warned
 Their sinful state, and to appease betimes
 The incensed Deity, while offered grace

170

180

Invites; for I will clear their senses dark,
 What may suffice, and soften stony hearts
 To pray, repent, and bring obedience due. 190

To prayer, repentance, and obedience due,
 Though but endeavoured with sincere intent,
 Mine ear shall not be slow, mine eye not shut.
 And I will place within them as a guide
 My umpire Conscience; whom if they will hear,
 Light after light well used they shall attain,
 And to the end persisting safe arrive.

This my long sufferance and my day of grace
 They who neglect and scorn shall never taste;
 But hard be hardened, blind be blinded more, 200
 That they may stumble on, and deeper fall;
 And none but such from mercy I exclude.

But yet all is not done, Man, disobeying,
 Disloyal breaks his <sup>allegiance</sup> fealty, and sins

Against the high supremacy of Heaven,
 Affecting Godhead, and so, losing all,
 To expiate his treason hath naught left,
 But, to destruction sacred and devote,
 He with his whole posterity must die—

Die he or justice must; unless for him 210

Some other, able and as willing, pay
 The rigid satisfaction, death for death.
 Say, Heavenly powers, where shall we find such love?
 Which of ye will be mortal, to redeem
 Man's mortal crime, and just the unjust to save?
 Dwells in all Heaven charity so dear?"

He asked, but all the Heavenly quire stood mute,
 And silence was in Heaven: on Man's behalf
 Patron or intercessor none appeared—

Much less that durst upon his own head draw 220

The deadly forfeiture, and ransom set.
 And now without redemption all mankind
 Must have been lost, adjudged to Death and Hell
 By doom severe, had not the Son of God,
 In whom the fulness dwells of love divine,
 His dearest mediation thus renewed :

“ Father, thy word is passed, Man shall find grace ;
 And shall grace not find means, that finds her way,
 The speediest of thy winged messengers,
 To visit all thy creatures, and to all 230
 Comes unprevented, unimplored, unsought?
 Happy for Man, so coming! He her aid
 Can never seek, once dead in sins and lost ;
 Atonement for himself, or offering meet,
 Indebted and undone, hath none to bring.
 Behold me, then : me for him, life for life,
 I offer ; on me let thine anger fall ;
 Account me Man : I for his sake will leave
 Thy bosom, and this glory next to thee
 Freely put off, and for him lastly die 240
 Well pleased ; on me let Death wreak all his rage :
 Under his gloomy power I shall not long
 Lie vanquished : thou hast given me to possess
 Life in myself for ever ; by thee I live ;
 Though now to Death I yield, and am his due,
 All that of me can die, yet, that debt paid,
 Thou wilt not leave me in the loathsome grave,
 His prey, nor suffer my unspotted soul
 For ever with corruption there to dwell ;
 But I shall rise victorious, and subdue 250
 My vanquisher, spoiled of his vaunted spoil.
 Death his death’s wound shall then receive, and stoop
 Inglorious, of his mortal sting disarmed ;

I through the ample air in triumph high
 Shall lead Hell captive maugre Hell, and show
 The powers of Darkness bound. Thou, at the sight
 Pleased, out of Heaven shalt look down and smile,
 While, by thee raised, I ruin all my foes,
 Death last, and with his carcase glut the grave;
 Then, with the multitude of my redeemed, 260
 Shall enter Heaven, long absent, and return,
 Father, to see thy face, wherein no cloud
 Of anger shall remain, but peace assured
 And reconciliation: wrath shall be no more Thenceforth, but in thy presence joy entire."

His words here ended; but his meek aspect
 Silent yet spake, and breathed immortal love
 To mortal men, above which only shone
 Filial obedience: as a sacrifice
 Glad to be offered, he attends the will 270
 Of his great Father. Admiration seized
 All Heaven, what this might mean, and whither tend,
 Wondering; but soon the Almighty thus replied:

"O thou in Heaven and Earth the only peace
 Found out for mankind under wrath, O thou
 My sole complacence! well thou know'st how dear
 To me are all my works; nor Man the least,
 Though last created, that for him I spare
 Thee from my bosom and right hand, to save,
 By losing thee a while, the whole race lost! 280
 Thou therefore, whom thou only canst redeem,
 Their nature also to thy nature join;
 And be thyself Man among men on Earth,
 Made flesh, when time shall be, of virgin seed,
 By wondrous birth; be thou in Adam's room
 The head of all mankind, though Adam's son.

As in him perish all men, so in thee,
 As from a second root, shall be restored
 As many as are restored ; without thee, none.
 His crime makes guilty all his sons ; thy merit, 290
 Imputed, shall absolve them who renounce
 Their own both righteous and unrighteous deeds,
 And live in thee transplanted, and from thee Receive new life. So Man, as is most just,
 Shall satisfy for Man, be judged and die,
 And dying rise, and rising with him raise
 His brethren, ransomed with his own dear life.
 So Heavenly love shall outdo Hellish hate,
 Giving to death, and dying to redeem,
 So dearly to redeem what Hellish hate 300
 So easily destroyed, and still destroys
 In those who, when they may, accept not grace.
 Nor shalt thou, by descending to assume Man's nature, lessen or degrade thine own.
 Because thou hast, though throned in highest bliss
 Equal to God, and equally enjoying
 God-like fruition, quitted all to save
 A world from utter loss, and hast been found
 By merit more than birthright Son of God—
 Found worthiest to be so by being good, 310
 Far more than great or high ; because in thee
 Love hath abounded more than glory abounds ;
 Therefore thy humiliation shall exalt
 With thee thy manhood also to this throne :
 Here shalt thou sit incarnate, here shalt reign
 Both God and Man, Son both of God and Man,
 Anointed universal King. All power
 I give thee ; reign for ever, and assume Thy merits ; under thee, as Head supreme,

Thrones, Princedoms, Powers, Dominions, I reduce: 320
 All knees to thee shall bow of them that bide
 In Heaven, or Earth, or under Earth in Hell.
 When thou, attended gloriously from Heaven,
 Shalt in the sky appear, and from thee send
 The summoning Archangels to proclaim
 Thy dread tribunal, forthwith from all winds
 The living, and forthwith the cited dead
 Of all past ages, to the general doom
 Shall hasten: such a peal shall rouse their sleep.
 Then, all thy Saints assembled, thou shalt judge 330
 Bad men and Angels; they arraigned shall sink
 Beneath thy sentence; Hell, her numbers full,
 Thenceforth shall be for ever shut. Meanwhile
 The World shall burn, and from her ashes spring
 New Heaven and Earth, wherein the just shall dwell,
 And after all their tribulations long
 See golden days, fruitful of golden deeds,
 With Joy and Love triumphing, and fair Truth.
 Then thou thy regal sceptre shalt lay by,
 For regal sceptre then no more shall need; 340
 God shall be all in all. But all ye gods,
 Adore him who, to compass all this, dies;
 Adore the Son, and honour him as me."

No sooner had the Almighty ceased, but—all
 The multitude of Angels, with a shout
 Loud as from numbers without number, sweet
 As from blest voices, uttering joy—Heaven rung
 With jubilee, and loud hosannas filled
 The eternal regions. Lowly reverent
 Towards either throne they bow, and to the ground 350
 With solemn adoration down they cast
 Their crowns inwove with amarant and gold:

Immortal amarant, a flower which once
 In Paradise, fast by the Tree of Life,
 Began to bloom, but soon for Man's offence
 To Heaven removed, where first it grew, there grows
 And flowers aloft, shading the Fount of Life,
 And where the River of Bliss through midst of Heaven
 Rolls o'er Elysian flowers her amber stream.
 With these that never fade the Spirits elect 360
 Bind their resplendent locks inwreathed with beams.
 Now in loose garlands thick thrown off, the bright
 Pavement, that like a sea of jasper shone,
 Impurpled with celestial roses smiled.
 Then, crowned again, their golden harps they took,
 Harps ever tuned, that glittering by their side
 Like quivers hung; and with preamble sweet
 Of charming symphony they introduce
 Their sacred song, and waken raptures high:
 No voice exempt, no voice but well could join 370
 Melodious part; such concord is in Heaven.
 Thee, Father, first they sung, Omnipotent,
 Immutable, Immortal, Infinite,
 Eternal King; thee, Author of all being,
 Fountain of light, thyself invisible
 Amidst the glorious brightness where thou sitt'st
 Throned inaccessible, but when thou shadest
 The full blaze of thy beams, and through a cloud
 Drawn round about thee like a radiant shrine
 Dark with excessive bright thy skirts appear, 380
 Yet dazzle Heaven, that brightest Seraphim
 Approach not, but with both wings veil their eyes.
 Thee next they sang, of all creation first,
 Begotten Son, Divine Similitude,
 In whose conspicuous countenance, without cloud

Made visible; the Almighty Father shines,
 Whom else no creature can behold: on thee
 Impressed the effulgence of his glory abides;
 Transfused on thee his ample Spirit rests.
 He Heaven of Heavens, and all the powers therein, 390
 By thee created; and by thee threw down
 The aspiring Dominations. Thou that day
 Thy Father's dreadful thunder didst not spare,
 Nor stop thy flaming chariot-wheels, that shook Heaven's everlasting frame, while o'er the necks
 Thou drov'st of warring Angels disarrayed.
 Back from pursuit, thy powers with loud acclaim
 Thee only extolled, Son of thy Father's might,
 To execute fierce vengeance on his foes;
 Not so on Man; him, through their malice fallen, 400
 Father of mercy and grace, thou didst not doom
 So strictly, but much more to pity incline.
 No sooner did thy dear and only Son
 Perceive thee purposed not to doom frail Man
 So strictly, but much more to pity inclined,
 He, to appease thy wrath, and end the strife
 Of mercy and justice in thy face discerned,
 Regardless of the bliss wherein he sat
 Second to thee, offered himself to die
 For Man's offence. O unexampled love! 410
 Love nowhere to be found less than divine!
 Hail, Son of God, Saviour of men! Thy name
 Shall be the copious matter of my song
 Henceforth, and never shall my harp thy praise
 Forget, nor from thy Father's praise disjoin!
 Thus they in Heaven, above the starry sphere,
 Their happy hours in joy and hymning spent.
 Meanwhile, upon the firm opacous globe

Of this round World, whose first convex divides
 The luminous inferior orbs, enclosed 420
 From Chaos and the inroad of Darkness old,
 Satan alighted walks. A globe far off
 It seemed; now seems a boundless continent,
 Dark, waste, and wild, under the frown of Night
 Starless exposed, and ever-threatening storms
 Of Chaos blustering round, inclement sky;
 Save on that side which from the wall of Heaven,
 Though distant far, some small reflection gains
 Of glimmering air less vexed with tempest loud:
 Here walked the Fiend at large in spacious field. 430
 As when a vulture on Imaus bred,
 Whose snowy ridge the roving Tartar bounds,
 Dislodging from a region scarce of prey,
 To gorge the flesh of lambs or yeanling kids
 On hills where flocks are fed, flies toward the springs
 Of Ganges or Hydaspes, Indian streams;
 But in his way lights on the barren plains
 Of Sericana, where Chineses drive
 With sails and wind their cany waggons light:
 So, on this windy sea of land, the Fiend 440
 Walked up and down alone, bent on his prey;
 Alone, for other creature in this place,
 Living or lifeless, to be found was none—
 None yet; but store hereafter from the Earth
 Up hither like aerial vapours flew
 Of all things transitory and vain, when sin
 With vanity had filled the works of men:
 Both all things vain, and all who in vain things
 Built their fond hopes of glory or lasting fame,
 Or happiness in this or the other life. 450
 All who have their reward on earth, the fruits

76.9

Of painful superstition and blind zeal,
 Naught seeking but the praise of men, here find
 Fit retribution, empty as their deeds ;
 All the unaccomplished works of Nature's hand,
 Abortive, monstrous, or unkindly mixed,
 Dissolved on Earth, fleet hither, and in vain,
 Till final dissolution, wander here ; ✓
 Not in the neighbouring moon, as some have dreamed :
 Those argent fields more likely habitants, 460
 Translated saints, or middle Spirits, hold,
 Betwixt the angelical and human kind.
 Hither, of ill-joined sons and daughters born,
 First from the ancient world those giants came,
 With many a vain exploit, though then renowned ;
 The builders next of Babel on the plain
 Of Sennaar, and still with vain design
 New Babels, had they wherewithal, would build ;
 Others came single : he who, to be deemed
 A god, leaped fondly into Ætna flames, 470
 Empedocles ; and he who, to enjoy
 Plato's Elysium, leaped into the sea,
 Cleombrotus ; and many more, too long,
 Embryos and idiots, eremites and friars,
 White, black, and grey, with all their trumpery.
 Here pilgrims roam, that strayed so far to seek
 In Golgotha him dead who lives in Heaven ;
 And they who, to be sure of Paradise,
 Dying put on the weeds of Dominic,
 Or in Franciscan think to pass disguised. 480
 They pass the planets seven, and pass the fixed,
 And that crystalline sphere whose balance weighs
 The trepidation talked, and that first moved ;
 And now Saint Peter at Heaven's wicket seems

SATAN IN THE MOUNTAIN

To wait them with his keys, and now at foot
 Of Heaven's ascent they lift their feet, when, lo!
 A violent cross wind from either coast
 Blows them transverse, ten thousand leagues awry,
 Into the devious air. Then might ye see Cows, hoods, and habits, with their wearers, tost 490
 And fluttered into rags; then reliques, beads,
 Indulgences, dispenses, pardons, bulls,
 The sport of winds: all these, upwhirled aloft,
 Fly o'er the backside of the World far off
 Into a limbo large and broad, since called
 The Paradise of Fools; to few unknown
 Long after, now unpeopled and untrod.

All this dark globe the Fiend found as he passed;
 And long he wandered, till at last a gleam
 Of dawning light turned thitherward in haste 500
 His travelled steps. Far distant he descries, Ascending by degrees magnificent
 Up to the wall of Heaven, a structure high;
 At top whereof, but far more rich, appeared
 The work as of a kingly palace-gate,
 With frontispiece of diamond and gold
 Embellished; thick with sparkling orient gems
 The portal shone, inimitable on Earth
 By model, or by shading pencil drawn.
 The stairs were such as whereon Jacob saw 510
 Angels ascending and descending, bands
 Of guardians bright, when he from Esau fled
 To Padan-Aram, in the field of Luz
 Dreaming by night under the open sky,
 And waking cried, "This is the gate of Heaven."
 Each stair mysteriously was meant, nor stood
 There always, but drawn up to Heaven sometimes

Viewless ; and underneath a bright sea flowed
 Of jasper, or of liquid pearl, whereon
 Who after came from Earth sailing arrived, 520
 Wafted by Angels, or flew o'er the lake,
 Rapt in a chariot drawn by fiery steeds.
 The stairs were then let down, whether to dare
 The Fiend by easy ascent, or aggravate
 His sad exclusion from the doors of bliss ;
 Direct against which opened from beneath,
 Just o'er the blissful seat of Paradise,
 A passage down to the Earth, a passage wide ;
 Wider by far than that of after-times
 Over Mount Sion, and, though that were large, 530
 Over the Promised Land to God so dear ;
 By which, to visit oft those happy tribes,
 On high behests his Angels to and fro
 Passed frequent, and his eye with choice regard,
 From Paneas, the fount of Jordan's flood,
 To Beërsaba, where the Holy Land
 Borders on Egypt and the Arabian shore.
 So wide the opening seemed, where bounds were set
 To darkness, such as bound the ocean wave.

Satan from hence, now on the lower stair, 540
 That scaled by steps of gold to Heaven-gate,
 Looks down with wonder at the sudden view
 Of all this World at once. As when a scout,
 Through dark and desert ways with peril gone
 All night, at last by break of cheerful dawn
 Obtains the brow of some high-climbing hill,
 Which to his eye discovers unaware
 The goodly prospect of some foreign land
 First seen, or some renowned metropolis
 With glistening spires and pinnacles adorned, 550

SATAN IN THE SECOND BOOK OF PARADISE
 LOST

Which now the rising sun gilds with his beams :
 Such wonder seized, though after Heaven seen,
 The Spirit malign, but much more envy seized,
 At sight of all this World beheld so fair.
 Round he surveys (and well might where he stood,
 So high above the circling canopy
 Of Night's extended shade) from eastern point
 Of Libra to the fleecy star that bears
 Andromeda far off Atlantic seas
 Beyond the horizon ; then from pole to pole 560
 He views in breadth ; and, without longer pause,
 Down right into the World's first region throws
 His flight precipitant, and winds with ease
 Through the pure marble air his oblique way
 Amongst innumerable stars, that shone
 Stars distant, but nigh-hand seemed other worlds.
 Or other worlds they seemed, or happy isles,
 Like those Hesperian Gardens famed of old,
 Fortunate fields, and groves, and flowery vales,
 Thrice happy isles ; but who dwelt happy there 570
 He stayed not to inquire. Above them all
 The golden sun, in splendour likest Heaven,
 Allured his eye. Thither his course he bends,
 Through the calm firmament (but up or down,
 By centre or eccentric, hard to tell,
 Or longitude) where the great luminary,
 Aloof the vulgar constellations thick,
 That from his lordly eye keep distance due,
 Dispenses light from far. They, as they move
 Their starry dance in numbers that compute 580
 Days, months, and years, towards his all-cheering lamp
 Turn swift their various motions, or are turned
 By his magnetic beam, that gently warms

The Universe, and to each inward part
 With gentle penetration, though unseen,
 Shoots invisible virtue even to the deep;
 So wondrously was set his station bright.

There lands the Fiend, a spot like which perhaps Astronomer in the sun's lucent orb
 Through his glazed optic tube yet never saw. 590

The place he found beyond expression bright,
 Compared with aught on Earth, metal or stone;

Not all parts like, but all alike informed
 With radiant light, as glowing iron with fire:

If metal, part seemed gold, part silver clear;

If stone, carbuncle most or chrysolite,

Ruby or topaz, to the twelve that shone

In Aaron's breast-plate, and a stone besides,

Imagined rather oft than elsewhere seen—

That stone, or like to that, which here below 600

Philosophers in vain so long have sought;

In vain, though by their powerful art they bind

Volatile Hermes, and call up unbound

In various shapes old Proteus from the sea,

Drained through a limbec to his native form.

What wonder then if fields and regions here

Breathe forth elixir pure, and rivers run

Potable gold, when, with one virtuous touch,

The arch-chemic sun, so far from us remote,

Produces, with terrestrial humour mixed, 610

Here in the dark so many precious things

Of colour glorious and effect so rare?

Here matter new to gaze the Devil met

Undazzled. Far and wide his eye commands;

For sight no obstacle found here, nor shade,

But all sunshine, as when his beams at noon

Culminate from the equator, as they now
 Shot upward still direct, whence no way round
 Shadow from body opaque can fall; and the air,
 Nowhere so clear, sharpened his visual ray 620
 To objects distant far, whereby he soon
 Saw within ken a glorious Angel stand,
 The same whom John saw also in the sun.
 His back was turned, but not his brightness hid;
 Of beaming sunny rays a golden tiar
 Circled his head, nor less his locks behind Illustrious on his shoulders fledgè with wings
 Lay waving round: on some great charge employed
 He seemed, or fixed in cogitation deep.

Glad was the Spirit impure, as now in hope 630
 To find who might direct his wandering flight
 To Paradise, the happy seat of Man,
 His journey's end, and our beginning woe.
 But first he casts to change his proper shape,
 Which else might work him danger or delay:
 And now a stripling Cherub he appears,
 Not of the prime, yet such as in his face
 Youth smiled celestial, and to every limb
 Suitable grace diffused; so well he feigned.
 Under a coronet his flowing hair 640
 In curls on either cheek played; wings he wore
 Of many a coloured plume sprinkled with gold,
 His habit fit for speed succinct; and held
 Before his decent steps a silver wand.
 He drew not nigh unheard; the Angel bright,
 Ere he drew nigh, his radiant visage turned,
 Admonished by his ear, and straight was known
 The Archangel Uriel; one of the seven
 Who in God's presence, nearest to his throne,

Stand ready at command, and are his eyes 650
 That run through all the Heavens, or down to the Earth
 Bear his swift errands over moist and dry,
 O'er sea and land. Him Satan thus accosts :

“Uriel! for thou of those seven Spirits that stand
 In sight of God's high throne, gloriously bright,
 The first art wont his great authentic will Interpreter through highest Heaven to bring,
 Where all his Sons thy embassy attend ;
 And here art likeliest by supreme decree
 Like honour to obtain, and as his eye 660
 To visit oft this new creation round ;
 Unspeakable desire to see and know
 All these his wondrous works, but chiefly Man,
 His chief delight and favour, him for whom
 All these his works so wondrous he ordained,
 Hath brought me from the quires of Cherubim Alone thus wandering. Brightest Seraph, tell
 In which of all these shining orbs hath Man
 His fixed seat ; or fixed seat hath none,
 But all these shining orbs his choice to dwell ; 670
 That I may find him, and with secret gaze
 Or open admiration him behold
 On whom the great Creator hath bestowed
 Worlds, and on whom hath all these graces poured ;
 That both in him and all things, as is meet,
 The Universal Maker we may praise ;
 Who justly hath driven out his rebel foes
 To deepest Hell, and, to repair that loss,
 Created this new happy race of Men
 To serve him better: wise are all his ways!” 680
 So spake the false dissembler unperceived ;
 For neither man nor Angel can discern

Hypocrisy, the only evil that walks
 Invisible, except to God alone,
 By his permissive will, through Heaven and Earth;
 And oft, though Wisdom wake, Suspicion sleeps
 At Wisdom's gate, and to Simplicity
 Resigns her charge, while Goodness thinks no ill
 Where no ill seems: which now for once beguiled
 Uriel, though regent of the sun, and held 690
 The sharpest-sighted Spirit of all in Heaven;
 Who to the fraudulent impostor foul,
 In his uprightness, answer thus returned:

“Fair Angel, thy desire, which tends to know
 The works of God, thereby to glorify
 The great Work-master, leads to no excess
 That reaches blame, but rather merits praise
 The more it seems excess, that led thee hither
 From thy empyreal mansion thus alone,
 To witness with thine eyes what some perhaps, 700
 Contented with report, hear only in Heaven;
 For wonderful indeed are all his works,
 Pleasant to know, and worthiest to be all
 Had in remembrance always with delight!
 But what created mind can comprehend
 Their number, or the wisdom infinite
 That brought them forth, but hid their causes deep?
 I saw when at his word the formless mass,
 This World's material mould, came to a heap:
 Confusion heard his voice, and wild uproar 710
 Stood ruled, stood vast infinitude confined;
 Till at his second bidding Darkness fled,
 Light shone, and order from disorder sprung.
 Swift to their several quarters hasted then
 The cumbrous elements—earth, flood, air, fire;

And this ethereal quintessence of Heaven
 Flew upward, spirited with various forms,
 That rolled orbicular, and turned to stars
 Numberless, as thou seest, and how they move;
 Each had his place appointed, each his course; 720
 The rest in circuit walls this Universe.

Look downward on that globe, whose hither side
 With light from hence, though but reflected, shines:
 That place is Earth, the seat of Man; that light
 His day, which else, as the other hemisphere,
 Night would invade; but there the neighbouring moon
 (So call that opposite fair star) her aid

Timely interposes, and, her monthly round
 Still ending, still renewing, through mid Heaven,
 With borrowed light her countenance triform 730
 Hence fills and empties, to enlighten the Earth,
 And in her pale dominion checks the night.
 That spot to which I point is Paradise,
 Adam's abode; those lofty shades his bower.
 Thy way thou canst not miss; me mine requires."

Thus said, he turned; and Satan, bowing low,
 As to superior Spirits is wont in Heaven,
 Where honour due and reverence none neglects,
 Took leave, and toward the coast of Earth beneath,
 Down from the ecliptic, sped with hoped success, 740
 Throws his steep flight in many an aery wheel,
 Nor stayed till on Niphates' top he lights.

BOOK IV.

THE ARGUMENT.

Satan, now in prospect of Eden, and nigh the place where he must now attempt the bold enterprise which he undertook alone against God and Man, falls into many doubts with himself, and many passions—fear, envy, and despair; but at length confirms himself in evil; journeys on to Paradise, whose outward prospect and situation is described; overleaps the bounds; sits, in the shape of a cormorant, on the Tree of Life, as highest in the Garden, to look about him. The Garden described: Satan's first sight of Adam and Eve; his wonder at their excellent form and happy state, but with resolution to work their fall; overhears their discourse; thence gathers that the Tree of Knowledge was forbidden them to eat of under penalty of death, and thereon intends to found his temptation by seducing them to transgress; then leaves them a while, to know further of their state by some other means. Meanwhile Uriel, descending on a sunbeam, warns Gabriel, who had in charge the gate of Paradise, that some evil Spirit had escaped the Deep, and passed at noon by his Sphere, in the shape of a good Angel, down to Paradise; discovered after by his furious gestures in the mount. Gabriel promises to find him ere morning. Night coming on, Adam and Eve discourse of going to their rest: their bower described; their evening worship. Gabriel, drawing forth his bands of night-watch to walk the rounds of Paradise, appoints two strong Angels to Adam's bower, lest the evil Spirit should be there doing some harm to Adam or Eve sleeping: there they find him at the ear of Eve, tempting her in a dream, and bring him, though unwilling, to Gabriel; by whom questioned, he scornfully answers, prepares resistance, but, hindered by a sign from Heaven, flies out of Paradise.

BOOK IV.

O FOR that warning voice, which he who saw
The Apocalypse heard cry in Heaven aloud,
Then when the Dragon put to second rout,
Came furious down to be revenged on men,
“Woe to the inhabitants on Earth!” that now,
While time was, our first parents had been warned
The coming of their secret foe, and scaped,
Haply so scaped, his mortal snare! For now
Satan, now first inflamed with rage, came down,
The tempter ere the accuser of mankind,
To wreak on innocent frail Man his loss
Of that first battle, and his flight to Hell:
Yet not rejoicing in his speed, though bold
Far off and fearless, nor with cause to boast,
Begins his dire attempt; which, nigh the birth
Now rolling, boils in his tumultuous breast,
And like a devilish engine back recoils
Upon himself. Horror and doubt distract
His troubled thoughts, and from the bottom stir
The hell within him; for within him Hell
He brings, and round about him, nor from Hell
One step, no more than from himself, can fly

10

20

By change of place. Now conscience wakes despair
 That slumbered; wakes the bitter memory
 Of what he was, what is, and what must be Worse: of worse deeds worse sufferings must ensue!
 Sometimes towards Eden, which now in his view
 Lay pleasant, his grieved look he fixes sad;
 Sometimes towards Heaven and the full-blazing sun,
 Which now sat high in his meridian tower: 30
 Then, much revolving, thus in sighs began:
 "O thou that, with surpassing glory crowned,
 Look'st from thy sole dominion like the god
 Of this new World; at whose sight all the stars
 Hide their diminished heads; to thee I call,
 But with no friendly voice, and add thy name,
 O Sun, to tell thee how I hate thy beams,
 That bring to my remembrance from what state
 I fell, how glorious once above thy sphere,
 Till pride and worse ambition threw me down, 40
 Warring in Heaven against Heaven's matchless King!
 Ah, wherefore? He deserved no such return
 From me, whom he created what I was
 In that bright eminence, and with his good
 Upbraided none; nor was his service hard.
 What could be less than to afford him praise,
 The easiest recompense, and pay him thanks,
 How due? Yet all his good proved ill in me,
 And wrought but malice. Lifted up so high,
 I sdeined subjection, and thought one step higher 50
 Would set me highest, and in a moment quit
 The debt immense of endless gratitude,
 So burdensome, still paying, still to owe;
 Forgetful what from him I still received;
 And understood not that a grateful mind

By owing owes not, but still pays, at once
 Indebted and discharged—what burden then?
 Oh, had his powerful destiny ordained
 Me some inferior Angel, I had stood
 Then happy; no unbounded hope had raised
 Ambition. Yet why not? some other power
 As great might have aspired, and me, though mean, Drawn to his part. But other powers as great Fell not, but stand unshaken, from within
 Or from without, to all temptations armed.
 Hadst thou the same free will and power to stand?
 Thou hadst. Whom hast thou then, or what, to accuse,
 But Heaven's free love dealt equally to all?
 Be then his love accursed, since, love or hate,
 To me alike it deals eternal woe.
 Nay, cursed be thou; since against his thy will Chose freely what it now so justly rues.
 Me miserable! which way shall I fly
 Infinite wrath and infinite despair?
 Which way I fly is Hell; myself am Hell;
 And, in the lowest deep, a lower deep
 Still threatening to devour me opens wide,
 To which the Hell I suffer seems a Heaven.
 O, then, at last relent! Is there no place
 Left for repentance, none for pardon left?
 None left but by submission; and that word
 Disdain forbids me, and my dread of shame
 Among the Spirits beneath, whom I seduced
 With other promises and other vaunts
 Than to submit, boasting I could subdue
 The Omnipotent. Ay me! they little know
 How dearly I abide that boast so vain,
 Under what torments inwardly I groan.

60

70

80

While they adore me on the throne of Hell,
 With diadem and sceptre high advanced, 90
 The lower still I fall, only supreme
 In misery: such joy ambition finds!
 But say I could repent, and could obtain
 By act of grace my former state; how soon
 Would highth recal high thoughts, how soon unsay
 What feigned submission swore! Ease would recant
 Vows made in pain, as violent and void—
 For never can true reconciliation grow
 Where wounds of deadly hate have pierced so deep—
 Which would but lead me to a worse relapse 100
 And heavier fall: so should I purchase dear
 Short intermission, bought with double smart.
 This knows my Punisher; therefore as far
 From granting he, as I from begging, peace.
 All hope excluded thus, behold, instead
 Of us, outcast, exiled, his new delight,
 Mankind created, and for him this World!
 So farewell hope, and with hope farewell fear,
 Farewell remorse! All good to me is lost;
 Evil, be thou my good: by thee at least 110
 Divided empire with Heaven's King I hold,
 By thee, and more than half perhaps will reign;
 As Man ere long and this new World shall know."

Thus while he spake, each passion dimmed his face,
 Thrice changed with pale—ire, envy, and despair;
 Which marred his borrowed visage, and betrayed
 Him counterfeit, if any eye beheld;
 For Heavenly minds from such distempers foul
 Are ever clear. Whereof he soon aware
 Each perturbation smoothed with outward calm, 120
 Artificer of fraud; and was the first

That practised falsehood under saintly show,
 Deep malice to conceal, couched with revenge:
 Yet not enough had practised to deceive
 Uriel, once warned; whose eye pursued him down
 The way he went, and on the Assyrian mount
 Saw him disfigured, more than could befall
 Spirit of happy sort: his gestures fierce
 He marked and mad demeanour, then alone,
 As he supposed, all unobserved, unseen.

130

So on he fares, and to the border comes
 Of Eden, where delicious Paradise,
 Now nearer, crowns with her enclosure green,
 As with a rural mound, the champain head
 Of a steep wilderness, whose hairy sides
 With thicket overgrown, grotesque and wild,
 Access denied; and overhead up-grew
 Insuperable highth of loftiest shade,
 Cedar, and pine, and fir, and branching palm,
 A sylvan scene, and, as the ranks ascend
 Shade above shade, a woody theatre
 Of stateliest view. Yet higher than their tops
 The verdurous wall of Paradise up-sprung;
 Which to our general sire gave prospect large
 Into his nether empire neighbouring round.
 And higher than that wall a circling row
 Of goodliest trees, loaden with fairest fruit,
 Blossoms and fruits at once of golden hue,
 Appeared, with gay enamelled colours mixed;
 On which the sun more glad impressed his beams
 Than in fair evening cloud, or humid bow,
 When God hath showered the earth: so lovely seemed That landskip. And of pure now purer air
 Meets his approach, and to the heart inspires

140

150

Vernal delight and joy, able to drive
 All sadness but despair; now gentle gales,
 Fanning their odoriferous wings, dispense
 Native perfumes, and whisper whence they stole
 Those balmy spoils. As when to them who sail
 Beyond the Cape of Hope, and now are past 160
 Mozambic, off at sea north-east winds blow
 Sabæan odours from the spicy shore
 Of Araby the Blest: with such delay
 Well pleased they slack their course, and many a league
 Cheered with the grateful smell old Ocean smiles:
 So entertained those odorous sweets the Fiend
 Who came their bane, though with them better pleased
 Than Asmodæus with the fishy fume
 That drove him, though enamoured, from the spouse
 Of Tobit's son, and with a vengeance sent 170
 From Media post to Egypt, there fast bound.

Now to the ascent of that steep savage hill
 Satan had journeyed on, pensive and slow;
 But further way found none; so thick entwined,
 As orle continued brake, the ſundergrowth
 Of shrubs and tangling bushes had perplexed
 All path of man or beast that passed that way.
 One gate there only was, and that looked east
 On the other side: which when the Arch-Felon saw,
 Due entrance he disdained, and in contempt 180
 At one slight bound high overleaped all bound
 Of hill or highest wall, and sheer within Lights on his feet. As when a prowling wolf,
 Whom hunger drives to seek new haunt for prey,
 Watching where shepherds pen their flocks at eve,
 In hurdled cotes amid the field secure,
 Leaps o'er the fence with ease into the fold;

Or as a thief, bent to unhoard the cash
 Of some rich burgher, whose substantial doors,
 Cross-barred and bolted fast, fear no assault, 190
 In at the window climbs, or o'er the tiles:
 So clomb this first grand thief into God's fold:
 So since into his Church lewd hirelings climb.
 Thence up he flew, and on the Tree of Life,
 The middle tree and highest there that grew,
 Sat like a cormorant; yet not true life
 Thereby regained, but sat devising death
 To them who lived; nor on the virtue thought
 Of that life-giving plant, but only used
 For prospect what, well used, had been the pledge 200
 Of immortality. So little knows
 Any but God alone to value right
 The good before him, but perverts best things
 To worst abuse, or to their meanest use.

Beneath him, with new wonder, now he views,
 To all delight of human sense exposed,
 In narrow room Nature's whole wealth; yea, more—
 A Heaven on Earth; for blissful Paradise
 Of God the garden was, by him in the east
 Of Eden planted: Eden stretched her line 210
 From Auran eastward to the royal towers
 Of great Seleucia, built by Grecian kings,
 Or where the sons of Eden long before
 Dwelt in Telassar. In this pleasant soil
 His far more pleasant garden God ordained.
 Out of the fertile ground he caused to grow
 All trees of noblest kind for sight, smell, taste;
 And all amid them stood the Tree of Life,
 High eminent, blooming ambrosial fruit
 Of vegetable gold; and next to life, 220

Our death, the Tree of Knowledge, grew fast by—
 Knowledge of good bought dear by knowing ill.
 Southward through Eden went a river large,
 Nor changed his course, but through the shaggy hill
 Passed underneath ingulfed; for God had thrown
 That mountain as his garden-mould, high raised
 Upon the rapid current, which, through veins
 Of porous earth with kindly thirst up-drawn,
 Rose a fresh fountain, and with many a rill
 Watered the garden; thence united fell 230
 Down the steep glade, and met the nether flood,
 Which from his darksome passage now appears;
 And now, divided into four main streams,
 Runs diverse, wandering many a famous realm
 And country, whereof here needs no account;
 But rather to tell how, if art could tell,
 How from that sapphire fount the crisped brooks,
 Rolling on orient pearl and sands of gold,
 With mazy error under pendent shades
 Ran nectar, visiting each plant, and fed 240
 Flowers worthy of Paradise; which not nice art
 In beds and curious knots, but Nature boon
 Poured forth profuse on hill, and dale, and plain,
 Both where the morning sun first warmly smote
 The open field, and where the unpierced shade
 Imbrowned the noontide bowers. Thus was this place,
 A happy rural seat of various view:
 Groves whose rich trees wept odorous gums and balm;
 Others whose fruit, burnished with golden rind,
 Hung amiable—Hesperian fables true, 250
 If true, here only—and of delicious taste.
 Betwixt them lawns, or level downs, and flocks
 Grazing the tender herb, were interposed,

Or palmy hillock ; or the flowery lap
Of some irriguous valley spread her store,
Flowers of all hue, and without thorn the rose.
Another side, umbrageous grotts and caves
Of cool recess, o'er which the mantling vine
Lays forth her purple grape, and gently creeps
Luxuriant ; meanwhile murmuring waters fall 260
Down the slope hills dispersed, or in a lake,
That to the fringed bank with myrtle crowned
Her crystal mirror holds, unite their streams.
The birds their quire apply ; airs, vernal airs,
Breathing the smell of field and grove, attune
The trembling leaves, while universal Pan,
Knit with the Graces and the Hours in dance,
Led on the eternal Spring. Not that fair field
Of Enna, where Proserpin gathering flowers,
Herself a fairer flower, by gloomy Dis 270
Was gathered—which cost Ceres all that pain
To seek her through the world ; nor that sweet grove
Of Daphne by Orontes, and the inspired
Castalian spring, might with this Paradise
Of Eden strive ; nor that Nyseian isle,
Girt with the river Triton, where old Cham,
Whom Gentiles Ammon call and Libyan Jove,
Hid Amalthea, and her florid son,
Young Bacchus, from his stepdame Rhea's eye ;
Nor where Abassin kings their issue guard, 280
Mount Amara, though this by some supposed
True Paradise, under the Ethiop line
By Nilus' head, enclosed with shining rock,
A whole day's journey high, but wide remote
From this Assyrian garden, where the Fiend
Saw undelighted all delight, all kind

Of living creatures, new to sight and strange.

Two of far nobler shape, erect and tall,
 God-like erect, with native honour clad,
 In naked majesty seemed lords of all,
 And worthy seemed; for in their looks divine
 The image of their glorious Maker shone,

290

Truth, wisdom, sanctitude severe and pure—
 Severe, but in true filial freedom placed,
 Whence true authority in men; though both
 Not equal, as their sex not equal seemed:

For contemplation he and valour formed,
 For softness she and sweet attractive grace;
 He for God only, she for God in him.

His fair large front and eye sublime declared

300

Absolute rule; and hyacinthine locks
 Round from his parted forelock manly hung
 Clustering, but not beneath his shoulders broad:

She, as a veil down to the slender waist,
 Her unadorned golden tresses wore
 Dishevelled, but in wanton ringlets waved,
 As the vine curls her tendrils—which implied

Subjection, but required with gentle sway,
 And by her yielded, by him best received,
 Yielded with coy submission, modest pride,

310

And sweet, reluctant, amorous delay.

Nor those mysterious parts were then concealed;

Then was not guilty shame. Dishonest shame

Of Nature's works, honour dishonourable,

Sin-bred, how have ye troubled all mankind

With shows instead, mere shows of seeming pure,

And banished from man's life his happiest life,

Simplicity and spotless innocence!

So passed they naked on, nor shunned the sight

Of God or Angel, for they thought no ill ; 320
 So hand in hand they passed, the loveliest pair
 That ever since in love's embraces met :
 Adam the goodliest man of men since born
 His sons, the fairest of her daughters Eve.
 Under a tuft of shade that on a green
 Stood whispering soft, by a fresh fountain-side,
 They sat them down ; and after no more toil
 Of their sweet gardening labour than sufficed
 To recommend cool Zephyr, and make ease
 More easy, wholesome thirst and appetite 330
 More grateful, to their supper-fruits they fell,
 Nectarine fruits, which the compliant boughs
 Yielded them, sidelong as they sat recline
 On the soft downy bank damasked with flowers.
 The savoury pulp they chew, and in the rind,
 Still as they thirsted, scoop the brimming stream ;
 Nor gentle purpose, nor endearing smiles
 Wanted, nor youthful dalliance, as beseems
 Fair couple linked in happy nuptial league,
 Alone as they. About them frisking played 340
 All beasts of the earth, since wild, and of all chase
 In wood or wilderness, forest or den.
 Sporting the lion ramped, and in his paw
 Dandled the kid ; bears, tigers, ounces, pards,
 Gambolled before them ; the unwieldy elephant,
 To make them mirth, used all his might, and wreathed
 His lithe proboscis ; close the serpent sly,
 Insinuating, wove with Gordian twine
 His braided train, and of his fatal guile
 Gave proof unheeded. Others on the grass 350
 Couched, and now filled with pasture gazing sat,
 Or bedward ruminating ; for the sun,

Declined, was hastening now with prone career
 To the Ocean Isles, and in the ascending scale
 Of Heaven the stars that usher evening rose :
 When Satan, still in gaze as first he stood,
 Scarce thus at length failed speech recovered sad :

“ O Hell ! what do mine eyes with grief behold ?

Into our room of bliss thus high advanced
 Creatures of other mould, Earth-born perhaps, 360
 Not Spirits, yet to Heavenly Spirits bright
 Little inferior ; whom my thoughts pursue
 With wonder, and could love, so lively shines
 In them divine resemblance, and such grace
 The hand that formed them on their shape hath poured.

Ah ! gentle pair, ye little think how nigh
 Your change approaches, when all these delights
 Will vanish, and deliver ye to woe—

More woe, the more your taste is now of joy :

Happy, but for so happy ill secured 370

Long to continue, and this high seat, your Heaven,

Ill fenced for Heaven to keep out such a foe

As now is entered ; yet no purposed foe

To you, whom I could pity thus forlorn,

Though I unpitied. League with you I seek,

And mutual amity, so strait, so close,

That I with you must dwell, or you with me,

Henceforth : my dwelling, haply, may not please,

Like this fair Paradise, your sense ; yet such

Accept your Maker's work ; he gave it me, 380

Which I as freely give. Hell shall unfold,

To entertain you two, her widest gates,

And send forth all her kings ; there will be room,

Not like these narrow limits, to receive

Your numerous offspring ; if no better place,

Thank him who puts me loath to this revenge
 On you who wrong me not, for him who wronged.
 And, should I at your harmless innocence
 Melt, as I do, yet public reason just—
 Honour and empire with revenge enlarged
 By conquering this new World—compels me now
 To do what else, though damned, I should abhor.”

390

So spake the Fiend, and with necessity,
 The tyrant's plea, excused his devilish deeds.
 Then from his lofty stand on that high tree
 Down he alights among the sportful herd
 Of those four-footed kinds, himself now one,
 Now other, as their shape served best his end
 Nearer to view his prey, and unespied
 To mark what of their state he more might learn
 By word or action marked. About them round
 A lion now he stalks with fiery glare;
 Then as a tiger, who by chance hath spied
 In some purlieu two gentle fawns at play,
 Straight couches close; then, rising, changes oft
 His couchant watch, as one who chose his ground,
 Whence rushing he might surest seize them both,
 Griped in each paw: when Adam, first of men,
 To first of women, Eve, thus moving speech,
 Turned him all ear to hear new utterance flow:

400

410

“Sole partner and sole part of all these joys,
 Dearer thyself than all, needs must the Power
 That made us, and for us this ample World,
 Be infinitely good, and of his good
 As liberal and free as infinite;
 That raised us from the dust, and placed us here
 In all this happiness, who at his hand
 Have nothing merited, nor can perform

Aught whereof he hath need ; he who requires
 From us no other service than to keep 420
 This one, this easy charge—of all the trees
 In Paradise that bear delicious fruit
 So various, not to taste that only Tree
 Of Knowledge, planted by the Tree of Life ;
 So near grows death to life, whate'er death is ;
 Some dreadful thing no doubt ; for well thou know'st
 God hath pronounced it death to taste that Tree—
 The only sign of our obedience left
 Among so many signs of power and rule
 Conferred upon us, and dominion given 430
 Over all other creatures that possess
 Earth, air, and sea. Then let us not think hard
 One easy prohibition, who enjoy
 Free leave so large to all things else, and choice
 Unlimited of manifold delights ;
 But let us ever praise him, and extol
 His bounty, following our delightful task,
 To prune these growing plants, and tend these flowers ;
 Which, were it toilsome, yet with thee were sweet."

To whom thus Eve replied : "O thou for whom 440
 And from whom I was formed, flesh of thy flesh,
 And without whom am to no end, my guide
 And head ! what thou hast said is just and right.
 For we to him indeed all praises owe,
 And daily thanks ; I chiefly, who enjoy
 So far the happier lot, enjoying thee
 Pre-eminent by so much odds, while thou
 Like consort to thyself canst nowhere find.
 That day I oft remember, when from sleep
 I first awaked, and found myself reposed 450
 Under a shade on flowers, much wondering where .

And what I was, whence thither brought, and how.
 Not distant far from thence a murmuring sound
 Of waters issued from a cave, and spread
 Into a liquid plain; then stood unmoved,
 Pure as the expanse of Heaven. I thither went
 With unexperienced thought, and laid me down
 On the green bank, to look into the clear
 Smooth lake, that to me seemed another sky.
 As I bent down to look, just opposite 460
 A shape within the watery gleam appeared,
 Bending to look on me: I started back,
 It started back; but pleased I soon returned,
 Pleased it returned as soon with answering looks
 Of sympathy and love. There I had fixed
 Mine eyes till now, and pined with vain desire,
 Had not a voice thus warned me: 'What thou seest,
 What there thou seest, fair creature, is thyself;
 With thee it came and goes: but follow me,
 And I will bring thee where no shadow stays 470
 Thy coming, and thy soft embraces—he Whose image thou art; him thou shalt enjoy
 Inseparably thine; to him shalt bear
 Multitudes like thyself, and thence be called Mother of human race.' What could I do
 But follow straight, invisibly thus led?
 Till I espied thee, fair indeed and tall,
 Under a platane; yet methought less fair,
 Less winning soft, less amiably mild,
 Than that smooth watery image. Back I turned; 480
 Thou, following, cried'st aloud, 'Return, fair Eve;
 Whom fliest thou? whom thou fliest, of him thou art,
 His flesh, his bone; to give thee being I lent
 Out of my side to thee, nearest my heart,

Substantial life, to have thee by my side
 Henceforth an individual solace dear :
 Part of my soul, I seek thee, and thee claim
 My other half.' With that thy gentle hand
 Seized mine: I yielded; and from that time see How beauty is excelled by manly grace
 And wisdom, which alone is truly fair."

490

So spake our general mother, and with eyes
 Of conjugal attraction unreprieved,
 And meek surrender, half-embracing leaned
 On our first father; half her swelling breast
 Naked met his, under the flowing gold
 Of her loose tresses hid. He, in delight
 Both of her beauty and submissive charms,
 Smiled with superior love, as Jupiter
 On Juno smiles when he impregns the clouds
 That shed May flowers, and pressed her matron lip
 With kisses pure. Aside the Devil turned
 For envy; yet with jealous leer malign
 Eyed them askance, and to himself thus plained :

500

"Sight hateful, sight tormenting! thus these two,
 Imparadised in one another's arms,
 The happier Eden, shall enjoy their fill
 Of bliss on bliss; while I to Hell am thrust,
 Where neither joy nor love, but fierce desire,
 Among our other torments not the least,
 Still unfulfilled, with pain of longing pines.
 Yet let me not forget what I have gained
 From their own mouths. All is not theirs, it seems;
 One fatal tree there stands, of Knowledge called,
 Forbidden them to taste. Knowledge forbidden?
 Suspicious, reasonless! why should their Lord
 Envy them that? can it be sin to know?"

510

Can it be death? and do they only stand
 By ignorance? is that their happy state,
 The proof of their obedience and their faith? 520
 O fair foundation laid whercon to build
 Their ruin! Hence I will excite their minds
 With more desire to know, and to reject
 Envious commands, invented with design
 To keep them low, whom knowledge might exalt Equal with gods. Aspiring to be such,
 They taste and die: what likelier can ensue?
 But first with narrow search I must walk round
 This garden, and no corner leave unspied;
 A chance but chance may lead where I may meet 530
 Some wandering Spirit of Heaven, by fountain-side,
 Or in thick shade retired, from him to draw
 What further would be learned. Live while ye may,
 Yet happy pair; enjoy, till I return,
 Short pleasures; for long woes are to succeed."

So saying, his proud step he scornful turned,
 But with sly circumspection, and began
 Through wood, through waste, o'er hill, o'er dale, his roam.
 Meanwhile in utmost longitude, where Heaven
 With Earth and Ocean meets, the setting sun 540
 Slowly descended, and with right aspect
 Against the eastern gate of Paradise
 Levelled his evening rays. It was a rock
 Of alabaster, piled up to the clouds,
 Conspicuous far, winding with one ascent Accessible from Earth, one entrance high;
 The rest was craggy cliff, that overhung
 Still as it rose, impossible to climb.
 Betwixt these rocky pillars Gabriel sat,
 Chief of the angelic guards, awaiting night; 550

About him exercised heroic games
 The unarmed youth of Heaven; but nigh at hand
 Celestial armoury, shields, helms, and spears,
 Hung high, with diamond flaming and with gold.
 Thither came Uriel, gliding through the even
 On a sunbeam, swift as a shooting star
 In autumn thwarts the night, when vapours fired
 Impress the air, and shows the mariner
 From what point of his compass to beware
 Impetuous winds. He thus began in haste:

560

“Gabriel, to thee thy course by lot hath given
 Charge and strict watch, that to this happy place
 No evil thing approach or enter in.

This day at highth of noon came to my sphere
 A Spirit, zealous, as he seemed, to know
 More of the Almighty's works, and chiefly Man,
 God's latest image. I described his way
 Bent all on speed, and marked his aery gait;
 But in the mount that lies from Eden north,
 Where he first lighted, soon discerned his looks
 Alien from Heaven, with passions foul obscured.
 Mine eye pursued him still, but under shade
 Lost sight of him. One of the banished crew,
 I fear, hath ventured from the Deep, to raise
 New troubles; him thy care must be to find.”

570

To whom the winged warrior thus returned:
 “Uriel, no wonder if thy perfect sight,
 Amid the Sun's bright circle where thou sitt'st,
 See far and wide. In at this gate none pass
 The vigilance here placed, but such as come
 Well-known from Heaven; and since meridian hour
 No creature thence. If Spirit of other sort,
 So minded, have o'erleaped these earthy bounds

580

On purpose, hard thou know'st it to exclude
 Spiritual substance with corporeal bar.
 But if within the circuit of these walks,
 In whatsoever shape, he lurk of whom Thou tell'st, by morrow dawning I shall know."

So promised he; and Uriel to his charge
 Returned on that bright beam, whose point now raised 590
 Bore him slope downward to the sun, now fallen
 Beneath the Azores; whether the prime orb,
 Incredible how swift, had thither rolled
 Diurnal, or this less volubil Earth,
 By shorter flight to the east, had left him there,
 Arraying with reflected purple and gold
 The clouds that on his western throne attend.

Now came still Evening on, and Twilight gray
 Had in her sober livery all things clad;
 Silence accompanied; for beast and bird, 600
 They to their grassy couch, these to their nests,
 Were slunk, all but the wakeful nightingale;
 She all night long her amorous descant sung:
 Silence was pleased. Now glowed the firmament
 With living sapphires; Hesperus, that led
 The starry host, rode brightest, till the Moon,
 Rising in clouded majesty, at length
 Apparent queen, unveiled her peerless light,
 And o'er the dark her silver mantle threw;
 When Adam thus to Eve: "Fair consort, the hour 610
 Of night, and all things now retired to rest,
 Mind us of like repose, since God hath set
 Labour and rest, as day and night, to men
 Successive; and the timely dew of sleep,
 Now falling with soft slumberous weight, inclines
 Our eye-lids. Other creatures all day long

Rove idle, unemployed, and less need rest ;
 Man hath his daily work of body or mind
 Appointed, which declares his dignity,
 And the regard of Heaven on all his ways ; 620
 While other animals unactive range,
 And of their doings God takes no account.
 To-morrow, ere fresh morning streak the east
 With first approach of light, we must be risen,
 And at our pleasant labour, to reform
 Yon flowery arbours, yonder alleys green,
 Our walk at noon, with branches overgrown,
 That mock our scant manuring, and require
 More hands than ours to lop their wanton growth.
 Those blossoms also, and those dropping gums, 630
 That lie bestrewn, unsightly and unsmooth,
 Ask riddance, if we mean to tread with ease ;
 Meanwhile, as Nature wills, night bids us rest."

To whom thus Eve, with perfect beauty adorned :
 "My author and disposer, what thou bidd'st
 Unargued I obey ; so God ordains :
 God is thy law, thou mine : to know no more
 Is woman's happiest knowledge, and her praise.
 With thee conversing I forget all time,
 All seasons and their change : all please alike. 640
 Sweet is the breath of Morn, her rising sweet,
 With charm of earliest birds ; pleasant the Sun,
 When first on this delightful land he spreads
 His orient beams, on herb, tree, fruit, and flower,
 Glistening with dew ; fragrant the fertile Earth
 After soft showers ; and sweet the coming-on
 Of grateful Evening mild ; then silent Night,
 With this her solemn bird, and this fair Moon,
 And these the gems of Heaven, her starry train :

But neither breath of Morn, when she ascends 650
 With charm of earliest birds ; nor rising Sun
 On this delightful land ; nor herb, fruit, flower,
 Glistering with dew ; nor fragrance after showers ;
 Nor grateful Evening mild ; nor silent Night,
 With this her solemn bird ; nor walk by moon,
 Or glittering star-light, without thee is sweet.
 But wherefore all night long shine these ? for whom
 This glorious sight, when sleep hath shut all eyes ?”

To whom our general ancestor replied :
 “ Daughter of God and Man, accomplished Eve, 660
 Those have their course to finish round the Earth
 By morrow evening, and from land to land
 In order, though to nations yet unborn,
 Ministering light prepared, they set and rise ;
 Lest total Darkness should by night regain
 Her old possession, and extinguish life
 In nature and all things ; which these soft fires
 Not only enlighten, but with kindly heat
 Of various influence foment and warm,
 Temper or nourish, or in part shed down 670
 Their stellar virtue on all kinds that grow
 On Earth, made hereby apter to receive Perfection from the sun’s more potent ray.
 These then, though unbeheld in deep of night,
 Shine not in vain. Nor think, though men were none,
 That Heaven would want spectators, God want praise.
 Millions of spiritual creatures walk the Earth
 Unseen, both when we wake, and when we sleep :
 All these with ceaseless praise his works behold,
 Both day and night. How often, from the steep 680
 Of echoing hill or thicket, have we heard
 Celestial voices to the midnight air,

Sole, or responsive each to other's note,
 Singing their great Creator! Oft in bands
 While they keep watch, or nightly rounding walk,
 With heavenly touch of instrumental sounds
 In full harmonic number joined, their songs
 Divide the night, and lift our thoughts to Heaven."

Thus talking, hand in hand alone they passed
 On to their blissful bower. It was a place 690
 Chosen by the sovran Planter, when he framed
 All things to Man's delightful use. The roof
 Of thickest covert was inwoven shade,
 Laurel and myrtle, and what higher grew
 Of firm and fragrant leaf; on either side
 Acanthus, and each odorous bushy shrub,
 Fenced up the verdant wall; each beauteous flower,
 Iris all hues, roses, and jessamine,
 Reared high their flourished heads between, and wrought
 Mosaic; under-foot the violet, 700
 Crocus, and hyacinth, with rich inlay
 Broïdered the ground, more coloured than with stone
 Of costliest emblem. Other creature here,
 Beast, bird, insect, or worm, durst enter none;
 Such was their awe of Man. In shadier bower
 More sacred and sequestered, though but feigned,
 Pan or Sylvanus never slept, nor Nymph
 Nor Faunus haunted. Here, in close recess,
 With flowers, garlands, and sweet-smelling herbs
 Espoused Eve decked first her nuptial bed, 710
 And Heavenly choirs the hymenæan sung,
 What day the genial Angel to our sire
 Brought her, in naked beauty more adorned,
 More lovely, than Pandora, whom the gods
 Endowed with all their gifts; and, O! too like

In sad event, when, to the unwiser son
 Of Japhet brought by Hermes, she ensnared
 Mankind with her fair looks, to be avenged
 On him who had stole Jove's authentic fire.

Thus at their shady lodge arrived, both stood, 720
 Both turned, and under open sky adored
 The God that made both sky, air, Earth, and Heaven,
 Which they beheld, the moon's resplendent globe,
 And starry pole: "Thou also madest the night,
 Maker Omnipotent; and thou the day,
 Which we, in our appointed work employed,
 Have finished, happy in our mutual help
 And mutual love, the crown of all our bliss
 Ordained by thee; and this delicious place,
 For us too large, where thy abundance wants 730
 Partakers, and uncropt falls to the ground.
 But thou hast promised from us two a race
 To fill the Earth, who shall with us extol
 Thy goodness infinite, both when we wake,
 And when we seek, as now, thy gift of sleep."

This said unanimous, and other rites,
 Observing none but adoration pure, love for God
 Which God likes best, into their inmost bower
 Handed they went; and, eased the putting-off
 These troublesome disguises which we wear, 740
 Straight side by side were laid; nor turned, I wcen,
 Adam from his fair spouse, nor Eve the rites
 Mysterious of connubial love refused:
 Whatever hypocrites austerely talk
 Of purity, and place, and innocence,
 Defaming as impure what God declares
 Pure, and commands to some, leaves free to all.
 Our Maker bids increase; who bids abstain

But our destroyer, foe to God and Man?
 Hail, wedded Love, mysterious law, true source 750
 Of human offspring, sole propriety
 In Paradise of all things common else!
 By thee adulterous lust was driven from men
 Among the bestial herds to range; by thee,
 Founded in reason, loyal, just, and pure,
 Relations dear, and all the charities
 Of father, son, and brother, first were known.
 Far be it that I should write thee sin or blame,
 Or think thee unbefitting holiest place,
 Perpetual fountain of domestic sweets, 760
 Whose bed is undefiled and chaste pronounced,
 Present or past, as saints and patriarchs used.
 Here Love his golden shafts employs, here lights
 His constant lamp, and waves his purple wings,
 Reigns here and revels: not in the bought smile
 Of harlots, loveless, joyless, unendeared,
 Casual fruition; nor in court-amours,
 Mixed dance, or wanton mask, or midnight ball,
 Or serenate, which the starved lover sings
 To his proud fair, best quitted with disdain. 770
 These, lulled by nightingales, embracing slept,
 And on their naked limbs the flowery roof
 Showered roses, which the morn repaired. Sleep on,
 Blest pair! and, O! yet happiest, if ye seek
 No happier state, and know to know no more!
 Now had night measured with her shadowy cone
 Half-way up-hill this vast sublunar vault;
 And from their ivory port the Cherubim
 Forth issuing, at the accustomed hour, stood armed
 To their night-watches in warlike parade; 780
 When Gabriel to his next in power thus spake:

“Uzziel, half these draw off, and coast the south
 With strictest watch; these other wheel the north:
 Our circuit meets full west.” As flame they part,
 Half wheeling to the shield, half to the spear.
 From these, two strong and subtle Spirits he called
 That near him stood, and gave them thus in charge:

“Ithuriel and Zephon, with winged speed
 Search through this garden; leave unsearched no nook;
 But chiefly where those two fair creatures lodge, 790
 Now laid perhaps asleep, secure of harm.
 This evening from the sun’s decline arrived
 Who tells of some infernal Spirit seen
 Hitherward bent (who could have thought?), escaped
 The bars of Hell, on errand bad, no doubt:
 Such, where ye find, seize fast, and hither bring.”

So saying, on he led his radiant files,
 Dazzling the moon; these to the bower direct
 In search of whom they sought. Him there they found Squat like a toad, close at the ear of Eve, 800
 Assaying by his devilish art to reach
 The organs of her fancy, and with them forge
 Illusions as he list, phantasms and dreams;
 Or if, inspiring venom, he might taint
 The animal spirits, that from pure blood arise
 Like gentle breaths from rivers pure, thence raise
 At least distempered, discontented thoughts,
 Vain hopes, vain aims, inordinate desires,
 Blown up with high conceits engendering pride.
 Him thus intent Ithuriel with his spear 810
 Touched lightly; for no falsehood can endure
 Touch of celestial temper, but returns
 Of force to its own likeness: up he starts,
 Discovered and surprised. As when a spark Lights on a heap of nitrous powder, laid

 Fit for the tun, some magazine to store
 Against a rumoured war, the smutty grain,
 With sudden blaze diffused, inflames the air :
 So started up in his own shape the Fiend.
 Back stept those two fair Angels, half amazed 820
 So sudden to behold the grisly King ;
 Yet thus, unmoved with fear, accost him soon :

“Which of those rebel Spirits adjudged to Hell
 Com'st thou, escaped thy prison? and, transformed,
 Why sat'st thou like an enemy in wait,
 Here watching at the head of these that sleep?”

“Know ye not, then,” said Satan, filled with scorn, “Know ye not me? Ye knew me once no mate
 For you, there sitting where ye durst not soar !
 Not to know me argues yourselves unknown, 830
 The lowest of your throng ; or if ye know,
 Why ask ye, and superfluous begin
 Your message, like to end as much in vain?”

— To whom thus Zephon, answering scorn with scorn :

“Think not, revolted Spirit, thy shape the same,
 Or undiminished brightness, to be known
 As when thou stood'st in Heaven upright and pure.
 That glory then, when thou no more wast good,
 Departed from thee ; and thou resemblest now
 Thy sin and place of doom obscure and foul. 840
 But come ; for thou, be sure, shalt give account
 To him who sent us, whose charge is to keep
 This place inviolable, and these from harm.”

So spake the Cherub ; and his grave rebuke,
 Severe in youthful beauty, added grace
 Invincible. Abashed the Devil stood,
 And felt how awful goodness is, and saw

Virtue in her shape how lovely ; saw, and pined
 His loss ; but chiefly to find here observed
 His lustre visibly impaired ; yet seemed 850
 Undaunted. "If I must contend," said he,
 "Best with the best—the sender, not the sent ;
 Or all at once : more glory will be won,
 Or less be lost." "Thy fear," said Zephon bold,
 "Will save us trial what the least can do Single against thee, wicked and thence weak."

The Fiend replied not, overcome with rage ;
 But, like a proud steed reined, went haughty on,
 Champing his iron curb : to strive or fly
 He held it vain ; awe from above had quelled 860
 His heart, not else dismayed. Now drew they nigh
 The western point, where those half-rounding guards
 Just met, and closing stood in squadron joined,
 Awaiting next command. To whom their chief,
 Gabriel, from the front thus called aloud :

"O friends, I hear the tread of nimble feet
 Hasting this way, and now by glimpse discern Ithuriel and Zephon through the shade ;
 And with them comes a third, of regal port,
 But faded splendour wan, who by his gait 870
 And fierce demeanour seems the Prince of Hell ;
 Not likely to part hence without contest.
 Stand firm, for in his look defiance lours."

He scarce had ended, when those two approached,
 And brief related whom they brought, where found,
 How busied, in what form and posture couched.
 To whom, with stern regard, thus Gabriel spake :
 "Why hast thou, Satan, broke the bounds prescribed
 To thy transgressions, and disturbed the charge
 Of others, who approve not to transgress 880

By thy example, but have power and right
 To question thy bold entrance on this place?
 Employed, it seems, to violate sleep, and those Whose dwelling God hath planted here in bliss."

To whom thus Satan, with contemptuous brow :
 "Gabriel, thou hadst in Heaven the esteem of wise,
 And such I held thee ; but this question asked Puts me in doubt. Lives there who loves his pain ?
 Who would not, finding way, break loose from Hell,
 Though thither doomed? Thou wouldst thyself, no doubt, 890
 And boldly venture to whatever place
 Farthest from pain, where thou mightst hope to change
 Torment with ease, and soonest recompense
 Dole with delight ; which in this place I sought :
 To thee no reason, who know'st only good,
 But evil hast not tried. And wilt object
 His will who bound us? let him surer bar
 His iron gates, if he intends our stay
 In that dark durance. Thus much what was asked :
 The rest is true, they found me where they say ; 900
 But that implies not violence or harm."

Thus he in scorn. The warlike Angel moved,
 Disdainfully half smiling, thus replied :
 "O loss of one in Heaven to judge of wise,
 Since Satan fell, whom folly overthrew,
 And now returns him from his prison scaped,
 Gravely in doubt whether to hold them wise
 Or not who ask what boldness brought him hither
 Unlicensed from his bounds in Hell prescribed !
 So wise he judges it to fly from pain 910
 However, and to scape his punishment !
 So judge thou still, presumptuous, till the wrath,
 Which thou incurr'st by flying, meet thy flight

Sevenfold, and scourge that wisdom back to Hell,
Which taught thee yet no better, that no pain
Can equal anger infinite provoked.

But wherefore thou alone? wherefore with thee
Came not all Hell broke loose? is pain to them Less pain, less to be fled? or thou than they Less hardy to endure? Courageous chief,
The first in flight from pain, hadst thou alleged
To thy deserted host this cause of flight,
Thou surely hadst not come sole fugitive."

920

To which the Fiend thus answered, frowning stern:

"Not that I less endure, or shrink from pain,
Insulting Angel! well thou know'st I stood
Thy fiercest, when in battle to thy aid
The blasting vollied thunder made all speed,
And seconded thy else not dreaded spear.

930

But still thy words at random, as before,
Argue thy inexperience what behoves,
From hard assays and ill successes past,
A faithful leader; not to hazard all
Through ways of danger by himself untried.

I therefore, I alone, first undertook

To wing the desolate Abyss, and spy
This new-created World, whereof in Hell
Fame is not silent; here in hope to find Better abode, and my afflicted powers
To settle here on Earth, or in mid air;

940

Though for possession put to try once more
What thou and thy gay legions dare against;
Whose easier business were to serve their Lord
High up in Heaven, with songs to hymn his throne,
And practised distances to cringe, not fight."

To whom the warrior Angel soon replied :
 "To say and straight unsay, pretending first
 Wise to fly pain, professing next the spy,
 Argues no leader, but a liar traced,
 Satan ; and couldst thou 'faithful' add? O name, 950
 O sacred name of faithfulness profaned!
 Faithful to whom? to thy rebellious crew?
 Army of fiends, fit body to fit head,
 Was this your discipline and faith engaged,
 Your military obedience, to dissolve
 Allegiance to the acknowledged Power Supreme?
 And thou, sly hypocrite, who now wouldst seem Patron of liberty, who more than thou
 Once fawned, and cringed, and servilely adored
 Heaven's awful Monarch? wherefore, but in hope 960
 To dispossess him, and thyself to reign?
 But mark what I areed thee now: Avaunt!
 Fly thither whence thou fledst. If from this hour
 Within these hallowed limits thou appear,
 Back to the infernal pit I drag thee chained,
 And seal thee so as henceforth not to scorn
 The facile gates of Hell too slightly barred."

So threatened he ; but Satan to no threats
 Gave heed, but waxing more in rage replied :

"Then, when I am thy captive, talk of chains, 970 Proud liminary Cherub ! but ere then Far heavier load thyself expect to feel
 From my prevailing arm, though Heaven's King
 Ride on thy wings, and thou with thy compeers,
 Used to the yoke, drawest his triumphant wheels
 In progress through the road of Heaven star-paved."

While thus he spake, the angelic squadron bright

Turned fiery red, sharpening in mooned horns
 Their phalanx, and began to hem him round
 With ported spears, as thick as when a field 980
 Of Ceres ripe for harvest waving bends
 Her bearded grove of ears which way the wind
 Sways them; the careful ploughman doubting stands
 Lest on the threshing-floor his hopeful sheaves
 Prove chaff. On the other side, Satan, alarmed, Collecting all his might, dilated stood,
 Like Teneriff or Atlas, unremoved :
 His stature reached the sky, and on his crest
 Sat Horror plumed; nor wanted in his grasp
 What seemed both spear and shield. Now dreadful deeds 990
 Might have ensued; nor only Paradise,
 In this commotion, but the starry cope
 Of Heaven perhaps, or all the elements
 At least, had gone to wrack, disturbed and torn
 With violence of this conflict, had not soon
 The Eternal, to prevent such horrid fray,
 Hung forth in Heaven his golden scales, yet seen
 Betwixt Astræa and the Scorpion sign,
 Wherein all things created first he weighed,
 The pendulous round Earth with balanced air 1000
 In counterpoise—now ponders all events,
 Battles and realms. In these he put two weights,
 The sequel each of parting and of fight :
 The latter quick up flew, and kicked the beam ;
 Which Gabriel spying thus bespake the Fiend :
 “Satan, I know thy strength, and thou know’st mine ;
 Neither our own, but given ; what folly then
 To boast what arms can do ! since thine no more Than Heaven permits, nor mine, though doubled now

To trample thee as mire. For proof look up, 1010
And read thy lot in yon celestial sign,
Where thou art weighed, and shown how light, how weak
If thou resist." The Fiend looked up, and knew
His mounted scale aloft: nor more; but fled
Murmuring, and with him fled the shades of night.

BOOK V.

THE ARGUMENT.

Morning approached, Eve relates to Adam her troublesome dream ; he likes it not, yet comforts her : they come forth to their day labours : their morning hymn at the door of their bower. God, to render Man inexcusable, sends Raphael to admonish him of his obedience, of his free estate, of his enemy near at hand—who he is, and why his enemy, and whatever else may avail Adam to know. Raphael comes down to Paradise ; his appearance described ; his coming discerned by Adam afar off, sitting at the door of his bower ; he goes out to meet him, brings him to his lodge, entertains him with the choicest fruits of Paradise got together by Eve ; their discourse at table. Raphael performs his message, minds Adam of his state and of his enemy ; relates, at Adam's request, who that enemy is, and how he came to be so, beginning from his first revolt in Heaven, and the occasion thereof ; how he drew his legions after him to the parts of the North, and there incited them to rebel with him, persuading all but only Abdiel, a Seraph, who in argument dissuades and opposes him, then forsakes him.

BOOK V.

NOW Morn, her rosy steps in the eastern clime
Advancing, sowed the earth with orient pearl,
When Adam waked, so custom'd; for his sleep
Was aery light, from pure digestion bred,
And temperate vapours bland, which the only sound
Of leaves and fuming rills, Aurora's fan,
Lightly dispersed, and the shrill matin song
Of birds on every bough; so much the more
His wonder was to find unawaken'd Eve
With tresses discompos'd, and glowing cheek, 10
As through unquiet rest. He, on his side
Leaning half-raised, with looks of cordial love
Hung over her enamour'd, and beheld
Beauty, which, whether waking or asleep,
Shot forth peculiar graces; then, with voice
Mild as when Zephyrus on Flora breathes,
Her hand soft touching, whisper'd thus: "Awake,
My fairest, my espous'd, my latest found,
Heaven's last, best gift, my ever-new delight!
Awake! the morning shines, and the fresh field 20
Calls us; we lose the prime, to mark how spring
Our tended plants, how blows the citron grove,

What drops the myrrh, and what the balmy reed,
 How Nature paints her colours, how the bee
 Sits on the bloom extracting liquid sweet."

Such whispering waked her, but with startled eye
 On Adam, whom embracing, thus she spake :

"O sole in whom my thoughts find all repose,
 My glory, my perfection! glad I see
 Thy face, and morn returned; for I this night 30
 (Such night till this I never passed) have dreamed,
 If dreamed, not, as I oft am wont, of thee,
 Works of day past, or morrow's next design,
 But of offence and trouble, which my mind
 Knew never till this irksome night. Methought,
 Close at mine ear one called me forth to walk
 With gentle voice; I thought it thine. It said,
 'Why sleep'st thou, Eve? now is the pleasant time,
 The cool, the silent, save where silence yields
 To the night-warbling bird, that now awake 40
 Tunes sweetest his love-laboured song; now reigns
 Full-orbed the moon, and, with more pleasing light,
 Shadowy sets off the face of things—in vain,
 If none regard. Heaven wakes with all his eyes,
 Whom to behold but thee, Nature's desire,
 In whose sight all things joy, with ravishment
 Attracted by thy beauty still to gaze?'
 I rose as at thy call, but found thee not :
 To find thee I directed then my walk ;
 And on, methought, alone I passed through ways 50
 That brought me on a sudden to the Tree
 Of interdicted Knowledge. Fair it seemed,
 Much fairer to my fancy than by day ;
 And, as I wondering looked, beside it stood
 One shaped and winged like one of those from Heaven

By us oft seen : his dewy locks distilled
 Ambrosia. On that Tree he also gazed ;
 And, 'O fair plant,' said he, 'with fruit surcharged,
 Deigns none to ease thy load and taste thy sweet,
 Nor god, nor man? Is knowledge so despised? 60
 Or envy, or what reserve forbids to taste?
 Forbid who will, none shall from me withhold Longer thy offered good, why else set here?'
 This said, he paused not, but with venturous arm
 He plucked, he tasted. Me damp horror chilled
 At such bold words vouched with a deed so bold ;
 But he thus, overjoyed : 'O fruit divine,
 Sweet of thyself, but much more sweet thus cropped,
 Forbidden here, it seems, as only fit
 For gods, yet able to make gods of men! 70
 And why not gods of men, since good, the more Communicated, more abundant grows,
 The author not impaired, but honoured more?
 Here, happy creature, fair angelic Eve,
 Partake thou also : happy though thou art,
 Happier thou may'st be, worthier canst not be ;
 Taste this, and be henceforth among the gods
 Thyself a goddess ; not to Earth confined,
 But sometimes in the Air, as we ; sometimes Ascend to Heaven, by merit thine, and see 80
 What life the gods live there, and such live thou.'
 So saying, he drew nigh, and to me held,
 Even to my mouth of that same fruit held part
 Which he had plucked ; the pleasant savoury smell
 So quickened appetite that I, methought,
 Could not but taste. Forthwith up to the clouds
 With him I flew, and underneath beheld
 The Earth outstretched immense, a prospect wide

And various: wondering at my flight and change
 To this high exaltation, suddenly 90
 My guide was gone, and I, methought, sunk down,
 And fell asleep; but, O, how glad I waked
 To find this but a dream!" Thus Eve her night Related, and thus Adam answered sad:

"Best image of myself, and dearer half,
 The trouble of thy thoughts this night in sleep
 Affects me equally; nor can I like
 This uncouth dream, of evil sprung, I fear;
 Yet evil whence? in thee can harbour none,
 Created pure. But know that in the soul 100
 Are many lesser faculties, that serve
 Reason as chief; among these Fancy next
 Her office holds; of all external things,
 Which the five watchful senses represent,
 She forms imaginations, aery shapes,
 Which Reason, joining or disjoining, frames
 All what we affirm or what deny, and call
 Our knowledge or opinion; then retires
 Into her private cell when Nature rests.
 Oft in her absence mimic Fancy wakes 110
 To imitate her; but, misjoining shapes,
 Wild work produces oft, and most in dreams,
 Ill matching words and deeds long past or late.
 Some such resemblances, methinks, I find
 Of our last evening's talk in this thy dream,
 But with addition strange; yet be not sad:
 Evil into the mind of god or man
 May come and go, so unapproved, and leave
 No spot or blame behind; which gives me hope
 That what in sleep thou didst abhor to dream, 120
 Waking thou never wilt consent to do.

Be not disheartened, then, nor cloud those looks,
 That wont to be more cheerful and serene
 Than when fair Morning first smiles on the world;
 And let us to our fresh employments rise
 Among the groves, the fountains, and the flowers,
 That open now their choicest bosomed smells,
 Reserved from night, and kept for thee in store."

So cheered he his fair spouse, and she was cheered,
 But silently a gentle tear let fall 130
 From either eye, and wiped them with her hair;
 Two other precious drops that ready stood,
 Each in their crystal sluice, he, ere they fell,
 Kissed as the gracious signs of sweet remorse
 And pious awe, that feared to have offended.

So all was cleared, and to the field they haste.
 But first, from under shady arborous roof
 Soon as they forth were come to open sight
 Of day-spring, and the sun—who, scarce uprisen,
 With wheels yet hovering o'er the ocean-brim, 140
 Shot parallel to the Earth his dewy ray,
 Discovering in wide landskip all the east
 Of Paradise and Eden's happy plains—
 Lowly they bowed adoring, and began
 Their orisons, each morning duly paid
 In various style; for neither various style
 Nor holy rapture wanted they to praise
 Their Maker, in fit strains pronounced, or sung
 Unmeditated; such prompt eloquence
 Flowed from their lips, in prose or numerous verse, 150
 More tuneable than needed lute or harp
 To add more sweetness: and they thus began:

"These are thy glorious works, Parent of good,
 Almighty! thine this universal frame,

Thus wondrous fair: thyself how wondrous then!
 Unspeakable! who sitt'st above these Heavens
 To us invisible, or dimly seen
 In these thy lowest works; yet these declare
 Thy goodness beyond thought, and power divine.
 Speak, ye who best can tell, ye Sons of Light, 160
 Angels, for ye behold him, and with songs
 And choral symphonies, day without night,
 Circle his throne rejoicing—ye in Heaven;
 On Earth join, all ye creatures, to extol
 Him first, him last, him midst, and without end.
 Fairest of stars, last in the train of night,
 If better thou belong not to the dawn,
 Sure pledge of day, that crown'st the smiling Morn
 With thy bright circlet, praise him in thy sphere
 While day arises, that sweet hour of prime. 170
 Thou Sun, of this great world both eye and soul,
 Acknowledge him thy greater; sound his praise
 In thy eternal course, both when thou climb'st,
 And when high noon hast gained, and when thou fall'st.
 Moon, that now meet'st the orient sun, now fliest,
 With the fixed stars, fixed in their orb that flies,
 And ye five other wandering Fires, that move
 In mystic dance not without song, resound
 His praise who out of darkness called up light
 Air, and ye Elements, the eldest birth 180
 Of Nature's womb, that in quaternion run
 Perpetual circle, multiform, and mix
 And nourish all things, let your ceaseless change
 Vary to our great Maker still new praise.
 Ye Mists and Exhalations, that now rise
 From hill or steaming lake, dusky or gray,
 Till the sun paint your fleecy skirts with gold,

In honour to the world's great Author rise ;
 Whether to deck with clouds the uncoloured sky,
 Or wet the thirsty earth with falling showers, 190
 Rising or falling still advance his praise.

His praise, ye Winds, that from four quarters blow,
 Breathe soft or loud ; and wave your tops, ye Pines,
 With every plant, in sign of worship wave.

Fountains, and ye that warble, as ye flow,
 Melodious murmurs, warbling tune his praise.

Join voices, all ye living Souls ; ye Birds,
 That singing up to Heaven-gate ascend,
 Bear on your wings and in your notes his praise.

Ye that in waters glide, and ye that walk 200

The earth, and stately tread, or lowly creep,

Witness if I be silent, morn or even,

To hill or valley, fountain, or fresh shade,

Made vocal by my song, and taught his praise.

Hail, universal Lord ! be bounteous still

To give us only good ; and if the night

Have gathered aught of evil, or concealed,

Disperse it, as now light dispels the dark."

So prayed they innocent, and to their thoughts

Firm peace recovered soon, and wonted calm. 210

On to their morning's rural work they haste,

Among sweet dews and flowers ; where any row

Of fruit-trees over-woody reached too far

Their pampered boughs, and needed hands to check

Fruitless embraces : or they led the vine

To wed her elm ; she, spoused, about him twines

Her marriageable arms, and with her brings

Her dower, the adopted clusters, to adorn

His barren leaves. Them thus employed beheld

With pity Heaven's high King, and to him called 220

Raphael, the sociable Spirit, that deigned
 To travel with Tobias, and secured
 His marriage with the seven-times-wedded maid.

“Raphael,” said he, “thou hear’st what stir on Earth
 Satan, from Hell scaped through the darksome gulf,
 Hath raised in Paradise, and how disturbed
 This night the human pair; how he designs
 In them at once to ruin all mankind.
 Go, therefore, half this day, as friend with friend,
 Converse with Adam, in what bower or shade 230
 Thou find’st him from the heat of noon retired
 To respite his day-labour with repast
 Or with repose; and such discourse bring on
 As may advise him of his happy state—
 Happiness in his power left free to will,
 Left to his own free will, his will though free
 Yet mutable; whence warn him to beware
 He swerve not, too secure. Tell him withal
 His danger, and from whom; what enemy,
 Late fallen himself from Heaven, is plotting now 240
 The fall of others from like state of bliss;
 By violence? no, for that shall be withstood;
 But by deceit and lies. This let him know,
 Lest wilfully transgressing he pretend Surprisal, unadmonished, unforwarned.”

So spake the Eternal Father, and fulfilled
 All justice; nor delayed the winged Saint
 After his charge received; but from among Thousand celestial Ardours, where he stood
 Veiled with his gorgeous wings, upspringing light, 250
 Flew through the midst of Heaven; the angelic quires,
 On each hand parting, to his speed gave way
 Through all the empyreal road, till, at the gate

Of Heaven arrived, the gate self-opened wide,
 On golden hinges turning, as by work
 Divine the sovran Architect had framed.
 From hence—no cloud or, to obstruct his sight,
 Star interposed, however small—he sees,
 Not unconform to other shining globes,
 Earth, and the Garden of God, with cedars crowned 260
 Above all hills; as when by night the glass
 Of Galileo, less assured, observes
 Imagined lands and regions in the moon;
 Or pilot from amidst the Cyclades
 Delos or Samos first appearing kens,
 A cloudy spot. Down thither prone in flight
 He speeds, and through the vast ethereal sky
 Sails between worlds and worlds, with steady wing
 Now on the polar winds; then with quick fan
 Winnows the buxom air, till, within soar 270
 Of towering eagles, to all the fowls he seems
 A phœnix—gazed by all, as that sole bird,
 When, to enshrine his reliques in the Sun's Bright temple, to Egyptian Thebes he flies.
 At once on the eastern cliff of Paradise
 He lights, and to his proper shape returns,
 A Seraph winged. Six wings he wore, to shade
 His lineaments divine: the pair that clad
 Each shoulder broad came mantling o'er his breast
 With regal ornament; the middle pair 280
 Girt like a starry zone his waist, and round
 Skirted his loins and thighs with downy gold
 And colours dipt in heaven; the third his feet
 Shadowed from either heel with feathered mail,
 Sky-tinctured grain. Like Maia's son he stood,
 And shook his plumes, that heavenly fragrance filled

The circuit wide. Straight knew him all the bands
 Of Angels under watch ; and to his state
 And to his message high in honour rise ;
 For on some message high they guessed him bound. 290
 Their glittering tents he passed, and now is come
 Into the blissful field, through groves of myrrh,
 And flowering odours, cassia, nard, and balm,
 A wilderness of sweets ; for Nature here
 Wantoned as in her prime, and played at will
 Her virgin fancies, pouring forth more sweet,
 Wild above rule or art, enormous bliss.
 Him, through the spicy forest onward come,
 Adam discerned, as in the door he sat
 Of his cool bower, while now the mounted sun 300
 Shot down direct his fervid rays, to warm
 Earth's inmost womb, more warmth than Adam needs ;
 And Eve within, due at her hour, prepared
 For dinner savoury fruits, of taste to please
 True appetite, and not disrelish thirst
 Of nectarous draughts between, from milky stream,
 Berry or grape : to whom thus Adam called :
 "Haste hither, Eve, and, worth thy sight, behold
 Eastward among those trees what glorious shape
 Comes this way moving ; seems another morn 310
 Risen on mid-noon ; some great behest from Heaven
 To us perhaps he brings, and will vouchsafe
 This day to be our guest. But go with speed,
 And what thy stores contain bring forth, and pour Abundance, fit to honour and receive
 Our heavenly stranger ; well we may afford
 Our givers their own gifts, and large bestow
 From large bestowed, where Nature multiplies
 Her fertile growth, and by disburdening grows

More fruitful; which instructs us not to spare." 320

To whom thus Eve: "Adam, Earth's hallowed mould,
Of God inspired, small store will serve where store,
All seasons, ripe for use hangs on the stalk;
Save what by frugal storing firmness gains
To nourish, and superfluous moist consumes.
But I will haste, and from each bough and brake,
Each plant and juiciest gourd, will pluck such choice
To entertain our Angel-guest, as he Beholding shall confess that here on Earth
God hath dispensed his bounties as in Heaven." 330

So saying, with dispatchful looks in haste
She turns, on hospitable thoughts intent,
What choice to choose for delicacy best,
What order, so contrived as not to mix
Tastes, not well joined, inelegant, but bring
Taste after taste upheld with kindest change:
Bestirs her then, and from each tender stalk
Whatever Earth, all-bearing mother, yields
In India East or West, or middle shore,
In Pontus or the Punic coast, or where 340
Alcinöus reigned, fruit of all kinds, in coat
Rough or smooth-rind, or bearded husk, or shell,
She gathers, tribute large, and on the board
Heaps with unsparing hand. For drink the grape
She crushes, inoffensive must, and meaths
From many a berry, and from sweet kernels pressed
She tempers dulcet creams—nor these to hold
Wants her fit vessels pure; then strews the ground
With rose and odours from the shrub unfumed.

Meanwhile our primitive great Sire, to meet 350
His godlike guest, walks forth, without more train
Accompanied than with his own complete

Perfections ; in himself was all his state,
 More solemn than the tedious pomp that waits
 On princes, when their rich retinue long
 Of horses led, and grooms besmeared with gold,
 Dazzles the crowd, and sets them all agape.
 Nearer his presence, Adam, though not awed,
 Yet with submiss approach and reverence meek,
 As to a superior nature, bowing low, 360
 Thus said: "Native of Heaven (for other place None can than Heaven such glorious shape contain),
 Since, by descending from the Thrones above,
 Those happy places thou hast deigned a while
 To want, and honour these, vouchsafe with us,
 Two only, who yet by sovran gift possess
 This spacious ground, in yonder shady bower
 To rest, and what the Garden choicest bears
 To sit and taste, till this meridian heat
 Be over, and the sun more cool decline." 370

Whom thus the angelic Virtue answered mild :

"Adam, I therefore came ; nor art thou such Created, or such place hast here to dwell,
 As may not oft invite, though Spirits of Heaven,
 To visit thee ; lead on, then, where thy bower
 O'ershades ; for these mid-hours, till evening rise,
 I have at will." So to the sylvan lodge
 They came, that like Pomona's arbour smiled,
 With flowerets decked and fragrant smells ; but Eve,
 Undecked save with herself, more lovely fair 380
 Than wood-nymph, or the fairest goddess feigned
 Of three that in Mount Ida naked strove,
 Stood to entertain her guest from Heaven ; no veil
 She needed, virtue-proof ; no thought infirm
 Altered her cheek. On whom the Angel "Hail!"

Bestowed, the holy salutation used
 Long after to blest Mary, second Eve:

“Hail! Mother of Mankind, whose fruitful womb Shall fill the world more numerous with thy sons
 Than with these various fruits the trees of God 390
 Have heaped this table!” Raised of grassy turf
 Their table was, and mossy seats had round,
 And on her ample square from side to side
 All autumn piled, though spring and autumn here
 Danced hand-in-hand. A while discourse they hold—
 No fear lest dinner cool—when thus began
 Our Author: “Heavenly stranger, please to taste
 These bounties, which our Nourisher, from whom
 All perfect good, unmeasured-out, descends,
 To us for food and for delight hath caused 400
 The Earth to yield: unsavoury food, perhaps,
 To spiritual natures; only this I know,
 That one celestial Father gives to all.”

To whom the Angel: “Therefore, what he gives (Whose praise be ever sung) to Man, in part Spiritual, may of purest Spirits be found
 No ingrateful food: and food alike those pure Intelligential substances require
 As doth your rational; and both contain
 Within them every lower faculty 410
 Of sense, whereby they hear, see, smell, touch, taste,
 Tasting concoct, digest, assimilate,
 And corporeal to incorporeal turn.
 For know, whatever was created needs
 To be sustained and fed; of elements
 The grosser feeds the purer: earth the sea;
 Earth and the sea feed air; the air those fires
 Ethereal, and, as lowest, first the moon;

Whence in her visage round those spots, unpurged
 Vapours not yet into her substance turned. 420
 Nor doth the moon no nourishment exhale
 From her moist continent to higher orbs.
 The sun, that light imparts to all, receives
 From all his alimental recompense
 In humid exhalations, and at even Sups with the ocean. Though in Heaven the trees
 Of life ambrosial fruitage bear, and vines
 Yield nectar; though from off the boughs each morn
 We brush mellifluous dewes, and find the ground
 Covered with pearly grain; yet God hath here 430
 Varied his bounty so with new delights
 As may compare with Heaven; and to taste
 Think not I shall be nice." So down they sat,
 And to their viands fell; nor seemingly
 The Angel, nor in mist—the common gloss
 Of theologians—but with keen dispatch
 Of real hunger, and concoctive heat
 To transubstantiate: what redounds transpires
 Through Spirits with ease; nor wonder, if by fire
 Of sooty coal the empiric alchemist 440
 Can turn, or holds it possible to turn,
 Metals of drossiest ore to perfect gold,
 As from the mine. Meanwhile at table Eve
 Ministered naked, and their flowing cups
 With pleasant liquors crowned. O innocence Deserving Paradise! If ever, then,
 Then had the Sons of God excuse to have been Enamoured at that sight; but in those hearts
 Love unlibidinous reigned, nor jealousy
 Was understood, the injured lover's hell. 450
 Thus when with meats and drinks they had sufficed,

Not burdened nature, sudden mind arose
 In Adam not to let the occasion pass,
 Given him by this great conference, to know
 Of things above his world, and of their being
 Who dwell in Heaven, whose excellence he saw Transcend his own so far, whose radiant forms—
 Divine effulgence—whose high power, so far Exceeded human; and his wary speech
 Thus to the empyreal minister he framed: 460

“Inhabitant with God, now know I well
 Thy favour, in this honour done to Man,
 Under whose lowly roof thou hast vouchsafed
 To enter, and these earthly fruits to taste,
 Food not of Angels, yet accepted so,
 As that more willingly thou couldst not seem
 At Heaven’s high feasts to have fed: yet what compare?”

To whom the winged Hierarch replied:
 “O Adam, one Almighty is, from whom
 All things proceed, and up to him return, 470
 If not depraved from good, created all
 Such to perfection, one first matter all,
 Endued with various forms, various degrees
 Of substance, and, in things that live, of life;
 But more refined, more spiritous and pure,
 As nearer to him placed or nearer tending,
 Each in their several active spheres assigned,
 Till body up to spirit work, in bounds
 Proportioned to each kind. So from the root Springs lighter the green stalk, from thence the leaves 480
 More aery, last the bright consummate flower
 Spirits odorous breathes: flowers and their fruit,
 Man’s nourishment, by gradual scale sublimed,
 To vital spirits aspire, to animal,

To intellectual ; give both life and sense,
 Fancy and understanding ; whence the soul
 Reason receives, and reason is her being,
 Discursive, or intuitive : discourse
 Is ofttest yours, the latter most is ours,
 Differing but in degree, of kind the same. 490
 Wonder not, then, what God for you saw good
 If I refuse not, but convert, as you,
 To proper substance. Time may come when men
 With Angels may participate, and find
 No inconvenient diet, nor too light fare ;
 And from these corporal nutriments, perhaps,
 Your bodies may at last turn all to spirit,
 Improved by tract of time, and winged ascend
 Ethereal, as we ; or may at choice
 Here or in heavenly Paradises dwell, 500
 If ye be found obedient, and retain Unalterably firm his love entire,
 Whose progeny you are. Meanwhile enjoy
 Your fill what happiness this happy state
 Can comprehend, incapable of more."

To whom the Patriarch of Mankind replied :
 "O favourable Spirit, propitious guest,
 Well hast thou taught the way that might direct
 Our knowledge, and the scale of Nature set
 From centre to circumference, whereon, 510
 In contemplation of created things,
 By steps we may ascend to God. But say,
 What meant that caution joined, *If ye be found
 Obedient ?* Can we want obedience, then,
 To him, or possibly his love desert,
 Who formed us from the dust, and placed us here
 Full to the utmost measure of what bliss

Human desires can seek or apprehend?"

To whom the Angel: "Son of Heaven and Earth,
Attend! That thou art happy, owe to God; 520

That thou continuest such, owe to thyself,
That is, to thy obedience; therein stand:
This was that caution given thee; be advised.

God made thee perfect, not immutable;
And good he made thee, but to persevere
He left it in thy power—ordained thy will
By nature free, not over-ruled by fate
Inextricable, or strict necessity.

Our voluntary service he requires,
Not our necessitated; such with him 530
Finds no acceptance, nor can find; for how
Can hearts not free be tried whether they serve Willing or no, who will but what they must
By destiny, and can no other choose?

Myself, and all the angelic host, that stand
In sight of God enthroned, our happy state
Hold, as you yours, while our obedience holds;
On other surety none: freely we serve,
Because we freely love, as in our will
To love or not; in this we stand or fall. 540

And some are fallen, to disobedience fallen,
And so from Heaven to deepest Hell: O fall
From what high state of bliss into what woe!"

To whom our great Progenitor: "Thy words
Attentive, and with more delighted ear,
Divine instructor, I have heard, than when Cherubic songs by night from neighbouring hills
Aërial music send; nor knew I not
To be, both will and deed, created free.
Yet that we never shall forget to love 550

Our Maker, and obey him whose command
 Single is yet so just, my constant thoughts
 Assured me, and still assure; though what thou tell'st
 Hath passed in Heaven some doubt within me move,
 But more desire to hear, if thou consent,
 The full relation, which must needs be strange,
 Worthy of sacred silence to be heard.
 And we have yet large day, for scarce the sun
 Hath finished half his journey, and scarce begins
 His other half in the great zone of heaven." 560

Thus Adam made request; and Raphael,
 After short pause assenting, thus began:

"High matter thou enjoin'st me, O prime of men,
 Sad task and hard; for how shall I relate
 To human sense the invisible exploits
 Of warring Spirits? how, without remorse,
 The ruin of so many, glorious once
 And perfect while they stood? how, last, unfold
 The secrets of another world, perhaps
 Not lawful to reveal? Yet for thy good 570
 This is dispensed, and what surmounts the reach
 Of human sense I shall delineate so,
 By likening spiritual to corporal forms,
 As may express them best—though what if Earth
 Be but the shadow of Heaven, and things therein
 Each to other like, more than on Earth is thought!

"As yet this world was not, and Chaos wild Reigned where these Heavens now roll, where Earth now rests

Upon her centre poised; when on a day
 (For time, though in eternity, applied 580
 To motion, measures all things durable
 By present, past, and future), on such day

As Heaven's great year brings forth, the empyreal host
 Of Angels, by imperial summons called,
 Innumerable before the Almighty's throne
 Forthwith from all the ends of Heaven appeared Under their Hierarchs in orders bright :
 Ten thousand thousand ensigns high advanced,
 Standards and gonfalons, 'twixt van and rear,
 Stream in the air, and for distinction serve
 Of Hierarchies, of orders, and degrees ;
 Or in their glittering tissues bear emblazed
 Holy memorials, acts of zeal and love
 Recorded eminent. Thus when in orbs
 Of circuit inexpressible they stood,
 Orb within orb, the Father Infinite,
 By whom in bliss embosomed sat the Son,
 Amidst, as from a flaming mount, whose top
 Brightness had made invisible, thus spake :

590

“Hear, all ye Angels, progeny of light,
 Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers,
 Hear my decree, which unrevoked shall stand !
 This day I have begot whom I declare
 My only Son, and on this holy hill
 Him have anointed, whom ye now behold
 At my right hand ; your head I him appoint,
 And by myself have sworn, to him shall bow
 All knees in Heaven, and shall confess him Lord.
 Under his great vicegerent reign abide
 United as one individual soul,
 For ever happy. Him who disobeys
 Me disobeys, breaks union, and that day,
 Cast out from God and blessed vision, falls
 Into utter darkness deep engulfed, his place
 Ordained without redemption, without end.’

600

610

"So spake the Omnipotent, and with his words
 All seemed well pleased; all seemed, but were not all.
 That day, as other solemn days, they spent
 In song and dance about the sacred hill;
 Mystical dance, which yonder starry sphere 620
 Of planets and of fixed in all her wheels
 Resembles nearest—mazes intricate,
 Eccentric, intervolved, yet regular
 Then most when most irregular they seem;
 And in their motions harmony divine
 So smooths her charming tones that God's own ear Listens delighted. Evening now approached (For we have also our evening and our morn,
 We ours for change delectable, not need),
 Forthwith from dance to sweet repast they turn 630
 Desirous: all in circles as they stood,
 Tables are set, and on a sudden piled
 With Angels' food, and rubied nectar flows
 In pearl, in diamond, and massy gold,
 Fruit of delicious vines, the growth of Heaven.
 On flowers reposed, and with fresh flowerets crowned,
 They eat, they drink, and in communion sweet
 Quaff immortality and joy, secure
 Of surfeit where full measure only bounds
 Excess, before the all-bounteous King, who showered 640
 With copious hand, rejoicing in their joy.
 Now when ambrosial night, with clouds exhaled
 From that high mount of God whence light and shade
 Spring both, the face of brightest Heaven had changed
 To grateful twilight (for night comes not there
 In darker veil), and roseate dews disposed
 All but the unsleeping eyes of God to rest,
 Wide over all the plain, and wider far

Than all this globous Earth in plain outspread
 (Such are the courts of God), the angelic throng, 650
 Dispersed in bands and files, their camp extend
 By living streams among the trees of life—
 Pavilions numberless and sudden reared,
 Celestial tabernacles, where they slept
 Fanned with cool winds; save those who, in their course,
 Melodious hymns about the sovran throne
 Alternate all night long. But not so waked
 Satan—so call him now; his former name
 Is heard no more in Heaven. He, of the first,
 If not the first Archangel, great in power, 660
 In favour, and pre-eminence, yet fraught
 With envy against the Son of God, that day
 Honoured by his great Father, and proclaimed
 Messiah, King anointed, could not bear
 Through pride that sight, and thought himself impaired.
 Deep malice thence conceiving and disdain,
 Soon as midnight brought on the dusky hour
 Friendliest to sleep and silence, he resolved
 With all his legions to dislodge, and leave
 Unworshipped, unobeyed, the throne supreme, 670
 Contemptuous; and, his next subordinate
 Awakening, thus to him in secret spake:

“Sleep’st thou, companion dear? what sleep can close
 Thy eyelids? and rememberest what decree,
 Of yesterday, so late hath passed the lips
 Of Heaven’s Almighty? Thou to me thy thoughts
 Wast wont, I mine to thee was wont, to impart;
 Both waking we were one; how, then, can now
 Thy sleep dissent? New laws thou seest imposed:
 New laws from him who reigns new minds may raise 680
 In us who serve—new counsels, to debate

What doubtful may ensue: more in this place
 To utter is not safe. Assemble thou
 Of all those myriads which we lead the chief;
 Tell them that by command, ere yet dim night
 Her shadowy cloud withdraws, I am to haste,
 And all who under me their banners wave,
 Homeward with flying march where we possess
 The quarters of the North, there to prepare Fit entertainment to receive our King,
 The great Messiah, and his new commands,
 Who speedily through all the Hierarchies
 Intends to pass triumphant, and give laws.'

690

"So spake the false Archangel, and infused
 Bad influence into the unwary breast
 Of his associate. He together calls,
 Or several one by one, the regent powers,
 Under him regent; tells, as he was taught,
 That, the Most High commanding, now ere night,
 Now ere dim night had disencumbered Heaven,
 The great Hierarchal standard was to move;
 Tells the suggested cause, and casts between Ambiguous words and jealousies, to sound
 Or taint integrity. But all obeyed
 The wonted signal, and superior voice
 Of their great Potentate; for great indeed
 His name, and high was his degree in Heaven:
 His countenance, as the morning-star that guides
 The starry flock, allured them, and with lies
 Drew after him the third part of Heaven's host.
 Meanwhile, the Eternal eye, whose sight discerns
 Abstrusest thoughts, from forth his holy mount,
 And from within the golden lamps that burn
 Nightly before him, saw without their light

700

710

Rebellion rising—saw in whom, how spread
 Among the Sons of Morn, what multitudes
 Were banded to oppose his high decree;
 And, smiling, to his only Son thus said:

“‘Son, thou in whom my glory I behold
 In full resplendence, Heir of all my might, 720
 Nearly it now concerns us to be sure
 Of our omnipotence, and with what arms
 We mean to hold what anciently we claim
 Of deity or empire: such a foe
 Is rising, who intends to erect his throne
 Equal to ours, throughout the spacious North;
 Nor so content, hath in his thought to try
 In battle what our power is or our right.
 Let us advise, and to this hazard draw
 With speed what force is left, and all employ 730
 In our defence, lest unawares we lose
 This our high place, our sanctuary, our hill.’

“To whom the Son, with calm aspect and clear,
 Lightening divine, ineffable, serene,
 Made answer: ‘Mighty Father, thou thy foes
 Justly hast in derision, and secure
 Laugh’st at their vain designs and tumults vain,
 Matter to me of glory, whom their hate
 Illustrates, when they see all regal power
 Given me to quell their pride, and in event 740
 Know whether I be dextrous to subdue
 Thy rebels, or be found the worst in Heaven.’

“So spake the Son; but Satan with his powers
 Far was advanced on winged speed, an host
 Innumerable as the stars of night,
 Or stars of morning, dew-drops which the sun
 Impearls on every leaf and every flower.

Regions they passed, the mighty regencies
 Of Seraphim and Potentates and Thrones
 In their triple degrees—regions to which 750
 All thy dominion, Adam, is no more
 Than what this Garden is to all the earth
 And all the sea, from one entire globose
 Stretched into longitude; which having passed,
 At length into the limits of the North
 They came, and Satan to his royal seat
 High on a hill, far-blazing, as a mount Raised on a mount, with pyramids and towers
 From diamond quarries hewn and rocks of gold,
 The palace of great Lucifer (so call 760
 That structure, in the dialect of men Interpreted) which not long after he,
 Affecting all equality with God,
 In imitation of that mount whereon
 Messiah was declared in sight of Heaven,
 The Mountain of the Congregation called;
 For thither he assembled all his train,
 Pretending so commanded to consult
 About the great reception of their King,
 Thither to come; and with calumnious art 770
 Of counterfeited truth thus held their ears:
 “Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers,
 If these magnific titles yet remain
 Not merely titular, since by decree
 Another now hath to himself engrossed
 All power, and us eclipsed under the name
 Of King anointed; for whom all this haste
 Of midnight march, and hurried meeting here,
 This only to consult, how we may best,
 With what may be devised of honours new, 780

Receive him coming to receive from us
 Knee-tribute yet unpaid, prostration vile!
 Too much to one! but double how endured—
 To one and to his image now proclaimed?
 But what if better counsels might erect
 Our minds, and teach us to cast off this yoke!
 Will ye submit your necks, and choose to bend
 The supple knee? Ye will not, if I trust
 To know ye right, or if ye know yourselves
 Natives and Sons of Heaven possessed before 790
 By none, and if not equal all, yet free,
 Equally free; for orders and degrees
 Jar not with liberty, but well consist.
 Who can in reason, then, or right, assume Monarchy over such as live by right
 His equals—if in power and splendour less,
 In freedom equal? or can introduce
 Law and edict on us, who without law
 Err not? much less for this to be our Lord,
 And look for adoration, to the abuse 800
 Of those imperial titles which assert
 Our being ordained to govern, not to serve!

“Thus far his bold discourse without control
 Had audience, when among the Seraphim
 Abdiel, than whom none with more zeal adored
 The Deity, and divine commands obeyed,
 Stood up, and in a flame of zeal severe
 The current of his fury thus opposed:

“‘O argument blasphemous, false, and proud!
 Words which no ear ever to hear in Heaven 810
 Expected, least of all from thee, ingrate,
 In place thyself so high above thy peers!
 Canst thou with impious obloquy condemn

The just decree of God, pronounced and sworn,
 That to his only Son, by right endued
 With regal sceptre, every soul in Heaven
 Shall bend the knee, and in that honour due Confess him rightful King? Unjust, thou say'st,
 Flatly unjust, to bind with laws the free,
 And equal over equals to let reign, 820
 One over all with unsucceeded power!
 Shalt thou give law to God? shalt thou dispute
 With Him the points of liberty, who made
 Thee what thou art, and formed the powers of Heaven
 Such as he pleased, and circumscribed their being?
 Yet, by experience taught, we know how good,
 And of our good and of our dignity
 How provident he is—how far from thought
 To make us less; bent rather to exalt
 Our happy state, under one head more near 830
 United. But to grant it thee unjust
 That equal over equals monarch reign:
 Thyself, though great and glorious, dost thou count,
 Or all angelic nature joined in one,
 Equal to him, begotten Son? by whom,
 As by his Word, the mighty Father made
 All things, even thee, and all the Spirits of Heaven
 By him created in their bright degrees,
 Crowned them with glory, and to their glory named
 Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers, 840
 Essential Powers; nor by his reign obscured,
 But more illustrious made; since he, the head,
 One of our number thus reduced becomes;
 His laws our laws; all honour to him done
 Returns our own. Cease, then, this impious rage,
 And tempt not these; but hasten to appease

The incensed Father and the incensed Son
While pardon may be found, in time besought.'

"So spake the fervent Angel; but his zeal
None seconded, as out of season judged, 850
Or singular and rash; whereat rejoiced
The Apostate, and more haughty thus replied:

"That we were formed, then, say'st thou? and the work
Of secondary hands, by task transferred From Father to his Son? Strange point and new!
Doctrine which we would know whence learned! Who saw
When this creation was? Remember'st thou
Thy making, while the Maker gave thee being?
We know no time when we were not as now;
Know none before us, self-begot, self-raised 860
By our own quickening power, when fatal course
Had circled his full orb, the birth mature
Of this our native Heaven, Ethereal Sons.
Our puissance is our own; our own right hand
Shall teach us highest deeds, by proof to try
Who is our equal: then thou shalt behold
Whether by supplication we intend
Address, and to begirt the Almighty throne
Beseeching or besieging. This report,
These tidings, carry to the anointed King; 870
And fly, ere evil intercept thy flight.'

"He said; and, as the sound of waters deep,
Hoarse murmur echoed to his words applause
Through the infinite host; nor less for that
The flaming Seraph, fearless, though alone,
Encompassed round with foes, thus answered bold:

"O alienate from God, O Spirit accursed,
Forsaken of all good! I see thy fall
Determined, and thy hapless crew involved

In this perfidious fraud, contagion spread 880
Both of thy crime and punishment. Henceforth
No more be troubled how to quit the yoke
Of God's Messiah ; those indulgent laws
Will not be now vouchsafed ; other decrees
Against thee are gone forth without recall ;
That golden sceptre which thou didst reject
Is now an iron rod to bruise and break
Thy disobedience. Well thou didst advise ;
Yet nor for thy advice or threats I fly
These wicked tents devoted, lest the wrath 890
Impendent, raging into sudden flame,
Distinguish not : for soon expect to feel
His thunder on thy head, devouring fire.
Then who created thee lamenting learn,
When who can uncreate thee thou shalt know.'
"So spake the Seraph Abdiel, faithful found ;
Among the faithless, faithful only he ;
Among innumerable false, unmoved,
Unshaken, unseduced, unterrified,
His loyalty he kept, his love, his zeal ; 900
Nor number nor example with him wrought
To swerve from truth, or change his constant mind,
Though single. From amidst them forth he passed,
Long way through hostile scorn, which he sustained
Superior, nor of violence feared aught ;
And with retorted scorn his back he turned
On those proud towers, to swift destruction doomed."

BOOK VI.

THE ARGUMENT.

Raphael continues to relate how Michael and Gabriel were sent forth to battle against Satan and his Angels. The first fight described : Satan and his Powers retire under night ; he calls a council ; invents devilish engines, which, in the second day's fight, put Michael and his Angels to some disorder ; but they at length, pulling up mountains, overwhelmed both the force and machines of Satan. Yet, the tumult not so ending, God, on the third day, sends Messiah his Son, for whom he had reserved the glory of that victory. He, in the power of his Father, coming to the place, and causing all his legions to stand still on either side, with his chariot and thunder driving into the midst of his enemies, pursues them, unable to resist, towards the wall of Heaven ; which opening, they leap down with horror and confusion into the place of punishment prepared for them in the deep. Messiah returns with triumph to his Father,

BOOK VI.

“ ALL night the dreadless Angel, unpursued, Through Heaven's wide champain held his way,
till Morn,

Waked by the circling Hours, with rosy hand
Unbarred the gates of light. There is a cave
Within the mount of God, fast by his throne,
Where light and darkness in perpetual round
Lodge and dislodge by turns, which makes through Heaven
Grateful vicissitude, like day and night ;
Light issues forth, and at the other door
Obsequious darkness enters, till her hour 10
To veil the Heaven, though darkness there might well
Seem twilight here. And now went forth the Morn
Such as in highest Heaven, arrayed in gold
Empyreal ; from before her vanished Night,
Shot through with orient beams ; when all the plain
Covered with thick embattled squadrons bright,
Chariots, and flaming arms, and fiery steeds,
Reflecting blaze on blaze, first met his view :
War he perceived, war in procinct, and found
Already known what he for news had thought 20
To have reported ; gladly then he mixed

Among those friendly powers, who him received
 With joy and acclamations loud, that one,
 That of so many myriads fallen yet one,
 Returned not lost. On to the sacred hill
 They led him high applauded, and present
 Before the seat supreme; from whence a voice,
 From midst a golden cloud, thus mild was heard:

““Servant of God, well done! Well hast thou fought
 The better fight, who single hast maintained 30
 Against revolted multitudes the cause
 Of truth, in word mightier than they in arms;
 And for the testimony of truth hast borne Universal reproach, far worse to bear
 Than violence; for this was all thy care—
 To stand approved in sight of God, though worlds
 Judged thee perverse. The easier conquest now Remains thee—aided by this host of friends,
 Back on thy foes more glorious to return
 Than scorned thou didst depart, and to subdue 40
 By force who reason for their law refuse,
 Right reason for their law, and for their King
 Messiah, who by right of merit reigns.
 Go, Michael, of celestial armies prince,
 And thou, in military prowess next,
 Gabriel; lead forth to battle these my sons
 Invincible; lead forth my armed Saints,
 By thousands and by millions ranged for fight,
 Equal in number to that godless crew
 Rebellious; them with fire and hostile arms 50
 Fearless assault, and, to the brow of Heaven
 Pursuing, drive them out from God and bliss,
 Into their place of punishment, the gulf
 Of Tartarus, which ready opens wide

His fiery chaos to receive their fall.'

"So spake the Sovran Voice, and clouds began
 To darken all the hill, and smoke to roll
 In dusky wreaths reluctant flames, the sign
 Of wrath awaked; nor with less dread the loud
 Ethereal trumpet from on high gan blow : 60
 At which command the powers militant
 That stood for Heaven, in mighty quadrate joined
 Of union irresistible, moved on
 In silence their bright legions, to the sound
 Of instrumental harmony, that breathed
 Heroic ardour to adventurous deeds
 Under their godlike leaders, in the cause
 Of God and his Messiah. On they move,
 Indissolubly firm; nor obvious hill,
 Nor straitening vale, nor wood, nor stream, divides 70
 Their perfect ranks; for high above the ground
 Their march was, and the passive air upbore
 Their nimble tread; as when the total kind
 Of birds, in orderly array, on wing
 Came summoned over Eden to receive
 Their names of thee; so over many a tract
 Of Heaven they marched, and many a province wide,
 Tenfold the length of this terrene. At last,
 Far in the horizon to the North, appeared
 From skirt to skirt a fiery region, stretched 80
 In battailous aspect; and, nearer view,
 Bristled with upright beams innumerable
 Of rigid spears, and helmets thronged, and shields
 Various, with boastful argument portrayed,
 The banded powers of Satan hasting on
 With furious expedition; for they weened
 That self-same day, by fight or by surprise,

To win the mount of God, and on his throne
 To set the envier of his state, the proud
 Aspirer ; but their thoughts proved fond and vain 90
 In the mid-way. Though strange to us it seemed
 At first that Angel should with Angel war,
 And in fierce hosting meet, who wont to meet
 So oft in festivals of joy and love
 Unanimous, as sons of one great Sire,
 Hymning the Eternal Father. But the shout
 Of battle now began, and rushing sound
 Of onset ended soon each milder thought.
 High in the midst, exalted as a god,
 The Apostate in his sun-bright chariot sat, 100
 Idol of majesty divine, enclosed
 With flaming Cherubim and golden shields ;
 Then lighted from his gorgeous throne, for now
 'Twixt host and host but narrow space was left,
 A dreadful interval, and front to front
 Presented stood, in terrible array
 Of hideous length. Before the cloudy van,
 On the rough edge of battle ere it joined,
 Satan, with vast and haughty strides advanced,
 Came towering, armed in adamant and gold. 110
 Abdiel that sight endured not, where he stood
 Among the mightiest, bent on highest deeds,
 And thus his own undaunted heart explores :
 "O Heaven! that such resemblance of the Highest Should yet remain, where faith and reälty Remain not! Wherefore should not strength and might There fail where virtue fails, or weakest prove
 Where boldest, though to sight unconquerable?
 His puissance, trusting in the Almighty's aid,
 I mean to try, whose reason I have tried 120

Unsound and false; nor is it aught but just
 That he who in debate of truth hath won
 Should win in arms, in both disputes alike
 Victor; though brutish that contest and foul,
 When reason hath to deal with force, yet so
 Most reason is that reason overcome.'

"So pondering, and from his armed peers
 Forth-stepping opposite, half-way he met
 His daring foe, at this prevention more
 Incensed, and thus securely him defied: 130

"'Proud, art thou met? Thy hope was to have reached
 The highth of thy aspiring unopposed,
 The throne of God unguarded, and his side
 Abandoned at the terror of thy power
 Or potent tongue. Fool! not to think how vain
 Against the Omnipotent to rise in arms;
 Who, out of smallest things, could without end
 Have raised incessant armies to defeat
 Thy folly; or with solitary hand,
 Reaching beyond all limit, at one blow, 140
 Unaided could have finished thee, and whelmed
 Thy legions under darkness! But thou seest
 All are not of thy train; there be who faith
 Prefer, and piety to God, though then
 To thee not visible when I alone
 Seemed in thy world erroneous to dissent
 From all: my sect thou seest; now learn too late
 How few sometimes may know, when thousands err.'

"Whom the grand Foe, with scornful eye askance,
 Thus answered: 'Ill for thee, but in wished hour 150
 Of my revenge, first sought for, thou return'st
 From flight, seditious Angel, to receive
 Thy merited reward, the first assay

Of this right hand provoked, since first that tongue,
 Inspired with contradiction, durst oppose
 A third part of the gods, in synod met
 Their deities to assert; who, while they feel Vigour divine within them, can allow Omnipotence to none. But well thou com'st
 Before thy fellows, ambitious to win 160
 From me some plume, that thy success may show Destruction to the rest. This pause between (Unanswered lest thou boast) to let thee know—
 At first I thought that liberty and Heaven
 To heavenly souls had been all one; but now
 I see that most through sloth had rather serve,
 Ministering Spirits, trained up in feast and song:
 Such hast thou armed, the minstrelsy of Heaven,
 Servility with freedom to contend,
 As both their deeds compared this day shall prove.' 170
 "To whom, in brief, thus Abdiel stern replied:
 'Apostate! still thou err'st, nor end wilt find
 Of erring, from the path of truth remote.
 Unjustly thou depriv'st it with the name
 Of servitude, to serve whom God ordains,
 Or Nature: God and Nature bid the same,
 When he who rules is worthiest, and excels
 Them whom he governs. This is servitude,
 To serve the unwise, or him who hath rebelled
 Against his worthier, as thine now serve thee, 180
 Thyself not free, but to thyself enthralled;
 Yet lewdly dar'st our ministering upbraid.
 Reign thou in Hell, thy kingdom; let me serve
 In Heaven God ever blest, and his divine
 Behests obey, worthiest to be obeyed;
 Yet chains in Hell, not realms, expect: meanwhile,

From me returned, as erst thou saidst, from flight,
This greeting on thy impious crest receive.'

"So saying, a noble stroke he lifted high,
Which hung not, but so swift with tempest fell 190

On the proud crest of Satan that no sight,
Nor motion of swift thought, less could his shield,
Such ruin intercept. Ten paces huge

He back recoiled; the tenth on bended knee

His massy spear upstayed: as if, on Earth,

Winds under ground, or waters forcing way,

Sidelong had pushed a mountain from his seat,

Half-sunk with all his pines. Amazement seized

The rebel Thrones, but greater rage, to see

Thus foiled their mightiest; ours joy filled, and shout,

Presage of victory, and fierce desire 201

Of battle: whereat Michael bid sound

The Archangel trumpet; through the vast of Heaven

It sounded, and the faithful armies rung

Hosannah to the Highest; nor stood at gaze

The adverse legions, nor less hideous joined

The horrid shock. Now storming fury rose,

And clamour such as heard in Heaven till now

Was never; arms on armour clashing brayed

Horrible discord, and the madding wheels 210

Of brazen chariots raged; dire was the noise

Of conflict; overhead the dismal hiss

Of fiery darts in flaming volleys flew,

And, flying, vaulted either host with fire.

So under fiery cope together rushed

Both battles main, with ruinous assault

And inextinguishable rage; all Heaven

Resounded, and, had Earth been then, all Earth

Had to her centre shook. What wonder, when

Millions of fierce encountering Angels fought 220
On either side, the least of whom could wield
These elements, and arm him with the force
Of all their regions? How much more of power
Army against army numberless to raise Dreadful combustion warring, and disturb,
Though not destroy, their happy native seat!
Had not the Eternal King Omnipotent
From his stronghold of Heaven high overruled
And limited their might; though numbered such
As each divided legion might have seemed 230
A numerous host; in strength each armed hand
A legion; led in fight, yet leader seemed
Each warrior single as in chief—expert
When to advance, or stand, or turn the sway
Of battle, open when, and when to close
The ridges of grim war. No thought of flight,
None of retreat, no unbecoming deed
That argued fear; each on himself relied,
As only in his arm the moment lay
Of victory. Deeds of eternal fame 240
Were done, but infinite; for wide was spread
That war, and various: sometimes on firm ground
A standing fight; then, soaring on main wing,
Tormented all the air; all air seemed then Conflicting fire. Long time in even scale
The battle hung; till Satan, who that day
Prodigious power had shown, and met in arms
No equal, ranging through the dire attack
Of fighting Seraphim confused, at length
Saw where the sword of Michael smote, and felled 250
Squadrons at once: with huge two-handed sway
Brandished aloft the horrid edge came down

Wide-wasting; such destruction to withstand
 He hasted, and opposed the rocky orb
 Of tenfold adamant, his ample shield,
 A vast circumference. At his approach
 The great Archangel from his warlike toil
 Surceased, and, glad, as hoping here to end
 Intestine war in Heaven, the Arch-foe subdued
 Or captive dragged in chains, with hostile frown
 And visage all inflamed, first thus began: 260

“‘Author of evil, unknown till thy revolt,
 Unnamed in Heaven, now plenteous as thou seest
 These acts of hateful strife, hateful to all,
 Though heaviest, by just measure, on thyself
 And thy adherents: how hast thou disturbed
 Heaven’s blessed peace, and into Nature brought Misery, uncreated till the crime
 Of thy rebellion! how hast thou instilled
 Thy malice into thousands, once upright 270
 And faithful, now proved false! But think not here
 To trouble holy rest; Heaven casts thee out
 From all her confines; Heaven, the seat of bliss,
 Brooks not the works of violence and war.
 Hence, then, and evil go with thee along,
 Thy offspring, to the place of evil, Hell,
 Thou and thy wicked crew! there mingle broils,
 Ere this avenging sword begin thy doom,
 Or some more sudden vengeance, winged from God,
 Precipitate thee with augmented pain.’ 280

“So spake the prince of Angels; to whom thus
 The Adversary: ‘Nor think thou with wind
 Of airy threats to awe whom yet with deeds
 Thou canst not. Hast thou turned the least of these
 To flight—or, if to fall, but that they rise

SATANAL WAS WINNING

Unvanquished—easier to transact with me
 That thou shouldst hope, imperious, and with threats
 To chase me hence? Err not that so shall end
 The strife which thou call'st evil, but we style
 The strife of glory; which we mean to win, 290
 Or turn this Heaven itself into the Hell
 Thou fablest; here, however, to dwell free,
 If not to reign. Meanwhile, thy utmost force
 (And join him named Almighty to thy aid)
 I fly not, but have sought thee far and nigh.'

“They ended parle, and both addressed for fight
 Unspeakable; for who, though with the tongue
 Of Angels, can relate, or to what things
 Liken on Earth conspicuous, that may lift
 Human imagination to such highth 300
 Of godlike power? for likest gods they seemed,
 Stood they or moved, in stature, motion, arms,
 Fit to decide the empire of great Heaven.
 Now waved their fiery swords, and in the air
 Made horrid circles; two broad suns their shields
 Blazed opposite, while Expectation stood
 In horror; from each hand with speed retired,
 Where erst was thickest fight, the angelic throng,
 And left large field, unsafe within the wind
 Of such commotion: such as (to set forth 310 Great things by small) if, Nature's concord broke,
 Among the constellations war were sprung,
 Two planets, rushing from aspect malign
 Of fiercest opposition, in mid sky
 Should combat, and their jarring spheres confound.
 Together both, with next to almighty arm
 Uplifted imminent, one stroke they aimed
 That might determine, and not need repeat,

As not of power at once ; nor odds appeared
 In might or swift prevention. But the sword 320
 Of Michael from the armour of God
 Was given him tempered so, that neither keen
 Nor solid might resist that edge: it met
 The sword of Satan, with steep force to smite Descending, and in half cut sheer ; nor stayed,
 But, with swift wheel reverse, deep entering shared
 All his right side. Then Satan first knew pain,
 And writhed him to and fro convolved ; so sore
 The griding sword with discontinuous wound
 Passed through him ; but the ethereal substance closed, 330
 Not long divisible, and from the gash
 A stream of nectarous humour issuing flowed
 Sanguine, such as celestial Spirits may bleed,
 And all his armour stained, erewhile so bright.
 Forthwith on all sides to his aid was run
 By Angels many and strong, who interposed
 Defence, while others bore him on their shields
 Back to his chariot, where it stood retired
 From off the files of war ; there they him laid Gnashing for anguish, and despite, and shame 340
 To find himself not matchless, and his pride
 Humbled by such rebuke, so far beneath
 His confidence to equal God in power.
 Yet soon he healed ; for Spirits, that live throughout Vital in every part—not, as frail Man,
 In entrails, heart or head, liver or reins—
 Cannot but by annihilating die ;
 Nor in their liquid texture mortal wound
 Receive, no more than can the fluid air :
 All heart they live, all head, all eye, all ear, 350
 All intellect, all sense ; and as they please

They limb themselves, and colour, shape, or size
Assume, as likes them best, condense or rare.

“Meanwhile, in other parts, like deeds deserved
Memorial, where the might of Gabriel fought,
And with fierce ensigns pierced the deep array
Of Moloch, furious king, who him defied,
And at his chariot-wheels to drag him bound Threatened, nor from the Holy One of Heaven
Refrained his tongue blasphemous; but anon, 360
Down cloven to the waist, with shattered arms
And uncouth pain fled bellowing. On each wing
Uriel and Raphael his vaunting foe,
Though huge and in a rock of diamond armed,
Vanquished—Adramelech and Asmadai,
Two potent Thrones, that to be less than gods
Disdained, but meaner thoughts learned in their flight,
Mangled with ghastly wounds through plate and mail.
Nor stood unmindful Abdiel to annoy
The atheist crew, but with redoubled blow 370
Ariel, and Arioch, and the violence
Of Ramiel, scorched and blasted, overthrew.
I might relate of thousands, and their names
Eternize here on Earth; but those elect
Angels, contented with their fame in Heaven,
Seek not the praise of men: the other sort,
In might though wondrous and in acts of war,
Nor of renown less eager, yet by doom
Cancelled from Heaven and sacred memory,
Nameless in dark oblivion let them dwell, 380
For strength from truth divided, and from just,
Illaudable, nought merits but disgrace
And ignominy, yet to glory aspiring,
Vain-glorious, and through infamy to fame:

Therefore eternal silence be their doom.

“And now, their mightiest quelled, the battle swerved,
 With many an inroad gored; deformed rout
 Entered, and foul disorder; all the ground
 With shivered armour strown, and on a heap
 Chariot and charioteer lay overturned, 390
 And fiery foaming steeds; what stood recoiled,
 O'er-wearied, through the faint Satanic host,
 Defensive scarce, or with pale fear surprised,
 Then first with fear surprised and sense of pain,
 Fled ignominious, to such evil brought
 By sin of disobedience; till that hour
 Not liable to fear, or flight, or pain.
 Far otherwise the inviolable Saints
 In cubic phalanx firm advanced entire,
 Invulnerable, impenetrably armed; 400
 Such high advantages their innocence
 Gave them above their foes—not to have sinned,
 Not to have disobeyed; in fight they stood
 Unwearied, unobnoxious to be pained
 By wound, though from their place by violence moved.

“Now Night her course began, and, over Heaven
 Inducing darkness, grateful truce imposed,
 And silence on the odious din of war;
 Under her cloudy covert both retired,
 Victor and vanquished. On the foughten field 410
 Michael and his Angels prevalent
 Encamping placed in guard their watches round,
 Cherubic waving fires: on the other part,
 Satan with his rebellious disappeared,
 Far in the dark dislodged, and, void of rest,
 His potentates to council called by night,
 And in the midst thus undismayed began:

“‘O now in danger tried, now known in arms
 Not to be overpowered, companions dear,
 Found worthy not of liberty alone, 420
 Too mean pretence, but, what we more affect,
 Honour, dominion, glory, and renown ;
 Who have sustained one day in doubtful fight
 (And if one day, why not eternal days?)
 What Heaven’s Lord had powerfullest to send Against us from about his throne, and judged Sufficient to subdue us to his will,
 But proves not so : then fallible, it seems,
 Of future we may deem him, though till now
 Omniscient thought. True is, less firmly armed, 430
 Some disadvantage we endured, and pain
 Till now not known, but, known, as soon contemned ;
 Since now we find this our empyreal form
 Incapable of mortal injury,
 Imperishable, and, though pierced with wound,
 Soon closing, and by native vigour healed.
 Of evil, then, so small as easy think
 The remedy : perhaps more valid arms,
 Weapons more violent, when next we meet,
 May serve to better us and worse our foes, 440
 Or equal what between us made the odds,
 In nature none : if other hidden cause
 Left them superior, while we can preserve
 Unhurt our minds, and understanding sound,
 Due search and consultation will disclose.’
 “He sat ; and in the assembly next upstood
 Nisroch, of Principalities the prime ;
 As one he stood escaped from cruel fight,
 Sore toiled, his riven arms to havoc hewn,
 And, cloudy in aspect, thus answering spake : 450

"Deliverer from new Lords, leader to free
 Enjoyment of our right as gods! yet hard
 For gods, and too unequal work, we find
 Against unequal arms to fight in pain,
 Against unpained, impassive; from which evil
 Ruin must needs ensue; for what avails
 Valour or strength, though matchless, quelled with pain,
 Which all subdues, and makes remiss the hands
 Of mightiest? Sense of pleasure we may well
 Spare out of life perhaps, and not repine, 460
 But live content, which is the calmest life;
 But pain is perfect misery, the worst
 Of evils, and, excessive, overturns
 All patience. He who, therefore, can invent
 With what more forcible we may offend
 Our yet unwounded enemies, or arm
 Ourselves with like defence, to me deserves
 No less than for deliverance what we owe.'

"Whereto, with look composed, Satan replied:
 'Not uninvented that, which thou aright 470
 Believ'st so main to our success, I bring.
 Which of us who beholds the bright surface
 Of this ethereous mould whereon we stand—
 This continent of spacious Heaven, adorned
 With plant, fruit, flower ambrosial, gems and gold—
 Whose eye so superficially surveys
 These things, as not to mind from whence they grow
 Deep under ground, materials dark and crude,
 Of spiritous and fiery spume, till touched
 With Heaven's ray, and tempered, they shoot forth 480
 So beauteous, opening to the ambient light?
 These in their dark nativity the deep
 Shall yield us, pregnant with infernal flame;

Which, into hollow engines long and round
 Thick-rammed, at the other bore with touch of fire
 Dilated and infuriate, shall send forth
 From far, with thundering noise, among our foes
 Such implements of mischief as shall dash
 To pieces and o'erwhelm whatever stands
 Adverse, that they shall fear we have disarmed 490
 The Thunderer of his only dreaded bolt.
 Nor long shall be our labour; yet ere dawn
 Effect shall end our wish. Meanwhile revive;
 Abandon fear; to strength and counsel joined Think nothing hard, much less to be despaired.'

“He ended; and his words their drooping cheer
 Enlightened, and their languished hope revived.
 The invention all admired, and each how he
 To be the inventor missed; so easy it seemed Once found, which yet unfound most would have thought Impossible. Yet, haply, of thy race, 501
 In future days, if malice should abound,
 Some one intent on mischief, or inspired
 With devilish machination, might devise
 Like instrument to plague the sons of men
 For sin, on war and mutual slaughter bent.
 Forthwith from council to the work they flew;
 None arguing stood; innumerable hands
 Were ready; in a moment up they turned Wide the celestial soil, and saw beneath 510
 The originals of Nature in their crude
 Conception; sulphurous and nitrous foam
 They found, they mingled, and, with subtle art
 Concocted and adusted, they reduced
 To blackest grain, and into store conveyed.
 Part hidden veins digged up (nor hath this Earth

Entrails unlike) of mineral and stone,
 Whereof to found their engines and their balls
 Of missive ruin; part incentive reed
 Provide, pernicious with one touch to fire. 520
 So all ere day-spring, under conscious night,
 Secret they finished, and in order set,
 With silent circumspection, unespied.

“Now when fair Morn orient in Heaven appeared,
 Up rose the victor Angels, and to arms
 The matin trumpet sung: in arms they stood
 Of golden panoply, refulgent host,
 Soon banded; others from the dawning hills
 Looked round, and scouts each coast light-armed scour,
 Each quarter, to descry the distant foe,
 Where lodged, or whither fled, or if for fight,
 In motion or in halt. Him soon they met
 Under spread ensigns moving nigh, in slow
 But firm battalion; back with speediest sail,
 Zophiel, of Cherubim the swiftest wing,
 Came flying, and in mid air aloud thus cried:

“‘Arm, warriors, arm for fight! The foe at hand,
 Whom fled we thought, will save us long pursuit
 This day; fear not his flight; so thick a cloud
 He comes, and settled in his face I see 540
 Sad resolution and secure. Let each
 His adamantine coat gird well, and each
 Fit well his helm, gripe fast his orbéd shield,
 Borne even or high; for this day will pour down,
 If I conjecture aught, no drizzling shower,
 But rattling storm of arrows barbed with fire.’

“So warned he them, aware themselves, and soon
 In order, quit of all impediment;
 Instant, without disturb, they took alarm,

Next morning
 530

And onward move embattled: when, behold! 550
 Not distant far, with heavy pace the foe
 Approaching gross and huge; in hollow cube
 Training his devilish enginry, impaled
 On every side with shadowing squadrons deep,
 To hide the fraud. At interview both stood
 A while; but suddenly at head appeared
 Satan, and thus was heard commanding loud:
 "Vanguard, to right and left the front unfold,
 That all may see who hate us, how we seek Peace and composure, and with open breast 560
 Stand ready to receive them, if they like
 Our overture, and turn not back perverse;
 But that I doubt: however, witness Heaven!
 Heaven, witness thou anon! while we discharge Freely our part. Ye, who appointed stand,
 Do as you have in charge, and briefly touch
 What we propound, and loud that all may hear.'
 "So scoffing in ambiguous words, he scarce
 Had ended, when to right and left the front Divided, and to either flank retired; 570
 Which to our eyes discovered, new and strange,
 A triple mounted row of pillars laid
 On wheels (for like to pillars most they seemed,
 Or hollowed bodies made of oak or fir,
 With branches lopt, in wood or mountain felled),
 Brass, iron, stony mould, had not their mouths
 With hideous orifice gaped on us wide,
 Portending hollow truce. At each behind
 A Seraph stood, and in his hand a reed
 Stood waving tipt with fire; while we, suspense, 580
 Collected stood within our thoughts amused;
 Not long, for sudden all, at once, their reeds

Put forth, and to a narrow vent applied
 With nicest touch. Immediate in a flame,
 But soon obscured with smoke, all Heaven appeared,
 From those deep-throated engines belched, whose roar
 Embowelled with outrageous noise the air,
 And all her entrails tore, disgorging foul
 Their devilish glut, chained thunderbolts and hail
 Of iron globes; which, on the victor host 590
 Levelled, with such impetuous fury smote,
 That whom they hit none on their feet might stand,
 Though standing else as rocks, but down they fell
 By thousands, Angel on Archangel rolled,
 The sooner for their arms: unarmed, they might Have easily, as Spirits, evaded swift
 By quick contraction or remove; but now
 Foul dissipation followed, and forced rout;
 Nor served it to relax their serried files.
 What should they do? If on they rushed, repulse 600
 Repeated, and indecent overthrow
 Doubled, would render them yet more despised,
 And to their foes a laughter; for in view
 Stood ranked of Seraphim another row,
 In posture to displode their second tire
 Of thunder; back defeated to return
 They worse abhorred. Satan beheld their plight,
 And to his mates thus in derision called:
 "O friends, why come not on these victors proud?
 Erewhile they fierce were coming; and when we, 610
 To entertain them fair with open front
 And breast (what could we more?), propounded terms
 Of composition, straight they changed their minds,
 Flew off, and into strange vagaries fell,
 As they would dance: yet for a dance they seemed

Somewhat extravagant and wild, perhaps
 For joy of offered peace. But I suppose,
 If our proposals once again were heard,
 We should compel them to a quick result.'

"To whom thus Belial, in like gamesome mood: 620
 'Leader, the terms we sent were terms of weight,
 Of hard contents, and full of force urged home,
 Such as we might perceive amused them all,
 And stumbled many: who receives them right
 Had need from head to foot well understand;
 Not understood, this gift they have besides,
 They show us when our foes walk not upright.'

"So they among themselves in pleasant vein
 Stood scoffing, hightened in their thoughts beyond
 All doubt of victory; Eternal Might 630
 To match with their inventions they presumed
 So easy, and of his thunder made a scorn,
 And all his host derided, while they stood
 A while in trouble: but they stood not long;
 Rage prompted them at length, and found them arms
 Against such hellish mischief fit to oppose.
 Forthwith (behold the excellence, the power,
 Which God hath in his mighty Angels placed!)
 Their arms away they threw, and to the hills
 (For Earth hath this variety from Heaven 640
 Of pleasure situate in hill and dale)
 Light as the lightning-glimpse they ran, they flew;
 From their foundations loosening to and fro,
 They plucked the seated hills, with all their load,
 Rocks, waters, woods, and by the shaggy tops
 Uplifting bore them in their hands. Amaze,
 Be sure, and terror seized the rebel host,
 When coming towards them so dread they saw

The bottom of the mountains upward turned ;
 Till on those cursed engines' triple row 650
 They saw them whelmed, and all their confidence
 Under the weight of mountains buried deep ;
 Themselves invaded next, and on their heads
 Main promontories flung, which in the air
 Came shadowing, and oppressed whole legions armed.
 Their armour helped their harm, crushed in and bruised
 Into their substance pent, which wrought them pain
 Implacable, and many a dolorous groan,
 Long struggling underneath, ere they could wind
 Out of such prison, though Spirits of purest light, 660
 Purest at first, now gross by sinning grown.
 The rest, in imitation, to like arms
 Betook them, and the neighbouring hills uptore ;
 So hills amid the air encountered hills,
 Hurl'd to and fro with jaculation dire,
 That underground they fought in dismal shade ;
 Infernal noise ! war seem'd a civil game
 To this uproar ; horrid confusion heaped
 Upon confusion rose. And now all Heaven
 Had gone to wrack, with ruin overspread, 670
 Had not the Almighty Father, where he sits Shrined in his sanctuary of Heaven secure,
 Consulting on the sum of things, foreseen
 This tumult, and permitted all, advised,
 That his great purpose he might so fulfil,
 To honour his anointed Son, avenged
 Upon his enemies, and to declare
 All power on him transferred : whence to his Son,
 The assessor of his throne, he thus began :
 " "Effulgence of my glory, Son beloved, 680
 Son in whose face invisible is beheld

Visibly, what by Deity I am,
 And in whose hand what by decree I do,
 Second Omnipotence! two days are passed,
 Two days, as we compute the days of Heaven,
 Since Michael and his powers went forth to tame
 These disobedient. Sore hath been their fight,
 As likeliest was when two such foes met armed;
 For to themselves I left them; and thou know'st,
 Equal in their creation they were formed, 690
 Save what sin hath impaired—which yet hath wrought
 Insensibly, for I suspend their doom:
 Whence in perpetual fight they needs must last
 Endless, and no solution will be found.
 War wearied hath performed what war can do,
 And to disordered rage let loose the reins,
 With mountains, as with weapons, armed; which makes Wild work in Heaven, and dangerous to the main.
 Two days are, therefore, passed, the third is thine:
 For thee I have ordained it, and thus far 700
 Have suffered, that the glory may be thine
 Of ending this great war, since none but thou
 Can end it. Into thee such virtue and grace
 Immense I have transfused, that all may know
 In Heaven and Hell thy power above compare;
 And this perverse commotion governed thus,
 To manifest thee worthiest to be Heir
 Of all things—to be Heir and to be King
 By sacred unction, thy deserved right.
 Go, then, thou Mightiest, in thy Father's might; 710
 Ascend my chariot, guide the rapid wheels
 That shake Heaven's basis; bring forth all my war,
 My bow and thunder, my almighty arms
 Gird on, and sword upon thy puissant thigh;

Pursue these Sons of Darkness, drive them out
 From all Heaven's bounds into the utter deep;
 There let them learn, as likes them, to despise
 God and Messiah his anointed King.'

"He said, and on his Son with rays direct Shone full; he all his Father full expressed 720
 Ineffably into his face received;

And thus the Filial Godhead answering spake:

"O Father, O Supreme of Heavenly Thrones,
 First, Highest, Holiest, Best, thou always seek'st
 To glorify thy Son; I always thee,
 As is most just. This I my glory account,
 My exaltation, and my whole delight,
 That thou in me well pleased declar'st thy will Fulfilled, which to fulfil is all my bliss.

Sceptre and power, thy giving, I assume, 730

And gladlier shall resign, when in the end
 Thou shalt be all in all, and I in thee

For ever, and in me all whom thou lov'st:

But whom thou hat'st I hate, and can put on

Thy terrors, as I put thy mildness on,

Image of thee in all things; and shall soon,

Armed with thy might, rid Heaven of these rebelled,

To their prepared ill mansion driven down,

To chains of darkness and the undying worm,

That from thy just obedience could revolt, 740

Whom to obey is happiness entire.

Then shall thy Saints, unmixed, and from the impure

Far separate, circling thy holy mount,

Unfeigned halleluiahs to thee sing,

Hymns of high praise, and I among them chief.'

"So said, he, o'er his sceptre bowing, rose

From the right hand of Glory where he sat;

And the third sacred morn began to shine,
 Dawning through Heaven. Forth rushed with whirlwind sound
 The chariot of Paternal Deity, 750
 Flashing thick flames, wheel within wheel, undrawn,
 Itself instinct with spirit, but convoyed
 By four Cherubic shapes. Four faces each
 Had wondrous; as with stars, their bodies all
 And wings were set with eyes; with eyes the wheels
 Of beryl, and careering fires between;
 Over their heads a crystal firmament,
 Whereon a sapphire throne, inlaid with pure
 Amber and colours of the showery arch.
 He, in celestial panoply all armed 760
 Of radiant Urim, work divinely wrought,
 Ascended; at his right hand Victory
 Sat eagle-winged; beside him hung his bow
 And quiver with three-bolted thunder stored;
 And from about him fierce effusion rolled
 Of smoke, and bickering flame, and sparkles dire.
 Attended with ten thousand thousand Saints,
 He onward came; far off his coming shone;
 And twenty thousand (I their number heard)
 Chariots of God, half on each hand, were seen. 770
 He on the wings of Cherub rode sublime
 On the crystalline sky, in sapphire throned,
 Illustrious far and wide, but by his own
 First seen; them unexpected joy surprised
 When the great ensign of Messiah blazed
 Aloft by Angels borne, his sign in Heaven;
 Under whose conduct Michael soon reduced
 His army, circumfused on either wing,
 Under their Head embodied all in one.

Before him Power Divine his way prepared ; 780
 At his command the uprooted hills retired
 Each to his place ; they heard his voice, and went Obsequious ; Heaven his wonted face renewed,
 And with fresh flowerets hill and valley smiled.

“This saw his hapless foes, but stood obdured,
 And to rebellious fight rallied their powers,
 Insensate, hope conceiving from despair.
 In Heavenly Spirits could such perverseness dwell?
 But to convince the proud what signs avail,
 Or wonders move the obdurate to relent? 790
 They, hardened more by what might most reclaim,
 Grieving to see his glory, at the sight
 Took envy, and, aspiring to his highth,
 Stood re-embattled fierce, by force or fraud
 Weening to prosper, and at length prevail
 Against God and Messiah, or to fall
 In universal ruin last ; and now
 To final battle drew, disdaining flight,
 Or faint retreat : when the great Son of God
 To all his host on either hand thus spake : 800

“Stand still in bright array, ye Saints ; here stand,
 Ye Angels armed ; this day from battle rest.
 Faithful hath been your warfare, and of God
 Accepted, fearless in his righteous cause ;
 And as ye have received, so have ye done,
 Invincibly. But of this cursed crew
 The punishment to other hand belongs ;
 Vengeance is his, or whose he sole appoints :
 Number to this day’s work is not ordained,
 Nor multitude ; stand only and behold 810
 God’s indignation on these godless poured
 By me ; not you, but me, they have despised,

Yet envied ; against me is all their rage,
 Because the Father, to whom in Heaven supreme Kingdom and power and glory appertains,
 Hath honoured me, according to his will.
 Therefore to me their doom he hath assigned,
 That they may have their wish, to try with me
 In battle which the stronger proves—they all,
 Or I alone against them ; since by strength
 They measure all, of other excellence
 Not emulous, nor care who them excels ;
 Nor other strife with them do I vouchsafe.’

820

“So spake the Son, and into terror changed
 His countenance, too severe to be beheld,
 And full of wrath bent on his enemies.

At once the Four spread out their starry wings
 With dreadful shade contiguous, and the orbs
 Of his fierce chariot rolled, as with the sound
 Of torrent floods, or of a numerous host.

830

He on his impious foes right onward drove,
 Gloomy as night ; under his burning wheels
 The steadfast Empyrean shook throughout,
 All but the throne itself of God. Full soon
 Among them he arrived, in his right hand
 Grasping ten thousand thunders, which he sent
 Before him, such as in their souls infix'd
 Plagues ; they, astonished, all resistance lost,
 All courage ; down their idle weapons dropt ;
 O'er shields, and helms, and helmed heads he rode
 Of Thrones and mighty Seraphim prostrate,
 That wish'd the mountains now might be again
 Thrown on them, as a shelter from his ire.
 Nor less on either side tempestuous fell
 His arrows, from the fourfold-visaged Four,

840

Distinct with eyes, and from the living wheels,
 Distinct alike with multitude of eyes ;
 One spirit in them ruled, and every eye
 Glared lightning, and shot forth pernicious fire
 Among the accursed, that withered all their strength, 850
 And of their wonted vigour left them drained,
 Exhausted, spiritless, afflicted, fallen.
 Yet half his strength he put not forth, but checked
 His thunder in mid-volley ; for he meant
 Not to destroy, but root them out of Heaven.
 The overthrown he raised, and, as a herd
 Of goats or timorous flock together thronged,
 Drove them before him thunderstruck, pursued
 With terrors and with furies to the bounds
 And crystal wall of Heaven ; which, opening wide, 860
 Rolled inward, and a spacious gap disclosed
 Into the wasteful deep. The monstrous sight
 Strook them with horror backward, but far worse
 Urged them behind ; headlong themselves they threw Down from the verge of Heaven ; eternal wrath
 Burned after them to the bottomless pit.

“ Hell heard the unsufferable noise ; Hell saw Heaven ruining from Heaven, and would have fled Affrighted ; but strict Fate had cast too deep
 Her dark foundations, and too fast had bound. 870
 Nine days they fell ; confounded Chaos roared,
 And felt tenfold confusion in their fall
 Through his wild anarchy ; so huge a rout
 Encumbered him with ruin. Hell at last,
 Yawning, received them whole, and on them closed ;
 Hell, their fit habitation, fraught with fire
 Unquenchable, the house of woe and pain.
 Disburdened Heaven rejoiced, and soon repaired

Her mural breach, returning whence it rolled.
 Sole victor, from the expulsion of his foes 880
 Messiah his triumphal chariot turned.
 To meet him all his Saints, who silent stood Eye-witnesses of his almighty acts,
 With jubilee advanced; and as they went,
 Shaded with branching palm, each order bright
 Sung triumph, and him sung victorious King,
 Son, Heir, and Lord, to him dominion given,
 Worthiest to reign. He, celebrated, rode Triumphant through mid Heaven, into the courts
 And temple of his mighty Father throned 890
 On high; who into glory him received,
 Where now he sits at the right hand of bliss.

"Thus, measuring things in Heaven by things on Earth,
 At thy request, and that thou may'st beware
 By what is past, to thee I have revealed
 What might have else to human race been hid;
 The discord which befell, and war in Heaven
 Among the angelic powers, and the deep fall
 Of those too high aspiring, who rebelled
 With Satan: he who envies now thy state, 900
 Who now is plotting how he may seduce
 Thee also from obedience, that, with him
 Bereaved of happiness, thou may'st partake
 His punishment, eternal misery;
 Which would be all his solace and revenge,
 As a despite done against the Most High,
 Thee once to gain companion of his woe.
 But listen not to his temptations; warn
 Thy weaker; let it profit thee to have heard,
 By terrible example, the reward 910
 Of disobedience. Firm they might have stood,
 Yet fell; remember, and fear to transgress."

BOOK VII.

THE ARGUMENT.

Raphael, at the request of Adam, relates how and wherefore this World was first created: that God, after the expelling of Satan and his Angels out of Heaven, declared his pleasure to create another World, and other creatures to dwell therein; sends his Son with glory, and attendance of Angels, to perform the work of creation in six days: the Angels celebrate with hymns the performance thereof, and his reascension into Heaven.

BOOK VII.

DESCEND from Heaven, Urania, by that name
If rightly thou art called, whose voice divine
Following, above the Olympian hill I soar,
Above the flight of Pegasean wing!
The meaning, not the name, I call; for thou
Nor of the Muses nine, nor on the top
Of old Olympus dwell'st; but Heavenly-born,
Before the hills appeared or fountain flowed,
Thou with eternal Wisdom didst converse,
Wisdom thy sister, and with her didst play
In presence of the Almighty Father, pleased
With thy celestial song. Up led by thee,
Into the Heaven of Heavens I have presumed,
An earthly guest, and drawn empyreal air,
Thy tempering: with like safety guided down,
Return me to my native element;
Lest from this flying steed unreined (as once Bellerophón, though from a lower clime)
Dismounted, on the Aleian field I fall,
Erroneous there to wander and forlorn.
Half yet remains unsung, but narrower bound
Within the visible diurnal sphere.

10

20

Standing on Earth, not rapt above the pole,
 More safe I sing with mortal voice, unchanged
 To hoarse or mute, though fallen on evil days,
 On evil days though fallen, and evil tongues ;
 In darkness, and with dangers compassed round,
 And solitude ; yet not alone, while thou
 Visit'st my slumbers nightly, or when morn
 Purples the east. Still govern thou my song,
Urania, and fit audience find, though few ;
 But drive far off the barbarous dissonance
 Of Bacchus and his revellers, the race
 Of that wild rout that tore the Thracian bard
 In Rhodope, where woods and rocks had ears
 To rapture, till the savage clamour drowned
 Both harp and voice ; nor could the Muse defend
 Her son. So fail not thou who thee implores ;
 For thou art Heavenly, she an empty dream.

30

Say, Goddess, what ensued when Raphael,
The affable Archangel, had forewarned
 Adam by dire example to beware
 Apostasy, by what befell in Heaven
 To those apostates, lest the like befall
 In Paradise to Adam or his race,
 Charged not to touch the interdicted Tree,
 If they transgress, and slight that sole command,
 So easily obeyed amid the choice
 Of all tastes else to please their appetite,
 Though wandering. He with his consorted Eve
 The story heard attentive, and was filled
 With admiration and deep muse, to hear
 Of things so high and strange, things to their thought
 So unimaginable as hate in Heaven,
 And war so near the peace of God in bliss,

40

50

With such confusion ; but the evil, soon
 Driven back, redounded as a flood on those
 From whom it sprung, impossible to mix
 With blessedness. Whence Adam soon repealed
 The doubts that in his heart arose ; and now 60
 Led on, yet sinless, with desire to know
 What nearer might concern him, how this World
Of Heaven and Earth conspicuous first began ;
When, and whereof, created ; for what cause ;
 What within Edén, or without, was done
 Before his memory—as one whose drouth
 Yet scarce allayed still eyes the current stream,
 Whose liquid murmur heard new thirst excites—
 Proceeded thus to ask his Heavenly guest :
 “Great things, and full of wonder in our ears, 70
 Far differing from this World, thou hast revealed,
 Divine interpreter ! by favour sent Down from the Empyrean to forewarn
 Us timely of what might else have been our loss,
 Unknown, which human knowledge could not reach ;
 For which to the infinitely Good we owe Immortal thanks, and his admonishment
 Receive with solemn purpose to observe
 Immutably his sovran will, the end
 Of what we are. But, since thou hast vouchsafed 80
 Gently, for our instruction, to impart
 Things above earthly thought, which yet concerned
 Our knowing, as to highest Wisdom seemed,
 Deign to descend now lower, and relate
 What may no less perhaps avail us known :
 How first began this heaven which we behold
 Distant so high, with moving fires adorned Innumerable ; and this which yields or fills

All space, the ambient air wide interfused,
 Embracing round this florid Earth; what cause 90
 Moved the Creator, in his holy rest
 Through all eternity, so late to build
 In Chaos; and the work begun how soon
 Absolved; if unforbid thou may'st unfold
 What we not to explore the secrets ask
 Of his eternal empire, but the more
 To magnify his works the more we know.
 And the great light of day yet wants to run
 Much of his race, though steep; suspense in heaven,
 Held by thy voice, thy potent voice, he hears, 100
 And longer will delay to hear thee tell
 His generation, and the rising birth
 Of Nature from the unapparent Deep;
 Or if the star of evening and the moon
 Haste to thy audience, Night with her will bring Silence, and Sleep listening to thee will watch;
 Or we can bid his absence till thy song
 End, and dismiss thee ere the morning shine."

Thus Adam his illustrious guest besought;
 And thus the godlike Angel answered mild: 110
 "This also thy request, with caution asked,
 Obtain; though to recount almighty works
 What words or tongue of Seraph can suffice,
 Or heart of man suffice to comprehend?
 Yet what thou canst attain, which best may serve
 To glorify the Maker, and infer
 Thee also happier, shall not be withheld
 Thy hearing; such commission from above
I have received, to answer thy desire
Of knowledge within bounds; beyond abstain 120
To ask, nor let thine own inventions hope

Things not revealed, which the invisible King,
 Only omniscient, hath suppressed in night,
 To none communicable in Earth or Heaven:
 Enough is left besides to search and know.
 But knowledge is as food, and needs no less
 Her temperance over appetite, to know
 In measure what the mind may well contain;
 Oppresses else with surfeit, and soon turns
 Wisdom to folly, as nourishment to wind.

130

“Know then that after Lucifer from Heaven
 (So call him, brighter once amidst the host Of Angels than that star the stars among)
Fell with his flaming legions through the Deep
 Into his place, and the great Son returned Victorious with his Saints, the omnipotent
Eternal Father from his throne beheld
 Their multitude, and to his Son thus spake:

“At least our envious foe hath failed, who thought

All like himself rebellious; by whose aid

140

This inaccessible high strength, the seat

Of Deity supreme, us dispossessed, absolute const. - Nominals

He trusted to have seized, and into fraud was the Son - but from

Drew many whom their place knows here no more:

Yet far the greater part have kept, I see,

Their station; Heaven, yet populous, retains

Number sufficient to possess her realms

Though wide, and this high temple to frequent

With ministeries due and solemn rites.

But lest his heart exalt him in the harm

150

Already done, to have dispeopled Heaven—

My damage fondly deemed—I can repair

That detriment, if such it be to lose

Self-lost, and in a moment will create

Another world, out of one man a race
 Of men innumerable, there to dwell,
 Not here, till, by degrees of merit raised,
 They open to themselves at length the way
 Up hither, under long obedience tried,
 And Earth be changed to Heaven, and Heaven to Earth, 160
 One kingdom, joy and union without end.
 Meanwhile inhabit lax, ye Powers of Heaven;
 And thou, my Word, begotten Son, by thee
 This I perform; speak thou, and be it done!
 My overshadowing Spirit and might with thee
 I send along; ride forth, and bid the Deep Within appointed bounds be Heaven and Earth;
 Boundless the Deep, because I am who fill
 Infinitude; nor vacuous the space,
 Though I uncircumscribed myself retire, 170
 And put not forth my goodness, which is free
 To act or not: Necessity and Chance Approach not me, and what I will is Fate.
 "So spake the Almighty, and to what he spake
 His Word, the Filial Godhead, gave effect. Abraham
 Immediate are the acts of God, more swift
 Than time or motion, but to human ears
 Cannot without process of speech be told, enumerated
 So told as earthly notion can receive.
 Great triumph and rejoicing was in Heaven, 180
 When such was heard declared the Almighty's will;
 Glory they sung to the Most High, good-will
 To future men, and in their dwellings peace;
 Glory to Him whose just avenging ire
 Had driven out the ungodly from his sight
 And the habitations of the just; to Him
 Glory and praise whose wisdom had ordained

Good out of evil to create; instead
 Of Spirits malign, a better race to bring Into their vacant room, and thence diffuse 190
 His good to worlds and ages infinite.

“So sang the Hierarchies. Meanwhile the Son
 On his great expedition now appeared,
 Girt with omnipotence, with radiance crowned
 Of majesty divine, sapience and love
 Immense; and all his Father in him shone.

About his chariot numberless were poured Academical
 Cherub and Seraph, Potentates and Thrones,
 And Virtues, winged Spirits, and chariots winged
 From the armoury of God, where stand of old 200
 Myriads, between two brazen mountains lodged Biblical

Against a solemn day, harnessed at hand,
 Celestial equipage; and now came forth
 Spontaneous, for within them Spirit lived,
 Attendant on their Lord. Heaven opened wide
 Her ever-during gates, harmonious sound
 On golden hinges moving, to let forth
 The King of Glory, in his powerful Word
 And Spirit coming to create new worlds.

On Heavenly ground they stood, and from the shore 210
 They viewed the vast immeasurable Abyss,
 Outrageous as a sea, dark, wasteful, wild,
 Up from the bottom turned by furious winds
 And surging waves, as mountains, to assault
 Heaven's highth, and with the centre mix the pole.

“‘Silence, ye troubled waves, and, thou Deep, peace!’
 Said then the omnific Word: ‘your discord end!’
 Nor stayed; but, on the wings of Cherubim Uplifted, in paternal glory rode Far into Chaos and the World unborn; 220

For Chaos heard his voice. Him all his train
 Followed in bright procession, to behold
 Creation, and the wonders of his might.
 Then stayed the fervid wheels and in his hand
 He took the golden compasses, prepared
 In God's eternal store, to circumscribe
 This Universe, and all created things.
 One foot he centred, and the other turned Round through the vast profundity obscure,
 And said, 'Thus far extend, thus far thy bounds;      230
 This be thy just circumference, O World!'
Thus God the heaven created, thus the Earth,
 Matter unformed and void. Darkness profound Covered the Abyss; but on the watery calm
 His brooding wings the Spirit of God outspread,
 And vital virtue infused, and vital warmth,
 Throughout the fluid mass, but downward purged
 The black, tartareous, cold, infernal dregs,
 Adverse to life; then founded, then conglobed
 Like things to like, the rest to several place      240
 Disparted, and between spun out the air,
 And Earth, self-balanced, on her centre hung.
 "Let there be light!" said God; and forthwith light
 Ethereal, first of things, quintessence pure,
 Sprung from the Deep, and from her native east
 To journey through the aery gloom began,
 Sphered in a radiant cloud, for yet the sun
 Was not; she in a cloudy tabernacle
 Sojourned the while. God saw the light was good;
 And light from darkness by the hemisphere      250
 Divided: light the Day, and darkness Night,
 He named. Thus was the first day even and morn;
 Nor passed uncelebrated, nor unsung

By the celestial quires, when orient light
 Exhaling first from darkness they beheld,
 Birth-day of Heaven and Earth; with joy and shout
 The hollow universal orb they filled,
 And touched their golden harps, and hymning praised
 God and his works; Creator him they sung,
 Both when first evening was, and when first morn. 260

“Again, God said, ‘Let there be firmament
 Amid the waters, and let it divide
 The waters from the waters!’ And God made
 The firmament, expanse of liquid, pure,
 Transparent, elemental air, diffused
 In circuit to the uttermost convex
 Of this great round—partition firm and sure,
 The waters underneath from those above
 Dividing; for as Earth, so he the World
 Built on circumfluous waters calm, in wide 270
 Crystalline ocean, and the loud misrule
 Of Chaos far removed, lest fierce extremes
 Contiguous might distemper the whole frame:
 And heaven he named the firmament. So even
 And morning chorus sung the second day.

“The Earth was formed, but, in the womb as yet
 Of waters, embryo, immature, involved,
 Appeared not; over all the face of Earth
 Main ocean flowed, not idle, but, with warm
 Prolific humour softening all her globe, 280
 Fermented the great mother to conceive,
 Sate with genial moisture; when God said,
 ‘Be gathered now, ye waters under heaven,
 Into one place, and let dry land appear!’
 Immediately the mountains huge appear
 Emergent, and their broad bare backs upheave

Into the clouds; their tops ascend the sky.
 So high as heaved the tumid hills, so low
 Down sunk a hollow bottom, broad and deep,
 Capacious bed of waters; thither they 290
 Hasted with glad precipitance, uprolled,
 As drops on dust conglobing from the dry;
 Part rise in crystal wall, or ridge direct,
 For haste; such flight the great command impressed
 On the swift floods. As armies at the call
 Of trumpet (for of armies thou hast heard)
 Troop to the standard, so the watery throng,
 Wave rolling after wave, where way they found:
 If steep, with torrent rapture, if through plain,
 Soft-ebbing; nor withstood them rock or hill; 300
 But they, or underground, or circuit wide
 With serpent error wandering, found their way,
 And on the washy ooze deep channels wore;
 Easy, ere God had bid the ground be dry,
 All but within those banks where rivers now
 Stream, and perpetual draw their humid train.
 The dry land Earth, and the great receptacle
 Of congregated waters he called seas;
 And saw that it was good, and said, 'Let the Earth
 Put forth the verdant grass, herb yielding seed, 310
 And fruit-tree yielding fruit after her kind,
 Whose seed is in herself upon the Earth!'
He scarce had said when the bare Earth, till then Desert and bare, unsightly, unadorned,
Brought forth the tender grass, whose verdure clad
 Her universal face with pleasant green;
 Then herbs of every leaf, that sudden flowered,
 Opening their various colours, and made gay
 Her bosom, smelling sweet; and, these scarce blown,

Forth flourished thick the clustering vine, forth crept 320
 The smelling gourd, up stood the corny reed
 Embattled in her field: add the humble shrub,
 And bush with frizzled hair implicit: last
 Rose, as in dance, the stately trees, and spread
 Their branches hung with copious fruit, or gemmed
 Their blossoms. With high woods the hills were crowned,
 With tufts the valleys and each fountain-side,
 With borders long the rivers; that Earth now
 Seemed like to Heaven, a seat where gods might dwell,
 Or wander with delight, and love to haunt 330
 Her sacred shades; though God had yet not rained
 Upon the Earth, and man to till the ground
 None was, but from the Earth a dewy mist
 Went up and watered all the ground, and each
 Plant of the field, which ere it was in the Earth
 God made, and every herb, before it grew
 On the green stem. God saw that it was good;
 So even and morn recorded the third day.

"Again the Almighty spake, 'Let there be lights
 High in the expanse of heaven, to divide 340
 The day from night; and let them be for signs,
 For seasons, and for days, and circling years;
 And let them be for lights, as I ordain
 Their office in the firmament of heaven,
 To give light on the Earth!' and it was so.
 And God made two great lights, great for their use
 To Man, the greater to have rule by day,
 The less by night, altern; and made the stars,
 And set them in the firmament of heaven
 To illuminate the Earth, and rule the day 350
 In their vicissitude, and rule the night,
 And light from darkness to divide. God saw,

Surveying his great work, that it was good :
 For, of celestial bodies, first the sun
 A mighty sphere he framed, unlightsome first,
 Though of ethereal mould ; then formed the moon
 Globose, and every magnitude of stars,
 And sowed with stars the heaven thick as a field.
 Of light by far the greater part he took,
 Transplanted from her cloudy shrine, and placed 360
 In the sun's orb, made porous to receive
 And drink the liquid light, firm to retain
 Her gathered beams, great palace now of light.
 Hither, as to their fountain, other stars
 Repairing, in their golden urns draw light,
 And hence the morning planet gilds her horns ;
 By tincture or reflection they augment
 Their small peculiar, though, from human sight
 So far remote, with diminution seen.
 First in his east the glorious lamp was seen, 370
 Regent of day, and all the horizon round
 Invested with bright rays, jocund to run
 His longitude through heaven's high road ; the grey
 Dawn, and the Pleiades, before him danced,
 Shedding sweet influence. Less bright the moon,
 But opposite in levelled west, was set,
 His mirror, with full face borrowing her light
 From him ; for other light she needed none
 In that aspect, and still that distance keeps Till night ; then in the east her turn she shines, 380
 Revolved on heaven's great axle, and her reign
 With thousand lesser lights dividual holds,
 With thousand thousand stars, that then appeared Spangling the hemisphere. Then first adorned
 With her bright luminaries, that set and rose,

Glad evening and glad morn crowned the fourth day. ✓

“And God said, ‘Let the waters generate
Reptile with spawn abundant, living soul;
 And let fowl fly above the Earth, with wings
 Displayed on the open firmament of heaven!’ 390

And God created the great whales, and each
 Soul living, each that crept, which plenteously
 The waters generated by their kinds,
 And every bird of wing after his kind;
 And saw that it was good, and blessed them, saying,
 ‘Be fruitful, multiply, and in the seas,

And lakes, and running streams, the waters fill;
 And let the fowl be multiplied on the Earth!’
 Forthwith the sounds and seas, each creek and bay,
 With fry innumerable swarm, and shoals 400

Of fish that with their fins and shining scales
 Glide under the green wave in sculls that oft Bank the mid-sea. Part, single or with mate,
 Graze the sea-weed, their pasture, and through groves
 Of coral stray, or, sporting with quick glance,
 Show to the sun their waved coats dropt with gold;

Or, in their pearly shells at ease, attend
 Moist nutriment, or under rocks their food
 In jointed armour watch; on smooth the seal
 And bended dolphins play; part, huge of bulk, 410

Wallowing unwieldy, enormous in their gait,
 Tempest the ocean. There leviathan,
Hugest of living creatures, on the deep
Stretched like a promontory, sleeps or swims,
 And seems a moving land, and at his gills
 Draws in, and at his trunk spouts out, a sea.
 Meanwhile the tepid caves, and fens, and shores,
 Their brood as numerous hatch from the egg, that soon,

Bursting with kindly rupture, forth disclosed
 Their callow young; but feathered soon and fledge 420
 They summed their pens, and, soaring the air sublime,
 With clang despised the ground, under a cloud
 In prospect. There the eagle and the stork
 On cliffs and cedar-tops their eyries build.
 Part loosely wing the region; part more wise,
 In common, ranged in figure, wedge their way,
 Intelligent of seasons, and set forth
 Their aery caravan, high over seas
 Flying, and over lands, with mutual wing
 Easing their flight; so steers the prudent crane 430
 Her annual voyage, borne on winds; the air
 Floats as they pass, fanned with unnumbered plumes.
 From branch to branch the smaller birds with song
 Solaced the woods, and spread their painted wings,
 Till even; nor then the solemn nightingale
 Ceased warbling, but all night tuned her soft lays.
 Others, on silver lakes and rivers, bathed
 Their downy breast; the swan, with arched neck
 Between her white wings mantling proudly, rows
 Her state with oary feet; yet oft they quit 440
 The dank, and, rising on stiff pennons, tower
 The mid aerial sky. Others on ground
 Walked firm: the crested cock whose clarion sounds
 The silent hours, and the other whose gay train
 Adorns him, coloured with the florid hue
 Of rainbows and starry eyes. The waters thus
 With fish replenished, and the air with fowl,
 Evening and morn solemnized the fifth day.

"The sixth, and of Creation last, arose
 With evening harps and matin; when God said, 450
 'Let the Earth bring forth soul living in her kind,

Cattle, and creeping things, and beast of the Earth,
 Each in their kind! The Earth obeyed, and straight,
 Opening her fertile womb, teemed at a birth
 Innumerable living creatures, perfect forms,
 Limbed and full-grown. Out of the ground up rose,
 As from his lair, the wild beast, where he wons
 In forest wild, in thicket, brake, or den;
 Among the trees in pairs they rose, they walked;
 The cattle in the fields and meadows green: 460
 Those rare and solitary, these in flocks
 Pasturing at once, and in broad herds upsprung.
 The grassy clods now calved; now half appeared
 The tawny lion, pawing to get free
 His hinder parts, then springs, as broke from bonds,
 And rampant shakes his brinded mane; the ounce,
 The libbard, and the tiger, as the mole
 Rising, the crumbled earth above them threw
 In hillocks; the swift stag from underground
 Bore up his branching head; scarce from his mould 470
 Behemoth, biggest born of earth, upheaved
 His vastness; fleeced the flocks and bleating rose,
 As plants; ambiguous between sea and land,
 The river-horse and scaly crocodile.
 At once came forth whatever creeps the ground,
 Insect or worm. Those waved their limber fans
 For wings, and smallest lineaments exact
 In all the liveries decked of summer's pride,
 With spots of gold and purple, azure and green;
 These as a line their long dimension drew, 480
 Streaking the ground with sinuous trace: not all
 Minims of nature; some of serpent kind,
 Wondrous in length and corpulence, involved
 Their snaky folds, and added wings. First crept

The parsimonious emmet, provident
 Of future, in small room large heart enclosed ;
 Pattern of just equality perhaps
 Hereafter, joined in her popular tribes
 Of commonalty. Swarming next appeared
 The female bee, that feeds her husband drone 490
 Deliciously, and builds her waxen cells
 With honey stored. The rest are numberless,
 And thou their natures know'st, and gav'st them names,
 Needless to thee repeated ; nor unknown
 The serpent, subtlest beast of all the field,
 Of huge extent sometimes, with brazen eyes
 And hairy mane terrific, though to thee
 Not noxious, but obedient at thy call.

“Now Heaven in all her glory shone, and rolled
 Her motions, as the great First Mover's hand 500
 First wheeled their course ; Earth in her rich attire
 Consummate lovely smiled ; air, water, earth,
 By fowl, fish, beast, was flown, was swum, was walked,
 Frequent ; and of the sixth day yet remained.
 There wanted yet the master-work, the end
 Of all yet done ; a creature who, not prone
 And brute as other creatures, but endued
 With sanctity of reason, might erect
 His stature, and upright with front serene
 Govern the rest, self-knowing, and from thence 510
 Magnanimous to correspond with Heaven,
 But grateful to acknowledge whence his good
 Descends ; thither with heart, and voice, and eyes,
 Directed in devotion, to adore
 And worship God supreme, who made him chief
 Of all his works. Therefore the omnipotent Eternal Father (for where is not he Present?) thus to his Son audibly spake :

“Let us make now Man in our image, Man
 In our similitude, and let them rule 520
 Over the fish and fowl of sea and air,
 Beast of the field, and over all the Earth,
 And every creeping thing that creeps the ground !
 This said, he formed thee, Adam, thee, O Man,
 Dust of the ground, and in thy nostrils breathed
 The breath of life ; in his own image he Created thee, in the image of God
 Express, and thou becam'st a living soul.
 Male he created thee, but thy consort
 Female, for race ; then blessed mankind, and said, 530
 ‘Be fruitful, multiply, and fill the Earth ;
 Subdue it, and throughout dominion hold
 Over fish of the sea, and fowl of the air,
 And every living thing that moves on the Earth !’
 Wherever thus created (for no place
 Is yet distinct by name), thence, as thou know'st,
 He brought thee into this delicious grove,
 This garden, planted with the trees of God,
 Delectable both to behold and taste ;
 And freely all their pleasant fruit for food 540
 Gave thee : all sorts are here that all the Earth yields, Variety without end ; but of the Tree
 Which tasted works knowledge of good and evil
 Thou may'st not ; in the day thou eat'st, thou diest.
 Death is the penalty imposed ; beware,
 And govern well thy appetite, lest Sin
 Surprise thee, and her black attendant, Death.

“Here finished he, and all that he had made
 Viewed, and behold ! all was entirely good.
 So even and morn accomplished the sixth day ; 550

Yet not till the Creator, from his work
 Desisting, though unwearied, up returned,
 Up to the Heaven of Heavens, his high abode,
 Thence to behold this new-created World,
 The addition of his empire—how it showed
 In prospect from his throne, how good, how fair, Answering his great idea. Up he rode,
 Followed with acclamation and the sound
 Symphonious of ten thousand harps, that tuned
 Angelic harmonies. The Earth, the air 560
 Resounded (thou remember'st, for thou heard'st),
 The heavens and all the constellations rung,
 The planets in their stations listening stood,
 While the bright pomp ascended jubilant.
 'Open, ye everlasting gates!' they sung;
 'Open, ye Heavens, your living doors! let in
 The great Creator, from his work returned Magnificent, his six days' work, a World!
 Open, and henceforth oft; for God will deign
 To visit oft the dwellings of just men, 570
 Delighted, and with frequent intercourse
 Thither will send his winged messengers
 On errands of supernal grace.' So sung
 The glorious train ascending. He through Heaven,
 That opened wide her blazing portals, led
 To God's eternal house direct the way;
 A broad and ample road, whose dust is gold,
 And pavement stars, as stars to thee appear
 Seen in the Galaxy, that milky way
 Which nightly as a circling zone thou seest 580
 Powdered with stars. And now on Earth the seventh Evening arose in Eden, for the sun
 Was set, and twilight from the east came on,

Forerunning night ; when at the holy mount
 Of Heaven's high-seated top, the imperial throne
 Of Godhead, fixed for ever firm and sure,
 The Filial Power arrived, and sat him down
 With his great Father ; for he also went Invisible, yet stayed (such privilege
 Hath Omnipresence), and the work ordained, 590
 Author and end of all things, and, from work
 Now resting, blessed and hallowed the seventh day,
 As resting on that day from all his work ;
 But not in silence holy kept : the harp
 Had work and rested not ; the solemn pipe,
 And dulcimer, all organs of sweet stop,
 All sounds on fret by string or golden wire,
 Tempered soft tunings, intermixed with voice
 Choral or unison ; of incense clouds,
 Fuming from golden censers, hid the mount. 600
 Creation and the six days' acts they sung :
 'Great are thy works, Jehovah ! infinite
 Thy power ! what thought can measure thee, or tongue
 Relate thee ? greater now in thy return
 Than from the Giant-angels : thee that day
 Thy thunders magnified ; but to create
 Is greater than created to destroy.
 Who can impair thee, mighty King, or bound Thy empire ? Easily the proud attempt
 Of Spirits apostate and their counsels vain 610
 Thou hast repelled, while impiously they thought
 Thee to diminish, and from thee withdraw
 The number of thy worshippers. Who seeks To lessen thee, against his purpose serves
 To manifest the more thy might ; his evil
 Thou usest, and from thence creat'st more good.

Witness this new-made World, another Heaven
 From Heaven-gate not far, founded in view
 On the clear hyaline, the glassy sea;
 Of amplitude almost immense, with stars 620
 Numerous, and every star perhaps a world
 Of destined habitation; but thou know'st
 Their seasons; among these the seat of Men,
 Earth, with her nether ocean circumfused,
 Their pleasant dwelling-place. Thrice happy Men,
 And sons of Men! whom God hath thus advanced,
 Created in his image, there to dwell
 And worship him, and in reward to rule
 Over his works, on earth, in sea, or air,
 And multiply a race of worshippers 630
 Holy and just; thrice happy, if they know
 Their happiness, and persevere upright!
 "So sung they, and the Empyrean rung
 With halleluiahs. Thus was Sabbath kept.
 And thy request think now fulfilled, that asked
 How first this World and face of things began,
 And what before thy memory was done
 From the beginning, that posterity,
 Informed by thee, might know. If else thou seek'st Aught, not surpassing human measure, say." 640

BOOK VIII.

THE ARGUMENT.

Adam inquires concerning celestial motions ; is doubtfully answered, and exhorted to search rather things more worthy of knowledge. Adam assents, and, still desirous to detain Raphael, relates to him what he remembered since his own creation : his placing in Paradise ; his talk with God concerning solitude and fit society ; his first meeting and nuptials with Eve. His discourse with the Angel thereupon ; who, after admonitions repeated, departs.

BOOK VIII.

THE Angel ended, and in Adam's ear
So charming left his voice that he a while Thought him still speaking, still stood fixed to hear;
Then, as new-waked, thus gratefully replied:

“What thanks sufficient, or what recompense
Equal, have I to render thee, divine
Historian, who thus largely hast allayed
The thirst I had of knowledge, and vouchsafed
This friendly condescension to relate
Things else by me unsearchable, now heard
With wonder, but delight, and, as is due,
With glory attributed to the high 10

Creator? Something yet of doubt remains,
Which only thy solution can resolve.
When I behold this goodly frame, this World
Of Heaven and Earth consisting, and compute
Their magnitudes; this Earth, a spot, a grain,
An atom, with the firmament compared
And all her numbered stars, that seem to roll Spaces incomprehensible (for such
Their distance argues, and their swift return Diurnal) merely to officiate light

20

Round this opacous Earth, this punctual spot,
 One day and night, in all their vast survey
 Useless besides; reasoning I oft admire
 How Nature, wise and frugal, could commit
 Such disproportions, with superfluous hand
 So many nobler bodies to create,
 Greater so manifold, to this one use,
 For aught appears, and on their orbs impose 30
 Such restless revolution day by day
 Repeated, while the sedentary Earth,
 That better might with far less compass move,
 Served by more noble than herself, attains
 Her end without least motion, and receives,
 As tribute, such a sumless journey brought
 Of incorporeal speed, her warmth and light:
 Speed, to describe whose swiftness number fails."

So spake our sire, and by his countenance seemed Entering on studious thoughts abstruse; which Eve 40
 Perceiving, where she sat retired in sight,
 With lowliness majestic from her seat,
 And grace that won who saw to wish her stay,
 Rose, and went forth among her fruits and flowers,
 To visit how they prospered, bud and bloom,
 Her nursery; they at her coming sprung,
 And, touched by her fair tendance, gladlier grew.
 Yet went she not as not with such discourse
 Delighted, or not capable her ear
 Of what was high: such pleasure she reserved, 50
 Adam relating, she sole auditress;
 Her husband the relater she preferred
 Before the Angel, and of him to ask
 Chose rather; he, she knew, would intermix
 Grateful digressions, and solve high dispute

With conjugal caresses : from his lip
 Not words alone pleased her. Oh, when meet now
 Such pairs, in love and mutual honour joined?
 With goddess-like demeanour forth she went,
 Not unattended; for on her as queen 60
 A pomp of winning Graces waited still,
 And from about her shot darts of desire
 Into all eyes, to wish her still in sight.
 And Raphael now to Adam's doubt proposed Benevolent and facile thus replied :

“To ask or search I blame thee not; for heaven
 Is as the Book of God before thee set,
 Wherein to read his wondrous works, and learn
 His seasons, hours, or days, or months, or years :
 This to attain, whether heaven move or Earth 70
 Imports not, if thou reckon right; the rest
 From Man or Angel the great Architect
 Did wisely to conceal, and not divulge
 His secrets, to be scanned by them who ought Rather admire. Or if they list to try Conjecture, he his fabric of the heavens
 Hath left to their disputes, perhaps to move
 His laughter at their quaint opinions wide
 Hereafter, when they come to model heaven,
 And calculate the stars; how they will wield 80
 The mighty frame; how build, unbuild, contrive,
 To save appearances; how gird the sphere
 With centric and eccentric scribbled o'er,
 Cycle and epicycle, orb in orb.
 Already by thy reasoning this I guess,
 Who art to lead thy offspring, and supposest
 That bodies bright and greater should not serve
 The less not bright, nor heaven such journeys run,

Earth sitting still, when she alone receives
 The benefit. Consider, first, that great 90
Or bright infers not excellence: the Earth,
 Though, in comparison of heaven, so small,
 Nor glistening, may of solid good contain
 More plenty than the sun that barren shines,
 Whose virtue on itself works no effect,
 But in the fruitful Earth; there first received,
 His beams, unactive else, their vigour find.
 Yet not to Earth are those bright luminaries
 Officious, but to thee, Earth's habitant.
 And for the heaven's wide circuit, let it speak 100
 The Maker's high magnificence, who built
 So spacious, and his line stretched out so far,
 That Man may know he dwells not in his own;
 An edifice too large for him to fill,
 Lodged in a small partition, and the rest
 Ordained for uses to his Lord best known.
The swiftness of those circles attribute,
Though numberless, to his omnipotence,
 That to corporeal substances could add
 Speed almost spiritual. Me thou think'st not slow, 110
 Who since the morning-hour set out from Heaven
 Where God resides, and ere mid-day arrived
 In Eden, distance inexpressible
 By numbers that have name. But this I urge,
 Admitting motion in the heavens, to show
 Invalid that which thee to doubt it moved;
 Not that I so affirm, though so it seem
 To thee who hast thy dwelling here on Earth.
 God, to remove his ways from human sense,
 Placed heaven from Earth so far, that earthly sight, 120
 If it presume, might err in things too high,

And no advantage gain. What if the sun
 Be centre to the World, and other stars,
 By his attractive virtue and their own
 Incited, dance about him various rounds?
 Their wandering course, now high, now low, then hid,
 Progressive, retrograde, or standing still,
 In six thou seest; and what if seventh to these
 The planet Earth, so steadfast though she seem,
 Insensibly three different motions move? 130
 Which else to several spheres thou must ascribe
 Moved contrary with thwart obliquities,
 Or save the sun his labour, and that swift
 Nocturnal and diurnal rhomb supposed.
 Invisible else above all stars, the wheel
 Of day and night; which needs not thy belief,
 If Earth, industrious of herself, each day,
 Travelling east, and with her part averse
 From the sun's beam meet night, her other part Still luminous by his ray. What if that light, 140
 Sent from her through the wide transpicious air,
 To the terrestrial moon be as a star,
 Enlightening her by day, as she by night
 This Earth—reciprocal, if land be there,
 Fields and inhabitants? Her spots thou seest
 As clouds, and clouds may rain, and rain produce
 Fruits in her softened soil, for some to eat
 Allotted there; and other suns, perhaps,
 With their attendant moons, thou wilt descry,
 Communicating male and female light, 150
 Which two great sexes animate the World,
 Stored in each orb perhaps with some that live.
 For such vast room in Nature unpossessed
 By living soul, desert and desolate,

Only to shine, yet scarce to contribute
 Each orb a glimpse of light, conveyed so far
 Down to this habitable, which returns
 Light back to them, is obvious to dispute.
 But whether thus these things, or whether not—
 Whether the sun, predominant in heaven, 160
 Rise on the Earth, or Earth rise on the sun;
 He from the east his flaming road begin,
 Or she from west her silent course advance
 With inoffensive pace that spinning sleeps
 On her soft axle, while she paces even,
 And bears thee soft with the smooth air along—
 Solicit not thy thoughts with matters hid:
 Leave them to God above; him serve and fear.
 Of other creatures, as him pleases best,
 Wherever placed, let him dispose; joy thou 170
 In what he gives to thee, this Paradise
 And thy fair Eye; Heaven is for thee too high
To know what passes there; be lowly wise;
Think only what concerns thee and thy being;
 Dream not of other worlds, what creatures there
 Live, in what state, condition, or degree;
 Contented that thus far hath been revealed
 Not of Earth only, but of highest Heaven.”

To whom thus Adam, cleared of doubt, replied:
 “How fully hast thou satisfied me, pure 180
 Intelligence of Heaven, Angel serene,
 And, freed from intricacies, taught to live
 The easiest way, nor with perplexing thoughts
 To interrupt the sweet of life, from which God hath bid dwell far off all anxious cares,
 And not molest us, unless we ourselves
 Seek them with wandering thoughts, and notions vain.

But apt the mind or fancy is to rove
 Unchecked, of her roving is no end,
 Till warned, or by experience taught, she learn 190
 That not to know at large of things remote
 From use, obscure and subtle, but to know
 That which before us lies in daily life,
 Is the prime wisdom: what is more is fume,
 Or emptiness, or fond impertinence,
 And renders us in things that most concern
 Unpractised, unprepared, and still to seek.
 Therefore from this high pitch let us descend
 A lower flight, and speak of things at hand
 Useful; whence haply mention may arise 200
 Of something not unseasonable to ask,
 By sufferance, and thy wonted favour, deigned.
 Thee I have heard relating what was done
 Ere my remembrance; now hear me relate
 My story, which perhaps thou hast not heard.
 And day is yet not spent; till then thou seest
 How subtly to detain thee I devise,
 Inviting thee to hear while I relate—
 Fond, were it not in hope of thy reply.
 For while I sit with thee, I seem in Heaven; 210
 And sweeter thy discourse is to my ear
 Than fruits of palm-tree, pleasantest to thirst
 And hunger both, from labour, at the hour
 Of sweet repast: they satiate, and soon fill,
 Though pleasant; but thy words, with grace divine
 Imbued, bring to their sweetness no satiety."

To whom thus Raphael answered, Heavenly meek:
 "Nor are thy lips ungraceful, Sire of Men,
 Nor tongue ineloquent; for God on thee
 Abundantly his gifts hath also poured, 220

Inward and outward both, his image fair :
 Speaking or mute, all comeliness and grace
 Attends thee, and each word, each motion, forms.
 Nor less think we in Heaven of thee on Earth
 Than of our fellow-servant, and inquire
 Gladly into the ways of God with Man ;
 For God, we see, hath honoured thee, and set
 On Man his equal love. Say therefore on ;
 For I that day was absent, as befell,
 Bound on a voyage uncouth and obscure, 230
 Far on excursion toward the gates of Hell,
 Squared in full legion (such command we had),
 To see that none thence issued forth a spy
 Or enemy, while God was in his work ;
 Lest he, incensed at such eruption bold,
 Destruction with Creation might have mixed :
 Not that they durst without his leave attempt ;
 But us he sends upon his high behests
 For state, as sovran King, and to inure
 Our prompt obedience. Fast we found, fast shut, 240
 The dismal gates, and barricadoed strong ;
 But, long ere our approaching, heard within Noise, other than the sound of dance or song ;
 Torment, and loud lament, and furious rage.
 Glad we returned up to the coasts of light
 Ere Sabbath-evening ; so we had in charge.
 But thy relation now ; for I attend,
 Pleased with thy words no less than thou with mine."

So spake the godlike Power, and thus our sire :
 "For Man to tell how human life began 250
 Is hard ; for who himself beginning knew ?
 Desire with thee still longer to converse Induced me. As new-waked from soundest sleep,

Soft on the flowery herb I found me laid,
 In balmy sweat, which with his beams the sun
 Soon dried, and on the reeking moisture fed.
 Straight toward Heaven my wondering eyes I turned,
 And gazed a while the ample sky, till raised
 By quick instinctive motion up I sprung,
 As thitherward endeavouring, and upright 260
 Stood on my feet. About me round I saw
 Hill, dale, and shady woods, and sunny plains,
 And liquid lapse of murmuring streams; by these,
 Creatures that lived and moved, and walked or flew,
 Birds on the branches warbling; all things smiled;
 With fragrance and with joy my heart o'erflowed.
 Myself I then perused, and limb by limb
 Surveyed, and sometimes went, and sometimes ran
 With supple joints, as lively vigour led;
 But who I was, or where, or from what cause, 270
 Knew not. To speak I tried, and forthwith spake;
 My tongue obeyed, and readily could name
 Whate'er I saw. 'Thou Sun,' said I, 'fair light,
 And thou enlightened Earth, so fresh and gay,
 Ye hills and dales, ye rivers, woods, and plains,
 And ye that live and move, fair creatures, tell,
 Tell, if ye saw, how came I thus, how here!
 Not of myself; by some great Maker then,
 In goodness and in power pre-eminent.
 Tell me, how may I know him, how adore, 280
 From whom I have that thus I move and live,
 And feel that I am happier than I know!'

While thus I called, and strayed I knew not whither,
 From where I first drew air, and first beheld
 This happy light, when answer none returned,
 On a green shady bank, profuse of flowers,

Pensive I sat me down; there gentle sleep
 First found me, and with soft oppression seized
 My drowsed sense, untroubled, though I thought
 I then was passing to my former state 290
 Insensible, and forthwith to dissolve:
 When suddenly stood at my head a dream,
 Whose inward apparition gently moved
 My fancy to believe I yet had being,
 And lived. One came, methought, of shape divine,
 And said, 'Thy mansion wants thee, Adam; rise,
 First Man, of men innumerable ordained
 First father! called by thee, I come thy guide
 To the garden of bliss, thy seat prepared.'
 So saying, by the hand he took me, raised, 300
 And over fields and waters, as in air
 Smooth sliding without step, last led me up
 A woody mountain, whose high top was plain,
 A circuit wide, enclosed, with goodliest trees
 Planted, with walks and bowers, that what I saw
 Of Earth before scarce pleasant seemed. Each tree
 Loaden with fairest fruit, that hung to the eye
 Tempting, stirred in me sudden appetite
 To pluck and eat; whereat I waked, and found
 Before mine eyes all real, as the dream 310
 Had lively shadowed. Here had new begun
 My wandering, had not He, who was my guide
 Up hither, from among the trees appeared,
 Presence Divine. Rejoicing, but with awe,
 In adoration at his feet I fell
 Submiss. He reared me, and, 'Whom thou sought'st I am,'
 Said mildly, 'Author of all this thou seest
 Above, or round about thee, or beneath.
 This Paradise I give thee; count it thine

To till and keep, and of the fruit to eat : 320
 Of every tree that in the garden grows
 Eat freely with glad heart ; fear here no dearth.
 But of the Tree whose operation brings
 Knowledge of good and ill, which I have set,
 The pledge of thy obedience and thy faith,
 Amid the garden by the Tree of Life,
 Remember what I warn thee, shun to taste,
 And shun the bitter consequence : for know,
 The day thou eat'st thereof, my sole command
 Transgressed, inevitably thou shalt die, 330
 From that day mortal, and this happy state
 Shalt lose, expelled from hence into a world
 Of woe and sorrow.' Sternly he pronounced
 The rigid interdiction, which resounds
 Yet dreadful in mine ear, though in my choice
 Not to incur ; but soon his clear aspect
 Returned, and gracious purpose thus renewed :
 'Not only these fair bounds, but all the Earth
 To thee and to thy race I give ; as lords 340
 Possess it, and all things that therein live,
 Or live in sea or air—beast, fish, and fowl.
 In sign whereof, each bird and beast behold
 After their kinds ; I bring them to receive
 From thee their names, and pay thee fealty
 With low subjection ; understand the same
 Of fish within their watery residence,
 Not hither summoned, since they cannot change
 Their element to draw the thinner air.'
 As thus he spake, each bird and beast behold
 Approaching two and two ; these cowering low 350
 With blandishment ; each bird stooped on his wing.
 I named them as they passed, and understood

Their nature; with such knowledge God endued
 My sudden apprehension. But in these
 I found not what, methought, I wanted still,
 And to the Heavenly Vision thus presumed:

“O, by what name—for thou above all these,
 Above mankind, or aught than mankind higher,
 Surpasest far my naming—how may I
 Adore thee, Author of this Universe, 360
 And all this good to Man, for whose well-being
 So amply, and with hands so liberal,
 Thou hast provided all things? But with me
 I see not who partakes. In solitude
 What happiness? who can enjoy alone,
 Or, all enjoying, what contentment find?’
 Thus I presumptuous; and the Vision bright,
 As with a smile more brightened, thus replied:

“What call’st thou solitude? Is not the Earth
 With various living creatures, and the air, 370
 Replenished, and all these at thy command
 To come and play before thee? Know’st thou not Their language and their ways? They also know,
 And reason not contemptibly; with these
 Find pastime, and bear rule; thy realm is large.’
 So spake the universal Lord, and seemed
 So ordering. I, with leave of speech implored,
 And humble deprecation, thus replied:

“Let not my words offend thee, Heavenly Power!
 My Maker, be propitious while I speak. 380
 Hast thou not made me here thy substitute,
 And these inferior far beneath me set?
 Among unequals what society
 Can sort, what harmony or true delight?
 Which must be mutual, in proportion due

Given and received ; but in disparity,
 The one intense, the other still remiss,
 Cannot well suit with either, but soon prove Tedious alike. Of fellowship I speak,
 Such as I seek, fit to participate 390
 All rational delight, wherein the brute
 Cannot be human consort : they rejoice
 Each with their kind, lion with lioness ;
 So fitly them in pairs thou hast combined ;
 Much less can bird with beast, or fish with fowl,
 So well converse, nor with the ox the ape ;
 Worse then can man with beast, and least of all.'

“Whereto the Almighty answered, not displeas'd :
 ‘A nice and subtle happiness, I see,
 Thou to thyself proposest, in the choice 400
 Of thy associates, Adam, and wilt taste
 No pleasure, though in pleasure, solitary.
 What think'st thou then of me, and this my state?
 Seem I to thee sufficiently possessed
Of happiness, or not? who am alone
 From all eternity ; for none I know
 Second to me or like, equal much less.
 How have I then with whom to hold converse,
 Save with the creatures which I made, and those
 To me inferior, infinite descents 410
 Beneath what other creatures are to thee?’

“He ceased ; I lowly answered : ‘To attain
 The highth and depth of thy eternal ways
 All human thoughts come short, Supreme of things !
 Thou in thyself art perfect, and in thee
 Is no deficiencie found ; not so is Man,
 But in degree—the cause of his desire
 By conversation with his like to help

Or solace his defects. No need that thou
Should'st propagate, already infinite, 420
 And through all numbers absolute, though One;
 But Man by number is to manifest
 His single imperfection, and beget
 Like of his like, his image multiplied,
 In unity defective; which requires
 Collateral love, and dearest amity.
 Thou, in thy secrecy although alone,
 Best with thyself accompanied, seek'st not
 Social communication; yet, so pleased,
 Canst raise thy creature to what highth thou wilt 430
 Of union or communion, deified;
 I, by conversing, cannot these erect
 From prone, nor in their ways complacence find.
 Thus I emboldened spake, and freedom used Permissive, and acceptance found; which gained
 This answer from the gracious Voice Divine:
 "Thus far to try thee, Adam, I was pleased,
 And find thee knowing not of beasts alone,
 Which thou hast rightly named, but of thyself,
 Expressing well the spirit within thee free, 440
 My image, not imparted to the brute;
 Whose fellowship therefore, unmeet for thee,
 Good reason was thou freely shouldst dislike;
 And be so minded still. I, ere thou spak'st,
 Knew it not good for Man to be alone,
 And no such company as then thou saw'st
 Intended thee—for trial only brought,
 To see how thou couldst judge of fit and meet.
 What next I bring shall please thee, be assured,
 Thy likeness, thy fit help, thy other self, 450
 Thy wish exactly to thy heart's desire.'

"He ended, or I heard no more; for now
 My earthly by his Heavenly overpowered,
 Which it had long stood under, strained to the highth
 In that celestial colloquy sublime,
 As with an object that excels the sense,
 Dazzled and spent, sunk down, and sought repair
 Of sleep, which instantly fell on me, called
 By Nature as in aid, and closed mine eyes.
 Mine eyes he closed, but open left the cell 460
 Of fancy, my internal sight; by which,
 Abstract as in a trance, methought I saw,
 Though sleeping, where I lay, and saw the Shape
 Still glorious before whom awake I stood;
 Who stooping opened my left side, and took
 From thence a rib, with cordial spirits warm,
 And life-blood streaming fresh; wide was the wound,
 But suddenly with flesh filled up and healed.
 The rib he formed and fashioned with his hands;
 Under his forming hands a creature grew, 470
 Man-like, but different sex, so lovely fair
 That what seemed fair in all the world seemed now
 Mean, or in her summed up, in her contained
 And in her looks, which from that time infused Sweetness into my heart unfelt before,
 And into all things from her air inspired
 The spirit of love and amorous delight.
 She disappeared, and left me dark; I waked
 To find her, or for ever to deplore
 Her loss, and other pleasures all abjure: 480
When, out of hope, behold her not far off,
 Such as I saw her in my dream, adorned
 With what all Earth or Heaven could bestow
 To make her amiable. On she came,

Led by her Heavenly Maker, though unseen,
 And guided by his voice, nor uninformed
 Of nuptial sanctity and marriage rites.
 Grace was in all her steps, Heaven in her eye,
 In every gesture dignity and love.
 I, overjoyed, could not forbear aloud :

490

“ ‘This turn hath made amends ; thou hast fulfilled
 Thy words, Creator bounteous and benign,
 Giver of all things fair, but fairest this
 Of all thy gifts ! nor enviest. I now see Bone of my bone, flesh of my flesh, my self
 Before me ; Woman is her name, of Man
 Extracted ; for this cause he shall forgo
 Father and mother, and to his wife adhere,
 And they shall be one flesh, one heart, one soul.’

“She heard me thus ; and, though divinely brought, 500
 Yet innocence and virgin modesty,
 Her virtue and the conscience of her worth,
 That would be wooed, and not unsought be won,
 Not obvious, not obtrusive, but retired,
 The more desirable—or, to say all,
 Nature herself, though pure of sinful thought—
 Wrought in her so, that, seeing me, she turned ;
 I followed her ; she what was honour knew,
 And with obsequious majesty approved
 My pleaded reason. To the nuptial bower
 I led her blushing like the Morn ; all Heaven, 510
 And happy constellations, on that hour
 Shed their selectest influence ; the Earth
 Gave sign of gratulation, and each hill ;
 Joyous the birds ; fresh gales and gentle airs
 Whispered it to the woods, and from their wings
 Flung rose, flung odours from the spicy shrub,

Disporting, till the amorous bird of night
 Sung spousal, and bid haste the evening star
 On his hill-top to light the bridal lamp. 520

“Thus have I told thee all my state, and brought
 My story to the sum of earthly bliss
 Which I enjoy, and must confess to find
 In all things else delight indeed, but such
 As, used or not, works in the mind no change,
 Nor vehement desire—these delicacies
 I mean of taste, sight, smell, herbs, fruits, and flowers,
 Walks, and the melody of birds: but here,
 Far otherwise, transported I behold,
 Transported touch; here passion first I felt, 530

Commotion strange, in all enjoyments else
 Superior and unmoved, here only weak
 Against the charm of beauty’s powerful glance.
 Or Nature failed in me, and left some part
 Not proof enough such object to sustain,
 Or, from my side subducting, took perhaps
 More than enough; at least on her bestowed
 Too much of ornament, in outward show
 Elaborate, of inward less exact.

For well I understand in the prime end 540
 Of Nature her the inferior, in the mind

And inward faculties, which most excel;
 In outward also her resembling less
 His image who made both, and less expressing
 The character of that dominion given
 O’er other creatures. Yet when I approach
 Her loveliness, so absolute she seems
 And in herself complete, so well to know
 Her own, that what she wills to do or say
 Seems wisest, virtuousest, discreetest, best: 550
 All higher Knowledge in her presence falls

Degraded ; Wisdom in discourse with her
 Loses discountenanced, and like Folly shows ;
 Authority and Reason on her wait,
 As one intended first, not after made
 Occasionally ; and to consummate all,
 Greatness of mind and nobleness their seat
 Build in her loveliest, and create an awe
 About her, as a guard angelic placed."

To whom the Angel, with contracted brow : 560
 "Accuse not Nature, she hath done her part ;
 Do thou but thine, and be not diffident
 Of Wisdom ; she deserts thee not, if thou
 Dismiss not her, when most thou need'st her nigh,
 By attributing overmuch to things
 Less excellent, as thou thyself perceiv'st.
 For what admir'st thou, what transports thee so?
 An outside : fair, no doubt, and worthy well
 Thy cherishing, thy honouring, and thy love ;
 Not thy subjection. Weigh with her thyself ; 570
 Then value. Oft-times nothing profits more Than self-esteem, grounded on just and right,
 Well managed ; of that skill the more thou know'st,
 The more she will acknowledge thee her head,
 And to realities yield all her shows :
 Made so adorn for thy delight the more,
 So awful, that with honour thou may'st love
 Thy mate, who sees when thou art seen least wise.
 But if the sense of touch, whereby mankind
 Is propagated, seem such dear delight 580
 Beyond all other, think the same vouchsafed
 To cattle and each beast ; which would not be
 To them made common and divulged, if aught
 Therein enjoyed were worthy to subdue
 The soul of Man, or passion in him move.

What higher in her society thou find'st
 Attractive, human, rational, love still :
 In loving thou dost well ; in passion not,
 Wherein true love consists not. Love refines
 The thoughts, and heart enlarges ; hath his seat 590
 In Reason, and is judicious ; is the scale
 By which to Heavenly love thou may'st ascend,
 Not sunk in carnal pleasure ; for which cause
 Among the beasts no mate for thee was found."

To whom thus, half abashed, Adam replied :
 "Neither her outside formed so fair, nor aught
 In procreation common to all kinds (Though higher of the genial bed by far,
 And with mysterious reverence, I deem),
 So much delights me as those graceful acts, 600
 Those thousand decencies, that daily flow
 From all her words and actions, mixed with love
 And sweet compliance, which declare unfeigned
 Union of mind, or in us both one soul ;
 Harmony to behold in wedded pair
 More grateful than harmonious sound to the ear.
 Yet these subject not ; I to thee disclose
 What inward thence I feel, not therefore foiled,
 Who meet with various objects, from the sense
 Variously representing, yet, still free, 610
 Approve the best, and follow what I approve.
 To love thou blam'st me not ; for love, thou say'st,
 Leads up to Heaven, is both the way and guide ;
 Bear with me then, if lawful what I ask.
 Love not the Heavenly Spirits, and how their love
 Express they? by looks only, or do they mix
 Irradiance, virtual or immediate touch?"

To whom the Angel, with a smile that glowed
 Celestial rosy-red, love's proper hue,

Answered: "Let it suffice thee that thou know'st 620
 Us happy, and without love no happiness.
 Whatever pure thou in the body enjoy'st
 (And pure thou wert created) we enjoy
 In eminence, and obstacle find none
 Of membrane, joint, or limb, exclusive bars;
 Easier than air with air, if Spirits embrace,
 Total they mix, union of pure with pure
 Desiring, nor restrained conveyance need
 As flesh to mix with flesh, or soul with soul.
 But I can now no more; the parting sun 630
 Beyond the Earth's green Cape and verdant Isles
 Hesperean sets, my signal to depart.
 Be strong, live happy, and love! but first of all Him whom to love is to obey, and keep
 His great command; take heed lest passion sway
 Thy judgment to do aught which else free will
 Would not admit; thine and of all thy sons
 The weal or woe in thee is placed; beware!
 I in thy persevering shall rejoice,
 And all the Blest. Stand fast; to stand or fall, 640
 Free in thine own arbitrement it lies.
 Perfect within, no outward aid require;
 And all temptation to transgress repel."

So saying, he arose; whom Adam thus Followed with benediction: "Since to part,
 Go, Heavenly guest, Ethereal messenger,
 Sent from whose sovran goodness I adore!
 Gentle to me and affable hath been
 Thy condescension, and shall be honoured ever
 With grateful memory; thou to Mankind 650
 Be good and friendly still, and oft return!"

So parted they, the Angel up to Heaven
From the thick shade, and Adam to his bower.

BOOK IX.

THE ARGUMENT.

Satan, having compassed the Earth, with meditated guile returns as a mist by night into Paradise; enters into the Serpent sleeping. Adam and Eve in the morning go forth to their labours, which Eve proposes to divide in several places, each labouring apart: Adam consents not, alleging the danger, lest that enemy, of whom they were forewarned, should attempt her found alone. Eve, loth to be thought not circumspect or firm enough, urges her going apart, the rather desirous to make trial of her strength; Adam at last yields. The Serpent finds her alone: his subtle approach, first gazing, then speaking, with much flattery extolling Eve above all other creatures. Eve, wondering to hear the Serpent speak, asks how he attained to human speech and such understanding, not till now; the Serpent answers, that by tasting of a certain tree in the garden he attained both to speech and reason, till then void of both. Eve requires him to bring her to that tree, and finds it to be the Tree of Knowledge forbidden. The Serpent, now grown bolder, with many wiles and arguments induces her at length to eat; she, pleased with the taste, deliberates a while whether to impart thereof to Adam or not; at last brings him of the fruit; relates what persuaded her to eat thereof. Adam, at first amazed, but perceiving her lost, resolves through vehemence of love to perish with her; and, extenuating the trespass, eats also of the fruit. The effects thereof in them both; they seek to cover their nakedness; then fall to variance and accusation of one another.

BOOK IX.

NO more of talk where God or Angel-guest
With Man, as with his friend, familiar used
To sit indulgent, and with him partake
Rural repast, permitting him the while Venial discourse unblamed. I now must change
Those notes to tragic; foul distrust and breach Disloyal on the part of man, revolt
And disobedience; on the part of Heaven,
Now alienated, distance and distaste,
Anger and just rebuke, and judgment given,
That brought into this World a world of woe,
Sin and her shadow Death, and Misery,
Death's harbinger. Sad task! yet argument
Not less but more heroic than the wrath
Of stern Achilles on his foe pursued
Thrice fugitive about Troy wall; or rage
Of Turnus for Lavinia disespoused;
Or Neptune's ire, or Juno's, that so long
Perplexed the Greek, and Cytherea's son:
If answerable style I can obtain
Of my celestial patroness, who deigns
Her nightly visitation unimplored,

10

20

And dictates to me slumbering, or inspires
 Easy my unpremeditated verse,
 Since first this subject for heroic song
 Pleas'd me, long choosing and beginning late,
 Not sedulous by nature to indite
 Wars, hitherto the only argument
 Heroic deem'd, chief mastery to dissect
 With long and tedious havoc fabled knights
 In battles feign'd (the better fortitude
 Of patience and heroic martyrdom
 Unsung), or to describe races and games,
 Or tilting furniture, emblazoned shields,
 Impresses quaint, caparisons and steeds,
 Bases and tinsel trappings, gorgeous knights
 At joust and tournament; then marshalled feast
 Served up in hall with sewers and seneshals:
 The skill of artifice or office mean;
 Not that which justly gives heroic name
 To person or to poem. Me, of these Nor skilled nor studious, higher argument
 Remains, sufficient of itself to raise
 That name, unless an age too late, or cold
 Climate, or years, damp my intended wing
 Depressed; and much they may, if all be mine,
 Not hers who brings it nightly to my ear.

The sun was sunk, and after him the star
 Of Hesperus, whose office is to bring Twilight upon the Earth, short arbiter
 'Twixt day and night, and now from end to end
 Night's hemisphere had veiled the horizon round;
 When Satan, who late fled before the threats
 Of Gabriel out of Eden, now improved
 In meditated fraud and malice, bent

30

40

50

On Man's destruction, maugre what might hap
 Of heavier on himself, fearless returned.
 By night he fled, and at midnight returned
 From compassing the Earth; cautious of day,
 Since Uriel, regent of the sun, descried 60
 His entrance, and forewarned the Cherubim
 That kept their watch. Thence, full of anguish, driven,
 The space of seven continued nights he rode
 With darkness; thrice the equinoctial line
 He circled, four times crossed the car of Night
 From pole to pole, traversing each colure;
 On the eighth returned, and on the coast averse
 From entrance or cherubic watch by stealth
 Found unsuspected way. There was a place
 (Now not, though sin, not time, first wrought the change) 70
Where Tigris, at the foot of Paradise,
 Into a gulf shot under ground, till part
 Rose up a fountain by the Tree of Life.
 In with the river sunk, and with it rose,
 Satan, involved in rising mist; then sought
Where to lie hid. Sea he had searched and land
 From Eden over Pontus, and the pool
 Mæotis, up beyond the river Ob;
 Downward as far antarctic; and in length
 West from Orontes to the ocean barred 80
 At Darien, thence to the land where flows
 Ganges and Indus. Thus the orb he roamed
With narrow search, and with inspection deep Considered every creature, which of all
 Most opportune might serve his wiles, and found
 The serpent subtlest beast of all the field.
 Him, after long debate, irresolute
 Of thoughts revolved, his final sentence chose

Fit vessel, fittest imp of fraud, in whom
 To enter, and his dark suggestions hide 90
 From sharpest sight; for in the wily snake
Whatever sleights none would suspicious mark,
 As from his wit and native subtlety
 Proceeding, which, in other beasts observed,
 Doubt might beget of diabolic power
 Active within beyond the sense of brute.
 Thus he resolved, but first from inward grief
 His bursting passion into plaints thus poured:
 "O Earth, how like to Heaven, if not preferred
 More justly, seat worthier of Gods, as built 100
 With second thoughts, reforming what was old!
 For what God, after better, worse would build?
 Terrestrial Heaven, danced round by other Heavens
 That shine, yet bear their bright officious lamps,
 Light above light, for thee alone, as seems,
 In thee concentrating all their precious beams
 Of sacred influence! As God in Heaven
 Is centre, yet extends to all, so thou
 Centring receiv'st from all those orbs; in thee,
 Not in themselves, all their known virtue appears 110
 Productive in herb, plant, and nobler birth
 Of creatures animate with gradual life
 Of growth, sense, reason, all summed up in Man.
 With what delight could I have walked thee round,
 If I could joy in aught, sweet interchange
 Of hill and valley, rivers, woods, and plains,
 Now land, now sea, and shores with forest crowned,
 Rocks, dens, and caves! but I in none of these Find place or refuge; and the more I see
 Pleasures about me, so much more I feel 120
 Torment within me, as from the hateful siege

Of contraries; all good to me becomes
 Bane, and in Heaven much worse would be my state.
 But neither here seek I, no, nor in Heaven
 To dwell, unless by mastering Heaven's Supreme;
 Nor hope to be myself less miserable
 By what I seek, but others to make such
 As I, though thereby worse to me redound:
 For only in destroying I find ease
 To my relentless thoughts; and, him destroyed, 130
 Or won to what may work his utter loss,
 For whom all this was made, all this will soon
 Follow, as to him linked in weal or woe;
In woe then, that destruction wide may range!
To me shall be the glory sole among
The infernal Powers, in one day to have marred
What he, Almighty styled, six nights and days
 Continued making, and who knows how long
 Before had been contriving? though perhaps 140
 Not longer than since I in one night freed
 From servitude inglorious well nigh half
 The Angelic name, and thinner left the throng
 Of his adorers. He, to be avenged,
 And to repair his numbers thus impaired—
 Whether such virtue spent of old now failed
 More Angels to create, if they at least
 Are his created, or to spite us more—
 Determined to advance into our room
 A creature formed of earth, and him endow,
 Exalted from so base original, 150
 With Heavenly spoils, our spoils. What he decreed
 He effected; Man he made, and for him built Magnificent this World, and Earth his seat,
 Him lord pronounced, and, O indignity!

Subjected to his service Angel-wings,
 And flaming ministers to watch and tend
 Their earthy charge. Of these the vigilance
 I dread, and, to elude, thus wrapt in mist
 Of midnight vapour glide obscure, and pry
In every bush and brake, where hap may find
The serpent sleeping, in whose mazy folds
To hide me, and the dark intent I bring.

160

O foul descent! that I, who erst contended
 With Gods to sit the highest, am now constrained
 Into a beast, and, mixed with bestial slime,
 This essence to incarnate and imbrute,
 That to the highth of deity aspired!
 But what will not ambition and revenge
 Descend to? ' Who aspires must down as low
 As high he soared, obnoxious first or last
 To basest things. Revenge, at first though sweet, Bitter ere long back on itself recoils.

170

Let it; I reck not, so it light well aimed (Since higher I fall short) on him who next Provokes my envy, this new favourite
 Of Heaven, this man of clay, son of despise,
 Whom, us the more to spite, his Maker raised
 From dust: spite then with spite is best repaid."

So saying, through each thicket, dank or dry,
 Like a black mist low-creeping, he held on
 His midnight search, where soonest he might find
The serpent. Him fast sleeping soon he found,
 In labyrinth of many a round self-rolled,
 His head the midst, well stored with subtle wiles:
 Not yet in horrid shade or dismal den,
 Nor nocent yet, but on the grassy herb,
 Fearless, unfeared, he slept. In at his mouth

180

The Devil entered, and his brutal sense,
 In heart or head, possessing soon inspired
 With act intelligential; but his sleep 190
 Disturbed not, waiting close the approach of morn.

Now, whenas sacred light began to dawn
 In Eden on the humid flowers, that breathed
Their morning incense, when all things that breathe
 From the Earth's great altar send up silent praise
 To the Creator, and his nostrils fill
With grateful smell, forth came the human pair,
And joined their vocal worship to the quire
 Of creatures wanting voice; that done, partake
 The season, prime for sweetest scents and airs; 200
 Then commune how that day they best may ply
 Their growing work; for much their work outgrew
 The hands' dispatch of two, gardening so wide:
 And Eve first to her husband thus began:

"Adam, well may we labour still to dress
This garden, still to tend plant, herb, and flower,
Our pleasant task enjoined; but, till more hands
Aid us, the work under our labour grows,
 Luxurious by restraint: what we by day
 Lop overgrown, or prune, or prop, or bind, 210
 One night or two with wanton growth derides,
 Tending to wild. Thou therefore now advise,
 Or hear what to my mind first thoughts present:
Let us divide our labours—thou where choice
 Leads thee, or where most needs, whether to wind
 The woodbine round this arbour, or direct
 The clasping ivy where to climb; while I,
 In yonder spring of roses intermixed
 With myrtle, find what to redress till noon.
 For, while so near each other thus all day 220

Our task we choose, what wonder if so near Looks intervene and smiles, or object new Casual discourse draw on, which intermits
 Our day's work, brought to little, though begun
 Early, and the hour of supper comes unearned!"

To whom mild answer 'Adam thus returned:
 "Sole Eve, associate sole, to me beyond
 Compare above all living creatures dear!
 Well hast thou motioned, well thy thoughts employed
 How we might best fulfil the work which here 230
 God hath assigned us, nor of me shalt pass
 Unpraised; for nothing lovelier can be found
 In woman than to study household good,
 And good works in her husband to promote.
 Yet not so strictly hath our Lord imposed
 Labour, as to debar us when we need
 Refreshment, whether food, or talk between,
 Food of the mind, or this sweet intercourse
 Of looks and smiles; for smiles from reason flow,
 To brute denied, and are of love the food— 240
 Love, not the lowest end of human life.
 For not to irksome toil, but to delight,
 He made us, and delight to reason joined.
 These paths and bowers doubt not but our joint hands
 Will keep from wilderness with ease, as wide
 As we need walk, till younger hands ere long Assist us. But if much converse perhaps Thee satiate, to short absence I could yield;
 For solitude sometimes is best society,
 And short retirement urges sweet return. 250
 But other doubt possesses me, lest harm
 Befall thee severed from me; for thou know'st
 What hath been warned us, what malicious foe,

Envyng our happiness, and of his own
 Despairing, seeks to work us woe and shame
 By sly assault; and somewhere nigh at hand
 Watches, no doubt, with greedy hope to find
 His wish and best advantage, us asunder,
 Hopeless to circumvent us joined, where each
 To other speedy aid might lend at need. 260

Whether his first design be to withdraw
 Our fealty from God, or to disturb
 Conjugal love, than which perhaps no bliss
 Enjoyed by us excites his envy more;
 Or this, or worse, leave not the faithful side
 That gave thee being, still shades thee and protects.
 The wife, where danger or dishonour lurks,
 Safest and seemliest by her husband stays,
 Who guards her, or with her the worst endures."

To whom the virgin majesty of Eve, 270
 As one who loves, and some unkindness meets,
 With sweet austere composure thus replied:

"Offspring of Heaven and Earth, and all Earth's lord!
 That such an enemy we have, who seeks
 Our ruin, both by thee informed I learn,
 And from the parting Angel overheard,
 As in a shady nook I stood behind,
 Just then returned at shut of evening flowers.

But that thou shouldst my firmness therefore doubt
To God or thee, because we have a foe 280
May tempt it, I expected not to hear.

His violence thou fear'st not, being such
 As we, not capable of death or pain,
 Can either not receive, or can repel.
His fraud is then thy fear; which plain infers
Thy equal fear that my firm faith and love

Can by his fraud be shaken or seduced;
Thoughts, which how found they harbour in thy breast,
Adam! misthought of her to thee so dear?"

To whom with healing words Adam replied: . . . 290

"Daughter of God and Man, immortal Eve!
For such thou art, from sin and blame entire;
Not diffident of thee do I dissuade
Thy absence from my sight, but to avoid
The attempt itself, intended by our foe.

For he who tempts, though in vain, at least asperses
The tempted with dishonour foul, supposed
Not incorruptible of faith, not proof

Against temptation. Thou thyself with scorn
And anger wouldst resent the offered wrong, 300
Though ineffectual found; misdeem not then,
If such affront I labour to avert

From thee alone, which on us both at once
The enemy, though bold, will hardly dare,
Or daring, first on me the assault shall light.

Nor thou his malice and false guile contemn—
Subtle he needs must be, who could seduce
Angels—nor think superfluous others' aid.

I from the influence of thy looks receive
Access in every virtue; in thy sight 310

More wise, more watchful, stronger, if need were
Of outward strength; while shame, thou looking on,
Shame to be overcome or overreached,
Would utmost vigour raise, and raised unite.

Why shouldst not thou like sense within thee feel
When I am present, and thy trial choose
With me, best witness of thy virtue tried?"

So spake domestic Adam in his care
And matrimonial love; but Eve, who thought

Less attributed to her faith sincere,
Thus her reply with accent sweet renewed: 320

“If this be our condition thus to dwell
In narrow circuit straitened by a foe,
Subtle or violent, we not endued
Single with like defence wherever met,
How are we happy, still in fear of harm?
But harm precedes not sin: only our foe
Tempting affronts us with his foul esteem.
Of our integrity; his foul esteem
Sticks no dishonour on our front, but turns 330
Foul on himself; then wherefore shunned or feared
By us? who rather double honour gain
From his surmise proved false, find peace within,
Favour from Heaven, our witness, from the event.
And what is faith, love, virtue, unassayed
Alone, without exterior help sustained?
Let us not then suspect our happy state
Left so imperfect by the Maker wise,
As not secure to single or combined.
Frail is our happiness, if this be so, 340
And Eden were no Eden, thus exposed.”

To whom thus Adam fervently replied:
“O Woman, best are all things as the will
Of God ordained them; his creating hand
Nothing imperfect or deficient left
Of all that he created, much less Man,
Or ought that might his happy state secure,
Secure from outward force: within himself
The danger lies, yet lies within his power;
Against his will he can receive no harm. 350
But God left free the will; for what obeys
Reason is free, and Reason he made right.”

But bid her well be ware, and still erect,
 Lest, by some fair appearing good surprised,
 She dictate false, and misinform the will
 To do what God expressly hath forbid.
 Not then mistrust, but tender love, enjoins
 That I should mind thee oft, and mind thou me.

Firm we subsist, yet possible to swerve,
Since Reason not impossibly may meet 360
Some specious object by the foe suborned,
And fall into deception unaware,

Not keeping strictest watch, as she was warned.

Seek not temptation then, which to avoid
 Were better, and most likely if from me
 Thou sever not: trial will come unsought.

Wouldst thou approve thy constancy, approve
 First thy obedience; the other who can know,
 Not seeing thee attempted, who attest?

But if thou think trial unsought may find 370

Us both securer than thus warned thou seem'st,
 Go; for thy stay, not free, absents thee more;

Go in thy native innocence, rely

On what thou hast of virtue, summon all;

For God towards thee hath done his part; do thine."

So spake the patriarch of mankind; but Eve
 Persisted; yet submiss, though last, replied:

"With thy permission then, and thus forewarned,
 Chiefly by what thine own last reasoning words

Touched only, that our trial, when least sought, 380

May find us both perhaps far less prepared,

The willinger I go, nor much expect

A foe so proud will first the weaker seek;

So bent, the more shall shame him his repulse."

Thus saying, from her husband's hand her hand

Soft she withdrew, and like a wood-nymph light,
 Oread or Dryad, or of Delia's train,
 Betook her to the groves, but Delia's self
 In gait surpassed and goddess-like deport,
 Though not as she with bow and quiver armed, 390
 But with such gardening tools as art, yet rude, Guiltless of fire, had formed, or Angels brought.
 To Pales, or Pomona, thus adorned,
 Likest she seemed—Pomona when she fled
 Vertumnus—or to Ceres in her prime,
 Yet virgin of Proserpina from Jove.
 Her long with ardent look his eye pursued
 Delighted, but desiring more her stay.
 Oft he to her his charge of quick return
 Repeated; she to him as oft engaged 400
 To be returned by noon amid the bower,
 And all things in best order to invite Noontide repast, or afternoon's repose.
 O much deceived, much failing, hapless Eve,
 Of thy presumed return! event perverse!
 Thou never from that hour in Paradise
 Found'st either sweet repast or sound repose;
 Such ambush, hid among sweet flowers and shades,
Waited with hellish rancour imminent
 To intercept thy way, or send thee back 410
 Despoiled of innocence, of faith, of bliss.

For now, and since first break of dawn, the Fiend,
 Mere serpent in appearance, forth was come,
 And on his quest, where likeliest he might find
 The only two of mankind, but in them
 The whole included race, his purposed prey.
 In bower and field he sought, where any tuft
 Of grove or garden-plot more pleasant lay,

Their tendance or plantation for delight ;
 By fountain or by shady rivulet 420
 He sought them both, but wished his hap might find
Eve separate ; he wished, but not with hope
 Of what so seldom chanced ; when to his wish,
 Beyond his hope, Eve separate he spies,
 Veiled in a cloud of fragrance, where she stood,
 Half-spied, so thick the roses bushing round
 About her glowed, oft stooping to support
 Each flower of tender stalk, whose head, though gay
 Carnation, purple, azure, or specked with gold,
 Hung drooping unsustained : them she upstays 430
 Gently with myrtle band, mindless the while Herself, though fairest unsupported flower,
 From her best prop so far, and storm so nigh.
Nearer he drew, and many a walk traversed
 Of stateliest covert, cedar, pine, or palm ;
 Then voluble and bold, now hid, now seen,
 Among thick-woven arborets, and flowers
 Imbordered on each bank, the hand of Eve :
 Spot more delicious than those gardens feigned
 Or of revived Adonis, or renowned 440
 Alcinous, host of old Laertes' son,
 Or that, not mystic, where the sapient king
 Held dalliance with his fair Egyptian spouse.
~~Much he the place admired, the person more.~~
 As one who, long in populous city pent,
 Where houses thick and sewers annoy the air,
 Forth issuing on a summer's morn to breathe
 Among the pleasant villages and farms
 Adjoined, from each thing met conceives delight—
 The smell of grain, or tedded grass, or kine, 450
 Or dairy, each rural sight, each rural sound ;

If chance with nymph-like step fair virgin pass,
 What pleasing seemed, for her now pleases more,
 She most, and in her look sums all delight :
 Such pleasure took the Serpent to behold
 This flowery plat, the sweet recess of Eve
 Thus early, thus alone. Her heavenly form
Angelic, but more soft and feminine,
Her graceful innocence, her every air
Of gesture or least action, overawed 460
 His malice, and with rapine sweet bereaved
 His fierceness of the fierce intent it brought :
 That space the Evil One abstracted stood
 From his own evil, and for the time remained Stupidly good, of enmity disarmed,
 Of guile, of hate, of envy, of revenge.
 But the hot hell that always in him burns,
 Though in mid Heaven, soon ended his delight,
 And tortures him now more, the more he sees
 Of pleasure not for him ordained ; then soon 470
 Fierce hate he recollects, and all his thoughts
 Of mischief, gratulating, thus excites :
 “ Thoughts, whither have ye led me ? with what sweet
 Compulsion thus transported to forget
 What hither brought us ? hate, not love, nor hope
 Of Paradise for Hell, hope here to taste
 Of pleasure, but all pleasure to destroy,
 Save what is in destroying ; other joy
 To me is lost. Then let me not let pass
 Occasion which now smiles : behold alone 480
 The woman, opportune to all attempts,
Her husband, for I view far round, not nigh,
 Whose higher intellectual more I shun,
 And strength, of courage haughty, and of limb

Heroic built, though of terrestrial mould ;
 Foe not formidable, exempt from wound,
 I not ; so much hath Hell debased, and pain
 Enfeebled me, to what I was in Heaven.
 She fair, divinely fair, fit love for Gods,
 Not terrible, though terror be in love
 And beauty, not approached by stronger hate,
 Hate stronger under show of love well feigned—
 The way which to her ruin now I tend.”

490

So spake the Enemy of mankind, enclosed
 In serpent, inmate bad, and toward Eve
 Addressed his way—not with indented wave,
 Prone on the ground, as since, but on his rear,
 Circular base of rising folds, that towered
 Fold above fold, a surging maze ; his head
 Crested aloft, and carbuncle his eyes ;
 With burnished neck of verdant gold, erect
 Amidst his circling spires, that on the grass
 Floated redundant. Pleasing was his shape
 And lovely ; never since of serpent kind
 Lovelier ; not those that in Illyria changed
 Hermione and Cadmus, or the god
 In Epidaurus ; nor to which transformed
 Ammonian Jove, or Capitoline, was seen,
 He with Olympias, this with her who bore
 Scipio, the highth of Rome. With tract oblique
 At first, as one who sought access but feared
 To interrupt, sidelong he works his way.
 As when a ship by skilful steersman wrought
 Nigh river's mouth or foreland, where the wind
 Veers oft, as oft so steers, and shifts her sail :
 So varied he, and of his tortuous train
 Curled many a wanton wreath in sight of Eve,

500

510

To lure her eye ; she, busied, heard the sound
 Of rustling leaves, but minded not, as used
 To such disport before her through the field, 520
 From every beast, more duteous at her call,
 Than at Circean call the herd disguised.

He, bolder now, uncalled before her stood,
 But as in gaze admiring. Oft he bowed
His turret crest, and sleek enamelled neck,
Fawning, and licked the ground whereon she trod.
His gentle dumb expression turned at length
The eye of Eve to mark his play ; he, glad
 Of her attention gained, with serpent-tongue
 Organic, or impulse of vocal air, 530

His fraudulent temptation thus began :

“Wonder not, sovran mistress, if perhaps
 Thou canst who art sole wonder ; much less arm
 Thy looks, the heaven of mildness, with disdain,
 Displeased that I approach thee thus, and gaze
 Insatiate, I thus single, nor have feared
 Thy awful brow, more awful thus retired.
 Fairest resemblance of thy Maker tair,
 Thee all things living gaze on, all things thine
 By gift, and thy celestial beauty adore, 540
 With ravishment beheld—there best beheld
 Where universally admired ; but here
 In this enclosure wild, these beasts among,
 Beholders rude, and shallow to discern
 Half what in thee is fair, one man except,
 Who sees thee? (and what is one?) who shouldst be seen
 A Goddess among Gods, adored and served
 By Angels numberless, thy daily train.”

So glozed the Tempter, and his proem tuned ;
 Into the heart of Eve his words made way, 550

Though at the voice much marvelling ; at length,
Not unamazed, she thus in answer spake :

“What may this mean? Language of Man pronounced
By tongue of brute, and human sense expressed!

The first at least of these I thought denied
To beasts, whom God on their creation-day
Created mute to all articulate sound ;
The latter I demur, for in their looks
Much reason, and in their actions, oft appears.
Thee, Serpent, subtlest beast of all the field
I knew, but not with human voice endued ;
Redouble then this miracle, and say,
How cam'st thou speakable of mute, and how
To me so friendly grown above the rest
Of brutal kind, that daily are in sight :
Say, for such wonder claims attention due.”

560

To whom the guileful Tempter thus replied :
“Empress of this fair World, resplendent Eve!
Easy to me it is to tell thee all What thou command'st, and right thou shouldst be obey'd.

570

I was at first as other beasts that graze
The trodden herb, of abject thoughts and low,
As was my food, nor aught but food discerned
Or sex, and apprehended nothing high :
Till on a day, roving the field, I chanced
A goodly tree far distant to behold,
Loaden with fruit of fairest colours mixed,
Ruddy and gold. I nearer drew to gaze ;
When from the boughs a savoury odour blown,
Grateful to appetite, more pleased my sense
Than smell of sweetest fennel, or the teats
Of ewe or goat dropping with milk at even,

580

Unsucked of lamb or kid, that tend their play.
 To satisfy the sharp desire I had
 Of tasting those fair apples, I resolved
 Not to defer; hunger and thirst at once,
 Powerful persuaders, quickened at the scent
 Of that alluring fruit, urged me so keen.
 About the mossy trunk I wound me soon;
 For, high from ground, the branches would require 590
 Thy utmost reach or Adam's: round the tree
 All other beasts that saw, with like desire
 Longing and envying stood, but could not reach.
 Amid the tree now got, where plenty hung
 Tempting so nigh, to pluck and eat my fill
 I spared not; for such pleasure till that hour
 At feed or fountain never had I found.
 Sated at length, ere long I might perceive Strange alteration in me, to degree
 Of reason in my inward powers, and speech 600
 Wanted not long, though to this shape retained.
 Thenceforth to speculations high or deep
 I turned my thoughts, and with capacious mind
 Considered all things visible in Heaven,
 Or Earth, or middle, all things fair and good:
 But all that fair and good in thy divine
 Semblance, and in thy beauty's heavenly ray,
 United I beheld; no fair to thine
 Equivalent or second, which compelled
 Me thus, though importune perhaps, to come 610
 And gaze, and worship thee of right declared
 Sovran of creatures, universal Dame!"

So talked the spirited sly Snake; and Eve,
 Yet more amazed, unwary thus replied:

"Serpent, thy overpraising leaves in doubt

The virtue of that fruit, in thee first proved.
 But say, where grows the tree? from hence how far?
 For many are the trees of God that grow
 In Paradise, and various, yet unknown
 To us; in such abundance lies our choice,
 As leaves a greater store of fruit untouched,
 Still hanging incorruptible, till men
 Grow up to their provision, and more hands
 Help to disburden Nature of her birth.”

620

To whom the wily Adder, blithe and glad:
 “Empress, the way is ready, and not long;
 Beyond a row of myrtles, on a flat,
 Fast by a fountain, one small thicket past
 Of blowing myrrh and balm: if thou accept
 My conduct, I can bring thee thither soon.”

630

“Lead then,” said Eve. He leading swiftly rolled
 In tangles, and made intricate seem straight,
 To mischief swift. Hope elevates, and joy
 Brightens his crest. As when a wandering fire,
 Compact of unctuous vapour, which the night
 Condenses, and the cold environs round,
 Kindled through agitation to a flame
 (Which oft, they say, some evil spirit attends),
 Hovering and blazing with delusive light,
 Misleads the amazed night-wanderer from his way
 To bogs and mires, and oft through pond or pool,
 There swallowed up and lost, from succour far:
 So glistered the dire Snake, and into fraud
Led Eve, our credulous mother, to the Tree
Of prohibition, root of all our woe;

640

Which when she saw, thus to her guide she spake:

“Serpent, we might have spared our coming hither,
 Fruitless to me, though fruit be here to excess,

The credit of whose virtue rest with thee ;
 Wondrous indeed, if cause of such effects ! 650
 But of this tree we may not taste nor touch ;
 God so commanded, and left that command
 Sole daughter of his voice : the rest, we live
 Law to ourselves ; our reason is our law."

To whom the Tempter guilefully replied :
 "Indeed? Hath God then said that of the fruit
 Of all these garden-trees ye shall not eat,
 Yet lords declared of all in Earth or air?"

To whom thus Eve, yet sinless : "Of the fruit
 Of each tree in the garden we may eat ; 660
 But of the fruit of this fair tree amidst
 The garden, God hath said, 'Ye shall not eat Thereof, nor shall ye touch it, lest ye die.'"

She scarce had said, though brief, when now more bold
 The Tempter, but with show of zeal and love
 To Man, and indignation at his wrong,
 New part puts on, and, as to passion moved,
 Fluctuates disturbed, yet comely, and in act
 Raised, as of some great matter to begin.
 As when of old some orator renowned 670
 In Athens or free Rome, where eloquence
 Flourished, since mute, to some great cause addressed,
 Stood in himself collected, while each part,
 Motion, each act, won audience ere the tongue,
 Sometimes in highth began, as no delay
 Of preface brooking through his zeal of right :
 So standing, moving, or to highth upgrown,
 The Tempter, all impassioned, thus began :

"O sacred, wise, and wisdom-giving Plant,
 Mother of science ! now I feel thy power 680
 Within me clear, not only to discern

Things in their causes, but to trace the ways
 Of highest agents, deemed however wise.
 Queen of this Universe! do not believe
 Those rigid threats of death. Ye shall not die:
 How should ye? by the fruit? it gives you life
 To knowledge; by the threatener? look on me,
 Me who have touched and tasted, yet both live,
 And life more perfect have attained than Fate
 Meant me, by venturing higher than my lot.
Shall that be shut to Man which to the beast
Is open? or will God incense his ire
 For such a petty trespass, and not praise
 Rather your dauntless virtue, whom the pain
 Of death denounced, whatever thing death be,
 Deterred not from achieving what might lead
 To happier life, knowledge of good and evil?
 Of good, how just! of evil—if what is evil
 Be real, why not known, since easier shunned?
 God therefore cannot hurt ye, and be just;
 Not just, not God; not feared then, nor obeyed:
 Your fear itself of death removes the fear.
 Why then was this forbid? Why but to awe,
Why but to keep ye low and ignorant,
His worshippers? He knows that in the day
 Ye eat thereof, your eyes that seem so clear,
 Yet are but dim, shall perfectly be then
 Opened and cleared, and ye shall be as Gods,
Knowing both good and evil, as they know.
 That ye should be as Gods, since I as Man,
 Internal Man, is but proportion meet:
 I, of brute, human; ye, of human, Gods.
 So ye shall die perhaps, by putting off
 Human, to put on Gods; death to be wished,

690

700

710

Though threatened, which no worse than this can bring!
 And what are Gods, that Man may not become
 As they, participating godlike food?
 The Gods are first, and that advantage use
 On our belief, that all from them proceeds:
 I question it; for this fair Earth I see, 720
 Warmed by the sun, producing every kind,
 Them nothing: if they all things, who enclosed
 Knowledge of good and evil in this tree,
 That whoso eats thereof forthwith attains
 Wisdom without their leave? and wherein lies
 The offence, that Man should thus attain to know?
 What can your knowledge hurt him, or this tree
 Impart against his will, if all be his?
 Or is it envy? and can envy dwell
 In Heavenly breasts? These, these and many more 730
 Causes import your need of this fair fruit.
 Goddess humane, reach then, and freely taste!"

He ended, and his words, replete with guile,
 Into her heart too easy entrance won.
 Fixed on the fruit she gazed, which to behold
 Might tempt alone, and in her ears the sound
 Yet rung of his persuasive words, impregn'd
 With reason, to her seeming, and with truth.
 Meanwhile the hour of noon drew on, and waked
 An eager appetite, raised by the smell 740
 So savoury of that fruit, which with desire,
 Inclined now grown to touch or taste,
 Solicited her longing eye; yet first,
 Pausing a while, thus to herself she mused:

"Great are thy virtues, doubtless, best of fruits,
 Though kept from Man, and worthy to be admired,
 Whose taste, too long forborne, at first assay

Gave elocution to the mute, and taught
 The tongue not made for speech to speak thy praise.
 Thy praise he also who forbids thy use 750
 Conceals not from us, naming thee the Tree
 Of Knowledge, knowledge both of good and evil;
 Forbids us then to taste; but his forbidding Commends thee more, while it infers the good
 By thee communicated, and our want;
 For good unknown sure is not had, or had,
 And yet unknown, is as not had at all.
 In plain then, what forbids he but to know?
 Forbids us good, forbids us to be wise!
 Such prohibitions bind not. But if death 760
 Bind us with after-bands, what profits then
 Our inward freedom? In the day we eat
 Of this fair fruit, our doom is, we shall die!
 How dies the Serpent? He hath eaten and lives,
 And knows, and speaks, and reasons, and discerns,
 Irrational till then. For us alone
 Was death invented? or to us denied
 This intellectual food, for beasts reserved?
 For beasts it seems; yet that one beast which first 770
 Hath tasted envies not, but brings with joy
 The good befallen him, author unsuspect,
 Friendly to Man, far from deceit or guile.
 What fear I then? rather, what know to fear
 Under this ignorance of good and evil,
 Of God or death, of law or penalty?
 Here grows the cure of all, this fruit divine,
 Fair to the eye, inviting to the taste,
 Of virtue to make wise: what hinders then
 To reach, and feed at once both body and mind?"
 So saying, her rash hand in evil hour 780

Forth reaching to the fruit, she plucked, she eat.
 Earth felt the wound, and Nature from her seat,
 Sighing through all her works, gave signs of woe
 That all was lost. Back to the thicket slunk
 The guilty Serpent, and well might, for Eve,
 Intent now only on her taste, naught else
 Regarded; such delight till then, as seemed,
 In fruit she never tasted, whether true,
 Or fancied so through expectation high
 Of knowledge; nor was Godhead from her thought. 790
 Greedily she ingorged without restraint,
 And knew not eating death. Satiate at length,
 And hightened as with wine, jocund and boon,
 Thus to herself she pleasingly began:

“O sovran, virtuous, precious of all trees
 In Paradise! of operation blest
 To sapience, hitherto obscured, infamed,
 And thy fair fruit let hang, as to no end
 Created! but henceforth my early care,
 Not without song, each morning, and due praise, 800
 Shall tend thee, and the fertile burden ease
 Of thy full branches, offered free to all;
 Till, dieted by thee, I grow mature
 In knowledge, as the Gods who all things know;
 Though others envy what they cannot give—
 For, had the gift been theirs, it had not here
 Thus grown! Experience, next to thee I owe,
 Best guide: not following thee, I had remained
 In ignorance: thou open'st Wisdom's way,
 And giv'st access, though secret she retire. 810
 And I perhaps am secret; Heaven is high,
High, and remote to see from thence distinct Each thing on Earth; and other care perhaps deliberate 12

 30
 May have diverted from continual watch
 Our great Forbidder, safe with all his spies
 About him. ~~But to Adam in what sort~~

Shall I appear? Shall I to him make known
 As yet my change, and give him to partake
 Full happiness with me, or rather not,
 But keep the odds of knowledge in my power
 Without copartner? so to add what wants
 In female sex, the more to draw his love,
 And render me more equal, and perhaps,
 A thing not undesirable, sometime
 Superior; for, inferior, who is free?

820

This may be well: but what if God have seen,
 And death ensue? then I shall be no more,

And Adam, wedded to another Eve,
 Shall live with her enjoying, I extinct!

A death to think! Confirmed then I resolve,
 Adam shall share with me in bliss or woe:
 So dear I love him, that with him all deaths
 I could endure, without him live no life."

830

So saying, from the tree her step she turned,
 But first low reverence done, as to the Power
 That dwelt within, whose presence had infused
 Into the plant sciential sap, derived
 From nectar, drink of Gods. | Adam the while,
 Waiting desirous her return, had wove
 Of choicest flowers a garland, to adorn
 Her tresses, and her rural labours crown,
 As reapers oft are wont their harvest queen.

840

Great joy he promised to his thoughts, and new Solace in her return, so long delayed;
 Yet oft his heart, divine of something ill,
 Misgave him; he the faltering measure felt,

1st 3

commence

And forth to meet her went, the way she took
 That morn when first they parted. By the Tree
 Of Knowledge he must pass; there he her met,
 Scarce from the tree returning; in her hand 850

A bough of fairest fruit, that downy smiled,
 New gathered, and ambrosial smell diffused.
 To him she hasted; in her face excuse
 Came prologue, and apology to prompt,
 Which, with bland words at will, she thus addressed:

“Hast thou not wondered, Adam, at my stay?
 Thee I have missed, and thought it long, deprived
 Thy presence—agony of love till now
 Not felt, nor shall be twice; for never more
 Mean I to try, what rash untried I sought, 860
 The pain of absence from thy sight. But strange Hath been the cause, and wonderful to hear.

This tree is not, as we are told, a tree
 Of danger tasted, nor to evil unknown
 Opening the way, but of divine effect
 To open eyes, and make them Gods who taste;
 And hath been tasted such. The Serpent wise,
 Or not restrained as we, or not obeying,
 Hath eaten of the fruit, and is become,
 Not dead, as we are threatened, but thenceforth 870

Endued with human voice and human sense,
 Reasoning to admiration, and with me
 Persuasively hath so prevailed, that I
 Have also tasted, and have also found
 The effects to correspond—opener mine eyes,
 Dim erst, dilated spirits, ampler heart,
 And growing up to Godhead; which for thee
 Chiefly I sought, without thee can despise.
 For bliss, as thou hast part, to me is bliss;

Tedious, unshared with thee, and odious soon. 880
 Thou therefore also taste, that equal lot
 May join us, equal joy, as equal love;
 Lest, thou not tasting, different degree
 Disjoin us, and I then too late renounce Deity for thee, when fate will not permit."

Thus Eve with countenance blithe her story told;
 But in her cheek distemper flushing glowed.
 On the other side, Adam, soon as he heard
 The fatal trespass done by Eve, amazed,
 Astonied stood and blank, while horror chill 890
 Ran through his veins, and all his joints relaxed;
 From his slack hand the garland wreathed for Eve
 Down dropt, and all the faded roses shed.
 Speechless he stood and pale, till thus at length
 First to himself he inward silence broke:

"O fairest of creation, last and best
 Of all God's works, creature in whom excelled
 Whatever can to sight or thought be formed,
 Holy, divine, good, amiable, or sweet!
 How art thou lost! how on a sudden lost, 900
 Defaced, deflowered, and now to death devote!
 Rather, how hast thou yielded to transgress
 The strict forbiddance, how to violate
 The sacred fruit forbidden? Some cursed fraud
 Of enemy hath beguiled thee, yet unknown,
 And me with thee hath ruined; for with thee
Certain my resolution is to die:
How can I live without thee? how forgo
 Thy sweet converse and love so dearly joined,
 To live again in these wild woods forlorn? 910
 Should God create another Eve, and I
 Another rib afford, yet loss of thee

Would never from my heart; no, no! I feel
 The link of nature draw me: flesh of flesh,
 Bone of my bone thou art, and from thy state
 Mine never shall be parted, bliss or woe.”

So having said, as one from sad dismay
 Recomforted, and, after thoughts disturbed,
 Submitting to what seemed remediless,
 Thus in calm mood his words to Eve he turned: 920

“Bold deed thou hast presumed, adventurous Eve,
 And peril great provoked, who thus hast dared,
 Had it been only coveting to eye
 That sacred fruit, sacred to abstinence;
Much more to taste it, under ban to touch.
 But past who can recall, or done undo?
 Not God Omnipotent, nor Fate! Yet so
 Perhaps thou shalt not die; perhaps the fact
 Is not so heinous now—foretasted fruit,
 Profaned first by the Serpent, by him first 930

Made common and unhallowed ere our taste,
 Nor yet on him found deadly; he yet lives,
 Lives, as thou saidst, and gains to live, as Man,
 Higher degree of life: inducement strong
 To us, as likely, tasting, to attain Proportional ascent; which cannot be
 But to be Gods, or Angels, demi-gods.
 Nor can I think that God, Creator wise,
 Though threatening, will in earnest so destroy
 Us his prime creatures, dignified so high, 940
 Set over all his works, which in our fall,
 For us created, needs with us must fail,
 Dependent made; so God shall uncreate,
 Be frustrate, do, undo, and labour lose;
 Not well conceived of God, who, though his power

Creation could repeat, yet would be loth
 Us to abolish, lest the Adversary
 Triumph and say: 'Fickle their state whom God
 Most favours; who can please him long? Me first
 He ruined, now mankind; whom will he next?' 950
 Matter of scorn not to be given the Foe.
 However, I with thee have fixed my lot,
 Certain to undergo like doom: if death
 Consort with thee, death is to me as life;
 So forcible within my heart I feel
 The bond of nature draw me to my own,
 My own in thee, for what thou art is mine.
 Our state cannot be severed; we are one,
 One flesh; to lose thee were to lose myself."

So Adam, and thus Eve to him replied: 960
 "O glorious trial of exceeding love,
 Illustrious evidence, example high!
 Engaging me to emulate; but, short
 Of thy perfection, how shall I attain,
 Adam? from whose dear side I boast me sprung,
 And gladly of our union hear thee speak,
 One heart, one soul in both; whereof good proof
 This day affords, declaring thee resolved,
 Rather than death, or aught than death more dread,
 Shall separate us, linked in love so dear, 970
 To undergo with me one guilt, one crime,
 If any be, of tasting this fair fruit;
 Whose virtue (for of good still good proceeds, Direct, or by occasion) hath presented
 This happy trial of thy love, which else
 So eminently never had been known.
 Were it I thought death menaced would ensue
 This my attempt, I would sustain alone

The worst, and not persuade thee, rather die
 Deserted, than oblige thee with a fact
 Pernicious to thy peace, chiefly assured
 Remarkably so late of thy so true,
 So faithful love unequalled; but I feel
 Far otherwise the event—not death, but life
 Augmented, opened eyes, new hopes, new joys,
 Taste so divine, that what of sweet before
 Hath touched my sense flat seems to this and harsh.
 On my experience, Adam, freely taste,
 And fear of death deliver to the winds.”

980

So saying, she embraced him, and for joy
 Tenderly wept, much won that he his love
 Had so ennobled, as of choice to incur
 Divine displeasure for her sake, or death.
 In recompense (for such compliance bad
 Such recompense best merits), from the bough
 She gave him of that fair enticing fruit
 With liberal hand; he scrupled not to eat,
 Against his better knowledge, not deceived,
 But fondly overcome with female charm.
 Earth trembled from her entrails, as again
 In pangs, and Nature gave a second groan;
 Sky loured, and, muttering thunder, some sad drops
 Wept at completing of the mortal sin
 Original; while Adam took no thought,
 Eating his fill, nor Eve to iterate
 Her former trespass feared, the more to soothe
 Him with her loved society; that now,
 As with new wine intoxicated both,
 They swim in mirth, and fancy that they feel
 Divinity within them breeding wings
 Wherewith to scorn the Earth. But that false fruit

990

1000 both - 1000 see there both

1010

Far other operation first displayed,
Carnal desire inflaming: he on Eve
Began to cast lascivious eyes; she him
As wantonly repaid; in lust they burn,
 Till Adam thus 'gan Eve to dalliance move:

“Eve, now I see thou art exact of taste,
 And elegant, of sapience no small part;
 Since to each meaning savour we apply,
 And palate call judicious. I the praise
 Yield thee, so well this day thou hast purveyed. 1020
 Much pleasure we have lost, while we abstained
From this delightful fruit, nor known till now
True relish, tasting; if such pleasure be
 In things to us forbidden, it might be wished
 For this one tree had been forbidden ten.
 But come; so well refreshed, now let us play,
As meet is, after such delicious fare;
 For never did thy beauty, since the day
 I saw thee first and wedded thee, adorned 1030
 With all perfections, so inflame my sense
 With ardour to enjoy thee, fairer now
 Than ever—bounty of this virtuous tree!”

So said he, and forbore not glance or toy
 Of amorous intent, well understood
 Of Eve, whose eye darted contagious fire.
 Her hand he seized, and to a shady bank,
 Thick overhead with verdant roof embowered,
He led her, nothing loth; flowers were the couch,
 Pansies, and violets, and asphodel, 1040
 And hyacinth—Earth's freshest, softest lap.
 There they their fill of love and love's disport
 Took largely, of their mutual guilt the seal,
 The solace of their sin, till dewy sleep

Oppressed them, wearied with their amorous play.

Soon as the force of that fallacious fruit,
That with exhilarating vapour bland
About their spirits had played, and inmost powers
Made err, was now exhaled, and grosser sleep,
Bred of unkindly fumes, with conscious dreams 1050

Encumbered, now had left them, up they rose
As from unrest, and, each the other viewing,
Soon found their eyes how opened, and their minds
How darkened. Innocence, that as a veil

Had shadowed them from knowing ill, was gone;

Just confidence, and native righteousness,

And honour, from about them, naked left

To guilty Shame: he covered, but his robe

Uncovered more. So rose the Danite strong,

Herculean Samson, from the harlot-lap 1060

Of Philistean Dalilah, and wak'd.

Shorn of his strength; they destitute and bare

Of all their virtue. Silent, and in face

Confounded, long they sat, as stricken mute;

Till Adam, though not less than Eve abashed,

At length gave utterance to these words constrained:

“O Eve, in evil hour thou didst give ear

To that false worm, of whomsoever taught

To counterfeit Man's voice, true in our fall,

False in our promised rising; since our eyes 1070

Opened we find indeed, and find we know

Both good and evil, good lost and evil got:

Bad fruit of knowledge, if this be to know,

Which leaves us naked thus, of honour void,

Of innocence, of faith, of purity,

Our wonted ornaments now soiled and stained,

And in our faces evident the signs

Of foul concupiscence; whence evil store,
 Even shame, the last of evils; of the first
 Be sure then. How shall I behold the face 1080
 Henceforth of God or Angel, erst with joy
 And rapture so oft beheld? those Heavenly shapes
 Will dazzle now this earthly with their blaze
 Insufferably bright. Oh, might I here
 In solitude live savage, in some glade
 Obscured, where highest woods, impenetrable
 To star or sunlight, spread their umbrage broad,
 And brown as evening! Cover me, ye pines!
 Ye cedars, with innumerable boughs
 Hide me, where I may never see them more! 1090
 But let us now, as in bad plight, devise
 What best may for the present serve to hide
 The parts of each from other that seem most
 To shame obnoxious, and unseemliest seen;
 Some tree, whose broad smooth leaves together sewed,
 And girded on our loins, may cover round
 Those middle parts, that this new comer, Shame,
 There sit not, and reproach us as unclean."

So counselled he, and both together went Into the thickest wood; there soon they chose 1100
 The fig-tree—not that kind for fruit renowned,
 But such as at this day, to Indians known,
 In Malabar or Decan spreads her arms
 Branching so broad and long that in the ground
 The bended twigs take root, and daughters grow
 About the mother tree, a pillared shade
 High overarched, and echoing walks between:
 There oft the Indian herdsman, shunning heat,
 Shelters in cool, and tends his pasturing herds
 At loop-holes cut through thickest shade. Those leaves 1110

They gathered, broad as Amazonian targe,
 And with what skill they had together sewed,
 To gird their waist; vain covering, if to hide
Their guilt and dreaded shame! Oh how unlike
 To that first naked glory! Such of late
 Columbus found the American, so girt
 With feathered cincture, naked else and wild
 Among the trees on isles and woody shores.
 Thus fenced, and, as they thought, their shame in part
 Covered, but not at rest or ease of mind, 1120
 They sat them down to weep; nor only tears
 Rained at their eyes, but high winds worse within Began to rise, high passions, anger, hate,
Mistrust, suspicion, discord, and shook sore
 Their inward state of mind, calm region once
 And full of peace, now tost and turbulent:
 For Understanding ruled not, and the Will Heard not her lore, both in subjection now
 To sensual Appetite, who, from beneath
 Usurping over sovran Reason, claimed 1130
 Superior sway. From thus distempered breast
 Adam, estranged in look and altered style,
 Speech intermitted thus to Eve renewed:

“Would thou hadst hearkened to my words, and stayed
 With me, as I besought thee, when that strange
Desire of wandering, this unhappy morn,
 I know not whence possessed thee! we had then
 Remained still happy, not, as now, despoiled
 Of all our good, shamed, naked, miserable!
 Let none henceforth seek needless cause to approve 1140
 The faith they owe; when earnestly they seek Such proof, conclude, they then begin to fail.”

To whom, soon moved with touch of blame, thus Eye:

"What words have passed thy lips, Adam severe!
 Imput'st thou that to my default, or will
 Of wandering, as thou call'st it, which who knows
 But might as ill have happened, thou being by,
 Or to thyself perhaps? Hadst thou been there,
 Or here the attempt, thou couldst not have discerned
Fraud in the Serpent, speaking as he spake; 1150
 No ground of enmity between us known,
 Why he should mean me ill, or seek to harm.
Was I to have never parted from thy side?
 As good have grown there still, a lifeless rib.
 Being as I am, why didst not thou, the head,
 Command me absolutely not to go,
 Going into such danger, as thou saidst?
 Too facile then, thou didst not much gainsay,
 Nay, didst permit, approve, and fair dismiss.
Hadst thou been firm and fixed in thy dissent, 1160
Neither had I transgressed, nor thou with me."

To whom, then first incensed, Adam replied:
 "Is this the love, is this the recompense
 Of mine to thee, ingrateful Eve, expressed.
 Immutable when thou wert lost, not I,
 Who might have lived, and joyed immortal bliss,
 Yet willingly chose rather death with thee?
 And am I now upbraided as the cause
 Of thy transgressing? not enough severe,
 It seems, in thy restraint! What could I more? 1170
 I warned thee, I admonished thee, foretold
 The danger, and the lurking enemy
 That lay in wait; beyond this had been force,
 And force upon free will hath here no place.
 But confidence then bore thee on, secure
 Either to meet no danger, or to find

Matter of glorious trial; and perhaps
 I also erred in overmuch admiring
 What seemed in thee so perfect, that I thought
 No evil durst attempt thee; but I rue
 That error now, which is become my crime,
 And thou the accuser. Thus it shall befall
Him who, to worth in women overtrusting,
Lets her will rule: restraint she will not brook;
 And, left to herself, if evil thence ensue,
 She first his weak indulgence will accuse."

1180

Thus they in mutual accusation spent
 The fruitless hours, but neither self-condemning;
 And of their vain contest appeared no end.

BOOK X.

THE ARGUMENT.

Man's transgression known, the guardian Angels forsake Paradise, and return up to Heaven to approve their vigilance, and are approved; God declaring that the entrance of Satan could not be by them prevented. He sends his Son to judge the transgressors; who descends, and gives sentence accordingly; then in pity clothes them both, and reascends. Sin and Death, sitting till then at the gates of Hell, by wondrous sympathy feeling the success of Satan in this new World, and the sin by Man there committed, resolve to sit no longer confined in Hell, but to follow Satan, their sire, up to the place of Man. To make the way easier from Hell to this World to and fro, they pave a broad highway or bridge over Chaos, according to the track that Satan first made; then, preparing for Earth, they meet him, proud of his success, returning to Hell; their mutual gratulation. Satan arrives at Pandemonium; in full assembly relates, with boasting, his success against Man; instead of applause is entertained with a general hiss by all his audience, transformed, with himself also, suddenly into serpents, according to his doom given in Paradise; then, deluded with a show of the Forbidden Tree springing up before them, they, greedily reaching to take of the fruit, chew dust and bitter ashes. The proceedings of Sin and Death: God foretells the final victory of his Son over them, and the renewing of all things; but for the present commands his Angels to make several alterations in the heavens and elements. Adam, more and more perceiving his fallen condition, heavily bewails, rejects the condolment of Eve; she persists, and at length appeases him: then, to evade the curse likely to fall on their offspring, proposes to Adam violent ways, which he approves not, but, conceiving better hope, puts her in mind of the late promise made them, that her seed should be revenged on the Serpent, and exhorts her, with him, to seek peace of the offended Deity by repentance and supplication.

BOOK X.

MEANWHILE the heinous and despicable act
Of Satan done in Paradise, and how
He, in the Serpent, had perverted Eve,
Her husband she, to taste the fatal fruit,
Was known in Heaven; for what can scape the eye
Of God all-seeing, or deceive his heart
Omniscient? who, in all things wise and just,
Hindered not Satan to attempt the mind
Of Man, with strength entire and free will armed,
Complete to have discovered and repulsed 10
Whatever wiles of foe or seeming friend.
For still they knew, and ought to have still remembered,
The high injunction not to taste that fruit,
Whoever tempted; which they not obeying
Incurred (what could they less?) the penalty,
And, manifold in sin, deserved to fall.

Up into Heaven from Paradise in haste
The Angelic guards ascended, mute and sad
For Man; for of his state by this they knew,
Much wondering how the subtle Fiend had stolen 20
Entrance unseen. Soon as the unwelcome news
From Earth arrived at Heaven-gate, displeased

All were who heard; dim sadness did not spare
 That time celestial visages, yet, mixed
 With pity, violated not their bliss.
 About the new-arrived, in multitudes,
 The ethereal people ran, to hear and know
 How all befell. They towards the throne supreme Accountable made haste to make appear
 With righteous plea their utmost vigilance,
 And easily approved; when the Most High
 Eternal Father, from his secret cloud
 Amidst, in thunder uttered thus his voice:

30

“Assembled Angels, and ye Powers returned
 From unsuccessful charge, be not dismayed,
 Nor troubled at these tidings from the Earth,
 Which your sincerest care could not prevent,
 Foretold so lately what would come to pass,
 When first this Tempter crossed the gulf from Hell.
 I told ye then he should prevail and speed
 On his bad errand; Man should be seduced
 And flattered out of all, believing lies
 Against his Maker; no decree of mine
 Concurring to necessitate his fall,
 Or touch with lightest moment of impulse
 His free will, to her own inclining left
 In even scale. But fallen he is; and now
 What rests, but that the mortal sentence pass
 On his transgression, death denounced that day?
 Which he presumes already vain and void,
 Because not yet inflicted, as he feared,
 By some immediate stroke; but soon shall find
 Forbearance no acquittance ere day end:
 Justice shall not return, as bounty, scorned.
 But whom send I to judge them? whom but thee, 40

50

Vicegerent Son? to thee I have transferred
 All judgment, whether in Heaven, or Earth, or Hell.
 Easy it may be seen that I intend
 Mercy colleague with justice, sending thee,
 Man's friend, his Mediator, his designed 60
 Both ransom and Redeemer voluntary,
 And destined Man himself to judge Man fallen."

So spake the Father; and, unfolding bright
 Toward the right hand his glory, on the Son
 Blazed forth unclouded deity; he full Resplendent all his Father manifest
 Expressed, and thus divinely answered mild:

“Father Eternal, thine is to decree,
 Mine both in Heaven and Earth to do thy will Supreme, that thou in me, thy Son beloved, 70
 May'st ever rest well pleased. I go to judge
On Earth these thy transgressors; but thou know'st,
 Whoever judged, the worst on me must light,
 When time shall be; for so I undertook
 Before thee, and, not repenting, this obtain
 Of right, that I may mitigate their doom
 On me derived; yet I shall temper so Justice with mercy, as may illustrate most
 Them fully satisfied, and thee appease.
 Attendance none shall need, nor train, where none 80
 Are to behold the judgment but the judged,
 Those two; the third best absent is condemned,
 Convict by flight, and rebel to all law:
 Conviction to the Serpent none belongs."

Thus saying, from his radiant seat he rose
 Of high collateral glory; Him Thrones and Powers,
 Princedoms, and Dominations ministrant
 Accompanied to Heaven-gate, from whence

Eden and all the coast in prospect lay.
 Down he descended straight; the speed of Gods 90
 Time counts not, though with swiftest minutes winged.

Now was the sun in western cadence low
 From noon, and gentle airs due at their hour
 To fan the Earth now waked, and usher in
 The evening cool, when he, from wrath more cool,
 Came, the mild Judge and Intercessor both,
 To sentence Man. The voice of God they heard
Now walking in the garden, by soft winds
 Brought to their ears, while day declined; they heard,
 And from his presence hid themselves among 100
 The thickest trees, both man and wife, till God,
 Approaching, thus to Adam called aloud:

“Where art thou, Adam, wont with joy to meet
 My coming seen far off? I miss thee here,
 Not pleased, thus entertained with solitude,
 Where obvious duty erewhile appeared unsought.
 Or come I less conspicuous, or what change
 Absents thee, or what chance detains? Come forth.”

He came, and with him Eve, more loth, though first
 To offend, discountenanced both, and discomposed; 110
 Love was not in their looks, either to God
 Or to each other, but apparent guilt,
 And shame, and perturbation, and despair,
 Anger, and obstinacy, and hate, and guile.
 Whence Adam, faltering long, thus answered brief:

“I heard thee in the garden, and of thy voice Afraid, being naked, hid myself.” To whom
 The gracious Judge without revile replied:

“My voice thou oft hast heard, and hast not feared,
 But still rejoiced; how is it now become 120
 So dreadful to thee?—That thou art naked, who Hath told thee? Hast thou eaten of the tree,

Whereof I gave thee charge thou shouldst not eat?"

To whom thus Adam, sore beset, replied:

"O Heaven! in evil strait this day I stand Before my Judge—either to undergo Myself the total crime, or to accuse
My other self, the partner of my life;
Whose failing, while her faith to me remains,
I should conceal, and not expose to blame 130
By my complaint; but strict necessity
Subdues me, and calamitous constraint,
Lest on my head both sin and punishment,
However insupportable, be all
Devolved; though should I hold my peace, yet thou Wouldst easily detect what I conceal.
This woman, whom thou mad'st to be my help,
And gav'st me as thy perfect gift, so good,
So fit, so acceptable, so divine,
That from her hand I could suspect no ill, 140
And what she did, whatever in itself,
Her doing seemed to justify the deed;
She gave me of the tree, and I did eat."

To whom the Sovran Presence thus replied:

"Was she thy God, that her thou didst obey
Before his voice? or was she made thy guide,
Superior, or but equal, that to her
Thou didst resign thy manhood, and the place
Wherein God set thee above her, made of thee
And for thee, whose perfection far excelled 150
Hers in all real dignity? Adorned
She was indeed, and lovely, to attract.
Thy love, not thy subjection; and her gifts
Were such as under government well seemed,

Unseemly to bear rule; which was thy part
And person, hadst thou known thyself aright."

So having said, he thus to Eve in few:

"Say, Woman, what is this which thou hast done?"

To whom sad Eve, with shame nigh overwhelmed,
Confessing soon, yet not before her Judge 160

Bold or loquacious, thus abashed replied:

"The Serpent me beguiled, and I did eat."

Which when the Lord God heard, without delay

To judgment he proceeded on the accused

Serpent, though brute, unable to transfer

The guilt on him who made him instrument

Of mischief, and polluted from the end

Of his creation; justly then accursed,

As vitiated in nature. More to know

Concerned not Man (since he no further knew), 170

Nor altered his offence; yet God at last

To Satan, first in sin, his doom applied,

Though in mysterious terms, judged as then best;

And on the Serpent thus his curse let fall:

"Because thou hast done this, thou art accursed

Above all cattle, each beast of the field;

Upon thy belly grovelling thou shalt go,

And dust shalt eat all the days of thy life.

Between thee and the Woman I will put

Enmity, and between thine and her seed; 180

Her seed shall bruise thy head, thou bruise his heel."

So spake this oracle, then verified

When Jesus, son of Mary, second Eve,

Saw Satan fall like lightning down from Heaven,

Prince of the air; then, rising from his grave,

Spoiled Principalities and Powers, triumphed

In open show, and with ascension bright

Captivity led captive through the air,
 The realm itself of Satan long usurped,
 Whom he shall tread at last under our feet; 190
 Even he who now foretold his fatal bruise,
 And to the Woman thus his sentence turned:

“Thy sorrow I will greatly multiply
 By thy conception; children thou shalt bring
 In sorrow forth; and to thy husband's will Thine shall submit; he over thee shall rule.”

On Adam last thus judgment he pronounced:
 “Because thou hast hearkened to the voice of thy wife,
 And eaten of the tree, concerning which
 I charged thee, saying, ‘Thou shalt not eat thereof,’ 200
 Curs'd is the ground for thy sake; thou in sorrow
 Shalt eat thereof all the days of thy life;
 Thorns also and thistles it shall bring thee forth
 Unbid; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field;
 In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread,
 Till thou return unto the ground; for thou
 Out of the ground wast taken: know thy birth,
 For dust thou art, and shalt to dust return.”

So judged he Man, both Judge and Saviour sent,
 And the instant stroke of death, denounced that day, 210
 Removed far off; then, pitying how they stood
 Before him naked to the air, that now
 Must suffer change, disdained not to begin Thenceforth the form of servant to assume;
 As when he washed his servants' feet, so now,
 As father of his family, he clad
 Their nakedness with skins of beasts, or slain,
 Or as the snake with youthful coat repaid;
 And thought not much to clothe his enemies.
 Nor he their outward only with the skins 220

Of beasts, but inward nakedness, much more
 Opprobrious, with his robe of righteousness
 Arraying, covered from his Father's sight.
 To him with swift ascent he up returned,
 Into his blissful bosom reassumed
 In glory as of old; to him appeased,
 All, though all-knowing, what had passed with Man
 Recounted, mixing intercession sweet.

Meanwhile, ere thus was sinned and judged on Earth,
 Within the gates of Hell sat Sin and Death, 230
 In counterview within the gates, that now
 Stood open wide, belching outrageous flame
 Far into Chaos, since the Fiend passed through,
 Sin opening; who thus now to Death began:

“O Son, why sit we here each other viewing
 Idly, while Satan, our great author, thrives
 In other worlds, and happier seat provides For us, his offspring dear? It cannot be
 But that success attends him; if mishap,
 Ere this he had returned, with fury driven 240
 By his avengers, since no place like this
 Can fit his punishment, or their revenge.
 Methinks I feel new strength within me rise,
 Wings growing, and dominion given me large Beyond this Deep, whatever draws me on,
 Or sympathy, or some connatural force,
 Powerful at greatest distance to unite
 With secret amity things of like kind
 By secretest conveyance. Thou, my shade
 Inseparable, must with me along; 250
 For Death from Sin no power can separate.
 But, lest the difficulty of passing back
 Stay his return perhaps over this gulf

Impassable, impervious, let us try Adventurous work, yet to thy power and mine
 Not unagreeable, to found a path
 Over this main from Hell to that new World
 Where Satan now prevails; a monument
 Of merit high to all the infernal host,
 Easing their passage hence, for intercourse 260
 Or transmigration, as their lot shall lead.
 Nor can I miss the way, so strongly drawn
 By this new-felt attraction and instinct."

Whom thus the meagre Shadow answered soon:
 "Go whither fate and inclination strong Leads thee; I shall not lag behind, nor err
 The way, thou leading; such a scent I draw
 Of carnage, prey innumerable, and taste
 The savour of death from all things there that live.
 Nor shall I to the work thou enterprisest 270
 Be wanting, but afford thee equal aid."

So saying, with delight he snuffed the smell
 Of mortal change on Earth. As when a flock
 Of ravenous fowl, though many a league remote,
 Against the day of battle, to a field,
 Where armies lie encamped, come flying, lured
 With scent of living carcasses designed
 For death the following day in bloody fight:
 So scented the grim Feature, and upturned
 His nostril wide into the murky air, 280
 Sagacious of his quarry from so far.
 Then both, from out Hell-gates, into the waste
 Wide anarchy of Chaos damp and dark
 Flew diverse, and with power (their power was great)
 Hovering upon the waters, what they met
 Solid or slimy, as in raging sea

Tossed up and down, together crowded drove,
 From each side shoaling, towards the mouth of Hell;
 As when two polar winds, blowing adverse
 Upon the Cronian sea, together drive 290
 Mountains of ice, that stop the imagined way
 Beyond Petsora eastward, to the rich
 Cathaian coast. The aggregated soil
 Death with his mace petrific, cold and dry,
 As with a trident smote, and fixed as firm
 As Delos, floating once; the rest his look
 Bound with Gorgonian rigour not to move,
 And with asphaltic slime; broad as the gate
 Deep to the roots of Hell the gathered beach
 They fastened, and the mole immense wrought on 300
 Over the foaming Deep high-arched, a bridge
 Of length prodigious, joining to the wall
 Immovable of this now fenceless World,
 Forfeit to Death; from hence a passage broad,
 Smooth, easy, inoffensive, down to Hell.
 So, if great things to small may be compared,
 Xerxes, the liberty of Greece to yoke,
 From Susa, his Memnonian palace high,
 Came to the sea, and, over Hellespont
 Bridging his way, Europe with Asia joined, 310
 And scourged with many a stroke the indignant waves.
 Now had they brought the work by wondrous art
 Pontifical, a ridge of pendent rock,
 Over the vexed Abyss, following the track
 Of Satan, to the self-same place where he
 First lighted from his wing, and landed safe
 From out of Chaos, to the outside bare
 Of this round World. With pins of adamant
 And chains they made all fast, too fast they made.

And durable; and now in little space 320
 The confines met of empyrean Heaven
 And of this World, and on the left hand Hell
With long reach interposed; three several ways,
 In sight, to each of these three places led.
 And now their way to Earth they had descried,
 To Paradise first tending, when, behold
 Satan, in likeness of an Angel bright,
 Betwixt the Centaur and the Scorpion steering
 His zenith, while the sun in Aries rose!
Disguised he came; but those his children dear 330
 Their parent soon discerned, though in disguise.
 He, after Eve seduced, unminded slunk
 Into the wood fast by, and; changing shape
 To observe the sequel, saw his guileful act
 By Eve, though all unweeting, seconded
 Upon her husband, saw their shame that sought
 Vain covertures; but when he saw descend
 The Son of God to judge them, terrified
 He fled, not hoping to escape, but shun
 The present, fearing guilty what his wrath 340
 Might suddenly inflict; that past, returned
 By night, and listening where the hapless pair
 Sat in their sad discourse and various plaint,
 Thence gathered his own doom; which understood
 Not instant, but of future time, with joy
 And tidings fraught, to Hell he now returned,
And at the brink of Chaos, near the foot
Of this new wondrous pontifice, unhopèd
Met, who to meet him came, his offspring dear.
 Great joy was at their meeting, and at sight 350
 Of that stupendous bridge his joy increased.
 Long he admiring stood, till Sin, his fair

Enchanting daughter, thus the silence broke :

“O Parent, these are thy magnificent deeds,
 Thy trophies, which thou view'st as not thine own ;
 Thou art their author and prime architect ;
 For I no sooner in my heart divined
 (My heart, which by a secret harmony Still moves with thine, joined in connexion sweet)
 That thou on Earth hadst prospered, which thy looks 360
 Now also evidence, but straight I felt,
 Though distant from thee worlds between, yet felt
 That I must after thee with this thy son ;
 Such fatal consequence unites us three.
 Hell could no longer hold us in her bounds,
 Nor this unvoyageable gulf obscure
 Detain from following thy illustrious track.
 Thou hast achieved our liberty, confined Within Hell-gates till now ; thou us empowered
 To fortify thus far, and overlay 370
 With this portentous bridge the dark Abyss.
 Thine now is all this World ; thy virtue hath won
 What thy hands builded not, thy wisdom gained
 With odds what war hath lost, and fully avenged
 Our foil in Heaven : here thou shalt monarch reign,
 There didst not ; there let him still victor sway,
 As battle hath adjudged, from this new World
 Retiring, by his own doom alienated,
 And henceforth monarchy with thee divide
 Of all things, parted by the empyreal bounds, 380
 His quadrature, from thy orbicular World,
 Or try thee now more dangerous to his throne.”

Whom thus the Prince of Darkness answered glad :
 “Fair daughter, and thou son and grandchild both,
 High proof ye now have given to be the race

Of Satan (for I glory in the name, Antagonist of Heaven's Almighty King),
 Amply have merited of me, of all
 The infernal empire, that so near Heaven's door
 Triumphal with triumphal act have met, 390
 Mine with this glorious work, and made one realm
 Hell and this World—one realm, one continent
 Of easy thoroughfare. Therefore, while I
 Descend through darkness, on your road with ease,
 To my associate Powers, them to acquaint
 With these successes, and with them rejoice,
 You two this way, among these numerous orbs,
 All yours, right down to Paradise descend ;
 There dwell and reign in bliss ; thence on the Earth
 Dominion exercise and in the air, 400
 Chiefly on Man, sole lord of all declared ;
 Him first make sure your thrall, and lastly kill.
 My substitutes I send ye, and create Plenipotent on Earth, of matchless might Issuing from me : on your joint vigour now
 My hold of this new kingdom all depends,
 Through Sin to Death exposed by my exploit.
 If your joint power prevail, the affairs of Hell
 No detriment need fear ; go, and be strong."

So saying, he dismissed them ; they with speed 410
 Their course through thickest constellations held,
 Spreading their bane ; the blasted stars looked wan,
 And planets, planet-struck, real eclipse
 Then suffered. The other way Satan went down
 The causeway to Hell-gate ; on either side
 Disparted Chaos over-built exclaimed,
 And with rebounding surge the bars assailed,
 That scorned his indignation. Through the gate,

Wide open and unguarded, Satan passed,
 And all about found desolate; for those 420
 Appointed to sit there had left their charge,
 Flown to the upper World; the rest were all
 Far to the inland retired, about the walls
 Of Pandemonium, city and proud seat
 Of Lucifer, so by allusion called
 Of that bright star to Satan paragoned;
 There kept their watch the legions, while the Grand
 In council sat, solicitous what chance Might intercept their Emperor sent; so he Departing gave command, and they observed. 430
 As when the Tartar from his Russian foe,
 By Astracan, over the snowy plains
 Retires, or Bactrian Sophi, from the horns
 Of Turkish crescent, leaves all waste beyond
 The realm of Aladule, in his retreat
 To Tauris or Casbeen: so these, the late
 Heaven-banished host, left desert utmost Hell
 Many a dark league, reduced in careful watch
 Round their metropolis, and now expecting 440
 Each hour their great adventurer from the search
 Of foreign worlds. He through the midst unmarked,
 In show plebeian Angel militant
 Of lowest order, passed; and, from the door
 Of that Plutonian hall, invisible
 Ascended his high throne, which, under state
 Of richest texture spread, at the upper end
 Was placed in regal lustre. Down a while
 He sat, and round about him saw unseen.
 At last, as from a cloud, his fulgent head
 And shape star-bright appeared, or brighter, clad 450
 With what permissive glory since his fall

Was left him, or false glitter. All amazed
 At that so sudden blaze, the Stygian throng
 Bent their aspect, and whom they wished beheld,
 Their mighty Chief returned: loud was the acclaim.
 Forth rushed in haste the great consulting peers,
 Raised from their dark divan, and with like joy
 Congratulant approached him, who with hand
 Silence, and with these words attention, won:

“Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues, Powers! 460
 For in possession such, not only of right,
 I call ye, and declare ye now, returned,
 Successful beyond hope, to lead ye forth
 Triumphant out of this infernal pit
 Abominable, accursed, the house of woe,
 And dungeon of our tyrant! Now possess,
 As lords, a spacious World, to our native Heaven
 Little inferior, by my adventure hard
 With peril great achieved. Long were to tell
 What I have done, what suffered, with what pain 470
 Voyaged the unreal, vast, unbounded Deep
 Of horrible confusion, over which
 By Sin and Death a broad way now is paved,
 To expedite your glorious march; but I
 Toiled out my uncouth passage, forced to ride
 The untractable Abyss, plunged in the womb
 Of unoriginal Night and Chaos wild,
 That, jealous of their secrets, fiercely opposed
 My journey strange, with clamorous uproar
 Protesting Fate supreme; thence how I found 480
 The new-created World, which fame in Heaven
 Long had foretold, a fabric wonderful,
 Of absolute perfection; therein Man
 Placed in a Paradise, by our exile

Made happy. Him by fraud I have seduced
 From his Creator, and, the more to increase
 Your wonder, with an apple! He, thereat
 Offended—worth your laughter!—hath given up
Both his beloved Man and all his World
To Sin and Death a prey, and so to us, 490
 Without our hazard, labour, or alarm,
 To range in, and to dwell, and over Man
 To rule, as over all he should have ruled.
 True is, me also he hath judged, or rather
 Me not, but the brute serpent, in whose shape
 Man I deceived: that which to me belongs
 Is enmity, which he will put between
 Me and mankind; I am to bruise his heel;
 His seed—when is not set—shall bruise my head:
 A world who would not purchase with a bruise, 500
 Or much more grievous pain? Ye have the account
 Of my performance; what remains, ye Gods,
 But up and enter now into full bliss?"

So having said, a while he stood, expecting
Their universal shout and high applause
 To fill his ear; when, contrary, he hears,
 On all sides, from innumerable tongues,
 A dismal universal hiss, the sound
 Of public scorn. He wondered, but not long
 Had leisure, wondering at himself now more; 510
 His visage drawn he felt to sharp and spare,
 His arms clung to his ribs, his legs entwining
 Each other, till, supplanted, down he fell
 A monstrous serpent on his belly prone,
Reluctant, but in vain; a greater power
Now ruled him, punished in the shape he sinned,
 According to his doom. He would have spoke,

But hiss for hiss returned with forked tongue
 To forked tongue; for now were all transformed
Alike, to serpents all, as accessories 520
 To his bold riot. Dreadful was the din
 Of hissing through the hall, thick-swarming now
 With complicated monsters, head and tail,
 Scorpion, and asp, and amphisbæna dire,
 Cerastes horned, hydrus, and ellops drear,
 And dipsas (not so thick swarmed once the soil
 Bedropt with blood of Gorgon, or the isle
 Ophiusa); but still greatest he the midst,
 Now dragon grown, larger than whom the sun
 Engendered in the Pythian vale on slime, 530
 Huge Python; and his power no less he seemed Above the rest still to retain. They all Him followed, issuing forth to the open field,
 Where all yet left of that revolted rout,
 Heaven-fallen, in station stood or just array,
 Sublime with expectation when to see
 In triumph issuing forth their glorious Chief;
 They saw, but other sight instead, a crowd
 Of ugly serpents! Horror on them fell,
 And horrid sympathy; for what they saw 540
 They felt themselves now changing: down their arms,
 Down fell both spear and shield; down they as fast,
 And the dire hiss renewed, and the dire form
 Caught by contagion, like in punishment,
 As in their crime. Thus was the applause they meant Turned to exploding hiss, triumph to shame
 Cast on themselves from their own mouths. There stood
 A grove hard by, sprung up with this their change,
 His will who reigns above, to aggravate
 Their penance, laden with fair fruit, like that 550

Which grew in Paradise, the bait of Eve
 Used by the Tempter. On that prospect strange
 Their earnest eyes they fixed, imagining
 For one forbidden tree a multitude
 Now risen, to work them further woe or shame;
 Yet, parched with scalding thirst and hunger fierce,
 Though to delude them sent, could not abstain,
 But on they rolled in heaps, and, up the trees
 Climbing, sat thicker than the snaky locks
 That curled Megæra. Greedily they plucked 560
 The fruitage fair to sight, like that which grew
 Near that bituminous lake where Sodom flamed;
 This, more delusive, not the touch, but taste
 Deceived; they, fondly thinking to allay
 Their appetite with gust, instead of fruit
 Chewed bitter ashes, which the 'offended taste
 With spattering noise rejected. Oft they assayed, Hunger and thirst constraining; drugged as oft,
 With hatefulest disrelish writhed their jaws,
 With soot and cinders filled; so oft they fell 570
 Into the same illusion, not as Man Whom they triumphed once lapsed. Thus were they plagued
 And worn with famine long, and ceaseless hiss,
 Till their lost shape, permitted, they resumed;
 Yearly enjoined, some say, to undergo
 This annual humbling certain numbered days,
 To dash their pride, and joy for Man seduced.
 However, some tradition they dispersed
 Among the heathen of their purchase got,
 And fabled how the Serpent, whom they called 580
 Ophion, with Eurynome (the wide-Encroaching Eve perhaps), had first the rule
 Of high Olympus, thence by Saturn driven

And Ops, ere yet Dictæan Jove was born.

Meanwhile in Paradise the Hellish pair
 Too soon arrived; Sin there in power before,
 Once actual, now in body, and to dwell
 Habitual habitant; behind her Death,
 Close following pace for pace, not mounted yet
 On his pale horse; to whom Sin thus began: 590

“Second of Satan sprung, all-conquering Death!
 What think'st thou of our empire now, though earned
 With travail difficult? not better far
 Than still at Hell's dark threshold to have sat watch,
 Unnamed, undreaded, and thyself half-starved?”

Whom thus the Sin-born Monster answered soon:
 “To me, who with eternal famine pine,
 Alike is Hell, or Paradise, or Heaven;
 There best, where most with ravin I may meet;
 Which here, though plenteous, all too little seems 600
 To stuff this maw, this vast unhide-bound corpse.”

To whom the incestuous Mother thus replied:
 “Thou therefore on these herbs, and fruits, and flowers,
 Feed first; on each beast next, and fish, and fowl,
 No homely morsels; and whatever thing
 The scythe of Time mows down devour unspared;
 Till I, in Man residing, through the race,
 His thoughts, his looks, words, actions, all infect,
 And season him thy last and sweetest prey.”

This said, they both betook them several ways, 610
 Both to destroy, or unimmortal make
 All kinds, and for destruction to mature Sooner or later; which the Almighty seeing,
 From his transcendent seat the Saints among,
 To those bright Orders uttered thus his voice:

“See with what heat these dogs of Hell advance

To waste and havoc yonder World, which I
 So fair and good created, and had still Kept in that state, had not the folly of Man
 Let in these wasteful furies, who impute 620
 Folly to me (so doth the Prince of Hell
 And his adherents), that with so much ease
 I suffer them to enter and possess
 A place so heavenly, and conniving seem
 To gratify my scornful enemies,
 That laugh, as if, transported with some fit
 Of passion, I to them had quitted all,
 At random yielded up to their misrule ;
 And know not that I called and drew them thither,
 My Hell-hounds, to lick up the draff and filth 630
 Which Man's polluting sin with taint hath shed
 On what was pure ; till, crammed and gorged, nigh burst
 With sucked and glutted offal, at one sling
 Of thy victorious arm, well-pleasing Son,
 Both Sin, and Death, and yawning Grave at last,
 Through Chaos hurled, obstruct the mouth of Hell
 For ever, and seal up his ravenous jaws.
 Then Heaven and Earth, renewed, shall be made pure
 To sanctity that shall receive no stain :
 Till then the curse pronounced on both precedes." 640
 He ended, and the Heavenly audience loud
 Sung Halleluiah, as the sound of seas,
 Through multitude that sung : " Just are thy ways,
 Righteous are thy decrees on all thy works ;
 Who can extenuate thee ? " Next, to the Son,
 Destined restorer of mankind, by whom
 New Heaven and Earth shall to the ages rise,
 Or down from Heaven descend. Such was their song,
 While the Creator, calling forth by name

His mighty Angels, gave them several charge, 650
 As sorted best with present things. The sun
 Had first his precept so to move, so shine,
 As might affect the Earth with cold and heat
 Scarce tolerable, and from the north to call Decrepit winter, from the south to bring Solstitial summer's heat. To the blanc moon
 Her office they prescribed; to the other five
 Their planetary motions and aspects,
 In sextile, square, and trine, and opposite,
 Of noxious efficacy, and when to join 660
 In synod unbenign; and taught the fixed
 Their influence malignant when to shower;
 Which of them rising with the sun, or falling,
 Should prove tempestuous. To the winds they set
 Their corners, when with bluster to confound
 Sea, air, and shore; the thunder when to roll
 With terror through the dark aerial hall.
 Some say he bid his Angels turn askance
 The poles of Earth twice ten degrees and more
 From the sun's axle; they with labour pushed 670
 Oblique the centric globe: some say the sun
 Was bid turn reins from the equinoctial road
 Like distant breadth to Taurus with the seven Atlantic Sisters, and the Spartan Twins,
 Up to the Tropic Crab; thence down amain
 By Leo and the Virgin and the Scales,
 As deep as Capricorn; to bring in change
 Of seasons to each clime: else had the spring
 Perpetual smiled on Earth with vernant flowers,
 Equal in days and nights, except to those 680
 Beyond the polar circles; to them day
 Had unbenighted shone, while the low sun,

To recompense his distance, in their sight
 Had rounded still the horizon, and not known
 Or east or west; which had forbid the snow
 From cold Estotiland, and south as far Beneath Magellan. At that tasted fruit
 The sun, as from Thyestean banquet, turned His course intended: else how had the World
 Inhabited, though sinless, more than now 690
 Avoided pinching cold and scorching heat?
 These changes in the heavens, though slow, produced
 Like change on sea and land, sideral blast,
 Vapour, and mist, and exhalation hot,
 Corrupt and pestilent. Now from the north
 Of Norumbega, and the Samoed shore,
 Bursting their brazen dungeon, armed with ice
 And snow and hail and stormy gust and flaw,
 Boreas and Cæcias and Argestes loud
 And Thrascias rend the woods and seas upturn; 700
 With adverse blasts upturns them from the south
 Notus and Afer black with thundrous clouds
 From Serraliona; thwart of these, as fierce Forth rush the Levant and the Ponent winds,
 Eurus and Zephyr with their lateral noise,
 Sirocco, and Libecchio. Thus began
 Outrage from lifeless things; but Discord first,
 Daughter of Sin, among the irrational
 Death introduced through fierce antipathy:
 Beast now with beast 'gan war, and fowl with fowl, 710
And fish with fish; to graze the herb all leaving
 Devoured each other; nor stood much in awe
 Of Man, but fled him, or with countenance grim Glared on him passing. These were from without
 The growing miseries, which Adam saw

Already in part, though hid in gloomiest shade,
 To sorrow abandoned, but worse felt within,
 And, in a troubled sea of passion tost,
 Thus to disburden sought with sad complaint :

“O miserable of happy ! is this the end 720
 Of this new glorious World, and me so late
 The glory of that glory? who now, become Accursed of blessed, hide me from the face
 Of God, whom to behold was then my highth
 Of happiness ! Yet well, if here would end
 The misery ; I deserved it, and would bear
 My own deservings ; but this will not serve :
 All that I eat or drink, or shall beget,
 Is propagated curse. O voice, once heard
 Delightfully, ‘Increase and multiply’ ; 730
 Now death to hear ! for what can I increase
 Or multiply, but curses on my head?
 Who, of all ages to succeed, but, feeling
 The evil on him brought by me, will curse
 My head? ‘Ill fare our Ancestor impure !
 For this we may thank Adam !’ but his thanks
 Shall be the execration ; so, besides
 Mine own that bide upon me, all from me
 Shall with a fierce reflux on me redound,
 On me, as on their natural centre, light 740
 Heavy, though in their place. O fleeting joys
 Of Paradise, dear bought with lasting woes !
 Did I request thee, Maker, from my clay
 To mould me Man? did I solicit thee
 From darkness to promote me, or here place
 In this delicious garden? As my will Concurred not to my being, it were but right
 And equal to reduce me to my dust,

Desirous to resign and render back
 All I received, unable to perform 750
 Thy terms too hard, by which I was to hold
 The good I sought not. To the loss of that,
 Sufficient penalty, why hast thou added
 The sense of endless woes? inexplicable
 Thy justice seems. Yet, to say truth, too late
 I thus contest; then should have been refused
 Those terms whatever, when they were proposed.
 Thou didst accept them: wilt thou enjoy the good,
 Then cavil the conditions? And though God
 Made thee without thy leave, what if thy son 760
 Prove disobedient, and, reproved, retort,
 'Wherefore didst thou beget me? I sought it not!'
 Wouldst thou admit for his contempt of thee
 That proud excuse? yet him not thy election,
 But natural necessity, begot.
 God made thee of choice his own, and of his own
 To serve him; thy reward was of his grace;
 Thy punishment then justly is at his will.
 Be it so, for I submit; his doom is fair,
 That dust I am, and shall to dust return. 770
 O welcome hour whenever! Why delays
 His hand to execute what his decree
 Fixed on this day? Why do I overlive?
 Why am I mocked with death, and lengthened out
 To deathless pain? How gladly would I meet Mortality, my sentence, and be earth
 Insensible! how glad would lay me down
 As in my mother's lap! There I should rest
 And sleep secure; his dreadful voice no more
 Would thunder in my ears; no fear of worse 780
 To me and to my offspring would torment me

With cruel expectation. Yet one doubt
 Pursues me still, lest all I cannot die;
 Lest that pure breath of life, the spirit of Man
 Which God inspired, cannot together perish
 With this corporeal clod: then, in the grave,
 Or in some other dismal place, who knows
 But I shall die a living death? O thought Horrid, if true! Yet why? It was but breath
 Of life that sinned: what dies but what had life 790
 And sin? the body properly hath neither.
 All of me then shall die: let this appease
 The doubt, since human reach no further knows.
 For though the Lord of all be infinite,
 Is his wrath also? Be it, Man is not so,
 But mortal doomed. How can he exercise
 Wrath without end on Man, whom death must end?
 Can he make deathless death? That were to make Strange contradiction; which to God himself
 Impossible is held, as argument 800
 Of weakness, not of power. Will he draw out,
 For anger's sake, finite to infinite
 In punished Man, to satisfy his rigour Satisfied never? That were to extend
 His sentence beyond dust and Nature's law;
 By which all causes else according still
 To the reception of their matter act,
 Not to the extent of their own sphere. But say
 That death be not one stroke, as I supposed,
 Bereaving sense, but endless misery 810
 From this day onward, which I feel begun
 Both in me and without me, and so last
 To perpetuity—Ay me! that fear
 Comes thundering back with dreadful revolution

Question 1000

On my defenceless head! Both Death and I Am found eternal, and incorporate both:
Nor I on my part single; in me all Posterity stands cursed. Fair patrimony
 That I must leave ye, sons! Oh, were I able
 To waste it all myself, and leave ye none! 820
 So disinherited, how would ye bless
 Me, now your curse! Ah, why should all mankind,
For one man's fault, thus guiltless be condemned,
If guiltless? But from me what can proceed
 But all corrupt, both mind and will depraved
 Not to do only, but to will the same
 With me? How can they then acquitted stand
 In sight of God? Him, after all disputes,
 Forced I absolve; all my evasions vain
 And reasonings, though through mazes, lead me still 830
 But to my own conviction: first and last
 On me, me only, as the source and spring
 Of all corruption, all the blame lights due;
 So might the wrath! Fond wish! couldst thou support
 That burden, heavier than the Earth to bear;
 Than all the World much heavier, though divided
 With that bad woman? Thus, what thou desir'st,
And what thou fear'st, alike destroys all hope
Of refuge, and concludes thee miserable
 Beyond all past example and future; 840
 To Satan only like, both crime and doom.
 O Conscience! into what abyss of fears
 And horrors hast thou driven me; out of which I find no way, from deep to deeper plunged!"

Thus Adam to himself lamented loud
 Through the still night, not now, as ere Man fell,
 Wholesome and cool and mild, but with black air

Accompanied, with damps and dreadful gloom;
 Which to his evil conscience represented
 All things with double terror. On the ground 850
 Outstretched he lay, on the cold ground, and oft Cursed his creation; Death as oft accused
 Of tardy execution, since denounced
 The day of his offence. "Why comes not Death,"
 Said he, "with one thrice-acceptable stroke
 To end me? Shall Truth fail to keep her word,
 Justice divine not hasten to be just?
 But Death comes not at call; Justice divine
 Mends not her slowest pace for prayers or cries.
 O woods, O fountains, hillocks, dales, and bowers! 860
 With other echo late I taught your shades
 To answer, and resound far other song."
 Whom thus afflicted when sad Eve beheld,
 Desolate where she sat, approaching nigh,
 Soft words to his fierce passion she assayed;
 But her with stern regard he thus repelled:
 "Out of my sight, thou serpent! that name best
 Befits thee, with him leagued, thyself as false
 And hateful: nothing wants, but that thy shape,
 Like his, and colour serpentine, may show 870
 Thy inward fraud, to warn all creatures from thee
 Henceforth; lest that too heavenly form, pretended
 To hellish falsehood, snare them. But for thee
 I had persisted happy, had not thy pride
 And wandering vanity, when least was safe,
 Rejected my forewarning, and disdained
 Not to be trusted, longing to be seen,
 Though by the Devil himself, him overweening
 To overreach; but, with the Serpent meeting,
 Fooled and beguiled; by him thou, I by thee, 880

To trust thee from my side, imagined wise,
 Constant, mature, proof against all assaults;
 And understood not all was but a show,
 Rather than solid virtue, all but a rib
 Crooked by nature—bent, as now appears,
 More to the part sinister—from me drawn;
 Well if thrown out, as supernumerary
 To my just number found! Oh, why did God,
 Creator wise, that peopled highest Heaven
 With Spirits masculine, create at last
 This novelty on Earth, this fair defect
 Of Nature, and not fill the World at once
 With men, as Angels, without feminine;
 Or find some other way to generate
 Mankind? This mischief had not then befallen,
 And more that shall befall—innumerable
 Disturbances on Earth through female snares,
 And strait conjunction with this sex. For either
 He never shall find out fit mate, but such
 As some misfortune brings him, or mistake;
 Or whom he wishes most shall seldom gain,
 Through her perverseness, but shall see her gained
 By a far worse, or, if she love, withheld
 By parents; or his happiest choice too late
 Shall meet, already linked and wedlock-bound
 To a fell adversary, his hate or shame:
 Which infinite calamity shall cause
 To human life, and household peace confound.”

890

900

He added not, and from her turned; but Eye,
 Not so repulsed, with tears that ceased not flowing,
 And tresses all disordered, at his feet
 Fell humble, and, embracing them, besought
 His peace, and thus proceeded in her plaint:

910

Demas Eve

"Forsake me not thus, Adam! witness Heaven
 What love sincere and reverence in my heart
 I bear thee, and unweeting have offended,
 Unhappily deceived! Thy suppliant
 I beg, and clasp thy knees; bereave me not,
 Whereon I live, thy gentle looks, thy aid,
 Thy counsel in this uttermost distress, 920
 My only strength and stay: forlorn of thee,
 Whither shall I betake me, where subsist?
 While yet we live, scarce one short hour perhaps,
 Between us two let there be peace; both joining,
 As joined in injuries, one enmity
 Against a foe by doom express assigned us,
 That cruel Serpent. On me exercise not
 Thy hatred for this misery befallen;
 On me already lost, me than thyself
 More miserable. Both have sinned; but thou 930
Against God only; I against God and thee.
 And to the place of judgment will return,
 There with my cries importune Heaven, that all
 The sentence, from thy head removed, may light
 On me, sole cause to thee of all this woe,
 Me, me only, just object of His ire."

She ended weeping; and her lowly plight,
 Immovable till peace obtained from fault
 Acknowledged and deplored, in Adam wrought
Commiseration. Soon his heart relented 940
 Towards her, his life so late and sole delight,
 Now at his feet submissive in distress,
 Creature so fair his reconcilment seeking,
 His counsel, whom she had displeased, his aid;
 As one disarmed, his anger all he lost,
And thus with peaceful words upraised her soon:

"Unwary, and too desirous, as before
 So now, of what thou know'st not, who desir'st
 The punishment all on thyself! Alas!
 Bear thine own first, ill able to sustain 950
 His full wrath, whose thou feel'st as yet least part,
 And my displeasure bear'st so ill. If prayers
 Could alter high decrees, I to that place
 Would speed before thee, and be louder heard,
 That on my head all might be visited,
 Thy frailty and infirmer sex forgiven,
 To me committed, and by me exposed.
 But rise; let us no more contend, nor blame
 Each other, blamed enough elsewhere, but strive
 In offices of love, how we may lighten 960
 Each other's burden, in our share of woe;
 Since this day's death denounced, if aught I see,
 Will prove no sudden, but a slow-paced evil,
 A long day's dying, to augment our pain,
 And to our seed (O hapless seed!) derived."

To whom thus Eve, recovering heart, replied:
 "Adam, by sad experiment I know
 How little weight my words with thee can find,
 Found so erroneous, thence by just event
 Found so unfortunate; nevertheless, 970
 Restored by thee, vile as I am, to place
 Of new acceptance, hopeful to regain
 Thy love, the sole contentment of my heart,
 Living or dying from thee I will not hide
 What thoughts in my unquiet breast are risen,
 Tending to some relief of our extremes,
 Or end, though sharp and sad, yet tolerable,
 As in our evils, and of easier choice.
 If care of our descent perplex us most,

Which must be born to certain woe, devoured 980
 By Death at last (and miserable it is
 To be to others cause of misery,
 Our own begotten, and of our loins to bring
 Into this cursed World a woeful race,
 That after wretched life must be at last
 Food for so foul a monster), in thy power
 It lies, yet ere conception, to prevent
 The race unblest, to being yet unbegot.
 Childless thou art, childless remain; so Death
 Shall be deceived his glut, and with us two 990
 Be forced to satisfy his ravenous maw.
 But if thou judge it hard and difficult,
 Conversing, looking, loving, to abstain
 From love's due rites, nuptial embraces sweet,
 And with desire to languish without hope,
 Before the present object languishing
 With like desire, which would be misery
 And torment less than none of what we dread;
 Then, both our selves and seed at once to free
 From what we fear for both, let us make short, 1000
 Let us seek Death, or, he not found, supply
 With our own hands his office on ourselves.
 Why stand we longer shivering under fears
 That show no end but death, and have the power,
 Of many ways to die the shortest choosing,
 Destruction with destruction to destroy?"

She ended here, or vehement despair
 Broke off the rest; so much of death her thoughts
 Had entertained as dyed her cheeks with pale.
 But Adam, with such counsel nothing swayed, 1010
 To better hopes his more attentive mind
 Labouring had raised, and thus to Eve replied:

"Eve, thy contempt of life and pleasure seems
 To argue in thee something more sublime
 And excellent than what thy mind contemns ;
 But self-destruction therefore sought refutes
 That excellence thought in thee, and implies,
 Not thy contempt, but anguish and regret
 For loss of life and pleasure overloved.
 Or if thou covet death, as utmost end
 Of misery, so thinking to evade
 The penalty pronounced, doubt not but God
 Hath wiselier armed his vengeful ire than so
 To be forestalled ; much more I fear lest death
 So snatched will not exempt us from the pain
 We are by doom to pay ; rather such acts
 Of contumacy will provoke the Highest
 To make death in us live. Then let us seek
 Some safer resolution, which methinks
 I have in view, calling to mind with heed
 Part of our sentence, that thy seed shall bruise
 The Serpent's head : piteous amends ! unless
 Be meant, whom I conjecture, our grand foe,
 Satan, who in the serpent hath contrived
 Against us this deceit. To crush his head
 Would be revenge indeed ; which will be lost
 By death brought on ourselves, or childless days
 Resolved as thou proposest ; so our foe
 Shall scape his punishment ordained, and we
 Instead shall double ours upon our heads.
 No more be mentioned then of violence
 Against ourselves, and wilful barrenness,
 That cuts us off from hope, and savours only Rancour and pride, impatience and despite,
 Reluctance against God and his just yoke

1020

1030

1040

Laid on our necks. Remember with what mild
 And gracious temper he both heard and judged,
 Without wrath or reviling; we expected
 Immediate dissolution, which we thought
 Was meant by death that day; when, lo! to thee 1050
 Pains only in child-bearing were foretold,
 And bringing forth, soon recompensed with joy,
 Fruit of thy womb; on me the curse aslope
 Glanced on the ground: with labour I must earn
 My bread; what harm? Idleness had been worse;
 My labour will sustain me; and, lest cold
 Or heat should injure us, his timely care
 Hath, unbesought, provided, and his hands
 Clothed us unworthy, pitying while he judged;
 How much more, if we pray him, will his ear 1060
 Be open, and his heart to pity incline,
 And teach us further by what means to shun
 The inclement seasons, rain, ice, hail, and snow!
 Which now the sky with various face begins
 To show us in this mountain, while the winds
 Blow moist and keen, shattering the graceful locks
 Of these fair spreading trees; which bids us seek
 Some better shroud, some better warmth to cherish
 Our limbs benumbed, ere this diurnal star
 Leave cold the night, how we his gathered beams 1070
 Reflected may with matter sere foment,
 Or by collision of two bodies grind
 The air attrite to fire; as late the clouds,
 Justling or pushed with winds, rude in their shock,
 Tine the slant lightning, whose thwart flame driven down
 Kindles the gummy bark of fir or pine,
 And sends a comfortable heat from far,
 Which might supply the sun. Such fire to use,

And what may else be remedy or cure
 To evils which our own misdeeds have wrought, 1080
 He will instruct us praying, and of grace
 Beseeching him; so as we need not fear
 To pass commodiously this life, sustained
 By him with many comforts, till we end
 In dust, our final rest and native home.
 What better can we do, than, to the place
 Repairing where he judged us, prostrate fall
 Before him reverent, and there confess
 Humbly our faults, and pardon beg, with tears
 Watering the ground, and with our sighs the air 1090
 Frequenting, sent from hearts contrite, in sign
 Of sorrow unfeigned and humiliation meek?
 Undoubtedly he will relent, and turn
 From his displeasure; in whose look serene,
 When angry most he seemed and most severe,
 What else but favour, grace, and mercy shone?"

So spake our father penitent; nor Eve
 Felt less remorse. They, forthwith to the place
 Repairing where he judged them, prostrate fell
 Before him reverent, and both confessed 1100
 Humbly their faults, and pardon begged, with tears
 Watering the ground, and with their sighs the air
 Frequenting, sent from hearts contrite, in sign
 Of sorrow unfeigned and humiliation meek.

BOOK XI.

THE ARGUMENT.

The Son of God presents to his Father the prayers of our first parents now repenting, and intercedes for them. God accepts them, but declares that they must no longer abide in Paradise; sends Michael with a band of Cherubim to dispossess them, but first to reveal to Adam future things: Michael's coming down. Adam shows to Eve certain ominous signs; he discerns Michael's approach; goes out to meet him: the Angel denounces their departure. Eve's lamentation. Adam pleads, but submits: the Angel leads him up to a high hill; sets before him in vision what shall happen till the Flood.

BOOK XI.

THUS they, in lowliest plight, repentant stood Praying; for from the mercy-seat above
Prevenient grace descending had removed
The stony from their hearts, and made new flesh
Regenerate grow instead, that sighs now breathed
Unutterable, which the Spirit of prayer
Inspired, and winged for Heaven with speedier flight
Than loudest oratory. Yet their port
Not of mean suitors, nor important less
Seemed their petition than when the ancient pair      10
In fables old, less ancient yet than these,
Deucalion and chaste Pyrrha, to restore
The race of mankind drowned, before the shrine
Of Themis stood devout. To Heaven their prayers
Flew up, nor missed the way, by envious winds
Blown vagabond or frustrate: in they passed
Dimensionless through heavenly doors; then, clad
With incense, where the golden altar fumed,
By their great Intercessor, came in sight
Before the Father's throne. Them the glad Son      20
Presenting thus to intercede began:

“See, Father, what first-fruits on Earth are sprung

From thy implanted grace in Man—these sighs
 And prayers, which in this golden censer, mixed
 With incense, I, thy priest, before thee bring ;
 Fruits of more pleasing savour, from thy seed Sown with contrition in his heart, than those Which, his own hand manuring, all the trees
 Of Paradise could have produced, ere fallen
 From innocence. Now, therefore, bend thine ear 30
 To supplication ; hear his sighs, though mute :
 Unskilful with what words to pray, let me
 Interpret for him, me his advocate
 And propitiation ; all his works on me,
 Good or not good, ingraft ; my merit those
 Shall perfect, and for these my death shall pay.
 Accept me, and in me from these receive
 The smell of peace toward Mankind : let him live
 Before thee reconciled, at least his days
 Numbered, though sad ; till death, his doom (which I 40
 To mitigate thus plead, not to reverse),
 To better life shall yield him, where with me
 All my redeemed may dwell in joy and bliss,
 Made one with me, as I with thee am one.”

To whom the Father, without cloud, serene :
 “All thy request for Man, accepted Son,
 Obtain ; all thy request was my decree.
 But longer in that Paradise to dwell
 The law I gave to Nature him forbids ;
 Those pure immortal elements, that know 50
 No gross, no unharmonious mixture foul,
 Eject him, tainted now, and purge him off,
 As a distemper, gross, to air as gross,
 And mortal food, as may dispose him best
 For dissolution wrought by sin, that first

Distempered all things, and of incorrupt
 Corrupted. I, at first, with two fair gifts
 Created him endowed—with happiness
 And immortality; that fondly lost,
 This other served but to eternize woe, 60
 Till I provided death: so death becomes
 His final remedy, and, after life
 Tried in sharp tribulation, and refined
 By faith and faithful works, to second life,
 Waked in the renovation of the just,
 Resigns him up with Heaven and Earth renewed.
 But let us call to Synod all the Blest
 Through Heaven's wide bounds; from them I will not hide
 My judgments, how with Mankind I proceed,
 As how with peccant Angels late they saw, 70
 And in their state, though firm, stood more confirmed."

He ended, and the Son gave signal high
 To the bright minister that watched. He blew
 His trumpet, heard in Oreb since perhaps
 When God descended, and perhaps once more
 To sound at general doom. The angelic blast
 Filled all the regions: from their blissful bowers
 Of amarantine shade, fountain or spring,
 By the waters of life, where'er they sat
 In fellowships of joy, the Sons of Light 80
 Hasted, resorting to the summons high,
 And took their seats, till from his throne supreme
 The Almighty thus pronounced his sovran will:

"O Sons, like one of us Man is become
 To know both good and evil, since his taste
 Of that defended fruit; but let him boast
 His knowledge of good lost and evil got,
 Happier had it sufficed him to have known

Good by itself, and evil not at all.
 He sorrows now, repents, and prays contrite— 90
 My motions in him; longer than they move,
 His heart I know how variable and vain,
 Self-left. Lest, therefore, his now bolder hand
 Reach also of the Tree of Life, and eat,
 And live for ever—dream at least to live
 For ever—to remove him I decree,
 And send him from the garden forth, to till
 The ground whence he was taken, fitter soil.
 Michael, this my behest have thou in charge :
 Take to thee from among the Cherubim 100
 Thy choice of flaming warriors, lest the Fiend,
 Or in behalf of Man, or to invade
 Vacant possession, some new trouble raise ;
 Haste thee, and from the Paradise of God
 Without remorse drive out the sinful pair,
 From hallowed ground the unholy, and denounce
 To them, and to their progeny, from thence Perpetual banishment. Yet, lest they faint
 At the sad sentence rigorously urged
 (For I behold them softened, and with tears 110 Bewailing their excess), all terror hide.
 If patiently thy bidding they obey,
 Dismiss them not disconsolate ; reveal
 To Adam what shall come in future days,
 As I shall thee enlighten ; intermix
 My covenant in the Woman's seed renewed.
 So send them forth, though sorrowing, yet in peace ;
 And on the east side of the garden place,
 Where entrance up from Eden easiest climbs,
 Cherubic watch, and of a sword the flame 120
 Wide-waving, all approach far off to fright,

And guard all passage to the Tree of Life ;
 Lest Paradise a receptacle prove
 To Spirits foul, and all my trees their prey,
 With whose stolen fruit Man once more to delude.”

He ceased, and the archangelic Power prepared
 For swift descent ; with him the cohort bright
 Of watchful Cherubim. Four faces each
 Had, like a double Janus ; all their shape
 Spangled with eyes more numerous than those 130
 Of Argus, and more wakeful than to drowse,
 Charmed with Arcadian pipe, the pastoral reed
 Of Hermes, or his opiate rod. Meanwhile,
 To resalute the world with sacred light,
 Leucothea waked, and with fresh dews embalmed
 The Earth ; when Adam and first matron Eve
 Had ended now their orisons, and found Strength added from above ; new hope to spring
 Out of despair ; joy, but with fear yet linked ;
 Which thus to Eve his welcome words renewed : 140

“Eve, easily may faith admit that all
 The good which we enjoy from Heaven descends ;
 But that from us aught should ascend to Heaven
 So prevalent as to concern the mind
 Of God high-blest, or to incline his will,
 Hard to belief may seem ; yet this will prayer,
 Or one short sigh of human breath, upborne
 Even to the seat of God. For, since I sought
 By prayer the offended Deity to appease,
 Kneeled and before him humbled all my heart, 150
 Methought I saw him placable and mild,
 Bending his ear ; persuasion in me grew
 That I was heard with favour ; peace returned Home to my breast, and to my memory

His promise that thy seed shall bruise our Foe ;
 Which, then not minded in dismay, yet now
 Assures me that the bitterness of death
 Is past, and we shall live. Whence hail to thee !
 Eve rightly called, Mother of all Mankind,
 Mother of all things living, since by thee 160
 Man is to live, and all things live for Man."

To whom thus Eve with sad demeanour meek :
 " Ill-worthy I such title should belong
 To me transgressor, who, for thee ordained
 A help, became thy snare ; to me reproach
 Rather belongs, distrust and all dispraise.
 But infinite in pardon was my Judge,
 That I, who first brought death on all, am graced
 The source of life ; next favourable thou,
 Who highly thus to entitle me vouchsaf'st, 170
 Far other name deserving. But the field
 To labour calls us, now with sweat imposed,
 Though after sleepless night ; for see ! the Morn,
 All unconcerned with our unrest, begins
 Her rosy progress smiling. Let us forth,
 I never from thy side henceforth to stray,
 Where'er our day's work lies, though now enjoined
 Laborious, till day droop ; while here we dwell,
 What can be toilsome in these pleasant walks ?
 Here let us live, though in fallen state, content." 180

So spake, so wished, much-humbled Eve ; but Fate
 Subscribed not. Nature first gave signs, impressed
 On bird, beast, air—air suddenly eclipsed,
 After short blush of morn. Nigh in her sight
 The bird of Jove, stooped from his aery tour,
 Two birds of gayest plume before him drove ;
 Down from a hill the beast that reigns in woods,

First hunter then, pursued a gentle brace,
 Goodliest of all the forest, hart and hind ;
 Direct to the eastern gate was bent their flight. 190
 Adam observed, and, with his eye the chase
 Pursuing, not unmoved to Eve thus spake :

“O Eve, some further change awaits us nigh,
 Which Heaven by these mute signs in Nature shows,
 Forerunners of his purpose, or to warn
 Us, haply too secure of our discharge
 From penalty because from death released
 Some days ; how long, and what till then our life,
 Who knows? or more than this, that we are dust,
 And thither must return, and be no more? 200
 Why else this double object in our sight,
 Of flight pursued in the air and o'er the ground
 One way the self-same hour? Why in the east
 Darkness ere day's mid-course, and morning-light
 More orient in yon western cloud, that draws
 O'er the blue firmament a radiant white,
 And slow descends, with something Heavenly fraught?”

He erred not ; for, by this, the Heavenly bands
 Down from a sky of jasper lighted now
 In Paradise, and on a hill made halt ; 210
 A glorious apparition, had not doubt
 And carnal fear that day dimmed Adam's eye.
 Not that more glorious, when the Angels met
 Jacob in Mahanaim, where he saw
 The field pavilioned with his guardians bright ;
 Nor that which on the flaming mount appeared
 In Dothan, covered with a camp of fire,
 Against the Syrian king, who to surprise
 One man, assassin-like, had levied war,
 War unproclaimed. The princely Hierarch 220

In their bright stand there left his Powers to seize Possession of the garden ; he alone,
 To find where Adam sheltered, took his way,
 Not unperceived of Adam ; who to Eve,
 While the great visitant approached, thus spake :

“ Eve, now expect great tidings, which perhaps
 Of us will soon determine, or impose
 New laws to be observed ; for I descry,
 From yonder blazing cloud that veils the hill, 230
 One of the Heavenly host, and, by his gait,
 None of the meanest—some great Potentate
 Or of the Thrones above, such majesty
 Invests him coming ; yet not terrible,
 That I should fear, nor sociably mild,
 As Raphael, that I should much confide ;
 But solemn and sublime ; whom, not to offend,
 With reverence I must meet, and thou retire.”

He ended ; and the Archangel soon drew nigh,
 Not in his shape celestial, but as man
 Clad to meet man. Over his lucid arms 240
 A military vest of purple flowed,
 Livelier than Melibœan, or the grain
 Of Sarra, worn by kings and heroes old
 In time of truce ; Iris had dipt the woof.
 His starry helm unbuckled showed him prime
 In manhood where youth ended ; by his side,
 As in a glistering zodiac, hung the sword,
 Satan’s dire dread, and in his hand the spear.
 Adam bowed low ; he, kingly, from his state
 Inclined not, but his coming thus declared : 250

“ Adam, Heaven’s high behest no preface needs :
 Sufficient that thy prayers are heard, and Death,
 Then due by sentence when thou didst transgress,

Defeated of his seizure many days,
 Given thee of grace, wherein thou may'st repent,
 And one bad act with many deeds well done
 May'st cover. Well may then thy Lord, appeased,
 Redeem thee quite from Death's rapacious claim ;
 But longer in this Paradise to dwell
 Permits not: to remove thee I am come, 260
 And send thee from the garden forth, to till
 The ground whence thou wast taken, fitter soil."

He added not ; for Adam at the news
 Heart-strook with chilling gripe of sorrow stood,
 That all his senses bound ; Eve, who unseen
 Yet all had heard, with audible lament
 Discovered soon the place of her retire :

"O unexpected stroke, worse than of Death !
 Must I thus leave thee, Paradise? thus leave
 Thee, native soil? these happy walks and shades, 270
 Fit haunt of Gods? where I had hope to spend,
 Quiet, though sad, the respite of that day
 That must be mortal to us both. O flowers,
 That never will in other climate grow,
 My early visitation, and my last
 At even, which I bred up with tender hand
 From the first opening bud, and gave ye names,
 Who now shall rear ye to the sun, or rank
 Your tribes, and water from the ambrosial fount?
 Thee, lastly, nuptial bower, by me adorned 280
 With what to sight or smell was sweet, from thee
 How shall I part, and whither wander down
 Into a lower world, to this obscure
 And wild? How shall we breathe in other air
 Less pure, accustomed to immortal fruits?"

Whom thus the Angel interrupted mild :

“Lament not, Eve, but patiently resign
 What justly thou hast lost; nor set thy heart,
 Thus over-fond, on that which is not thine.
 Thy going is not lonely; with thee goes
 Thy husband; him to follow thou art bound;
 Where he abides, think there thy native soil.”

290

Adam, by this from the cold sudden damp
 Recovering, and his scattered spirits returned,
 To Michael thus his humble words addressed:

“Celestial, whether among the Thrones, or named
 Of them the highest—for such of shape may seem Prince above princes—gently hast thou told
 Thy message, which might else in telling wound,
 And in performing end us. What besides
 Of sorrow, and dejection, and despair,
 Our frailty can sustain, thy tidings bring;
 Departure from this happy place, our sweet
 Recess, and only consolation left
 Familiar to our eyes; all places else
 Inhospitable appear, and desolate,
 Nor knowing us, nor known. And, if by prayer
 Incessant I could hope to change the will
 Of him who all things can, I would not cease
 To weary him with my assiduous cries;
 But prayer against his absolute decree
 No more avails than breath against the wind,
 Blown stifling back on him that breathes it forth:
 Therefore to his great bidding I submit.
 This most afflicts me, that, departing hence,
 As from his face I shall be hid, deprived
 His blessed countenance. Here I could frequent,
 With worship, place by place where he vouchsafed
 Presence Divine, and to my sons relate,

300

310

'On this mount he appeared; under this tree
 320 Stood visible; among these pines his voice
 I heard; here with him at this fountain talked.'
 So many grateful altars I would rear
 Of grassy turf, and pile up every stone
 Of lustre from the brook, in memory
 Or monument to ages, and thereon
 Offer sweet-smelling gums, and fruits, and flowers.
 In yonder nether world where shall I seek
 His bright appearances, or footstep trace?
 For, though I fled him angry, yet, recalled
 330 To life prolonged and promised race, I now
 Gladly behold though but his utmost skirts
 Of glory, and far off his steps adore."

To whom thus Michael, with regard benign:
 "Adam, thou know'st Heaven his, and all the Earth,
 Not this rock only; his omnipresence fills
 Land, sea, and air, and every kind that lives,
 Fomented by his virtual power and warmed.
 All the Earth he gave thee to possess and rule,
 No despicable gift; surmise not, then,
 340 His presence to these narrow bounds confined Of Paradise or Eden. This had been Perhaps thy capital seat, from whence had spread
 All generations, and had hither come
 From all the ends of the Earth, to celebrate
 And reverence thee their great progenitor.
 But this pre-eminence thou hast lost, brought down
 To dwell on even ground now with thy sons.
 Yet doubt not but in valley and in plain
 God is, as here, and will be found alike
 350 Present, and of his presence many a sign,
 Still following thee, still compassing thee round

With goodness and paternal love, his face
 Express, and of his steps the track divine.
 Which that thou may'st believe, and be confirmed,
 Ere thou from hence depart, know I am sent
 To show thee what shall come in future days
 To thee and to thy offspring. Good with bad
 Expect to hear, supernal grace contending
 With sinfulness of men; thereby to learn 360
 True patience, and to temper joy with fear
 And pious sorrow, equally inured
 By moderation either state to bear,
 Prosperous or adverse: so shalt thou lead
 Safest thy life, and best prepared endure
 Thy mortal passage when it comes. Ascend
 This hill; let Eve (for I have drenched her eyes)
 Here sleep below while thou to foresight wak'st,
 As once thou slept'st, while she to life was formed."

To whom thus Adam gratefully replied: 370
 "Ascend; I follow thee, safe guide, the path
 Thou lead'st me, and to the hand of Heaven submit,
 However chastening; to the evil turn
 My obvious breast, arming to overcome
 By suffering, and earn rest from labour won,
 If so I may attain." So both ascend
 In the visions of God. It was a hill,
 Of Paradise the highest, from whose top
 The hemisphere of Earth, in clearest ken,
 Stretched out to the amplest reach of prospect lay. 380
 Not higher that hill, nor wider looking round,
 Whereon for different cause the Tempter set
 Our second Adam, in the wilderness,
 To show him all Earth's kingdoms and their glory.
 His eye might there command wherever stood

City of old or modern fame, the seat
 Of mightiest empire, from the destined walls
 Of Cambalu, seat of Cathaian Can,
 And Samarchand by Oxus, Temir's throne,
 To Paquin of Sinæan kings, and thence 390
 To Agra and Lahor of Great Mogul, Down to the golden Chersonese, or where
 The Persian in Ecbatan sat, or since
 In Hispahan, or where the Russian Ksar
 In Mosco, or the Sultan in Bizance,
 Turchestan-born; nor could his eye not ken
 The empire of Negus to his utmost port
 Ercoco, and the less maritime kings,
 Mombaza, and Quiloa, and Melind,
 And Sofala, thought Ophir, to the realm 400
 Of Congo, and Angola farthest south;
 Or thence from Niger flood to Atlas mount,
 The kingdoms of Almansor, Fez and Sus,
 Marocco, and Algiers, and Tremisen;
 On Europe thence, and where Rome was to sway
 The world. In spirit perhaps he also saw Rich Mexico, the seat of Montezume,
 And Cusco in Peru, the richer seat
 Of Atabalipa, and yet unspoiled
 Guiana, whose great city Geryon's sons 410
 Call El Dorado. But to nobler sights
 Michael from Adam's eyes the film removed
 Which that false fruit that promised clearer sight
 Had bred; then purged with euphrasy and rue
 The visual nerve, for he had much to see,
 And from the well of life three drops instilled.
 So deep the power of these ingredients pierced,
 Even to the inmost seat of mental sight,

That Adam, now enforced to close his eyes,
 Sunk down, and all his spirits became entranced ; 420
 But him the gentle Angel by the hand
 Soon raised, and his attention thus recalled :

“Adam, now ope thine eyes, and first behold
 The effects which thy original crime hath wrought
 In some to spring from thee, who never touched
 The excepted tree, nor with the Snake conspired, Nor sinned thy sin, yet from that sin derive Corruption to bring forth more violent deeds.”

His eyes he opened, and beheld a field,
 Part arable and tilth, whereon were sheaves 430
 New-reaped, the other part sheep-walks and folds ;
 I' the midst an altar as the landmark stood,
 Rustic, of grassy sord. Thither anon
 A sweaty reaper from his tillage brought
 First-fruits, the green ear and the yellow sheaf,
 Unculled, as came to hand ; a shepherd next,
 More meek, came with the firstlings of his flock,
 Choicest and best ; then, sacrificing, laid
 The inwards and their fat, with incense strewed,
 On the cleft wood, and all due rites performed. 440
 His offering soon propitious fire from heaven
 Consumed with nimble glance and grateful steam ;
 The other's not, for his was not sincere :
 Whereat he inly raged, and, as they talked,
 Smote him into the midriff with a stone
 That beat out life ; he fell, and, deadly pale,
 Groaned out his soul with gushing blood effused.
 Much at that sight was Adam in his heart
 Dismayed, and thus in haste to the Angel cried :
 “O Teacher, some great mischief hath befallen 450
 To that meek man, who well had sacrificed :

Is piety thus and pure devotion paid?"

To whom Michael thus, he also moved, replied:

"These two are brethren, Adam, and to come
Out of thy loins. The unjust the just hath slain,
For envy that his brother's offering found
From Heaven acceptance; but the bloody fact
Will be avenged, and the other's faith approved
Lose no reward, though here thou see him die, Rolling in dust and gore." To which our Sire:

460

"Alas, both for the deed and for the cause!
But have I now seen Death? Is this the way
I must return to native dust? O sight
Of terror, foul and ugly to behold!
Horrid to think, how horrible to feel!"

To whom thus Michael: "Death thou hast seen
In his first shape on Man; but many shapes
Of Death, and many are the ways that lead
To his grim cave, all dismal; yet to sense
More terrible at the entrance than within.

470

Some, as thou saw'st, by violent stroke shall die,
By fire, flood, famine; by intemperance more
In meats and drinks, which on the Earth shall bring Diseases dire, of which a monstrous crew
Before thee shall appear, that thou may'st know
What misery the inabstinence of Eve
Shall bring on men." Immediately a place
Before his eyes appeared, sad, noisome, dark;
A lazar-house it seemed, wherein were laid
Numbers of all diseased, all maladies
Of ghastly spasm, or racking torture, qualms
Of heart-sick agony, all feverous kinds,
Convulsions, epilepsies, fierce catarrhs,
Intestine stone and ulcer, colic pangs,

480

Demoniac phrenzy, moping melancholy,
 And moon-struck madness, pining atrophy,
 Marasmus, and wide-wasting pestilence,
 Dropsies and asthmas, and joint-racking rheums.
 Dire was the tossing, deep the groans; Despair
 Tended the sick, busiest from couch to couch; 490
 And over them triumphant Death his dart
 Shook, but delayed to strike, though oft invoked
 With vows, as their chief good and final hope.
 Sight so deform what heart of rock could long
 Dry-eyed behold? Adam could not, but wept,
 Though not of woman born: compassion quelled
 His best of man, and gave him up to tears
 A space, till firmer thoughts restrained excess,
 And, scarce recovering words, his plaint renewed:

“O miserable Mankind, to what fall 500
 Degraded, to what wretched state reserved!
 Better end here unborn. Why is life given
 To be thus wrested from us? rather why
 Obtruded on us thus? who, if we knew
 What we receive, would either not accept
 Life offered, or soon beg to lay it down,
 Glad to be so dismissed in peace. Can thus
 The image of God in Man, created once
 So goodly and erect, though faulty since,
 To such unsightly sufferings be debased 510
 Under inhuman pains? Why should not Man,
 Retaining still divine similitude
 In part, from such deformities be free,
 And for his Maker’s image sake exempt?”

“Their Maker’s image,” answered Michael, “then Forsook them, when themselves they vilified
 To serve ungoverned Appetite, and took

His image whom they served—a brutish vice,
Inductive mainly to the sin of Eve.

Therefore so abject is their punishment, 520
Disfiguring not God's likeness, but their own ;
Or, if his likeness, by themselves defaced
While they pervert pure Nature's healthful rules
To loathsome sickness ; worthily, since they God's image did not reverence in themselves."

"I yield it just," said Adam, "and submit.
But is there yet no other way, besides
These painful passages, how we may come
To death, and mix with our connatural dust?"

"There is," said Michael, "if thou well observe 530
The rule of Not too much, by temperance taught
In what thou eat'st and drink'st, seeking from thence Due nourishment, not gluttonous delight,
Till many years over thy head return.
So may'st thou live, till, like ripe fruit, thou drop Into thy mother's lap, or be with ease
Gathered, not harshly plucked, for death mature.
This is old age ; but then thou must outlive
Thy youth, thy strength, thy beauty, which will change
To withered, weak, and grey ; thy senses then, 540
Obtuse, all taste of pleasure must forgo
To what thou hast ; and, for the air of youth,
Hopeful and cheerful, in thy blood will reign
A melancholy damp of cold and dry,
To weigh thy spirits down, and last consume
The balm of life." To whom our Ancestor :

"Henceforth I fly not death, nor would prolong Life much, bent rather how I may be quit,
Fairest and easiest, of this cumbrous charge,
Which I must keep till my appointed day 550

Of rendering up, and patiently attend
My dissolution." Michaël replied :

"Nor love thy life, nor hate ; but what thou livest
Live well ; how long or short, permit to Heaven.
And now prepare thee for another sight."

He looked, and saw a spacious plain, whereon
Were tents of various hue ; by some were herds.
Of cattle grazing ; others, whence the sound
Of instruments that made melodious chime
Was heard, of harp and organ, and who moved 560
Their stops and chords was seen ; his volant touch
Instinct through all proportions, low and high,
Fled and pursued transverse the resonant fugue.
In other part stood one who, at the forge
Labouring, two massy clods of iron and brass
Had melted (whether found where casual fire
Had wasted woods, on mountain or in vale,
Down to the veins of Earth, thence gliding hot
To some cave's mouth, or whether washed by stream
From underground) ; the liquid ore he drained 570
Into fit moulds prepared ; from which he formed
First his own tools ; then, what might else be wrought Fusil or graven in metal. After these,
But on the hither side, a different sort
From the high neighbouring hills, which was their seat,
Down to the plain descended : by their guise
Just men they seemed, and all their study bent
To worship God aright, and know his works
Not hid ; nor those things last which might preserve
Freedom and peace to men. They on the plain 580
Long had not walked, when from the tents behold
A bevy of fair women, richly gay
In gems and wanton dress ! to the harp they sung

Soft amorous ditties, and in dance came on.
 The men, though grave, eyed them, and let their eyes
 Rove without rein, till, in the amorous net
 Fast caught, they liked, and each his liking chose.
 And now of love they treat, till the evening-star,
 Love's harbinger, appeared; then, all in heat,
 They light the nuptial torch, and bid invoke 590
 Hymen, then first to marriage rites invoked:
 With feast and music all the tents resound.
 Such happy interview, and fair event
 Of love and youth not lost, songs, garlands, flowers,
 And charming symphonies, attached the heart
 Of Adam, soon inclined to admit delight,
 The bent of Nature; which he thus expressed:
 "True opener of mine eyes, prime Angel blest,
 Much better seems this vision, and more hope
 Of peaceful days portends, than those two past: 600
 Those were of hate and death, or pain much worse;
 Here Nature seems fulfilled in all her ends."
 To whom thus Michael: "Judge not what is best
 By pleasure, though to Nature seeming meet,
 Created, as thou art, to nobler end,
 Holy and pure, conformity divine.
 Those tents thou saw'st so pleasant were the tents
 Of wickedness, wherein shall dwell his race
 Who slew his brother: studious they appear
 Of arts that polish life, inventors rare; 610
 Unmindful of their Maker, though his Spirit
 Taught them; but they his gifts acknowledged none.
 Yet they a beauteous offspring shall beget;
 For that fair female troop thou saw'st, that seemed
 Of goddesses, so blithe, so smooth, so gay,
 Yet empty of all good wherein consists

Woman's domestic honour and chief praise ;
 Bred only and completed to the taste
 Of lustful appetite, to sing, to dance,
 To dress, and troll the tongue, and roll the eye ; 620
 To these that sober race of men, whose lives
 Religious titled them the Sons of God,
 Shall yield up all their virtue, all their fame,
 Ignobly, to the trains and to the smiles
 Of these fair atheists, and now swim in joy (Erelong to swim at large) and laugh ; for which
 The world erelong a world of tears must weep."

To whom thus Adam, of short joy bereft :
 "O pity and shame, that they who to live well
 Entered so fair should turn aside to tread 630
 Paths indirect, or in the midway faint !
 But still I see the tenor of Man's woe Holds on the same, from Woman to begin."

"From Man's effeminate slackness it begins,"
 Said the Angel, "who should better hold his place
 By wisdom, and superior gifts received.
 But now prepare thee for another scene."

He looked, and saw wide territory spread
 Before him—towns, and rural works between,
 Cities of men with lofty gates and towers, 640
 Concourse in arms, fierce faces threatening war,
 Giants of mighty bone and bold emprise ;
 Part wield their arms, part curb the foaming steed,
 Single or in array of battle ranged,
 Both horse and foot, nor idly mustering stood.
 One way a band select from forage drives
 A herd of beeves, fair oxen and fair kine,
 From a fat meadow-ground, or fleecy flock,
 Ewes and their bleating lambs, over the plain,

Their booty ; scarce with life the shepherds fly, 650
 But call in aid, which makes a bloody fray :
 With cruel tournament the squadrons join ;
 Where cattle pastured late, now scattered lies
 With carcasses and arms the ensanguined field Deserted. Others to a city strong
 Lay siege, encamped, by battery, scale, and mine, Assaulting ; others from the wall defend
 With dart and javelin, stones and sulphurous fire ;
 On each hand slaughter and gigantic deeds.
 In other part the sceptred haralds call 660
 To council in the city-gates : anon
 Grey-headed men and grave, with warriors mixed,
 Assemble, and harangues are heard ; but soon
 In factious opposition, till at last
 Of middle age one rising, eminent
 In wise deport, spake much of right and wrong,
 Of justice, of religion, truth, and peace,
 And judgment from above : him old and young
 Exploded, and had seized with violent hands,
 Had not a cloud descending snatched him thence, 670
 Unseen amid the throng. So violence
 Proceeded, and oppression, and sword-law,
 Through all the plain, and refuge none was found.
 Adam was all in tears, and to his guide
 Lamenting turned full sad : "Oh, what are these ?
 Death's ministers, not men ! who thus deal death
 Inhumanly to men, and multiply
 Ten thousandfold the sin of him who slew
 His brother ; for of whom such massacre
 Make they but of their brethren, men of men ? 680
 But who was that just man, whom had not Heaven Rescued, had in his righteousness been lost ?"

To whom thus Michael: "These are the product
 Of those ill-mated marriages thou saw'st;
 Where good with bad were matched, who of themselves
 Abhor to join, and, by imprudence mixed,
 Produce prodigious births of body or mind.
 Such were these Giants, men of high renown;
 For in those days might only shall be admired,
 And valour and heroic virtue called; 650
 To overcome in battle, and subdue
 Nations, and bring home spoils with infinite
 Man-slaughter, shall be held the highest pitch
 Of human glory, and for glory done
 Of triumph, to be styled great conquerors,
 Patrons of mankind, gods, and sons of gods—
 Destroyers rightlier called, and plagues of men.
 Thus fame shall be achieved, renown on Earth,
 And what most merits fame in silence hid.
 But he, the seventh from thee, whom thou beheld'st 700
 The only righteous in a world perverse,
 And therefore hated, therefore so beset
 With foes, for daring single to be just,
 And utter odious truth, that God would come
 To judge them with his Saints—him the Most High,
 Rapt in a balmy cloud with winged steeds,
 Did, as thou saw'st, receive, to walk with God
 High in salvation and the climes of bliss,
 Exempt from death: to show thee what reward
 Awaits the good, the rest what punishment; 710
 Which now direct thine eyes and soon behold."

He looked, and saw the face of things quite changed;
 The brazen throat of war had ceased to roar;
 All now was turned to jollity and game,
 To luxury and riot, feast and dance,

Marrying or prostituting, as befell,
 Rape or adultery, where passing fair
 Allured them; thence from cups to civil broils.
 At length a reverend sire among them came,
 And of their doings great dislike declared, 720
 And testified against their ways: he oft
 Frequented their assemblies, whereso met,
 Triumphs or festivals, and to them preached
 Conversion and repentance, as to souls
 In prison, under judgments imminent;
 But all in vain. Which when he saw, he ceased
 Contending, and removed his tents far off;
 Then, from the mountain hewing timber tall,
 Began to build a vessel of huge bulk,
 Measured by cubit, length, and breadth, and highth, 730
 Smeared round with pitch, and in the side a door
 Contrived, and of provisions laid in large
 For man and beast: when lo! a wonder strange!
 Of every beast, and bird, and insect small,
 Came sevens and pairs, and entered in, as taught
 Their order; last, the sire and his three sons,
 With their four wives; and God made fast the door.
 Meanwhile the south-wind rose, and, with black wings Wide hovering, all the clouds together drove
 From under heaven; the hills, to their supply, 740
 Vapour, and exhalation dusk and moist,
 Sent up amain; and now the thickened sky
 Like a dark ceiling stood: down rushed the rain
 Impetuous, and continued till the Earth
 No more was seen. The floating vessel swum
 Uplifted, and secure with beaked prow
 Rode tilting o'er the waves; all dwellings else
 Flood overwhelmed, and them with all their pomp

Deep under water rolled; sea covered sea,
 Sea without shore: and in their palaces, 750
 Where luxury late reigned, sea-monsters whelped
 And stabled: of mankind, so numerous late,
 All left in one small bottom swum embarked.
 How didst thou grieve then, Adam, to behold
 The end of all thy offspring, end so sad, Depopulation! Thee another flood,
 Of tears and sorrow a flood, thee also drowned,
 And sunk thee as thy sons; till, gently reared
 By the Angel, on thy feet thou stood'st at last,
 Though comfortless, as when a father mourns 760
 His children, all in view destroyed at once;
 And scarce to the Angel utter'dst thus thy plaint:
 "O visions ill foreseen! Better had I Lived ignorant of future! so had borne
 My part of evil only, each day's lot
 Enough to bear; those now, that were dispensed
 The burden of many ages, on me light
 At once, by my foreknowledge gaining birth
 Abortive, to torment me, ere their being,
 With thought that they must be. Let no man seek 770
 Henceforth to be foretold what shall befall
 Him or his children; evil he may be sure,
 Which neither his foreknowing can prevent,
 And he the future evil shall no less
 In apprehension than in substance feel Grievous to bear. But that care now is past;
 Man is not whom to warn; those few escaped
 Famine and anguish will at last consume,
 Wandering that watery desert. I had hope,
 When violence was ceased and war on Earth, 780
 All would have then gone well, peace would have crowned

With length of happy days the race of Man ;
 But I was far deceived, for now I see
 Peace to corrupt no less than war to waste.
 How comes it thus? Unfold, Celestial Guide,
And whether here the race of Man will end."

To whom thus Michael: "Those, whom last thou saw'st
 In triumph and luxurious wealth, are they First seen in acts of prowess eminent
 And great exploits, but of true virtue void ; 790
 Who, having spilt much blood, and done much waste,
 Subduing nations, and achieved thereby
 Fame in the world, high titles, and rich prey,
 Shall change their course to pleasure, ease, and sloth,
 Surfeit, and lust, till wantonness and pride
 Raise out of friendship hostile deeds in peace.
 The conquered also, and enslaved by war,
 Shall, with their freedom lost, all virtue lose,
 And fear of God, from whom their piety feigned
 In sharp contest of battle found no aid 800
 Against invaders ; therefore, cooled in zeal,
 Thenceforth shall practise how to live secure,
 Worldly or dissolute, on what their lords
 Shall leave them to enjoy ; for the Earth shall bear
 More than enough, that temperance may be tried.
 So all shall turn degenerate, all depraved,
 Justice and temperance, truth and faith, forgot ;
 One man except, the only son of light
 In a dark age, against example good,
 Against allurements, custom, and a world 810
 Offended. Fearless of reproach and scorn,
 Or violence, he of their wicked ways
 Shall them admonish, and before them set
 The paths of righteousness, how much more safe

And full of peace, denouncing wrath to come
 On their impenitence ; and shall return
 Of them derided, but of God observed
 The one just man alive ; by his command
 Shall build a wondrous ark, as thou beheld'st,
 To save himself and household from amidst 820
 A world devote to universal wrack.

No sooner he, with them of man and beast
 Select for life, shall in the ark be lodged,
 And sheltered round, but all the cataracts
 Of Heaven set open on the Earth shall pour
 Rain day and night ; all fountains of the deep,
 Broke up, shall heave the ocean to usurp
 Beyond all bounds, till inundation rise
 Above the highest hills. Then shall this Mount 830
 Of Paradise by might of waves be moved
 Out of his place, pushed by the horned flood,
 With all his verdure spoiled, and trees adrift,
 Down the great river to the opening Gulf,
 And there take root, an island salt and bare,
 The haunt of seals, and orcs, and sea-mews' clang :
 To teach thee that God attributes to place
 No sanctity, if none be thither brought
 By men who there frequent or therein dwell.
 And now what further shall ensue behold."

He looked, and saw the ark hull on the flood, 840
 Which now abated ; for the clouds were fled,
 Driven by a keen north-wind, that, blowing dry,
 Wrinkled the face of deluge, as decayed ;
 And the clear sun on his wide watery glass
 Gazed hot, and of the fresh wave largely drew,
 As after thirst ; which made their flowing shrink
 From standing lake to tripping ebb, that stole

With soft foot towards the deep, who now had stopt
 His sluices, as the heaven his windows shut.
 The ark no more now floats, but seems on ground, 850
 Fast on the top of some high mountain fixed.
 And now the tops of hills as rocks appear ;
 With clamour thence the rapid currents drive
 Towards the retreating sea their furious tide.
 Forthwith from out the ark a raven flies,
 And after him, the surer messenger,
 A dove, sent forth once and again to spy
 Green tree or ground whereon his foot may light ;
 The second time returning, in his bill
 An olive-leaf he brings, pacific sign. 860
 Anon dry ground appears, and from his ark
 The ancient sire descends, with all his train ;
 Then, with uplifted hands and eyes devout,
 Grateful to Heaven, over his head beholds
 A dewy cloud, and in the cloud a bow
 Conspicuous with three listed colours gay,
 Betokening peace from God, and covenant new.
 Whereat the heart of Adam, erst so sad,
 Greatly rejoiced, and thus his joy broke forth :
 "O thou, who future things canst represent 870
 As present, Heavenly Instructor, I revive
 At this last sight, assured that Man shall live,
 With all the creatures, and their seed preserve.
 Far less I now lament for one whole world
 Of wicked sons destroyed, than I rejoice
 For one man found so perfect and so just,
 That God vouchsafes to raise another world
 From him, and all his anger to forget.
 But say, what mean those coloured streaks in Heaven,
 Distended as the brow of God appeased? 880

Or serve they as a flowery verge to bind
The fluid skirts of that same watery cloud,
Lest it again dissolve and shower the Earth?"

To whom the Archangel: "Dextrously thou aim'st.
So willingly doth God remit his ire,
Though late repenting him of Man depraved;
Grieved at his heart, when looking down he saw
The whole Earth filled with violence, and all flesh
Corrupting each their way; yet, those removed,
Such grace shall one just man find in his sight, 890
That he relents, not to blot out mankind,
And makes a covenant never to destroy
The Earth again by flood, nor let the sea
Surpass his bounds, nor rain to drown the world
With man therein or beast; but, when he brings
Over the Earth a cloud, will therein set
His triple-coloured bow, whereon to look
And call to mind his covenant. Day and night,
Seed-time and harvest, heat and hoary frost,
Shall hold their course, till fire purge all things new, 900
Both Heaven and Earth, wherein the just shall dwell."

BOOK XII.

THE ARGUMENT.

The Angel Michael continues, from the Flood, to relate what shall succeed; then, in the mention of Abraham, comes by degrees to explain who that Seed of the Woman shall be which was promised Adam and Eve in the Fall; his incarnation, death, resurrection, and ascension; the state of the Church till his second coming. Adam, greatly satisfied and recomforted by these relations and promises, descends the hill with Michael; wakens Eve, who all this while had slept, but with gentle dreams composed to quietness of mind and submission. Michael in either hand leads them out of Paradise, the fiery sword waving behind them, and the Cherubim taking their stations to guard the place.

BOOK XII.

AS one who in his journey bates at noon,
Though bent on speed, so here the Archangel paused
Betwixt the world destroyed and world restored,
If Adam aught perhaps might interpose ;
Then, with transition sweet, new speech resumes :

“Thus thou hast seen one world begin and end,
And Man as from a second stock proceed.
Much thou hast yet to see ; but I perceive
Thy mortal sight to fail ; objects divine
Must needs impair and weary human sense :                   10
Henceforth what is to come I will relate ;
Thou, therefore, give due audience, and attend.

“This second source of men, while yet but few,
And while the dread of judgment past remains
Fresh in their minds, fearing the Deity,
With some regard to what is just and right
Shall lead their lives, and multiply apace,
Labouring the soil, and reaping plenteous crop,
Corn, wine, and oil ; and, from the herd or flock
Oft sacrificing bullock, lamb, or kid,                         20
With large wine-offerings poured, and sacred feast,
Shall spend their days in joy unblamed, and dwell
Long time in peace, by families and tribes,

Under paternal rule ; till one shall rise,
 Of proud, ambitious heart, who, not content
 With fair equality, fraternal state,
 Will arrogate dominion undeserved
 Over his brethren, and quite dispossess
 Concord and law of Nature from the Earth ;
 Hunting (and men, not beasts, shall be his game) 30
 With war and hostile snare such as refuse Subjection to his empire tyrannous.
 A mighty hunter thence he shall be stiled
 Before the Lord, as in despite of Heaven,
 Or from Heaven claiming second sovranity ;
 And from rebellion shall derive his name,
 Though of rebellion others he accuse.
 He, with a crew, whom like ambition joins
 With him or under him to tyrannize,
 Marching from Eden towards the west, shall find 40
 The plain, wherein a black bituminous gurge
 Boils out from under ground, the mouth of Hell.
 Of brick, and of that stuff, they cast to build
 A city and tower, whose top may reach to Heaven ;
 And get themselves a name, lest, far dispersed
 In foreign lands, their memory be lost,
 Regardless whether good or evil fame.
 But God, who oft descends to visit men
 Unseen, and through their habitations walks
 To mark their doings, them beholding soon, 50
 Comes down to see their city, ere the tower
 Obstruct Heaven-towers, and in derision sets
 Upon their tongues a various spirit, to rase
 Quite out their native language, and, instead,
 To sow a jangling noise of words unknown.
 Forthwith a hideous gabble rises loud

Among the builders ; each to other calls,
 Not understood, till hoarse, and all in rage,
 As mocked they storm. Great laughter was in Heaven,
 And looking down, to see the hubbub strange 60
 And hear the din ; thus was the building left Ridiculous, and the work Confusion named."

Whereto thus Adam, fatherly displeas'd :

"O execrable son, so to aspire
 Above his brethren, to himself assuming Authority usurped, from God not given !
 He gave us only over beast, fish, fowl,
 Dominion absolute ; that right we hold
 By his donation ; but man over men
 He made not lord ; such title to himself 70
 Reserving, human left from human free.
 But this usurper his encroachment proud
 Stays not on Man ; to God his tower intends Siege and defiance. Wretched man ! what food
 Will he convey up thither, to sustain
 Himself and his rash army, where thin air
 Above the clouds will pine his entrails gross,
 And famish him of breath, if not of bread?"

To whom thus Michael : "Justly thou abhorr'st

That son, who on the quiet state of men 80
 Such trouble brought, affecting to subdue
 Rational liberty ; yet know withal,
 Since thy original lapse, true liberty
 Is lost, which always with right reason dwells Twinned, and from her hath no dividual being.
 Reason in Man obscured, or not obeyed,
 Immediately inordinate desires
 And upstart passions catch the government
 From reason, and to servitude reduce

Man, till then free. Therefore, since he permits 90
 Within himself unworthy powers to reign
 Over free reason, God, in judgment just,
 Subjects him from without to violent lords,
 Who oft as undeservedly enthrall
 His outward freedom: tyranny must be,
 Though to the tyrant thereby no excuse.
 Yet sometimes nations will decline so low
 From virtue, which is reason, that no wrong,
 But justice, and some fatal curse annexed,
 Deprives them of their outward liberty, 100
 Their inward lost: witness the irreverent son
 Of him who built the ark, who, for the shame
 Done to his father, heard this heavy curse,
Servant of servants, on his vicious race.
 Thus will this latter, as the former world,
 Still tend from bad to worse, till God at last,
 Wearied with their iniquities, withdraw
 His presence from among them, and avert
 His holy eyes; resolving from thenceforth
 To leave them to their own polluted ways, 110
 And one peculiar nation to select
From all the rest, of whom to be invoked—
 A nation from one faithful man to spring.
 Him on this side Euphrates yet residing,
 Bred up in idol-worship—Oh, that men
 (Canst thou believe?) should be so stupid grown,
 While yet the patriarch lived who scaped the Flood,
 As to forsake the living God, and fall
 To worship their own work in wood and stone
 For gods!—yet him God the Most High vouchsafes 120
 To call by vision from his father's house,
 His kindred, and false gods, into a land

Which he will show him, and from him will raise
 A mighty nation, and upon him shower
 His benediction so, that in his seed
 All nations shall be blest. He straight obeys ;
 Not knowing to what land, yet firm believes.
 I see him, but thou canst not, with what faith
 He leaves his gods, his friends, and native soil,
 Ur of Chaldæa, passing now the ford 130
 To Haran ; after him a cumbrous train
 Of herds and flocks, and numerous servitude,
 Not wandering poor, but trusting all his wealth
 With God, who called him, in a land unknown.
 Canaan he now attains ; I see his tents
 Pitched about Sechem, and the neighbouring plain
 Of Moreh ; there, by promise, he receives
 Gift to his progeny of all that land,
 From Hamath northward to the Desert south
 (Things by their names I call, though yet unnamed), 140
 From Hermon east to the great western sea ;
 Mount Hermon, yonder sea, each place behold
 In prospect, as I point them : on the shore,
 Mount Carmel ; here, the double-founted stream,
 Jordan, true limit eastward ; but his sons
 Shall dwell to Senir, that long ridge of hills.
 This ponder, that all nations of the Earth
 Shall in his seed be blessed. By that seed
 Is meant thy great Deliverer, who shall bruise
 The Serpent's head ; whereof to thee anon 150
 Plainlier shall be revealed. This patriarch blest,
 Whom faithful Abraham due time shall call,
 A son, and of his son a grandchild, leaves,
 Like him in faith, in wisdom, and renown.
 The grandchild, with twelve sons increased, departs

From Canaan to a land hereafter called
 Egypt, divided by the river Nile;
 See where it flows, disgorging at seven mouths
 Into the sea. To sojourn in that land
 He comes, invited by a younger son 160
 In time of dearth, a son whose worthy deeds
 Raise him to be the second in that realm
 Of Pharaoh. There he dies, and leaves his race
 Growing into a nation, and now grown Suspected to a sequent king, who seeks
 To stop their overgrowth, as inmate guests
 Too numerous; whence of guests he makes them slaves
 Inhospitably, and kills their infant males:
 Till, by two brethren (those two brethren call 170 Moses and Aaron) sent from God to claim
 His people from enthralment, they return,
 With glory and spoil, back to their promised land.
 But first the lawless tyrant, who denies
 To know their God, or message to regard,
 Must be compelled by signs and judgments dire:
 To blood unshed the rivers must be turned;
 Frogs, lice, and flies must all his palace fill
 With loathed intrusion, and fill all the land;
 His cattle must of rot and murrain die;
 Botches and blains must all his flesh emboss, 180
 And all his people; thunder mixed with hail,
 Hail mixed with fire, must rend the Egyptian sky,
 And wheel on the earth, devouring where it rolls;
 What it devours not, herb, or fruit, or grain,
 A darksome cloud of locusts swarming down
 Must eat, and on the ground leave nothing green;
 Darkness must overshadow all his bounds,
 Palpable darkness, and blot out three days;

Last, with one midnight-stroke, all the first-born
 Of Egypt must lie dead. Thus with ten wounds 190
 The river-dragon tamed at length submits
 To let his sojourners depart, and oft
 Humbles his stubborn heart, but still as ice
 More hardened after thaw; till, in his rage
 Pursuing whom he late dismissed, the sea
 Swallows him with his host, but them lets pass,
 As on dry land, between two crystal walls,
 Awed by the rod of Moses so to stand
 Divided, till his rescued gain their shore:
 Such wondrous power God to his Saint will lend, 200
 Though present in his Angel, who shall go
 Before them in a cloud, and pillar of fire—
 By day a cloud, by night a pillar of fire—
 To guide them in their journey, and remove Behind them, while the obdurate king pursues.
 All night he will pursue, but his approach
 Darkness defends between till morning-watch;
 Then through the fiery pillar and the cloud
 God looking forth will trouble all his host,
 And craze their chariot-wheels: when, by command, 210
 Moses once more his potent rod extends
 Over the sea; the sea his rod obeys;
 On their embattled ranks the waves return,
 And overwhelm their war. The race elect
 Safe towards Canaan from the shore advance
 Through the wild Desert, not the readiest way;
 Lest, entering on the Canaanite alarmed,
 War terrify them inexpert, and fear
 Return them back to Egypt, choosing rather Inglorious life with servitude; for life 220
 To noble and ignoble is more sweet

Untrained in arms, where rashness leads not on.
 This also shall they gain by their delay
 In the wide wilderness: there they shall found
 Their government, and their great Senate choose
 Through the twelve tribes, to rule by laws ordained.
 God, from the mount of Sinai, whose grey top
 Shall tremble, he descending, will himself
 In thunder, lightning, and loud trumpet's sound,
 Ordain them laws; part, such as appertain 230
 To civil justice; part, religious rites
 Of sacrifice, informing them, by types
 And shadows, of that destined Seed to bruise
 The Serpent, by what means he shall achieve Mankind's deliverance. But the voice of God
 To mortal ear is dreadful; they beseech
 That Moses might report to them his will,
 And terror cease; he grants what they besought,
 Instructed that to God is no access
 Without Mediator, whose high office now 240
 Moses in figure bears, to introduce
 One greater, of whose day he shall foretell,
 And all the Prophets, in their age, the times
 Of great Messiah shall sing. Thus laws and rites
 Established, such delight hath God in men
Obedient to his will, that he vouchsafes
Among them to set up his tabernacle—
The Holy One with mortal men to dwell.
 By his prescript a sanctuary is framed
 Of cedar, overlaid with gold; therein 250
 An ark, and in the ark his testimony,
 The records of his covenant; over these
 A mercy-seat of gold, between the wings
 Of two bright Cherubim; before him burn

Seven lamps, as in a zodiac representing
 The heavenly fires. Over the tent a cloud
 Shall rest by day, a fiery gleam by night,
 Save when they journey; and at length they come,
 Conducted by his Angel, to the land
 Promised to Abraham and his seed. The rest 250
 Were long to tell: how many battles fought;
 How many kings destroyed, and kingdoms won;
 Or how the sun shall in mid-heaven stand still
 A day entire, and night's due course adjourn,
 Man's voice commanding, 'Sun, in Gibeon stand,
 And thou, Moon, in the vale of Aialon,
 Till Israel overcome!' so call the third
 From Abraham, son of Isaac, and from him
 His whole descent, who thus shall Canaan win."

Here Adam interposed: "O sent from Heaven, 270
 Enlightener of my darkness, gracious things
 Thou hast revealed, those chiefly which concern
 Just Abraham and his seed. Now first I find Mine eyes true opening, and my heart much eased, Erewhile perplexed with thoughts what would become
 Of me and all mankind; but now I see
 His day, in whom all nations shall be blest,
 Favour unmerited by me, who sought
 Forbidden knowledge by forbidden means.
 This yet I apprehend not, why to those 280
 Among whom God will deign to dwell on Earth
 So many and so various laws are given:
 So many laws argue so many sins
 Among them; how can God with such reside?"

To whom thus Michael: "Doubt not but that sin
 Will reign among them, as of thee begot;
 And therefore was law given them, to evince

Their natural pravity, by stirring up
 Sin against law to fight; that, when they see
 Law can discover sin, but not remove, 290
 Save by those shadowy expiations weak,
 The blood of bulls and goats, they may conclude
 Some blood more precious must be paid for Man,
 Just for unjust, that in such righteousness,
 To them by faith imputed, they may find
 Justification towards God, and peace
 Of conscience, which the law by ceremonies
 Cannot appease, nor man the moral part
 Perform, and not performing cannot live.
 So law appears imperfect, and but given 300
 With purpose to resign them, in full time,
 Up to a better covenant, disciplined
 From shadowy types to truth, from flesh to spirit,
 From imposition of strict laws to free
 Acceptance of large grace, from servile fear
 To filial, works of law to works of faith.
 And therefore shall not Moses, though of God
 Highly beloved, being but the minister
 Of law, his people into Canaan lead;
 But Joshua, whom the Gentiles Jesus call, 310
 His name and office bearing, who shall quell
 The adversary Serpent, and bring back
 Through the world's wilderness long-wandered Man
 Safe to eternal Paradise of rest.
 Meanwhile they, in their earthly Canaan placed,
 Long time shall dwell and prosper, but when sins
 National interrupt their public peace,
 Provoking God to raise them enemies—
 From whom as oft he saves them penitent,
 By Judges first, then under Kings; of whom 320

The second, both for piety renowned
 And puissant deeds, a promise shall receive Irrevocable, that his regal throne
 For ever shall endure. The like shall sing
 All Prophecy—that of the royal stock
 Of David (so I name this king) shall rise
 A Son, the Woman's Seed to thee foretold,
 Foretold to Abraham, as in whom shall trust
 All nations, and to kings foretold, of kings
 The last, for of his reign shall be no end. 330
 But first a long succession must ensue ;
 And his next son, for wealth and wisdom famed,
 The clouded ark of God, till then in tents
 Wandering, shall in a glorious temple enshrine.
 Such follow him as shall be registered
 Part good, part bad ; of bad the longer scroll ;
 Whose foul idolatries and other faults,
 Heaped to the popular sum, will so incense
 God, as to leave them, and expose their land,
 Their city, his temple, and his holy ark, 340
 With all his sacred things, a scorn and prey
 To that proud city, whose high walls thou saw'st
 Left in confusion, Babylon thence called.
 There in captivity he lets them dwell
 The space of seventy years ; then brings them back, Remembering mercy, and his covenant sworn
 To David, stablished as the days of Heaven.
 Returned from Babylon by leave of kings,
 Their lords, whom God disposed, the house of God
 They first re-edify, and for a while 350
 In mean estate live moderate, till, grown
 In wealth and multitude, factious they grow.
 But first among the priests dissension springs,

Men who attend the altar, and should most Endeavour peace; their strife pollution brings
 Upon the temple itself; at last they seize
 The sceptre, and regard not David's sons;
 Then lose it to a stranger, that the true
 Anointed King Messiah might be born
 Barred of his right. Yet at his birth a star, 360
 Unseen before in Heaven, proclaims him come,
 And guides the eastern sages, who inquire
 His place, to offer incense, myrrh, and gold:
 His place of birth a solemn Angel tells
 To simple shepherds, keeping watch by night;
 They gladly thither haste, and by a quire
 Of squadroned Angels hear his carol sung.
 A Virgin is his mother, but his Sire
 The Power of the Most High. He shall ascend
 The throne hereditary, and bound his reign 370
 With Earth's wide bounds, his glory with the Heavens."

He ceased, discerning Adam with such joy
 Surcharged as had, like grief, been dewed in tears,
 Without the vent of words; which these he breathed:

"O prophet of glad tidings, finisher
 Of utmost hope! now clear I understand
 What oft my steadiest thoughts have searched in vain;
 Why our great Expectation should be called
 The Seed of Woman. Virgin Mother, hail!
 High in the love of Heaven, yet from my loins 380
 Thou shalt proceed, and from thy womb the Son
 Of God Most High; so God with Man unites.
 Needs must the Serpent now his capital bruise Expect with mortal pain: say where and when
 Their fight, what stroke shall bruise the Victor's heel."

To whom thus Michael: "Dream not of their fight

As of a duel, or the local wounds
 Of head or heel. Not therefore joins the Son
 Manhood to Godhead, with more strength to foil
 Thy enemy ; nor so is overcome 390
 Satan, whose fall from Heaven, a deadlier bruise,
 Disabled not to give thee thy death's wound ;
 Which he who comes thy Saviour shall recure,
 Not by destroying Satan, but his works
 In thee and in thy seed. Nor can this be,
 But by fulfilling that which thou didst want,
 Obedience to the law of God, imposed
 On penalty of death, and suffering death,
 The penalty to thy transgression due,
 And due to theirs which out of thine will grow : 400
 So only can high justice rest appaid.
 The law of God exact he shall fulfil
 Both by obedience and by love, though love
 Alone fulfil the law ; thy punishment
 He shall endure, by coming in the flesh
 To a reproachful life and cursed death,
 Proclaiming life to all who shall believe
 In his redemption, and that his obedience
 Imputed becomes theirs by faith—his merits
 To save them, not their own, though legal, works. 410
 For this he shall live hated, be blasphemed,
 Seized on by force, judged, and to death condemned,
 A shameful and accursed, nailed to the cross
 By his own nation, slain for bringing life ;
 But to the cross he nails thy enemies,
 The law that is against thee, and the sins
 Of all mankind, with him there crucified,
 Never to hurt them more who rightly trust
 In this his satisfaction. So he dies,

Over his foes and thine; there shall surprise
 The Serpent, Prince of air, and drag in chains
 Through all his realm, and there confounded leave;
 Then enter into glory, and resume
 His seat at God's right hand, exalted high
 Above all names in Heaven; and thence shall come,
 When this world's dissolution shall be ripe,
 With glory and power, to judge both quick and dead— 460
 To judge the unfaithful dead, but to reward
 His faithful, and receive them into bliss,
 Whether in Heaven or Earth; for then the Earth
 Shall all be Paradise, far happier place
 Than this of Eden, and far happier days."

So spake the Archangel Michaël; then paused,
 As at the world's great period; and our Sire,
 Replete with joy and wonder, thus replied:

"O Goodness infinite, Goodness immense!
That all this good of evil shall produce, 470
And evil turn to good; more wonderful
Than that which by creation first brought forth
Light out of darkness! Full of doubt I stand,
Whether I should repent me now of sin
By me done and occasioned, or rejoice
Much more, that much more good thereof shall spring;
 To God more glory, more good-will to men
 From God, and over wrath grace shall abound.
 But say, if our Deliverer up to Heaven
 Must reascend, what will betide the few, 480
 His faithful, left among the unfaithful herd,
 The enemies of truth. Who then shall guide
 His people, who defend? Will they not deal Worse with his followers than with him they dealt?"

"Be sure they will," said the Angel; "but from Heaven

He to his own a Comforter will send,
 The promise of the Father, who shall dwell,
 His Spirit, within them, and the law of faith,
 Working through love, upon their hearts shall write,
 To guide them in all truth, and also arm 490
 With spiritual armour, able to resist
 Satan's assaults, and quench his fiery darts ;
 What man can do against them not afraid,
 Though to the death ; against such cruelties
 With inward consolations recompensed,
 And oft supported so as shall amaze
 Their proudest persecutors. For the Spirit, Poured first on his Apostles, whom he sends
 To evangelize the nations, then on all
 Baptized, shall them with wondrous gifts endue 500
 To speak all tongues, and do all miracles,
 As did their Lord before them. Thus they win
 Great numbers of each nation to receive
 With joy the tidings brought from Heaven : at length
 Their ministry performed, and race well run,
 Their doctrine and their story written left,
 They die ; but in their room, as they forewarn,
 Wolves shall succeed for teachers, grievous wolves,
 Who all the sacred mysteries of Heaven
 To their own vile advantages shall turn 510
Of lucre and ambition, and the truth
With superstitions and traditions taint,
Left only in those written records pure,
Though not but by the Spirit understood.
Then shall they seek to avail themselves of names,
Places, and titles, and with these to join
Secular power, though feigning still to act
 By spiritual ; to themselves appropriating

The Spirit of God, promised alike and given
 To all believers; and, from that pretence, 520
 Spiritual laws by carnal power shall force
 On every conscience, laws which none shall find Left them enrolled, or what the Spirit within Shall on the heart engrave. What will they then,
 But force the Spirit of Grace itself, and bind
 His consort, Liberty? what but unbuild
 His living temples, built by faith to stand,
 Their own faith, not another's? for, on Earth,
 Who against faith and conscience can be heard
 Infallible? Yet many will presume: 530
Whence heavy persecution shall arise
On all who in the worship persevere
Of Spirit and Truth; the rest, far greater part,
Will deem in outward rites and specious forms
Religion satisfied; Truth shall retire
Bestuck with slanderous darts, and works of faith
Rarely be found. So shall the world go on,
To good malignant, to bad men benign,
 Under her own weight groaning till the day
 Appear of respiration to the just, 540
 And vengeance to the wicked, at return
 Of Him so lately promised to thy aid,
 The Woman's Seed—obscurely then foretold,
 Now amplier known thy Saviour and thy Lord;
 Last in the clouds from Heaven to be revealed
 In glory of the Father, to dissolve
 Satan with his perverted world; then raise
 From the conflagrant mass, purged and refined,
 New Heavens, new Earth, ages of endless date,
 Founded in righteousness and peace and love, 550
 To bring forth fruits, joy and eternal bliss."

He ended ; and thus Adam last replied :
 "How soon hath thy prediction, Seer blest,
 Measured this transient world, the race of time,
 Till time stand fixed ! Beyond is all abyss, Eternity, whose end no eye can reach.
 Greatly instructed I shall hence depart,
 Greatly in peace of thought, and have my fill
 Of knowledge, what this vessel can contain ;
 Beyond which was my folly to aspire. 560
 Henceforth I learn that to obey is best,
 And love with fear the only God, to walk
 As in his presence, ever to observe
 His providence, and on him sole depend,
 Merciful over all his works, with good
 Still overcoming evil, and by small
 Accomplishing great things, by things deemed weak
 Subverting worldly-strong, and worldly-wise
 By simply meek ; that suffering for truth's sake
 Is fortitude to highest victory, 570
 And, to the faithful, death the gate of life ;
 Taught this by his example whom I now
 Acknowledge my Redeemer ever blest."

To whom thus also the Angel last replied :
 "This having learned, thou hast attained the sum
Of wisdom ; hope no higher, though all the stars
Thou knew'st by name, and all the ethereal powers,
All secrets of the deep, all Nature's works,
Or works of God in Heaven, air, Earth, or sea,
 And all the riches of this world enjoy'dst, 580
 And all the rule, one empire. Only add
 Deeds to thy knowledge answerable ; add faith,
 Add virtue, patience, temperance ; add love,
 By name to come called charity, the soul

Of all the rest: then wilt thou not be loth
 To leave this Paradise, but shalt possess
 A Paradise within thee, happier far.
 Let us descend now, therefore, from this top
Of speculation; for the hour precise
 Exacts our parting hence; and, see! the guards, 590
 By me encamped on yonder hill, expect
 Their motion, at whose front a flaming sword,
 In signal of remove, waves fiercely round.
We may no longer stay: go, waken Eve;
Her also I with gentle dreams have calmed,
 Portending good, and all her spirits composed
 To meek submission: thou, at season fit,
 Let her with thee partake what thou hast heard;
 Chiefly what may concern her faith to know,
 The great deliverance by her seed to come 600
 (For by the Woman's Seed) on all mankind;
 That ye may live, which will be many days,
 Both in one faith unanimous; though sad
 With cause for evils past, yet much more cheered
 With meditation on the happy end."

He ended, and they both descend the hill.
 Descended, Adam to the bower where Eve
 Lay sleeping ran before, but found her waked;
 And thus with words not sad she him received:
 "Whence thou return'st, and whither went'st, I know; 610
 For God is also in sleep, and dreams advise,
 Which he hath sent propitious, some great good
 Presaging, since with sorrow and heart's distress Wearied I fell asleep. But now lead on;
In me is no delay; with thee to go
Is to stay here; without thee here to stay
 Is to go hence unwilling; thou to me

Art all things under Heaven, all places thou,
 Who for my wilful crime art banished hence.
 This further consolation yet secure
 I carry hence: though all by me is lost,
 Such favour I unworthy am vouchsafed,
 By me the Promised Seed shall all restore."

620

So spake our mother Eve, and Adam heard
 Well pleased, but answered not; for now too nigh
 The Archangel stood, and from the other hill
 To their fixed station, all in bright array,
 The Cherubim descended; on the ground
 Gliding meteorous, as evening mist
 Risen from a river o'er the marish glides,
 And gathers ground fast at the labourer's heel
 Homeward returning. High in front advanced,
 The brandished sword of God before them blazed,
 Fierce as a comet; which with torrid heat,
 And vapour as the Libyan air adust,
 Began to parch that temperate clime; whereat
 In either hand the hastening angel caught
 Our lingering parents, and to the eastern gate
 Led them direct, and down the cliff as fast
 To the subjected plain; then disappeared.

630

640

They, looking back, all the eastern side beheld
 Of Paradise, so late their happy seat,
 Waved over by that flaming brand; the gate
 With dreadful faces thronged and fiery arms.
 Some natural tears they dropped, but wiped them soon;
 The world was all before them, where to choose
 Their place of rest, and Providence their guide.
 They, hand in hand, with wandering steps and slow,
 Through Eden took their solitary way.

NOTES

NOTES

COMMENDATORY VERSES.

First printed in 1674. I number the lines of each poem for convenience of reference.

I. The Latin elegiacs: the author of these was Samuel Barrow, a Cambridge man of note. Born in 1625 he graduated from Trinity in 1643, and afterwards attained to some celebrity in medicine. He was appointed Physician in Ordinary to Charles II. in August, 1660, and died in 1682. His Royalist sympathies evidently did not prevent him from being an admirer of Milton. Curiously enough, his poetic summary of the contents of the Epic includes no direct reference to the Temptation and Fall of Man. He is most struck with the war in Heaven and Satan's expulsion.

1. Amissam; the masculine were more correct; cf. the title of Hogg's once well-known translation—Paraphrasis Poetica in tria Johannis Miltoni Poemata, viz. Paradisum Amissum, Paradisum Recuperatum, et Samsonem Agonisten (1690).

9. pontum; no doubt, the right reading. It may, however, be noted that both the second and third editions of Paradise Lost have portum (which Keightley retained, with what sense is not clear).

15. futurum; so the second and third editions, but many later texts print futura. As the line stands it seems to mean (if we may reproduce the baldness of the original), 'who could believe that there would be any one who would conceive hopes of these things?' i.e. be so ambitious. But probably the author intended futura (or wrote hoc).

17—38. These lines, nearly half the poem, allude to bk. vi. of P. L.; see vi. 245—327, 634—70, 749—879.

30. currus animæ, the Cherubic chariot (vi. 750—56).

39—42. Lauder placed these verses—ironically—on the title-page of his Essay (1750).

42. Alluding to the Homeric "Battle of the Frogs and Mice," and the Vergilian "Culex." Cf. Dryden's lines on Milton.

II. The English verses: the writer was Andrew Marvell (1620—78), poet and politician. In 1657 he had been made assistant secretary to Milton while the latter still held office under the Council. At the Restoration he did Milton good service—"acted vigorously in his behalf and made a considerable party for him" (says Phillips, Memoir). Marvell's poetry shows Milton's influence clearly; see Lycidas, 40, note.

9. Samson Agonistes had been published (1671).

12. success, result, issue.

26. pretend, claim falsely.

37—40. See P. L. i. 13—15. A correspondent of Notes and Queries pointed out that "the bird" (39) meant is the bird of Paradise and that Marvell refers to the old notion, believed till the end of the last century, that it was footless: cf. "always keeps on wing." So in Lyly's play, Love's Metamorphosis, iv. 1, the bird of Paradise is described as "that bird that liveth only by air, and dieth if she touch the earth" (Bond's Lyly, III. 319). Cf. too a complimentary poem (1647) to Fletcher (p. xlii. vol. 1. in the Cambridge Beaumont and Fletcher):

"But thou art still that Bird of Paradise
Which hath no feet and ever nobly flies."

42. expense; some texts print expanse.

43. See P. L. III. 32—36.

47—50. A sarcasm against Dryden, who, as the champion of rhymed plays, had under the name of "Bayes" been satirised in Buckingham's Rehearsal (1671)—an attack which he repaid with interest in Absalom and Achitophel. The allusion comes naturally from Marvell, who had himself borrowed the title of The Rehearsal for his chief prose work, The Rehearsal Transposed, a long polemical pamphlet in two parts (1672—73), in which his opponent figures throughout as "Mr Bayes." Milton was thought to have helped him in writing Part I., but Marvell denies this in Part II. See Aitken's Marvell, "Poems," p. 209, and Birrell's Life, chap. v. Dryden (as we learn from Aubrey) on one of his visits to Milton asked permission to "put his Paradise Lost into a drama in rhyme. Mr Milton received him cordially, and told him he would give him leave to tag his verses": the outcome being his opera The State of Innocence and Fall of Man, published in 1674, the very year in which, apparently, Marvell wrote these verses. Milton may have talked the matter over with Marvell (so Masson thinks); or, perhaps, it had become a piece of contemporary gossip among literary men. Either way, the reference here is not to be mistaken.

49. fancies. Keightley faces. points, the tagged laces used to tie parts of the dress, especially the breeches; mentioned often in Shakespeare.

51, 52. the mode, the fashion of rhyming. He means that he would use the word praise rather than the weaker term commend, had he not to find a rhyme with offend.

THE VERSE.

1. rime; the older and more correct spelling of rhyme.

10. Cf. the similar appeal to the example of Italian writers in the Preface to S. A. Italian works in blank verse (versi sciolti) which illustrate what Milton says in both places are:—Trissino's tragedy Sofonisba, written about 1514, and his heroic poem Italia Liberata, published 1548 (cf. Johnson's Life of M. ad fin.); Rucellai's Rosmunda (1516), modelled on Sofonisba; Tasso's poem on the Creation; and Alamanni's didactic work La Coltivazione (1546). The influence of Italian poetry on Milton is seen also in the free ('Apolelymenos') measures of the choruses of Samson Agonistes, and in Lycidas.

"Among the Spanish poets, Mr Bowle mentions Francisco de Aldana, who translated the Epistles of Ovid into Spanish blank verse; and Gonsalvo Perez, who, in like manner, translated the Odyssey of Homer" (Todd).

11, 12. Scarcely pleasant reading for Dryden who had defended rhyme, and whose rhymed dramas were appearing in quick succession. We have, I believe, a similar hit at him in the Preface to S. A. In the Preface to his Juvenal Dryden retorted that whatever might be Milton's "alleged" reasons for "the abolishing of rhyme," the real reason was "that rhyme was not his talent."

20. Practically it was quite true that Paradise Lost was the first great English poem, of a non-dramatic type, written in blank verse, though Surrey had used a rhymeless measure in his translation of the second (1557) and fourth (1548) books of the Aeneid; cf. Ascham's Schoolmaster (1570), "The noble Lord Th' Earle of Surrey, first of all English men, in translating the fourth booke of Virgill...auoyded the fault of Ryming" (Bohn's ed., p. 217). There are also some blank verse pieces by Nicholas Grimald in Tottel's Miscellany (1557)—e.g. "The Death of Zoroas," Arber's ed., pp. 120—23, and "Ciceroes death," pp. 123—25. And Gascoigne's Steele Glas (1576) is "written without rime," as he notes in the "Epistle Dedicatorie" (Arber, p. 45). But these works, though interesting to the student, have no great intrinsic merit, and Milton's claim is substantially unimpeachable. The next long epic after Paradise Lost in blank verse was Phillips' Cider (1706), an imitation of the Georgics; and Thomson (Autumn) in addressing Phillips says:

"the second thou

Who nobly durst in rhyme-unfettered verse

With British freedom sing the British song";

an obvious allusion to Milton (whom Thomson imitates constantly) and this Preface.

BOOK I.

Abbreviations:—

M. = Milton, or Milton's poetry, as distinguished from his prose.

P.W. = Milton's prose-works (in "Bohn's Standard Library").

P.R. = Paradise Regained.

S.A. = Samson Agonistes.

Nat. Ode = Ode On the Morning of Christ's Nativity.

Other books of Paradise Lost are indicated by Roman numerals.

1—6. Like Homer and Vergil he indicates the theme of his poem at the outset. Cf. the beginning of Paradise Regained :

"I, who erewhile the happy Garden sung
By one man's disobedience lost, now sing
Recovered Paradise to all mankind,
By one man's firm obedience fully tried
Through all temptation, and the Tempter foiled
In all his wiles, defeated and repulsed,
And Eden raised in the waste Wilderness."

2. mortal, deadly—the late Lat. use of mortalis.

4. Eden = Paradise. one greater Man, the Messiah; Romans v. 19.

6—16. The invocation of the Muse is an epic convention; like Dante and Tasso, M. follows therein Homer and Vergil. The significance lies in his choice of a power to be addressed: not one of the Nine Muses to whom a Greek or Roman poet would have appealed, but the Muse of sacred song, the Heavenly power which inspired Moses on Sinai, and David on Zion, and the other prophets of Israel. Twice he speaks of great singers as "taught by the Heavenly Muse" (III. 19, Comus, 515), and in VII. 1—4 he gives her the name "Urania," "the Heavenly." Book VII. 1—39, where, having completed half his task, the poet petitions the Muse afresh, should be compared with this passage.

6. Perhaps secret = Lat. secretus, 'apart, retired'; cf. II. 891.

7. Oreb, or...Sinai. M. may be referring to the two occasions on which Moses received a Divine communication—(1) when the Lord appeared to him in a burning bush, Exod. iii.; (2) when he was given the Law, Exod. xix.—xxx. Myself, I believe that only the latter is intended, and that M., contrasting Exod. xix. 20 with Deut. iv. 10, does not decide whether the mountain where Moses received the Law should be called "Oreb or Sinai." The accounts can be harmonised easily: Horeb was the whole range, Sinai its lower part. Why in P. L. (cf. XI. 74) M. prefers Oreb to Horeb, I do not know: in the Cambridge mss. is the entry: "the golden calfe, or the massacre in Horeb."

8. that shepherd, Moses, who "kept the flock of Jethro" on Horeb, Exod. iii. 1. first taught; in Genesis i. Of course, M. drew largely on the Mosaic books of the Old Testament.

9, 10. the Heavens, i.e. the sky and starry realms of this Universe. Chaos="the vast Abyss," 21; "the gloomy deep," 152.

10—12. Cf. III. 30, 31.

Siloa's brook; more familiar to us in the description "pool," through John ix. 7, 11; but Isaiah's words, of which M. may be thinking—"the waters of Shiloah that go softly," viii. 6—imply that the waters of the pool overflowed into the garden below and so formed a streamlet, which would find its way into the Kidron. Josephus notes the abundant water of Siloa (which he always calls a spring, πηγή), Bellum Judaicum, v. 4. 1. The form Siloa illustrates Milton's dislike of sh; see the note on 398. The Septuagint has Σιλωάμ, the Vulgate Siloe.

The reason, doubtless, why M. specially refers to Siloa is this. The Muses (says Hesiod, at the beginning of the Theogony) frequent "the dark-coloured spring (Aganippe)...and altar of Zeus." Imitating that passage in Lycidas, 15, 16, M. addresses the Muses as

"Sisters of the sacred well,

That from beneath the seat of Jove doth spring."

He connects the spring with the altar—cf. Il Penseroso, 48—to show the sanctity of poetic inspiration. Here he takes Hesiod's thought, which he before presented in its classical dress, and gives it a Scriptural investiture: the result being a complete parallel between the classical Muses who haunt the spring that rises by the altar of Zeus, and the Heavenly Muse who haunts the spring that flows by the Temple ("the oracle") of the Almighty.

12. fast by, close by. Siloa was outside Jerusalem, in the valley that skirted Mt Moriah, on which stood the Temple. oracle, "thy holy oracle," Psalms xxviii. 2.

14. The metaphor in "flight," "soar," is a favourite with M. Cf. III. 13, VII. 3, 4, IX. 45. no middle flight, i.e. he will ascend to the highest Empyrean.

14, 15. He hopes to be filled with a higher inspiration, so as to treat of higher things, than the classical poets whose inspiration came from the Muses of antiquity. the Aonian mount, Helicon, in Bœotia; sacred to the Muses—whence their title Aonides. Pope calls them "Aonian maids" (Messiah), and Campbell, "Aonian Muses" (Pleasures of Hope).

15. pursues, treats of; "in the sense of the Latin sequor. E notum factum carmen sequar, Horace, Ars Poetica 240" (Keightley).

16. This claim to novelty of theme recalls Comus, 43—45 :

"I will tell you now

What never yet was heard in tale or song,

From old or modern bard, in hall or bower,"

i.e. "in prose or rhyme" (a phrase of Ariosto). Similar claims might be instanced in Vergil, Spenser, and other poets, e.g. Horace's carmina non prius | audita...canto (Od. III. 1. 2—4). Dante says that he has seen in Paradise "things which whoso descendeth from up there hath nor knowledge nor power to retell," though he will try to (Paradiso, I. 5, 6). rhyme, verse.

17—26. Cf. the similar invocation of the Holy Spirit in P. R. I. 8—17: a higher power than the Muse addressed above. "There can be little doubt that Milton believed himself to be, in some real sense, an inspired man" (Masson). In The Reason of Church Government, II., he says that a great poem can only be achieved through "devout prayer to that eternal Spirit, who can enrich with all utterance and knowledge" (P. W. II. 481); and in The Christian Doctrine, I. 6, he explains that sometimes the Spirit means in Scripture "that impulse or voice of God by which the prophets were inspired" (P. W. IV. 152).

19. for thou know'st. Cf. Homer, Iliad II. 484, ἔσπετε νῦν μοι, Μοῦσαι... | ὑμεῖς γὰρ θεὰ ἐστε, πάρεστε τε, ἴστε τε πάντα; and Theocritus XXII. 116, εἰπέ θεά, σὺ γὰρ οἶσθα.

20, 21. Cf. the account of the Creation in VII. 234, 235. In Genesis i. 2 the Heb. verb rendered "moved" in A.V. (ferebatur in the Vulgate) means either 'fluttered' (Luther has schwebete), as in Deut. xxxii. 11, where it is used of an eagle hovering; or 'brooded' (incubabat in Basil and others of the Latin Fathers), like a bird hatching eggs. Cf. Sir Thomas Browne, Religio, xxxiii., "This is that gentle heat that brooded on the waters, and in six days hatched the world."

21. dove-like. The allusion, I believe, is to the descent of the Holy Ghost "in a bodily shape like a dove" (Luke iii. 22); cf. P. R. I. 30, 83. This may be inferred from The Christian Doctrine, I. 6.

22, 23. what in me is dark illumine; the thought is expanded in III. 40—55.

24. argument, subject = Lat. argumentum; cf. IX. 28.

25. assert, vindicate.

26. Cf. S. A. 293, 294:

"Just are the ways of God,
And justifiable to men";

the Scriptural reference being to passages like Ps. cxlv. 17 and Rev. xv. 3, "just and true are thy ways." Pope professed the same design; cf. the Essay on Man, I. 15, 16:

"Laugh where we must, be candid where we can,
But vindicate the ways of God to man."

See also Gray's Progress of Poesy, 47. justify, i.e. "to men."

29. grand, i.e. first, original.

31, 32. i.e. transgress his will because of ("for") one restraint. Keightley makes for one restraint qualify what follows—"lords of the world (cf. IX. 658), but for a single restraint."

33. Cf. Iliad I. 8.

36. what time, at the time when, Lat. quo tempore. "What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee," Psalm lvi. 3. So in Comus, 291, Lycidas, 28.

39. peers, equals, Lat. pares; cf. Lycidas, 9.

40. See Isaiah xiv. 12—15.

45. flaming; cf. Luke x. 18, "And he said unto them, I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven." the ethereal sky, the Empyrean.

46. ruin = Lat. ruina, 'falling'; see III. 258, note.

combustion, utter destruction.

47. there; in "the bottomless pit" (VI. 866—see note).

48. in adamantine chains. Cf. 2 Pet. ii. 4, "if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness" (see 72); also Jude 6, Rev. xx. 1, 2. See II. 169, 183, 196, III. 82.

50. nine, traditionally a significant number, being a multiple of three (see 619). Their fall from Heaven lasted nine days (VI. 871), as did that of the Titans in Hesiod. Dante students will remember the great significance that is attached to the number nine in the Vita Nuova.

55. pain, physical suffering. Cf. 125, 147, 336; the point is emphasised by Milton (and lost if we interpret pain = 'punishment'). Later, M. shows how the fallen angels first became sensible of pain through their sin (see VI. 327, note).

56. baleful, full of woe.

57. witnessed, showed, testified to.

58. Scan obdurate, as always in M.; cf. VI. 790.

59. The original editions have Angels kenn. Throughout the volume the apostrophe indicative of the genitive was omitted (as often happened then): hence Angels may have stood also for Angel's or Angels' (cf. 754). Some modern texts print Angel's ken, making ken a noun. But M. uses ken as a verb (v. 265, XI. 396), and I prefer to take it so here —with the sense, ‘as far as angels see.’ Cf. 2 Henry VI. III. 2. 101, “As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs.”

60. dismal; a much more poetic word then.

61. “Of all the articles, of which the dreadful scenery of Milton’s Hell consists, Scripture furnished him only with a Lake of Fire and Brimstone” (Cowper). See II. 575, 576, note.

63. no light, i.e. there was. It was a popular belief that the flames of Hell gave no light (Keightley). Cf. Herrick’s Noble Numbers :

“The fire of Hell this strange condition hath,
To burn, not shine (as learned Basil saith).”

darkness visible; an obvious oxymoron (see 692). What M. means is—not absolute darkness (‘pitch darkness,’ as we say), for then the “sights of woe” would have been invisible—but the gloom which half conceals and half reveals objects, and itself (to borrow Pope’s words) “strikes the sense no less than light.” The Dunciad, IV. 1–4, is an apt parody. Mr Beeching reminds us of Job x. 22.

66, 67. Doubtless from Euripides, Troades 681, 682, ἐμοὶ γὰρ οὐδ’ ὁ πᾶσι λείπεται βροτοῖς | ξύνεστω ἐλπίς (‘to me even hope, which all mortals have, is lost’). Probably too there is an echo of Dante’s famous words—“All hope abandon, ye who enter here”—placed over the gates of Hell, Inferno, III. 9.

68. urges, afflicts, plies—Lat. urgere; cf. “exercise,” II. 89.

72. utter darkness; again in III. 16, V. 614. utter, outer.

74, 75. He makes the distance of Hell from the Empyrean=three times the distance of the Earth (“the centre”) from the “utmost pole” of the globe or Universe (i.e. that point in the surface of the globe which is nearest to the Empyrean). The calculation is suggested by Iliad VIII. 16, Æneid VI. 577–79.

79–81. Beëlzebub; see II. 299, note.

82. Satan=‘adversary’: a name first given to him when he rebelled: his “former name” being thenceforth heard no more (v. 658, 659). It is not, I think, clear whether this “former name” was “Lucifer” (cf. VII. 131–33), or some other title which, like the titles of the other rebels, was utterly blotted out (cf. 361–63, VI. 376–80). I believe, however, that M. means us to understand that both “Lucifer” and “Satan” were later names, given after the rebellion.

84, 85. A double allusion—to Isaiah xiv. 12, “how art thou fallen from heaven,” and Æneid II. 274, 275, quantum mutatus ab illo { Hectore.

86. didst; grammar requires did: the sense implies ‘thou.’

87–91. Cf. v. 676–78, where Satan says to Beëlzebub that they had ever been wont to share each other’s thought and “were one.” To Beëlzebub he first hinted his purpose to rebel (v. 673).

87. if he, i.e. if thou beest he; the sentence is not completed (anacoluthon). M. often uses this abrupt style to suggest the speaker's agitation; cf. v. 30 et seq.

91, 92. into what...from what; cf. v. 543 and P. R. II. 30, 31. An imitation perhaps of Gk. οἶος...οἶος—as in Sophocles, Trachiniae 994, ἱερῶν οἶαν οἶων...χάρων, 'what a return (i.e. how poor) for what sacrifices' (i.e. how great); and Electra 751, οἱ' ἔργα δράσας οἶα λαγ-χάνει κακά.

93. Cf. the account of the battle in III. 392, 393, VI. 836—38.

94. Satan's defiant spirit recalls the stubborn attitude of Prometheus towards Zeus in Aeschylus's play.

97. fixed mind; cf. Il Penseroso, 4, The Faerie Queene, IV. 7. 16, "Yet nothing could my fixed mind remove" (change).

98. high disdain. A common phrase with our old poets—Spenser (The Faerie Queene, I. 1. 19), Sylvester and others; taken from the alto sdegno of Italian writers (Todd). "High" is a favourite epithet of Dante, especially in abstract phrases like "the high virtue" (l'alta virtù), "God's high decree" (alto fato di Dio), "the high Providence" (l'alta Provvidenza); see the Inferno, XXIII. 55, XXVI. 82, XXXI. 119; Purgatorio, XXVI. 72, XXX. 40, 142; Paradiso, I. 106, XXVII. 61.

104. dubious, because the battle lasted for three days (bk. VI.).

105. shook his throne. A boastful exaggeration; cf. 114 and see VI. 833, 834. field, battle (II. 768); cf. Lat. campus. The Second Ed. has the note of interrogation at the end of the line.

107. study, pursuit of; like Lat. studium, it often meant 'endeavour,' as in King Lear, I. 1. 279; cf. XI. 577.

108—11. The Second Ed. has at the end of 108 a colon; of 109 a note of interrogation; and in 111 a full stop after me. This punctuation, variously altered in many texts, I retain. Some editors remove the interrogation in 109, treating the line as a relative clause, as though Satan said: 'I retain my will (106), my hate (107), my courage (108), and all other qualities in me that cannot be overcome.' This gives good sense. But the interrogative form may, I think, be interpreted thus: 'to retain one's hate, one's courage etc., is not that to be still unsubdued: in what else but this lies the test of being not overcome?' In one of the last of Tonson's editions (1738), I find line 109 bracketed, i.e. treated as a parenthesis.

what...else; to be taken together; cf. 683.

110. Regarding 109 as parenthetical, I take that glory to refer back to 108: 'never' (says Satan) 'shall the Victor extort from me the glory—to him—of my submission.' Some explain—'the glory (i.e. Satan's) of not being overcome'; but does this suit "extort"?

115. Scan ignomy; see II. 207, note.

116. by fate; important because Satan denies (v. 860—63) that the angels were created by the Almighty: they were, he says, self-begotten by their own “quickenig power,” at the time decreed by the course of fate. Fate, not the Almighty, he recognises as superior.

gods, divine beings; cf. v. 60, note.

117. Can the fiery substance (see II. 139—42, 274, 275, notes) of their forms perish (“fail”)? Satan thinks not: Moloch and Belial are less certain (II. 99, 146—54).

120. successful hope, hope of success; so in Shakespeare often. Cf. “sterile curse”=the curse of sterility, Julius Caesar, I. 2. 9.

122. grand, great (like Fr. grand); cf. II. 507.

123. triumphs; Dryden always accents the verb triumph; cf. The Hind and the Panther, III. 566:

“Who but the Swallow now triumphs alone?

The canopy of heaven is all her own.”

See the Religio Laici, 56.

124. tyranny. M. makes him use the most offensive word—not “monarchy,” as in 42, where the poet was speaking in his own person. See II. 59, note.

128. throned powers; Satan’s followers in general (“throned”—cf. 360—merely suggesting their dignity): not the particular Order of the Hierarchies called Thrones, since Satan is an Archangel.

138. essences, beings.

139. remains; singular, because “mind and spirit” form one idea. This is a common usage in Shakespeare; cf. Troilus and Cressida, IV. 5. 170, “faith and troth...bids thee.” See Lycidas, 7.

141. though...glory extinct. Cf. 394, 395, and S. A. 738, 739. I think that these are absolute constructions, modelled perhaps on the Lat. ablative absolute; but there may be an ellipse of the auxiliary verb. extinct, quenched (like a flame).

144. of force, perforce; so IV. 813.

148. suffice, satisfy=Lat. sufficere.

149—52. Cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 9, “They (evil angels) are sometimes permitted to wander throughout the whole earth, the air (cf. 430), and heaven itself, to execute the judgments of God.”

150. his business, the work he appoints for us to do.

155. to undergo, i.e. so as to undergo (not dependent on avail, 153).

158. doing or suffering, i.e. whether in an active or passive state; cf. the common antithesis  $\delta\rho\alpha\nu\dots\pi\alpha\theta\epsilon\acute{\iota}\nu$ ; see II. 199, P. R. III. 194, 195.

167. if I fail not, if I am not mistaken, Lat. ni fallor.

170. his ministers, the good angels; but, essentially, the expulsion of the rebels was due to the Messiah, "sole victor" (VI. 880).

171—77. See VI. 858—79. laid, i.e. to rest, stilled; cf. P. R. IV. 429, and Tennyson, Margaret, "Your spirit is the calmed sea, Laid by the tumult of the fight," and Queen Mary, I. 5, "God lay the waves and strow the storms at sea." So sternere (Æneid V. 763) and ponere in Lat.; cf. ponere freta, Horace, Odes I. 3. 16.

176. his = its; or he may be personifying "thunder."

178. slip, let slip; cf. Macbeth, II. 3. 52, "I have almost slipped the hour."

185. A reminiscence of Richard II. V. I. 5, 6:

"Here let us rest, if this rebellious earth

Have any resting for her true king's queen."

186. afflicted, struck down, routed (Lat. afflictus). powers, forces.

187. offend = Lat. offendere, 'to strike at, harm'; cf. VI. 465.

191. Cf. VI. 787, "hope conceiving from despair." if not, i.e. if we may not gain reinforcement.

197. as whom, as those whom. fables, the mythological stories of the classics; Milton generally speaks of them contemptuously as "fabulous."

198. Earth-born, the Giants; like the Titans (with whom writers confused them much) they were reputed the offspring of Uranus and Ge (Earth); see 509, note, and 778. that warred; referring to the Giants only; the legend of their conflict with Zeus (or Jove) seems to be due to the earlier revolt of the Titans against Uranus.

199. Briareos or Typhon; the former (centumgeminus Briareus, Æn. VI. 287), being the son of Uranus, is meant to represent the Titans—the latter, the Giants. The legends about both were conflicting. Scan Briareos, though classically the name is Briäreus.

or Typhon. Cf. Fairfax, Tasso, II. 91, "He looked like huge Tiphœus loos'd from hell." Typhon, or Typhæus, is commonly described as a hundred-headed serpent-monster, who, trying to seize sovereignty over gods and men, was vanquished by Zeus with a thunderbolt and buried under Ætna. See II. 539.

200. Tarsus, the capital of Cilicia; M. alludes here to Pindar and Æschylus who describe Typhon as living in "a Cilician den"; cf. Æschylus, Prometheus Vincetus 351—54, τὸν γηγενῆ τε Κιλικίων οἰκήτορα | ἄντρον... Τυφῶνα ('the earth-born inhabitant of Cilician dens'), where Æsch. seems to be quoting Pindar, Pyth. I. 17, [Typhon] τὸν ποτε | Κιλικιον θρέψεν πολυώνυμον ἄντρον. So Pyth. VIII. 16, Τυφῶς Κιλιξ. This Typhon is said to be not the same as the Egyptian Typhon of the Nativity Ode, 226, and of the wonderful allegory of Isis and Osiris in the Arropagitica (P. W. II. 89); the latter Typhon being the Egyptian god Set. But M. either identifies them in the Nativity Ode, or else transfers to the Egyptian Typhon the description ("Typhon huge ending in snaky twine") proper to his Greek namesake. See Osgood's Classical Mythology in Milton, pp. 83, 84.

201. The Bibles of that time identified the Leviathan with the whale, and M. probably did so; but the Heb. livyáthán was used of any huge monster, e.g. the crocodile, Psalms lxxiv. 14.

202. ocean-stream; Homer's ῥῆος (or ποταμὸς) ὠκεάνοιο.

203—208. Todd quotes a story to this effect from the Swedish writer Olaus Magnus, whose History of the Northern Nations had been Englished (1658). Evidently some remarkable 'traveller's tales' as to the size of whales were in circulation: Heylin, Cosmography (1682 ed.), tells us of 'Leviathans' four acres big (III. 191, 192). Cf. Milton's own description, VII. 412—16.

204. pilot, steersman (S. A. 198); or 'master of the vessel.'

night-foundered, benighted; literally 'plunged or sunk in night' (and so unable to continue his course). Cf. Comus, 483.

206. i.e. with anchor fixed in his rind. Such inversions of the order of words are common in Shakespeare; cf. Richard II. III. 1. 9. As a matter of natural history, whales have not "scaly rinds"; but M. alludes to Job xli. 15 (where, however, the crocodile is meant).

207. the lee, the sheltered side.

208. invests; in the Latin sense 'to wrap' (investire).

211. heaved, lifted; cf. Germ. heben. To "heave the head" occurs in S. A. 197, Comus, 885, L'Allegro, 145; Dryden borrowed it (St Cecilia's Day).

221. rears, raises; as often in Spenser and Shakespeare.

226. incumbent, leaning, resting, on (Lat. incumbens).

229. liquid fire; a Vergilian phrase; cf. Eclogue VI. 33.

230—33. This notion of earthquakes being caused by the escape of winds from underground recurs in VI. 195—98, S. A. 1647, 1648.

232. Pelorus, the north-east promontory of Sicily, now Cape Faro; near Ætna, by whose volcanic action M. implies that it was affected.

233—37. Editors compare Æneid III. 571—77.

233. whose. The antecedent is Pelorus as well as Ætna, the description that follows being applied to both.

235. sublimed, kindled into pure flame.

236. involved, wrapped in (Lat. involvere).

239. Stygian flood, the "fiery gulf" (52).

242. clime; here and in 297 the sense seems to be 'climate, temperature'; but in II. 572, 'region, realm.'

244. change for, take in exchange for.

246. souvan; the Italianised form used by M.

248. i.e. they were his equals in reason, but not in power.

253. Cf. Horace's cælum non animum mutant qui trans mare currunt (Epist. I. 11. 27).

254. A glance at the teaching of the Stoics (Thyer). its; see

IV. 813. Goldsmith probably remembered these lines when he wrote :

“Still to ourselves in every place consign'd,

Our own felicity we make or find” (The Traveller).

Compare also Hamlet's sentiment that “there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so” (II. 2. 255—57); where editors cite similar passages from Montaigne's Essays (I. 40) and Lyly, in illustration of the Elizabethan love of aphorism.

255. A reminiscence, I suppose, of A Midsummer-Night's Dream, II. 1. 243, “I'll follow thee and make a heaven of hell.” Hartley Coleridge says, “One sinful wish would make a hell of heaven.” For this conception of Hell as not a place, but a mental state, of punishment, see IV. 20—23; also XII. 587, note. Sir Thomas Browne writes, Religio Medici, LI., “every devil is an hell unto himself; he holds enough of torture in his own ubi.” In Marlowe's Faustus, when the Doctor asks, “Where is the place that men call hell?”, Mephistophilis replies (v. 119, 120):

“Hell hath no limits, nor is circumscribed

In one self place; for where we are is hell.”

257. / all but less than = nearly equal to. The phrase is a combination of ‘only less than’ and ‘all but equal to’ (Beeching).

259. i.e. in building Hell the Almighty has created a place such that he could never grudge Satan its possession.

261—63. When William Lauder published in 1750 his infamous Essay on Milton, the object of which was to show that the poet had plagiarised from a number of obscure writers (mostly foreign scholars of the 16th and 17th cents.), he took these three lines, translated them into what he conceived to be Iambic verse, said that he had found them in the Adamus Exul (1601) of Grotius, and printed them as a convincing proof of Milton's dishonesty. His version runs—or limps—thus: nam, me iudice, | regnare dignum est ambitu, etsi in Tartaro; | alto præesse Tartaro siquidem (sic) iuvat, | cælis quam in ipsis servi obire munia. In 1752 he reprinted the Adamus in his Delectus, but did not venture to interpolate his forgery. The mischief, however, had been done; for Bishop Newton printed the lines in his notes on this passage as genuine, and remarked that M. had evidently ‘translated’ them from Grotius. Of course, the fraud was eventually exposed.

Bishop Newton, whose own work in editing Paradise Lost was of signal merit, had no reason to suspect Lauder, and probably no opportunity of consulting the Adamus.

263. Probably the germ of this famous line (varied in VI. 183, 184) is Homer, Od. XI. 488, where Achilles (in Hades) says that he would rather serve on earth as a poor man's slave, than reign over all the dead. Fletcher says of the fallen angels, "In Heaven they scorn'd to serve, so now in Hell they reign" (The Purple Island, VII. 10).

266. oblivious, causing forgetfulness; cf. II. 74.

276, 277. Cf. VI. 108. edge=Lat. acies, the front line of a fight.

281. amazed, utterly confounded; a far stronger word then; cf. 313.

282. pernicious, destructive, ruinous; some, however, explain it 'great,' 'excessive.'

284—87. his...shield; see VI. 254—56. like the moon; Spenser had appropriated the sun for this simile; cf. The Faerie Queene, II. 2. 21, "His sunbroad shield about his wrest (i.e. wrist) he bond."

285. temper=a thing tempered (cf. II. 813): abstract for concrete.

288. optic glass; apparently not an uncommon phrase for the telescope; I find it in Giles Fletcher, Christ's Victory on Earth, 60, and in Henry More, Song of the Soul:

"The Opticke glasse has shown to sight

The dissolution of these starrie crouds"

(p. 212, Cambridge ed. 1647). Cf. "optic tube," III. 590 (borrowed by Thomson, Autumn). Galileo did not invent the telescope, but he developed it: hence it is generally associated with his name; cf. Bacon, "those glasses (illa perspicilla) discovered by the memorable efforts of Galileo," Novum Organon, XXXIX.

A Tuscan by birth, Galileo (cf. v. 261—63, note) passed the latter part of his life in, or near, Florence. M. saw him (1638—39); cf. the Areopagitica: "There (in Italy) it was that I found and visited the famous Galileo, grown old, a prisoner to the Inquisition, for thinking in astronomy otherwise than the Franciscan and Dominican licensers thought," P. W. II. 82. Another great Englishman who visited Galileo not long before M. (in 1636) was Hobbes. The poet would remember that, like himself, Galileo lost his sight (about 1638). See an article, "Galileo in the Val D'Arno," in The Monthly Review, April, 1907.

289, 290. There is true pathos in the mention, here and in 302—304, of Italian scenes. M. is revisiting in memory places associated with what was, perhaps, the happiest period of his whole life, viz. his stay in Italy: "times when...I tasted bliss without alloy" (as he wrote in 1647, Letter). He always spoke of Italy with the deepest affection:

especially of Florence which he loved for its language (Letter, 1638), "its genius and taste" (Second Defence), and the friends whom he should ever remember with pleasure (vestri nunquam meminisse pigebit—Epitaphium Damonis, 125). He was much courted there by men of letters, says his nephew (Life of M., 1694).

Fesolè, Fiesole, classical Fæsulæ; a hill about three miles north-east of Florence. Valdarno, the valley of the river Arno, in which Florence lies. Here (290) M. has in mind Galileo's last residence at the villa called Il Gioiello ('the Gem') at Arcetri, on the left bank of the Arno, i.e. west of the main part of the city. Near this villa "an old tower is still pointed out as having once been his observatory" (Masson). There is a passage in one of Milton's Letters from Florence, in which he speaks of his "visiting with delight the stream of the Arno, and the hills of Fæsolæ" (P. W. III. 497).

292, 293. his spear...the mast. I find the comparison twice in Fairfax's famous translation (1600) of Tasso's epic Jerusalem Delivered (briefly referred to in these Notes as "Fairfax, Tasso"); cf. III. 17, "Mast-great the spear was which the gallant bore," and VI. 39.

293. Norwegian hills. Norway, of course, was a great timber-emporium: thence, says Hexham's Mercator (1636), "the high masts for shipping, the planks and boards of Oak and firre trees are sent yeerely in great abundance into Germanie, Holland, France, England, Spayne, and other places" (I. 93). And Jonson says that the appearance of the tall-masted vessels of the Armada was as if "half of Norway with her fir trees came," Prince Henry's Barriers. See also Dryden, Annus Mirabilis, st. 143.

294. ammiral, the chief vessel of a fleet, the flagship.

296. marle, soil; more correctly used of rich, moist earth.

those, i.e. the well-known, famous (Lat. illi).

298. Cf. VI. 214, and P. R. I. 116.

299. nathless=not the less: A. S. ná=not.

302. The comparison of a multitude to fallen autumnal leaves is found in Homer, Vergil, Dante, and other epic poets. Cf. Dryden (who has obviously recollected this passage), "Thick as the leaves in autumn strew the woods...the army stands," Æn. VI. 428. M. was himself at Florence in the autumn (September, 1638). The Italian allusion in 302—304 follows naturally on the other (288—90).

303, 304. Vallombrosa, 'shady valley'; about 18 miles from Florence. The name is applied not only to the valley itself, but to the wood-covered amphitheatre of hills rising therefrom. High up stands a monastery (now secularised) where M. was said to have spent some days (a tradition of which Wordsworth makes effective use in his "At Vallombrosa"), and in the chapel an organ used to be shown as that on which M. played. The reference to the fallen leaves is appropriate, the approach to the monastery being through forests of chestnut and beech trees, deciduous species. Dean Stanley wrote, "inasmuch as the whole mountain is furrowed with streams, which gave to the place its original name of Bellacqua, the leaves constantly falling on these streams, and almost choking their currents, give the exact picture" painted by M.: "an instance" (he added) "of the tenacity of Milton's memory in retaining, through all the vicissitudes of civil war, age, and blindness, the precise recollection of what he had seen in early youth"—Notes and Queries, V. v. 306, xi. 488, 489.

There is a good description of Vallombrosa in a once popular book of travel, Eustace's Classical Tour through Italy, vol. III. chap. 2. He says that the monastery was "at all times celebrated in the literary history of Italy" (Ariosto, for instance, mentioning it in terms of high eulogy); so that Milton's reference is really a touch of his literary allusiveness, as well as an echo of happy personal experience. Eustace also notes that the description in Paradise Lost, IV. 131—42, has been thought by some to be a recollection of the scenery at Vallombrosa.

embower, form as it were bowers.

sedge; "in allusion to the Hebrew name of the Red Sea, Yâm Sûf, i.e. Sea of Sedge, on account of the quantity of sea-weed in it" (Keightley). As the angels are afloat on waves (of fire), the simile is in the highest degree appropriate.

305. The rising of the constellation Orion (at midsummer) and his setting (at the beginning of November) being attended with storms, the name became proverbial of rain and "fierce winds." Cf. Æneid I. 535, nimbosus Orion, IV. 52, aguosus Orion; and Grotius, Adamus Exul—illic procellis tumidus Orion furit. So Marlowe, Faustus, III. 2, "Orion's drizzling look"; and Heywood's Hierarchy, "Orion... riseth in the winter season, disturbing both earth and sea with showres and tempests" (ed. 1635, p. 177).

armed; from Æneid III. 517, armatumque auro circumspicit Oriona. "After his death, Orion [the great hunter] was placed among the Stars where he appears as a giant with a girdle, sword...and club" (Class. Dict.).

306—11. Exodus xiv. vexed; in the sense ('to disturb violently, to buffet') of Lat. vexare, as applied to a storm, e.g. in Vergil, Eclogue VI. 76, Horace, Odes II. 9. 3. Cf. "the still-vex'd Bermoothes," The Tempest, I. I. 229; and Tennyson's Ulysses, line 11. See II. 660, and P. R. IV. 416.

307. Late Greek writers (cf. the xith Oration of Isocrates) speak of an Egyptian king Busiris, unknown to Homer and Hesiod, and not mentioned in Egyptian records. Some describe him as builder of Thebes. Legend said that he was slain by Hercules—an event depicted often on vases. Why M. identifies him with the Pharaoh who perished in the Red Sea, no one has ever explained. Some editors say that M. follows Raleigh's History; but Raleigh expressly states that Busiris was "the first oppressor of the Israelites" (p. 204), and that after two intervening reigns came "Cenchres drowned in the Red Sea" (p. 197, 1621 ed.). Cf. again p. 218, "through which (i.e. Red Sea) Moses past, and in which Pharaoh, otherwise called Cenchres, perished." Either M. follows some unknown authority, or he treats Busiris as a general title for the rulers of Egypt, like 'Pharaoh.'

Memphian = Egyptian; cf. 694. The same use occurs in Sylvester; cf. "The Memphian Sages then, and subtile Priests," where the margin has, "The Magicians of Egypt" (Grosart's ed., i. 187). He calls the Egyptians variously "Memphites," "Memphists," and "Memphians." Memphis was the ancient capital (before Thebes) of Egypt; founded by Menes (1st monarch of 1st dynasty), and called Men nefer, 'the good station,' from its position at the apex of the Delta.

chivalry, forces, as P. R. III. 344. In neither place need we limit it to 'cavalry' (with which chivalry is etymologically identical).

308. perfidious; because he had given the Israelites leave to go.

309. "Israel dwelt...in the country of Goshen," Gen. xlvii. 27.

311. broken; cf. XII. 210.

312. abject, cast down.

320. virtue, valour = Lat. virtus.

321. the vales of Heaven. In v. 542—55 he describes the angels sleeping in Heaven, "among the trees of life."

330. One of the earliest allusions to Paradise Lost seems to occur in Marvell's Satires ("Britannia and Raleigh," 1673 or 1674): "Awake, arise from thy long blest repose!" (Aitken's ed., p. 82).

335. nor did they not, i.e. and they did—Lat neque non.

337. For "obey to" (Fr. obéir à), cf. Greene, Friar Bacon, IX. 142, "I charge thee to obey to Vandermast"; Troilus and Cressida, III. 1. 165, and The Phoenix, 4, "To whose sound chaste wings obey." There is a single instance in the Bible—Romans vi. 16.

338—43. Exod. x. 12—15. See the account of the ten Plagues in XII. 184—86. Amrari's son, Moses; see Exod. vi. 20.

340. a pitchy cloud, dark as pitch; the expression occurs in the deleted lines of Comus, between 356 and 357; cf. I Henry VI. II. 2. 1, 2:

"The day begins to break, and night is fled, Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth."

341. warping, working themselves, undulating, forward; the metaphor of a ship.

345. cope, roof, covering; cf. IV. 992.

351—55. Alluding to the invasions of Italy and the Roman empire by the Goths (as early as 248 A.D.); the Huns, notably under Attila, defeated at Chalons-sur-Marne, 451; and the Vandals. Genseric, or Gaiseric, the leader of the Vandals, crossed from Spain into Numidia, 428, captured Carthage, 439, and built up an empire in Africa.

Observe the effectiveness of the three similes whereby M. conveys an impression of the numbers of the angels. They are compared—resting on the water, to fallen leaves (or floating sea-weed): flying, to a cloud of locusts that “darkens” the land (Exodus x. 15): alighted, to a vast host that throngs a plain. Each aspect has its simile.

353. Rhene, from Lat. Rhenus = Rhine, and Danaw or Donau, the German form of Danube, were current forms in the 17th cent.; they are in Hexham’s Mercator (1636) and Heylin’s Cosmography (1682 ed.), perhaps the two most popular geographical works of the time. So “Rhenish wine” = Rhine wine, The Merchant of Venice, I. 2. 104, Hamlet, I. 4. 10.

355. beneath, south of; alluding to the Vandals.

356. every...each. A favourite variation with Milton; cf. Comus, 19, “Of every salt flood and each ebbing stream,” and 311, “I know each lane, and every alley green.” Etymologically ever-y = ever-each.

361—75. Again in VI. 379, 380, he tells us that the original names of the apostate angels were “Cancelled from Heaven and sacred memory.” How then is he to describe them? He must give them some titles. So he adopts (see pp. 672—74) the view that they became the gods of heathenism, oriental and classical, and here, by anticipation, uses those “new names” (365) which later ages assigned to them.

363. Bentley thought that M. dictated Book; cf. Rev. iii. 5. A passage in The Christian Doctrine, I. 4, seems to make this probable: “mention is frequently made of those who are written among the living and of the book of life, but never of the book of death.”

370, 371. See Romans i. 23.

372. religions, religious rites. full of pomp; M. often expresses dislike of ceremony and ritual in worship (see XII. 534).

376. who first, who last; τίνα πρῶτον, τίνα δ' ὕστατον, Iliad v. 703. The long list of the deities is intended as a counterpart to Homer’s catalogue of the ships and Vergil’s list of warriors.

381. Those who led astray "the chosen people" come first.

382—91. Texts probably glanced at are: 1 Pet. v. 8; Ezek. vii. 20, xliii. 8; Exod. xxv. 22; 2 Kings xix. 15. For the setting up of altars to heathen gods inside the Temple, see Manasseh's reign, 2 Kings xxi.

386. thundering; "perhaps taken from Exodus xx., where Jehovah thunders the Ten Commandments from Sinai" (Beeching).

386, 387. The reference is to the golden images of Cherubim, with expanded wings, placed over the mercy-seat covering the ark in the Tabernacle. Cf. Psalms lxxx. 1.

389. abominations; the Bible word for idolatrous worship.

391. affront; commonly taken in its primary sense 'to confront,' 'face' (Lat. ad+frons)—cf. Hamlet, III. 1. 31; but IX. 328 and P. R. III. 161 make the ordinary sense, 'to insult,' more likely.

392. Moloch; god of the Sun regarded as a destroying power; "the abomination of the children of Ammon," 1 Kings xi. 7; worshipped with human sacrifices, 2 Kings xxiii. 10, Ps. cvi. 37, 38. The name, better written 'Molech,' means 'King' (cf. Amos v. 26, margin), and M. generally adds "King" (cf. II. 43, VI. 357). He comes "first" because "fiercest" (II. 44). With these lines, 392—96, cf. the Nativity Ode, 205—10, where Warton pointed out Milton's probable obligation to Sandys.

396. Sandys, whose Relation (1615) of his travels in Palestine was certainly known to Milton (see again XII. 143, 144, note), gives, no doubt, the picture of the idol handed down by Jewish tradition, and describes it as "of brass, having the head of a Calfe, the rest of a kingly figure, with armes extended to receive the miserable sacrifice, seared to death with his burning embracements. For the Idol was hollow within, filled with fire. And least their lamentable shrieks should sad the hearts of their parents, the Priests of Molech did deafe their eares with the continual clang of trumpets and timbrels," Relation, p. 186 (ed. 1637). This sacrifice of children by fire was due to the notion that the fierce summer heat of the god would be allayed thereby (Sayce).

396—99. Rabba, the capital of the Ammonites, "the city of waters," 2 Sam. xii. 27; Argob, a district of the mountain range of Bashan; Arnon, the boundary river between Moab and the Amorites: all E. of Jordan. Part of this territory (as Keightley notes) belonged to—not the Ammonites, spite of their claim (Judg. xi. 13)—but the Amorites.

398. Basan; the form used in the Septuagint, Vulgate, and Prayer-Book. M. always avoids sh; cf. Hesebon, 408, Sittim, 413, Beërsaba (Beersheba), III. 536, Silo (Shilo), S. A. 1674 (as in Sandys,

p. 201). It will generally be found that he has the authority of either the Septuagint or Vulgate (or both) for his Scriptural proper names, where they differ in form from the Authorised Version.

401—403. Solomon, persuaded by his wives (cf. 443—46), built “high places” to Moloch, Chemos and Astarte on the Mount of Olives (1 Kings xi. 5—7)—thence called the “mount of corruption” (2 Kings xxiii. 13), and later, the “mount of offence.” These titles M. glances at here (403), and in 416, 443.

401. by fraud, by deceit.

402. his temple, i.e. of Moloch.

404. The valley of Hinnom, lying S. and S.W. of Jerusalem, skirted the southern part of Olivet. Having been the scene of rites paid to Moloch, it was “defiled” (cf. 418) by Josiah (2 Kings xxiii. 10), and made the common refuse-place of Jerusalem. Previously it formed part of the royal gardens. Sandys says, “We descended into the valley of Gehinnon, which divideth the Mount Sion from the Mountaine of Offence... This valley is but streight (i.e. narrow); heretofore most delightful, planted with groves, and watered with fountains,” Relation, p. 186. The grove of Hinnom is not directly mentioned in Scripture.

405. Gehenna, hell; the Greek form of Ge Hinnom, ‘valley of Hinnom.’

406. “Moloch and Chemos (‘the abomination of Moab’) are joined, 1 Kings xi. 7. And it was a natural transition from the god of the Ammonites to the god of their neighbours the Moabites” (Newton). Chemos (really the same deity as Moloch) was often identified with Baal-Peor (412).

obscene, foul; referring to the character of the rites with which he was worshipped. dread, i.e. object of dread.

407—11. Roughly, all the places here mentioned (of which the sites are known) lay in the territory assigned (Numb. xxxii.) to the tribe of Reuben—a region fringing the east shore of the Dead Sea, bounded S. by the river Arnon, N. by Mt Nebo. It had belonged to the Moabites till it was won from them by the Amorites (Numb. xxi. 26).

407. from Aroer to Nebo, i.e. from S. to N. of the region. Aroer; a small town on the bank of the Arnon; c1. Tennyson, A Dream of Fair Women, “from Aroer on Arnon unto Minneth.” Nebo, the mountain (forming part of the range of Abarim) from whose summit, Pisgah, Moses saw the Promised Land (Deut. xxxii. 49, xxxiv. 1).

408. Hesebon, Heshbon, “the city of Sihon the king of the Amorites,” Numb. xxi. 26.

410. The germ of the line lies in Isaiah xvi. 8, “the vine of Sibmah” (and verse 9). “Several rock-cut wine-presses are to be seen here, and these are probably the remains of the vineyard industry for which Sibmah was once so famous" (Murray's Palestine, p. 173); the "flowery dale" is now "quite barren and uncultivated."

411. Elealeh, mod. El-'Al, 'the High'; about 1½ miles from Heshbon. the Asphaltic pool=the Dead Sea; cf. Blount, Glossographia, "Asphaltick of or belonging to the Dead Sea, or Lake called Asphaltites"; and Sandys' Relation, p. 141, "that cursed lake Asphaltites; so named of the Bitumen which it vomiteth." The bitumen or "asphaltus" (729) floating on its surface is called "slime" in Gen. xi. 3, or 'Jews' Pitch.' See x. 298, 561, 562, notes. Compare the description of the Dead Sea in The Talisman, chapter I.

412—14. Peor, Baal-Peor. Sittim; see Numb. xxv.; it was situated "in the plains of Moab." to do...rites=ἐπεὰ ῥέζειν, sacra facere ('to sacrifice'); cf. Comus, 535, "Doing abhorred rites to Hecate." cost them woe, i.e. the plague wherein died "twenty and four thousand."

In Milton's list (Cambridge mss.) of possible Scriptural subjects for his great poem occurs the entry: "Moabitides Num. 25"; and later a second entry: "Moabitides or Phineas," with a very brief outline of the treatment of the theme.

415—18. He means that in later times, under Solomon, the rites (= "orgies") of Chemos were introduced at Jerusalem. of scandal, i.e. of 'offence' or 'stumbling.' homicide; he received human sacrifice (392—96).

415. orgies; cf. Jonson, Hymenæi (footnote), "ὄργια with the Greeks value the same that ceremoniæ with the Latins; and imply all sorts of rites." enlarged, carried still further.

419—21. bordering, i.e. Palestine, on the north. the brook, the Besor, "the river of Egypt." These limits comprise Canaan.

422. Baalim. The supreme male deity of the Phœnician and Canaanitish nations was the Sun-god, Baal: worshipped in different places under different aspects and titles—e.g. Baal-Berith, Baal-Zebub, Baal-Peor. The collective name of all these manifestations of the god was 'Baälim' (plural). So 'Ashtaroth' (plural) was the collective name of the different manifestations of the Moon-goddess Ashtoreth (sing.), the supreme female deity of these nations, and counterpart of Baal.

423—25. Imitated by Pope, The Rape of the Lock, I. 69, 70:

"For Spirits, freed from mortal laws, with ease Assume what sexes and what shapes they please."

Pope imitates Milton much—often most wittily.

See also VI. 351—53, where M. says that spirits "limb themselves," as they like, and assume "colour, shape, or size," according to their pleasure. Sir Thomas Browne discusses curious beliefs concerning

"mutation of sexes," in Vulgar Errors, III. xvii. essence pure = the "liquid texture" of spirits, VI. 348.

428. in what shape they choose. See 789, 790. Satan takes several "shapes" in P. L.: e.g. in IV. 402, 403, he is first a lion (an allusion to 1 Peter v. 8), then a tiger. In works on demonology popular in the 17th century evil spirits often appear in the shape of wild animals; see the "Digression of Spirits" in Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy, I. ii. I. 2. Thus in the Faust-buch (1587), chap. XXIII., numerous spirits are introduced to Faustus, each in the form of some animal; see Dr Ward's Faustus, p. 141.

429. dilated, expanded. obscure, dark. M. invests the angels with a radiance which they can lay aside.

433. Cf. "living Dread," S. A. 1673, "living God" in Scripture.

434—36. bowing...bowed. Sarcastic play on words.

The punctuation of the original editions makes bowed the main verb, and sunk a participle.

436. before; implying 'under the onslaught of'; as if they scarcely awaited it.

438—41. Astoreth, or Astarte, identical with the Assyrian Istar and Greek Aphrodite, was symbolised in the religion of Phœnicians by the planet Venus or the Moon: in the latter case she was represented as horned like the crescent moon. Cf. Selden, de Dis Syriis—Lunam autem se ostendit Astarte, cum fronte corniculata fuerit conspicua (1629 ed., p. 246). So M. regards her here and in the Nat. Ode, 200, "mooned Ashtaroth, Heaven's queen"—a title due to her as Moon-goddess ("the queen of heaven," Jeremiah vii. 18). Cf. "Assyrian queen" (i.e. Istar), Comus, 1002. The name is cognate with Sanskrit tara or stara, Lat. stella, E. star.

Sidon was the oldest, and for a time the chief, city of Phœnicia.

443—46. See 401—403, note, and cf. P. R. II. 169—71. large; "God gave Solomon...largeness of heart," 1 Kings iv. 29. One of the entries in the list of subjects in the Cambridge MSS. is "Salomon Gynæocratumenus or Idolomargus."

446—52. "In vain the Tyrian maids their wounded Thammuz mourn," Nat. Ode, 204. According to the legend, Thammuz, son of Cyneras, King of Byblus in Phœnicia, was slain by a boar in Lebanon; but every year his blood flowed afresh, and he came to life again—there being annual festivals in his honour at Byblus and elsewhere, first to lament his death, then to celebrate his revival. Thammuz, 'sun of life,' is the Greek Adonis (the god of the solar year), and the story symbolises the alternation of summer and winter. The notion of his blood flowing again was due to the reddening of the waters of the river Adonis through the peculiar red mud brought down by spring torrents from the Lebanon heights. M. alludes to the story in IX. 440, Mansus, 11, and Eikonoklastes, 1 ("let them who now mourn for him as for Thammuz, them who howl in their pulpits"—where "him" refers to Charles I.). The story is given at some length in Sandys' Relation, p. 209.

450, 451. smooth, smooth-flowing. Smooth was used similarly of the river Mincius in Lycidas, 86, but amplified to smooth-sliding-native, i.e. from the river's source. ran purple, i.e. with reddened waters.

454—57. Ezekiel viii. 14. Probably the Jews owed this worship to their intercourse with the Phœnicians.

457—62. "Behold, Dagon was fallen upon his face to the ground before the ark of the Lord; and the head of Dagon and both the palms of his hands were cut off upon the threshold," 1 Sam. v. 4. Dagon, the national god of the Philistines. See Samson Agonistes, passim, and cf. an entry in the Cambridge MSS.: "Dagonalia. Jud. 16"; the reference being to Judges xvi. 23—30 (the events dramatised in S. A.). His worship seems to have been introduced from Babylonia, since cuneiform Assyrian inscriptions mention a god Dakan or Dagan, probably identical with Dagon. The name has also been derived (1) from Heb. Dag, 'a fish,' (2) from the Heb. word for 'corn,' Dagon being the god also of agriculture.

458. in earnest, with better reason than the mourners just mentioned. captive ark; see 1 Sam. v. 2.

460. grunsel, threshold.

463. downward fish; a symbol that he was a "sea-idol" (S. A. 13), the Philistines themselves being a race who had come into Canaan over the sea (from Crete), and dwelt along the sea-coast. Cf. 1 Sam. v. 4, margin. Probably M. connected the name with Dag, 'a fish.'

464—66. He mentions the five chief cities of the Philistines, Ashdod and Gaza (cf. S. A., passim) being the principal seats of the worship of Dagon. Azotus, the Greek form of Ashdod (Acts viii. 40); used in the Vulgate; Selden, de Dis Syriis (p. 262), says, In Azoto sive Asdodo... fanum celebre erat Dagonis. Ascalon=Askelon; so the Septuagint and Vulgate. Accaron=Ekron, as in the Vulgate, which also has Accaronitæ=the people of Ekron. These must have been current forms in the 17th century: cf. Sandys' Relation, p. 153, "Ten miles North of Ascalon along the shore stands Azotus: and eight miles beyond that Acharon, now places of no reckoning." Cf. also Scot, Discoverie, 1584, "Belzebub the god of Acharon" (VII. xiii.), and Heywood's Hierarchy, "Baalzebub, of the Accarronites," p. 40. Gaza, the modern Guzzeh; on the borders of the desert that separates Palestine from Egypt: hence "frontier bounds."

467—69. Rimmon, the Syrian deity of Damascus (2 Kings v. 18), which lay between the rivers Abana and Pharpar (2 Kings v. 12).

M. rightly stresses the name Ábbana.

471—76. a leper, Naaman (2 Kings v.). For the Syrian altar of Ahaz, see 2 Kings xvi. sottish, foolish.

476—82. Cf. the Nativity Ode, 211—15. The religion of the Egyptians consisted in a pantheistic worship of nature that took animals for its symbols. Thus Osiris, their chief god, was worshipped under the symbol of a sacred bull, Apis; cf. the Essay on Man, I. 64, "the dull ox...Is now a victim, and now Egypt's god." Of Isis, 'goddess of the earth,' Herodotus says, "the statue of this goddess has the form of a woman but with horns like a cow" (Rawlinson, II. 73). Anubis again was represented with a jackal's head, which the Greeks and Romans changed to that of a dog (cf. Plato, Gorg. 482 B and Vergil Æn. VIII. 698, latrator Anubis). Orus (or Horus), 'path of the sun,' was their Sun-god.

Milton seems to be fond of referring to Egyptian mythology, drawing mainly, it is said, on Plutarch's treatise of Isis and Osiris. Thus he introduces the story of Isis and Osiris in his beautiful allegory of the dismemberment of Truth (Areopagitica); cf. also the bitter gibe at Charles I.'s death-scene in Eikonoklastes, 1 ("that I should dare to tell abroad the secrets of their Ægyptian Apis"), P. W. I. 328. See also his De Idea Platonica, 29—34.

477. crew; a depreciatory word in Milton (except in L' Allegro, 38), being used often of Satan and his followers; cf. 51, 751.

479. abused, deceived, deluded; cf. Fr. abuser.

482—84. The worship by Israelites of the golden calf in the wilderness (Exod. xxxii.) is traced to the Egyptian cult of Apis. borrowed, i.e. from the Egyptians, whom they "spoiled," Exod. xii. 35, 36.

484—86. rebel king, Jeroboam, a rebel against Rehoboam (who succeeded Solomon); he "doubled" the sin because he "made two calves of gold," setting one in Bethel, the other in Dan (1 Kings xii. 20, 28, 29). With 486 cf. Psalms cvi. 20.

487—89. Referring to the tenth plague, Exod. xii. See XII. 189, 190. he passed, i.e. Israel.

489. "The Lord smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt...and all the first-born of cattle," Exod. xii. 29. bleating; their deity Ammon was worshipped under the form of a ram.

490. Strictly, Belial was not the name of any god, but an abstract word meaning 'that which is without profit' = worthlessness, wickedness: hence generally found in phrases like 'son (or man) of Belial'

(501, 502). Cf. Dryden, Absalom and Achitophel, 597, 598 :

“During his office treason was no crime,
The sons of Belial had a glorious time.”

It has been treated so in the Bible sometimes, but more often—incorrectly—as a proper name. M. makes Belial a type of effeminacy and lust (cf. P. R. II. 150), and rightly does not limit his worship to any particular place—although, to gratify his own hostility to the Church (493—96) and the court (497), he cannot refrain from indicating his opinion as to where Belial is most prevalent. Cf. P. R. II., where Satan, speaking to Belial, says (182, 183) :

“Have we not seen, or by relation heard,
In courts and regal chambers how thou lurk'st?”

last; because “timorous and slothful” (II. 117).

495. See 1 Samuel ii. 12—17.

497. Charles II. was then on the throne. The Licenser might have been expected to raise objections to the line.

498—512. Macaulay suggested that M. had in mind “those pests of London,” the street bullies, known at different times under various slang names, e.g. “Hectors,” “Mohawks,” “who infested London by night, attacking foot-passengers and beating the watch” (Mark Pattison, note on Pope's Satires, I. 71).

502. flown, flushed; the combination of the abstract word, “insolence,” with the literal “wine,” suggests the figure called zeugma.

503—505. Gen. xix., Judg. xix. The First Ed. had :

“when hospitable Does Yielded thir Matrons to prevent worse rape.”

503. witness, i.e. let the streets bear witness, be a proof.

506. prime, first, foremost.

507. were long to tell. Cf. X. 469, XII. 261; an imitation of the Latin; cf. Lucretius, IV. 1170, cetera de genere hoc longum est, si dicere coner. Spenser has it in The Faerie Queene, II. 7. 14, and Drayton, Polyolbion, xv. (Keightley). were; the subjunctive, rare now, but common in Elizabethan English (Abbott).

508, 509. i.e. held (=considered) by Javan's descendants (the Greeks) to be gods. confessed later, admitted to be of later origin; see Deuteronomy xxxii. 17.

Javan, the son of Japhet; see Genesis x. 2. He stands for the Greek race; the name being the same word as Ἰων (older form Ἰάων), whence Ionians, the section of the Greeks with whom the Hebrews were best acquainted through Phœnician trade. Cf. “isles of Javan” = isles of Greece, S. A. 715, 716; see Isaiah lxvi. 19. See IV. 717, note.

509. Heaven and Earth, i.e. Uranus and Ge (or Gaia), whose 12 sons, according to the ordinary mythology, were called Titans (see 198, note). One of them, Cronos (= Saturn in Roman mythology), deposed his eldest brother (cf. 511, 512), and afterwards was himself expelled by his own son Zeus=Jove, whose mother was Rhea (cf. 512—14). In 510 M. uses Titan as a name for the eldest ("first-born") of the 12 Titans.

511. enormous, monstrous.

514, 515. Ida, the mountain in Crete where Jove was born. In Il Penseroso, 29, M. associates "Ida's inmost grove" with Saturn.

515, 516. Olympus, a mountain range between Thessaly and Macedonia; early Greek poets speak of it, literally, as being the abode of Zeus and the other deities; so Milton here and in VII. 7, X. 583, 584 (note). snowy; "its chief summit is covered with perpetual snow" (Class. Dict.): hence Homer's epithet νιφθεύς.

the middle air; an old theory of physics divided the air into three regions (aëris trina spatia, according to the Adamus Exul of Grotius), and M. refers to this view and means the middle region of the three. See Appendix, pp. 674—76.

517. Delphian cliff; the seat of the famous oracle of Apollo; on the southern slope of Mt Parnassus. Keightley quotes from Sophocles, Edipus Rex 463, Δελφίς πέρρα; cf. "steep of Delphos" (with the same reference to Apollo), in the Nat. Ode, 178, and Gray's Progress of Poesy, 66.

518. Dodona, in Epirus. There was an oracle of Zeus here.

519, 520. Doric land, Greece. According to the common tradition, Saturn came alone to Italy ("the Hesperian fields").

521. the Celtic, i.e. "fields"—cf. Comus, 60, "Roving the Celtic and Iberian fields"; or he may be imitating Greek ἡ Κελτική (i.e. χώρα or γῆ, 'country'): in either case he means France—perhaps too Spain. utmost isles, e.g. Britain (cf. Vergil, Ecl. 1. 67, penitus toto divisos orbe Britannos) and 'ultima Thule.'

523. damp, depressed; cf. xi. 293.

528. recollecting, re-collecting, getting back again; cf. x. 471.

532. "A clarion is a small shrill treble trumpet" (Hume).

534. Azazel, from Leviticus xvi. 8, where the A.V. has "the scape-goat," while the margin has "Azazel," which the R.V. adopts. That the word was the title of some evil demon is now generally held; and I suspect that in making him one of the fallen angels M. simply followed some tradition of the mediæval demonologists.

536. advanced, uplifted; cf. v. 588. It was the term for raising a standard; cf. Romeo and Juliet, v. 3. 96, "And death's pale flag is not advanced there."

538. emblazed=emblazoned: a term from heraldry. Cf. v. 592. and 2 Henry VI. IV. 10. 76. The banner had rich devices portrayed on it.

540. metal blowing; an absolute construction. The music changes (cf. 551) when their spirits have been duly raised by the trumpet-notes.

542. Hell's concave, the vaulted roof of Hell; cf. II. 635.

543. reign, realm; so "regency," v. 748. See II. 894—96 (note), 959—63.

546. orient, lustrous, bright.

547, 548. helms, helmets. serricd, locked together, Fr. serré.

549—62. Cf. VI. 63—68. Here M. is thinking of the description in Thucydides (v. 70) of the Spartans advancing at the battle of Mantinea ὑπὸ ἀληθῶν πολλῶν, "to the strains of many flute-players" (Keightley).

550, 551. The "Dorian" is one of the 'authentic' modes in music; Plato calls it "the true Hellenic mode," and "the strain of courage," ἀνδρεία, in contrast to the effeminate "Lydian" mode (see L' Allegro, 136, note). It inspires "a moderate and settled temper in the listener," says Aristotle (Pol. VIII. 5). In the Areopagitica M. speaks of music which is "grave and Doric," P. W. II. 73. Many old German chorales are written in this mode (Grove). In On Education M. dwells on the influence of music upon character, in a passage closely parallel to this (P. W. III. 476). The lines seem an expression of his own devotion to the same art and inspiration.

to, to the sound of, Gk. ὑπό; cf. 561.

mood=mode. recorders, flutes.

556. swage, assuage; lit. 'to make sweet,' Lat. suavis.

561. in silence; cf. VI. 64.

562. the burnt soil; see 228, 229.

563. horrid; probably in the lit. sense 'bristling' (Lat. horridus), i.e. with spears etc.; cf. II. 513 and VI. 82.

567, 568. files, ranks; cf. VI. 339. traverse, across.

573. i.e. since the creation of man, post hominem creatum: a Latinism often used by M. with after; cf. Comus, 48, "After the Tuscan mariners transformed."

574. embodied, assembled, brought together.

574, 575. i.e. any other army, compared with this host of angels, would be as absurdly inferior as an army of pygmies.

that small infantry, i.e. the Pygmies (cf. 780), the fabulous little folk, of the height of a πυγμαίη (13½ inches), whom Homer mentions, Il. III. 5. Sir Thomas Browne, not quite certain whether to believe in them, is sure of one thing—that "if any such nation there were, yet it is ridiculous what men have delivered of them; that they fight with cranes upon the backs of rams or partridges" (Vulgar Errors, IV. xi.). Addison was "afraid" that M. meant a pun on "small infantry."

576—87. Expanding the idea in 573—75, he takes the great cycles of heroic story—Greek (576—79), British (579—81), mediæval, whether French or Italian (582—87)—and says that all the warriors and armies severally associated with these stories could bear no comparison with Satan's followers.

577. Phlegra, the old name of the peninsula of Pallene in Macedonia, where (according to ancient legend) the Giants were born, and where they were vanquished by the Gods. Cf. the Inferno, XIV. 58.

578, 579. Greek legend, as embodied in epic or tragic verse, centres mainly round Thebes, Troy (Ilium), and Mycenæ (the city of the Pelopidæ). Thus in his first Elegy (45, 46) M. epitomises the chief themes of Greek tragedy—seu mæret Pelopeia domus, seu nobilis Ili, | aut luit incestos aula Creontis avos (Creon was king of Thebes). Here he mentions only two of the cycles. By the "heroic race" that fought at Thebes he means (1) Polynices and his six companions whose exploit is told in Æschylus's play, Septem contra Thebas; (2) their descendants, the Epigoni, who ten years later destroyed Thebes. The heroes of the story of Ilium are those whom the Iliad presents to us. There "auxiliar gods" take part, some helping the Trojans, some the Greeks.

579—81. Cf. Milton's own account of his youthful studies: "hear me out now, readers, that I may tell ye whither my younger feet wandered; I betook me among those lofty fables and romances, which recount in solemn cantos the deeds of knighthood," An Apology for Smectymnuus (P. W. III. 118). The interest of this reference to the legend of King Arthur is explained in the Introduction. M. discusses the story at some length in his History of Britain, and evidently had studied it closely. It had appealed to Dante. These lines are the reference in the Introduction to Marmion, where Scott is speaking of King Arthur:

"The mightiest chiefs of British song
Scorn'd not such legends to prolong:
They gleam through Spenser's elfin dream,
And mix in Milton's heavenly theme."

580. in fable; an allusion, suggests Keightley, in particular to Geoffrey of Monmouth, who gives one of our earliest versions (1140) of the Arthurian legend. No doubt M. is thinking of Geoffrey whom he used extensively in his History; but there he often refers also to the Breton monk Nennius and to Gildas, yet earlier authorities than Geoffrey—likewise to William of Malmesbury. "Fable" is his favourite term in the History for these old Chronicles.

romance; e.g. Malory's Morte Darthur, published by Caxton, 1485 (the basis of Tennyson's Idylls of the King).

Uther's son, King Arthur, son of Uther Pendragon; cf. Tennyson, Palace of Art, "mythic Uther's deeply-wounded son." In the Epi-taphium Damonis, 166—68, M. glances at the story of Arthur's birth.

581. The division of Arthur's "fabulous paladins" (as Drummond calls them, Forth Feasting, 1617) into "British and Armoric" coincides with P. R. II. 360, "By Knights of Logres or of Lyones": where Logres = Britain, more strictly England east of the river Severn; and Lyones = Brittany (according to one theory), whence came Sir Tristram. Brittany "was first called Armorica from its situation on the Sea, as the word importeth in the old language of that people" (Heylyn, I. 167). Brittany is closely connected with the Arthurian legend.

begirt with, surrounded by. Cf. Gray, The Bard, III.

582—87. The names are associated with romances (mainly Italian) in prose or verse; see Appendix, pp. 676—80. jousted, tilted.

586. his peerage, the "douze pairs" (i.e. peers) or 12 "paladins" of France (P. R. III. 343): the most famous being Roland, the Achilles or brave man, and Oliver, the Ulysses or wise man, of the Old French epic poems and prose-romances which narrate the exploits of Charlemagne and his knights. fell; not literally true of Charlemagne himself; M. may use it as a strong word = 'was utterly vanquished.'

587. Fontarabia, modern Fuenterrabia, a frontier fortress on the Bay of Biscay—S. of Biarritz. Its position made it the scene of many encounters between the Spanish and the French.

588. observed, obeyed.

591. like a tower; cf. Tennyson's Ode on the Duke of Wellington:

"O fall'n at length that tower of strength

Which stood four-square to all the winds that blew!"

Vergil bids Dante not trouble about the surprise of the spirits in Purgatory at the sight of him: "Follow me and let the people talk; stand thou as a firm tower [sta come torre ferma] which never shakes its summit for blast of winds" (Purgatorio, v. 13—15).

592. her; he personifies "form."

596—99. The lines to which the Licenser for the Press took exception when the ms. of the poem was submitted to him. It was indeed somewhat early after the Civil War and Restoration to speak of "change." The Licenser, as Chaplain of the Archbishop of Canterbury, might well have objected to Milton's attacks on the Church, e.g. in XII. 507—37. Cf. IV. 193, note.

597. eclipse; proverbially of evil omen, the precursor of trouble; see XI. 183, note. disastrous, boding disaster.

601. intrenched, cut into; cf. O. Fr. trencher, 'to cut.'
603. considerate, considering, full of thought. Cf. Arcopagitica, "let us be more considerate builders, more wise," P. W. II. 93.
605. remorse, pity. passion; in the general sense 'deep feeling.'
606. fellows of, partners in.
609. amerced of, deprived of, lit. 'fined with the loss of.'
- 613—15. scathed, damaged. Whether lightning can be said to "sing" the top of a tree seems doubtful. blasted heath; see Macbeth, I. 3. 77. blasted, withered by the lightning.
619. thrice, a conventional number; cf. Ovid, Metamorphoses XI. 419, ter conata loqui, ter fletibus ora rigavit. assayed, tried.
624. event, issue, result, Lat. eventus; so often in Milton and Shakespeare.
632. Scan exile; cf. X. 484, Richard II. I. 3. 151.
633. emptied Heaven; a mere boast; see II. 692, note.
634. self-raised; see II. 75—77.
642. tempted...attempt. There are not a few of these jingling phrases in M. Cf. "beseeching or besieging," v. 869, "feats of war defeats," S. A. 1278. Generally he expresses sarcasm or contempt by them. The use of this figure of speech (paronomasia) is specially common in late Latin writers,—see Mayor's note on Cicero's 2nd Philippic, XI. 13—and also in the Italian poets. Milton uses it in his Latin writings; cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 2, "Natura natam se fatetur...et fatum quid nisi effatum divinum omnipotentis cujuspiam numinis potest esse?" Something similar is found in Hebrew.
645. better part. Luke x. 42 ("Mary hath chosen that good part").
- 650—54. See II. 345—53, 830—35, and X. 481, 482. The first hint of the design against mankind comes from Satan (cf. II. 379 et seq.), though Beëlzebub afterwards develops it (II. 345—78). fame, report.
660. peace is despaired, i.e. pax desperatur; cf. VI. 495.
662. understood, i.e. among themselves, and so secret.
668. Like Roman soldiers applauding an oration of their general, by smiting their shields with their swords (Bentley).
674. "It was the common opinion of chemists that metals were composed of sulphur and quicksilver" (Keightley).
675. brigad; so the original editions here and in II. 532.
676. pioner; an Elizabethan form of pioneer.
678. cast, form by throwing up the earth. Mammon, like "Belial," is not really a proper name, but an abstract word = 'wealth.'
679. erected, lofty, elevated (= Lat. erectus).
682. "And the street of the city was pure gold," Rev. xxi. 21.

684. vision beatific = Visio Beatifica, the phrase used by Schoolmen to express "seeing" God (Matthew v. 8). Cf. "blessed vision," v. 613, "happy-making sight," Ode on Time, 18. See III. 61, 62, note.

685. men also, i.e. as well as the fallen angels.

686. the centre; probably the centre of the earth; or the earth itself.

688. Horace's aurum irrepertum et sic melius situm (Od. III. 3. 49).

690. ribs, bars, large pieces. admire, wonder = Lat. admirari.

692. precious bane; an oxymoron (see II. 252—57).

694. Some interpret Babel = Babylon; but why not the Tower of Babel (XII. 43—62)? There is a reference to Babylon in 717.

the works, i.e. the Pyramids; cf. Ben Jonson's Masque, Prince Henry's Barriers, "And did the barbarous Memphian heaps out-climb." Memphian, Egyptian; as in 307.

697. and in an hour, i.e. is performed (from 699).

698, 699. Cf. Pliny, speaking of the Great Pyramid, "it is said (see Herodotus II. 124), that in the building of it there were 366,000 men kept at worke twentie yeares" (Holland's Pliny, 1601, II. 577).

702. sluiced, led by sluices; cf. Tennyson, Arabian Nights.

703. founded, melted; it seems impossible to follow the Second Ed., which reads found out.

704. severing, separating. bullion-dross, the scum rising from the bullion, i.e. the liquefied mass of unpurified gold. See v. 439—43, note.

708. M. would be likely to understand the mechanism of the organ, his favourite instrument; cf. XI. 558—63.

710—17. Cf. Pope (imitating the passage), The Temple of Fame, 91, "The growing towers, like exhalations, rise"; and Tennyson, Ænone:

"Hear me, for I will speak and build up all

My sorrow with my song, as yonder walls [i.e. of Troy]

Rose slowly to a music slowly breathed,

A cloud that gather'd shape."

Peck noted that Milton's lines read like an account of some Jacobean Masque (IV. 768, note), describing one of those elaborate structures of stage-architecture designed by Inigo Jones and brought on the scene by means of machinery, to the accompaniment of music. For instance, in Jonson's Entertainment at Theobalds the main scene represented "a glorious place, figuring the seat of the household gods...erected with columns and architrave, frieze and cornice." See XI. 205, 206, note.

It should be remembered too that the classical architecture of the Renaissance, familiar to Milton through his visit to Italy, had come into vogue in this country.

712. symphonies, i.e. the harmonious strains of the instruments accompanying the voices; see XI. 595, note.

713—17. pilasters, square columns usually set within a wall and slightly projecting. architrave, the main or 'master' beam (ἀρχή+trabs) that rests immediately upon a row of pillars, the frieze coming just above, and the cornice projecting above the frieze.

bossy sculptures, i.e. sculptures in relief.

fretted gold, gold wrought with designs, patterns.

718. Alcairo; he means Memphis, giving it the name of the later capital built (10th cent. A.D.) some few miles from the site of its predecessor. The form Alcairo (Arab. Al Kahirah, 'the city of victory') seems to have been current then; compare Hexham's Mercator, "Memphis...is called at this day (1636) Cairo or Alcairo" (II. 427).

720. Belus. Cf. Sandys' Relation (p. 207), "Belus Priscus, reputed a God, and honored with Temples; called Bel by the Assyrians, and Baal by the Hebrewes." The famous temple of Bel at Babylon (Herodotus I. 181—83), attributed to Semiramis, is described by Kaleigh, History, p. 183 (1621 ed.).

Serapis; there was a temple to him at Memphis, but more celebrated was that at Alexandria, called the Serapeum, to which the great library was attached. Serapis was identical with the Greek Hades, whose worship was introduced into Egypt by Ptolemy I., some of the attributes of Osiris being transferred to him. Serāpis and Serāpis are found; the latter is more correct.

723, 724. stood fixed, i.e. was now complete (Lat. stabat), having reached its appointed height. discover, reveal; F. découvrir.

725. Thyer quotes ampla spatia from Seneca's Hercules Furens III.

727. pendent by subtle magic. "I always like this, it is mystical"—Tennyson. (In Tennyson's Life by his son there is an Appendix, entitled "My Father's talk on Milton's Paradise Lost"; it is the source of these criticisms by Tennyson, often conversational in form.)

728. cresset, a kind of hanging lamp.

729. naphtha and asphaltus; the former the liquid (for the lamps), the latter the solid substance (for the cressets).

732. the architect. Masson thinks that Mammon is intended, M. identifying him with Mulciber (or Vulcan). But M. only says that Mammon discovered the gold out of which the fabric was made, and leaves us, I think, to infer from what follows that the architect was Vulcan or Mulciber—in classical mythology the god of fire and all metal-work, and architect of the palaces of the gods (cf. 732—35). He was too famous to need mentioning by name.

733. towered structure high. The order of the words—a noun placed between two qualifying words—is a favourite with M. The idiom is Greek; in his note on Lycidas, 6, Mr Jerram quotes Hesiod, Theogony, 811, 812, χαλκεος οὐδὲ ἀστεμφής, and Euripides, Phænissæ 234, νιφόβολον ὄρος ἰρόν. Gray probably borrowed the device from Milton; cf. his Elegy, 53, "Full many a gem of purest ray serene." See II. 615, 616, v. 5 (note).

736. gave to rule. A Lat. idiom; cf. Aeneid, I. 65, 66, tibi divum pater...mulcere dedit flectus. So in III. 243, XI. 339.

737. M. alludes to a mediæval belief that the Heavenly beings were divided into Hierarchies and Orders; see Appendix, pp. 680—82.

738, 739. his name...in...Greece. Hephæstus was "the god of fire as used in art, and master of all the arts which need the aid of fire, especially of working in metal." All the palaces in Olympus (the heaven of the classical gods) were built by Hephæstus.

Ausonian land, Italy, so called poetically from the Ausones, an ancient Latin race who dwelt on the west coast of Italy before its conquest by the Romans.

740. Mulciber, 'the softener, welder' (i.e. of metal), from Lat. mulcere, 'to soften.'

740—46. Partly a translation of Iliad I. 591 et seq., where Hephæstus describes his fall. Cf. two allusions in Milton's Lat. poems: sic dolet amissum proles Junonia cælum, | inter Lemniacos præcipitata focus (Elegy, VII. 81, 82); and—qualis in Ægeam proles Junonia Lemnon | deturbata sacro cecidit de limine cæli (Naturam Non Pati Senium, 23).

741. angry; because in a dispute between Jove and Juno, Vulcan took the part of Juno, his mother.

742—44. "We fall not from Virtue, like Vulcan from heaven, in a day," says Sir Thomas Browne, Christian Morals, I. 30.

746. Lemnos, sacred to Hephæstus, "the Lemnian God" (Spenser, Muiopotmos); probably because it was volcanic. I think that we should scan:

"On Lem|nos, th' Æg|'an isle|. Thus they | relate."

750. engines, contrivances.

752. harald, herald.

756. Pandemonium, 'the home of all the demons'; cf. X. 424.

The word seems to have been coined by Milton (from Gk. παν, 'all' + δαίμων, 'a demon'). Some prefer the form 'Pandæmonium.' Milton's picture, in itself, does not seem to me to owe anything to Dante's description of the City of Dis (= Lucifer or Satan) in cantos VIII., IX., of the Inferno; apart, possibly, from the suggestion of the idea.

758. squared regiment = "perfect phalanx," 550.

763—66. "He alludes to those accounts of the single combats between the Saracens ('Panim chivalry') and Christians (cf. 582) in Spain and Palestine, of which the old romances are full" (Callander): using, as in S. A. in the dispute between Samson and Harapha, the technical terms of the mediæval duello. For a good description of such scenes cf. The Faerie Queene, IV. 3. 4 et seq.

763. Possibly "covered field" = Fr. champ clos, the space for combat, enclosed with barriers or 'lists'; cf. S. A. 1087, "listed field." champions; the technical word for combatants—campiones qui in campum descendunt et duello seu monomachia decertant (Ducange).

764. wont, were wont. Soldan, the Sultan.

765, 766. Panim, pagan. He mentions the two kinds of combat—(1) that fought out "to the utterance" (Macbeth, III. 1. 72), i.e. till one of the fighters was killed: cf. "mortal duel," S. A. 1102; (2) that which was merely an exhibition of skill, spears and swords with blunted points being used. career, a short gallop at high speed.

767. Cf. II. 528.

768—75. as bees. The simile had been used by Homer, Iliad II. 87 et seq., and Vergil, Aeneid I. 430—36, VI. 707—709.

The prevalence of s is meant to suggest the scene—'sound echoing sense'; so that one is tempted to print with the original editions 'russling.' In King Lear, II. 4. 304, the Quartos have russel (= rustle), for the less obvious ruffle (Folio).

769. Taurus, one of the signs of the Zodiac; strictly, the time of year defined is April 19—May 20. Cf. x. 671—73.

with; not 'in company with,' since Taurus is a fixed constellation, but 'in the neighbourhood of' (Beeching).

774. expatiate = Lat. spatior, 'walk abroad'; cf. Blount, "Expatiate to wander, to stray, to spread abroad." confer, confer of, discuss.

776. straitened, crowded, pressed together.

777—80. Spirits, we have seen (428), can contract themselves.

A passage like this brings before us one of the great difficulties inherent in the design of Paradise Lost, namely the representation of the angels, good and evil. Milton (says Johnson) "saw that immateriality supplied no images, and that he could not show angels acting but by instruments of action [i.e. bodies]; he therefore invested them with form and matter"—notably in his account (bk. VI.) of the battle in Heaven. Yet sometimes they are viewed as "incorporeal Spirits" (789), and it is seemingly as a spirit that Satan enters the form of the toad (IV. 800), and of the Serpent (IX. 85, 86, 187—90). There is in fact some inconsistency: "his infernal and celestial powers are sometimes pure spirit, and sometimes animated body" (Johnson). The difficulty is really insuperable, but Milton purposely modifies its effect, particularly in the case of the evil angels, by several passages; see the notes on I. 423—29, V. 478, VI. 327. As regards the good angels, I suppose he would have argued that divine beings had the power to assume corporeal forms and to resume their incorporeal being; whereas the evil angels, through sin, gradually lost their immateriality and were forced “to incarnate and imbrute” (IX. 166).

780, 781. Pliny (Nat. History, VII. 11. 26) placed the dwelling of the Pygmies (575) “beyond the source of the Ganges—even in the edge and skirts of the mountains.” So Batman vppon Bartholome (1582 ed., p. 377), “Pigmei be little men of a cubite long...and they dwell in mountaines of Inde.”

that, the well-known, whose name needs no mention.

781. beyond the Indian mount; probably he means Imaus (cf. III. 431), in classical writers (e.g. Pliny) the western chain of the Himalayas, i.e. between the Ganges and the Caspian. It should be noticed that extra Imaum (i.e. east of or “beyond”) and intra Imaum (i.e. west of) were phrases employed by map-makers of the 17th century to describe (with convenient vagueness) regions of Central Asia. Thus in Mercator’s map of Tartary we have Scythia extra—and Scythia intra—Imaum montem. Milton’s readers might be reminded of this common distinction.

781—85. A reminiscence of A Midsummer-Night’s Dream, II. I. 28, 29, 141 (a play constantly imitated by Milton). Cf. too, The Rape of the Lock, 31, “Of airy Elves by moonlight shadows seen.” Commonly “fairies” and “elves” (more rustic in character) are distinguished.

sees, or dreams he sees; from Vergil’s aut videt aut vidisse putat per nubila lunam—Æneid VI. 454.

785, 786. arbitress, witness; cf. Horace’s non infideles arbitrae | Nox et Diana—Æpod. v. 50, 51. She comes “nearer to the Earth” because influenced (II. 665, 666) by the fairies. pale, with alarm.

790, 791. i.e. they had so contracted their forms that, though numberless, they had plenty of room to move about (Richardson).

795. recess, retirement. His application of the ecclesiastical word “conclave” to the assembly of evil angels seems sarcastic: that being the term specially applied to “the Meeting or Assembly of the Cardinals for the Election [of the Pope], or for any important affair of the Church” (Blount). Cf. his contemptuous reference in Of Reformation in England, I, to the “councils (i.e. of the Church) and conclaves that demolish one another” (P. W. II. 389), and the similar use of “consistory,” P. R. I. 42. See X. 313, note. Strictly “conclave,” like Lat. conclave, meant the room in which a meeting took place: then the meeting itself.

797. frequent = Lat. frequens, 'crowded, numerous.'

797, 798. after...summons read. Cf. 573 and Tennyson, Pelleas and Ettarre, "after trumpet blown." consult, consultation; commonly the result of a consultation, i.e. a decision, decree = Lat. consultum.

BOOK II.

1. There is a counterpart to this Council in Paradise Regained, II. 115—235. The picture of the debate may reflect Milton's recollections of the meetings of the Council of State to which he was Latin Secretary. high on a throne. Cf. v. 756. The mock-heroic opening of the second book of The Dunciad is modelled on this passage.

2. Ormus; the ancient Armuzā, a town situate on an island near the mouth of the Persian Gulf; called Armous in Webb's Travels (1590)—see Arber's ed., p. 23. It was much celebrated as a mart for pearls and jewels; cf. Howell's Familiar Letters, "Ormus...the greatest Mart in all the Orient for all sorts of jewels" (Jacobs' ed. 1892, I. 157), and Marvell, Song of the Emigrants, "Jewels more rich than Ormus shows." The Elizabethan traveller Coryat (1611) compares it with Venice, "of which the inhabitants may as proudly vaunt as I have read the Persians have done of their Ormus, who say that if the world were a ring, then should Ormus be the gem thereof." Hexham (1636) calls it Ormus Emporium, and Heylyn says, "in regard of the situation, it was one of the richest Empories in all the world; the wealth of Persia and East-India being brought hither" (Cosmography, 1682 ed., III. 143). Tasso mentions it (Fairfax, XVII. 25).

2—4. Cf. Love's Labour's Lost, IV. 3. 222, 223:

"like a rude and savage man of Ind,

At the first opening of the gorgeous east."

Wordsworth borrowed the phrase in his Sonnet On the Extinction of the Venetian Republic; cf. the first line, "Once did She hold the gorgeous East in fee." The form Ind (or Inde) is common in poets—cf. Comus, 606. The first settlements of the East India Company dated from about 1653, and English people were beginning to hear more concerning the wealth of India (cf. 638).

or where, i.e. of the places where. "It was the eastern ceremony, at the coronation of their kings, to powder them with gold-dust and seed-pearl" (Warburton); also to strew pearls and jewels at the monarch's feet. Shakespeare knew of the custom (cf. Antony and Cleopatra, II. 5. 45, 46), which some traveller must have related. At the end of his History of Moscovia M. gives a list of authorities, mainly 'Voyages' and 'Travels' (e.g. Hakluyt and Purchas); and passages like this and III. 437—39 show how he used such sources of information.

4. Cf. Pope, Temple of Fame, 94, "With diamond flaming and barbaric gold." Barbaricus is an epithet of aurum in Æneid II. 504.

5. merit, i.e. of daring most against the Almighty (Cowper).

9. success, ill-fortune.

12—17. He calls them "Deities of Heaven" because he still regards Heaven as theirs. Exactly similar parentheses are v. 361, 362 (note), and x. 460—62. In each case the clause introduced by for explains some particular word or phrase in the previous sentence.

14. i.e. I do not consider Heaven lost. Cf. S. A. 1697, "So Virtue, given for lost," and George Herbert, Church Porch, "Who say, 'I care not,' those I give for lost." See too The Winter's Tale, III. 2. 96.

17. i.e. have such trust in themselves as not to fear.

20. Cf. I. 635—37. counsel; some needlessly change to council.

23. unenvied, not to be envied, unenviable.

28. the Thunderer, the Almighty; an obviously fitting title here; see I. 93, 174—77, 258. Cf. Tonans applied to Jupiter.

42. we now debate. The Councils of Diabolus and his followers (Lucifer, Beelzebub, Belial and other outcast spirits) in Bunyan's Holy War (1682) may well have owed something to the model furnished by Milton.

44. fiercest. See I. 392. Moloch ("furious king," VI. 357) is conspicuous in the great battle in Heaven. Newton reminds us of Homer's phrase σκηπτούχος βασιλεύς (Iliad I. 279).

50. thereafter; 'accordingly' (i.e. as not fearing God), or 'thereupon.'

51. sentence, opinion, vote, Lat. sententia; cf. 291.

52. more unexpert, less experienced in them than in war.

59. i.e. the prison assigned by his tyranny. For Milton no word has worse associations than 'tyranny'; cf. his treatises, A Defence of the People of England, XII., "the two greatest mischiefs of this life, and most pernicious to virtue, tyranny and superstition"; and The Ready Way, "the most prevailing usurpers over mankind, superstition and tyranny" (P. W. I. 212, II. 113). See 255—57, note, and I. 124. There is a good deal about "tyrants" and "tyranny" in Milton's Common-place Book (see IX. 200, note), which reflects his and his age's deep interest in the question of forms of government.

60—70. Contrast Belial's reply, 129—42.

63. tortures, the things that torture us.

67. fire and horror; cf. I. 502, note. equal, i.e. to his.

69. Tartarean. Milton applies to this nether world terms drawn from the classics; see 506, 858, 883. Strictly, the practice involves some incongruity of effect; cf. the mixture of classical and Scriptural allusions in Lycidas. No doubt, M. was influenced by the Renaissance fashion of identifying the Hell of Christian theology with that of classical writers. We find the same combination of pagan mythology and Hebrew story in the Italian poets, e.g. in the Paradiso, XII. 10—18, where the classical legend of Iris and the Biblical story of the rainbow are interwoven.

73, 74. such, i.e. those who think the way difficult. Used as a noun drench ('that which drenches,' i.e. wets thoroughly) was, and is, commonly applied to a draught of physic for animals. Here therefore it is a contemptuous word—as in the Animadversions, 2, "to diet their ignorance, and want of care, with the limited draught of a matin and even-song drench," P. W. III. 57. Moloch's object is to rouse them to action by taunts. forgetful lake="oblivious pool," I. 266.

75—81. See I. 633, 634, and cf. the account of the expulsion of the angels from Heaven, VI. 856—77. Not being subject to the law of gravitation they did not fall, but were driven down by force.

75. proper, natural = Lat. proprius, 'belonging to oneself.'

77. but='that not'; usually in a negative clause; cf. The Tempest, I. 2. 209, "not a soul but felt a fever," i.e. that did not. So Richard III. I. 3. 186. (See Abbott, Shakesp. Gram. p. 84.)

79. the deep, Chaos.

82—84. The lines give a supposed objection from one of the audience. event, issue (I. 624).

89. exercise, torment; a Latinism.

90—92. Thyer quotes The Teares of the Muses, 125, 126:

"Ah, wretched world! and all that is therein,

The vassals of Gods wrath, and slaves of sin"; and A Midsummer-Night's Dream, V. I. 37, "To ease the anguish of a torturing hour." The latter phrase is borrowed by Gray, Hymn to Adversity, 3. inexorably; so the original editions; he may have dictated inexorable.

92. calls; singular because the two subjects really form a single idea ('punishment'); cf. I. 139.

97. essential, essence, substance, viz. of their angelic forms. In M., as in Shakespeare, an adj.=a noun is very common (cf. 406, 409, 438): an illustration of Dr Abbott's remark that in Elizabethan E. "almost any part of speech can be used as any other part of speech."

99, 100. Cf. 146—54, and I. 117.

100, 101. at worst, i.e. we have already reached the worst point (cf. 162, 163), short of absolute annihilation. Satan argues somewhat similarly in Paradise Regained, III. 204—11. To place at worst between commas changes the sense.

104. fatal, upheld by fate (I. 133), hence secure.

109. Belial; see I. 490, note. In the systems of the demonologists Belial holds high rank; Heywood (Hierarchy, 1635, p. 436) makes him head of the fourth of the nine Orders into which the fallen angels were divided (corresponding with the nine Heavenly Orders). In assigning to Belial the two qualities of personal beauty and persuasive speech M. has followed tradition. Cf. Scot's Discoverie of Witchcraft (1584), "This Beliall...taketh the form of a beautifull Angell, he speaketh faire" (xv. 2). humane, polished, refined.

113. manna, words sweet as manna, "the taste of [which] was like wafers made with honey," Exod. xvi. 31.

113, 114. Alluding, as Bentley noted, to the profession of the Sophists—τὸν ἥττω λόγον κρείττω ποιεῖν. The reproach was made against Socrates; cf. Plato, Apology 18 B, which probably alludes to the satirical lines referring to Socrates in Aristophanes' Clouds 112—15.

Bacon says: "So likewise we see that Anytus, the accuser of Socrates, laid it as an article of charge and accusation against him, that he did... profess a dangerous and pernicious science, which was, to make the worse matter seem the better, and to suppress truth by force of eloquence and speech" (The Advancement of Learning, I. 2. 1). Cf. Milton's Tetrachordon, "as was objected to Socrates by them who could not resist his efficacy, that he ever made the worst cause [i.e. λόγος] seem the better," P. W. III. 320. dash, confound, cast down.

117. timorous and slothful; as might be inferred (I. 490—503).

119. The first part of his speech answers Moloch point by point.

124. in fact of arms = Fr. en fait d'armes, i.e. in deeds, exploits; fact = feat in sense as in etymology (Lat. factum).

127. scope, aim, mark; Gk. σκοπός.

129. "Note the great pauses in Belial's speech" (Tennyson).

130. render; plural, because watch = watchmen.

132. Scan obscure (cf. Hamlet, IV. 5. 213), and see 210, note.

139—42. mould, substance, i.e. of the angels, whom Moloch would assail with Hell-fire. Spiritual frames, M. has said (I. 117), are formed of an "empyrean substance," i.e. of pure fire; cf. Psalms civ. 4, "Who maketh his angels spirits; his ministers a flaming fire." And this fire, argues Belial here and in 215, 216, will, through its greater purity, prevail over (i.e. be insensible to) the "baser" fire of Hell.

143. flat, absolute, complete. Cf. King John, III. 1. 298.

146. Gray's editors trace to these lines the stanza (Elegy, 85—88):

“For who to dumb Forgetfulness a prey
This pleasing anxious being e'er resigned?” etc.

148. Cf. Wordsworth's lines on the statue of Newton at Trinity College (The Prelude, bk. III.).

151. motion; probably from Measure for Measure, III. 1. 120 Todd). See 180, note.

155—59. This thought that the evil angels must live, so that they may suffer the more, is not peculiar to M. Thus Grotius (Adamus Exul) makes Satan say, mors una... | mihi summa voti est; nec, quod extremum est malis, | licet perire; and Sir Thomas Browne, Religio Medici, I. li., has, “the devil, were it in his power, would do the like [viz. destroy himself]; which being impossible, his miseries are endless, and he suffers most in that attribute...his immortality.” He has the same thought in his Christian Morals, II. xiii. (end).

156. Ironical. belike, perhaps, no doubt; only here in M., but many times in Shakespeare; cf. Hamlet, III. 2. 305. impotence, lack of self-restraint (= Lat. impotentia).

159. cease, i.e. from war: ‘why give up the struggle?’

160. they who, Moloch: a courteously indirect reference, consonant with Belial's “humane” character.

162, 163. A very similar passage is P. R. III. 203—11.

165. what when, i.e. how was it when—what was our state? Many texts print a note of exclamation (not in the original editions) after what, making the sentence an anacoluthon. Rhetorical questions are a favourite literary device. amain, with all speed. strook; Milton's preference for this form to struck is marked (Masson).

166. afflicting; perhaps in the lit. sense of affligere; cf. I. 186.

168, 169. See I. 50—53, 311—13. chained; see I. 48.

170. Isaiah xxx. 33.

174. red right hand=rubens dextera of Jupiter (Horace, Od. I. 2. 2, 3).

175, 176. this firmament, i.e. of “the horrid roof” (644) of Hell to which he points. cataracts, floods, torrents; Gk. καταράκτες, ‘a waterfall.’ See XI. 824, note.

180—82. Editors compare Æneid VI. 75, rapidis ludibria ventis (“the sport of every wind,” Dryden), and 740, 741. Probably M. had in his thoughts Measure for Measure, III. 1. 124—26:

“To be imprison'd in the viewless winds,
And blown with restless violence round about
The pendent world” [cf. 1052].

182. racking; Keightley says, “sweeping, driving along. Clouds thus driven are called the rack" (cf. "the racking clouds," 3 Henry VI. 1. 1. 27). But perhaps = 'torturing.' Cf. 1. 126.

184. converse, dwell with; Lat. cum, 'with' + versari, 'to dwell.'

185. With M. (even in his prose, as Todd noted) and other poets a favourite arrangement of words, expressing emphasis; cf. v. 899, S. A. 1.422, P. R. III. 429, Hamlet, 1. 5. 77. Compare the repetition in the Greek dramatists of adjectives compounded with the negative prefix ἀ- (= Eng. un-); e.g. in Euripides, Hecuba 669, ἀπαις, ἀνανδρος, ἀπολις, ἐξεφθαμένη; and Sophocles, Antigone 1071, ἄμοιρον, ἀκτέριστον, ἀνόσιον νέκυν.

187. open or concealed. See 1. 661, 662.

190, 191. "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the Lord shall have them in derision," Psalms ii. 4. motions, proposals, schemes; cf. the verb in IX. 229.

194—96. A supposed objection; cf. 82—84.

199. to suffer...to do. Editors quote: Et facere et pati fortia Romanum est, Livy, II. 12: quidvis et facere et pati, Horace, Od. III. 24. 43. Sir Thomas Browne says, "A man may confide in persons constituted for noble ends, who dare do and suffer"—Christian Morals, I. 25. See I. 158, note.

207. ignominy; a trisyllable (I. 115). The 1st Folio prints ignomy in 1 Henry IV. v. 4. 100, "Thy ignomy sleep with thee in the grave."

210. Scan súpreme. This throwing back of the accent in disyllabic adjectives is usual in M. (and Shakespeare) when they precede a monosyllable or a noun accented on the first syllable. Cf. I. 735, Comus, 273, "Not any boast of skill, but éxtreme shift," 421, "She that has that is clad in cóplete steel."

211. far removed; cf. 321, and see I. 74, 75, note.

215, 216. essence; see 439. vapour; used of hot exhalations, as in XII. 635. inured, accustomed to the flames. To inure is literally 'to bring into practice' (= ure).

217—19. Cf. 274—78. temper, temperament.

219. void of pain; a consideration appropriate to Belial, who represents slothful ease and luxury.

220. light; a noun, surely; to take it as an adj., 'easy,' is to lose the fine hyperbole that for them darkness may become—light.

Cowper notes the awkwardness of the rhyme in 220, 221: "rhyme" (he adds) "is apt to come uncalled, and to writers of blank verse is often extremely troublesome."

224. for happy, regarded as happy—looked at from that standpoint.

226—28. His counsel accords with his effeminate character (I. 490). Cf. Comus, 759, "Obtruding false rules pranked in reason's garb." ignoble ease = ignobile otium, Vergil, Georg. IV. 564.

228. thus Mammon. See I. 678. His speech partly replies to Moloch (since he dismisses the notion of war altogether), partly carries Belial's counsel a step farther. The gist of what Belial said was—'let us temporize, stay here and trust to chance—something may happen.' Mammon answers—'let us indeed stay here, but not idly look to the future: rather straightway set about founding a realm here to compensate for what we have lost there.' Belial, type of ease and sloth, stands, as it were, halfway between Moloch and Mammon.

This notion of a "realm" in Hell, the counterpart of that in Heaven, is of course purely traditional, not invented by M. Thus in the old Faust-book (1587) Mephistophiles tells Faustus that Hell is divided into ten kingdoms, under five rulers (Lucifer, Beelzebub, Belial, Phlegethon and Ascheroth). See Thoms' English Prose Romances, III. 185, 186.

231, 232. then...when, i.e. then only = 'never.' A favourite phrase; cf. IV. 970, "Then, when I am thy captive, talk of chains."

233. the strife, between Fate and Chance (cf. 907—10); or between the rebellious angels and the Almighty (less probable).

234, 235. the former, to unthrone the King of Heaven; the latter, to regain our lost rights. to hope, to hope for; cf. VII. 121. argues, shows, proves (Lat. arguere); this is a common Elizabethan use. Cf. IV. 830.

241—43. See V. 161—63. forced; contrast VI. 744.

245. ambrosial, often used by M., as by Tennyson, of that which delights the sense of taste or of smell. Cf. ambrosia = 'fragrance,' V. 57.

249. pursue, seek after, try to regain, i.e. "our state" (251).

254. Horace, Epist. I. 18. 107, 108, et mihi vivam | quod superest ævi. We may note the oxymorons in these lines (252—57).

255—57. It was a favourite thought with Milton that many men would rather have "Bondage with ease than strenuous liberty" (S. A. 271): i.e. would sacrifice their freedom to save the trouble of maintaining it. Sallust, his favourite historian (as M. writes in a Letter to Lord Henry de Bras), makes Æmilius Lepidus say—accipite otium cum servitio...mihi potior visa est periculosa libertas quieto servitio. Aubrey (reflecting, no doubt, what he had heard from Milton's nephew Edward Phillips and others acquainted with the poet) says that Milton's intense "zeal to the liberty of mankind," and his republicanism, came largely from his admiration of the Roman writers and Roman Commonwealth. Similarly Hobbes complained that at the Universities young men learnt from the classics to despise monarchy (see Marvell, "English Men of Letters Series," pp. 11, 12).

263—67. Cf. Psalm xviii. 11, 13; and xcvii. 2, "Clouds and darkness are round about him."

270—73. See I. 670 et seq.

271. wants not, does not lack.

273. magnificence; such as the palace described in I. 710 et seq.

274, 275. All existing things were supposed to consist of four elements or constituent parts—fire, air, water, earth; and in each element dwelt certain Spirits or dæmons peculiar to it, ruling it, and partaking of its nature. Cf. Il Penseroso, 93, 94:

“And of those dæmons that are found
In fire, air, flood, or under ground.”

That these dæmons were the fallen angels was a common view; see Appendix, pp. 672—74. When M. makes Mammon say that their “torments” (i.e. Hell’s fires) may become their “element,” he clearly alludes to these beliefs.

278. sensible, sense; adjective for noun.

281. compose, adjust, i.e. adapt ourselves to.

282. where; so the First Ed.; the Second Ed. has were.

284—90. Cf. v. 872, 873. Editors compare Iliad II. 144, Æneid x. 96—99. For the elaboration of the simile cf. the note on 488—95.

288. o’erwatched, tired with watching; cf. S. A. 405.

292. field, battle.

294. the sword of Michael, i.e. the “two-handed” sword, “from the armoury of God” (VI. 251, 321), with which in the battle in Heaven Michael laid low the rebellious angels and disabled Satan himself (VI. 320—30). Not mentioned in Daniel or Revelation.

299, 300. In Scripture Beël-zebub = Baal-zebub, ‘lord of flies,’ is the Sun-god of the Philistines, i.e. a local manifestation of the great deity Baal (see I. 422), his chief oracle being at Ekron, “where answers seem to have been obtained from the hum and motions of flies” (Sayce). In P. L. he ranks next to Satan (see v. 671, note). Perhaps this notion that he was one of the chief of the infernal powers was due to the rendering of Mat. xii. 24, where the title “prince of the devils” is really applied to Beel-zebub, ‘lord of the heavenly height’ (cf. the margin).

301, 302. Scan aspèct, as often in M. and Shakespeare; cf. v. 733, VI. 450. Newton quotes 2 Henry VI. I. 1. 75, “Brave peers of England, pillars of the state.” front, brow, Lat. frons; cf. Hamlet, III. 4. 56.

306. Atlantean, worthy of Atlas, one of the Titans, who as a punishment for making war on Zeus was condemned to bear heaven on his shoulders. Cf. Spenser, sonnet to Lord Burleigh:

“As the wide compasse of the firmament
On Atlas mighty shoulders is upstayd.”

“The myth seems to have arisen from the idea that lofty mountains supported the heaven” (Class. Dict.).

309. thus he spake; and what he says sweeps on one side the main arguments of the previous speakers. 'War,' he urges, recognising their true position, 'with the Almighty (such as Moloch counsels), that is ridiculous: peace (such as Belial and Mammon dream of), that is not to be hoped for: suffer we must and shall, but suffering may be lightened by revenge—and that of a subtler kind than Moloch proposes.' The speech of each deity is carefully differentiated, and consistent with his character. Similarly in the later books (v.—VIII., XI., XII.) the good angels Raphael and Michael are drawn on contrasting lines. But, in the main, the characters of the evil angels "are more diversified" (Johnson).

311, 312. these titles; see I. 737. style, title, appellation; cf. 2 Henry VI. I. 3. 51, 52:

"Am I a queen in title and in style,
And must be made a subject to a duke?"

313. for so; alluding to the applause which Mammon had (284).

315. In the original editions doubtless has a semicolon before and after, i.e. it is a parenthetic-sarcasm: 'build up here an empire—as is so very likely!' Some remove the second semicolon and explain: 'while we dream undisturbed by any doubt.'

324. "I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last," Rev. i. 11; also xxi. 6, xxii. 13. Cf. Ben Jonson, Masque of Augurs, "Jove is that one, whom first, midst, last you call." highth or depth, Heaven or Hell.

327, 328. Cf. Abdiel's warning to Satan, v. 886—88. In each case there is an allusion to Psalms ii. 9, "Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron" (cf. Rev. ii. 27). The distinction between iron typifying hostility and gold typifying benevolence is part of the symbolism in which M. delights. Cf. Lycidas, 110, 111, where St Peter bears "two massy keys"—the golden admitting to Heaven, the iron excluding. A rod of gold, 'the Rod of Equity,' is among the regalia of the English Crown.

those, his loyal subjects, the angels who had not rebelled with Satan.

330. determined, made an end of us, i.e. crushed us. Cf. vi. 318.

336. to, to the best of; cf. The Winter's Tale, v. 2. 182, "I will prove so, sir, to my power," and Coriolanus, II. I. 262.

337. untamed, not to be tamed. reluctance, resistance.

345—51. Addison considered this ancient prophecy in heaven concerning the creation of man a wonderfully imaginative stroke: "Nothing could shew more the dignity of the species, than this tradition which ran of them before their existence. They are represented to have been the talk of heaven before they were created...Milton gives us a glimpse of them even before they are in being." See I. 650—54, note. fame = Lat. fama in the literal sense 'report'; cf. I. 651.

352, 353. by an oath. Cf. V. 607; see Gen. xxii. 16, "By myself have I sworn, saith the LORD," and Isai. xlv. 23.

that shook; cf. Aeneid IX. 106, annuit et totum nutu tremefecit Olympum—itself from Homer, Iliad I. 530, μέγαν δ' ἐλέλιξεν Ὀλυμπον (the subject of the verb being Zeus); echoed by Dryden, Alexander's Feast, 35—37. Epic poetry has its conventions and formulas, handed down from Homer to Vergil, from Vergil to the Italian poets.

360. Contrast 410—13; here he purposely lessens the danger.

375. The First Ed. has originals, which shows that original = originator, parent (i.e. Adam). Cf. The Reason of Church Government, I. 3, "run questing up as high as Adam to fetch their original," P. W. II. 449, and A Midsummer-Night's Dream, II. I. 117, "We are their parents and original." Some explain it = 'earliest condition, primitive state.'

376—78. advise, consider. or to, i.e. whether it is better to. vain empires; such as Mammon foreshadowed.

382, 383. confound, utterly ruin. one root, Adam (1 Cor. xv. 22).

384, 385. Cf. Raphael's warning that Satan would plot Adam's fall, "As a despite done against the Most High" (VI. 906).

387. States; often used by Shakespeare of a body of representatives or parliament; cf. King John, II. 395, "How like you this wild counsel, mighty states?" So here; cf. the phrase 'estates of the realm,' and états in French.

391. synod, meeting, assembly; cf. VI. 156, XI. 67.

397—402. In later times, according to tradition, some of the out-cast angels do become 'Spirits of air,' and dwell in "mild seats" of the middle region of air.

398. not unvisited; M. is fond of this classical figure of meiosis or under-statement.

404. tempt, try, essay, Lat. temptare.

406. obscure, obscurity: "palpable obscure" = "palpable darkness," XII. 188, i.e. "darkness which may be felt," Exod. x. 21. Drayton had used the phrase "darkness palpable," and the Preface to the A.V. speaks of "thick and palpable clouds of darkness." Without doubt, the original of all these passages was Exod. x. 21 in the Vulgate—tenebræ tam dense ut palpari queant. (From Newton.) Lat. palpare = 'to stroke, feel.'

407. uncouth, strange; cf. 827.

409. the vast abrupt, the gulf between Hell and the World.

arrive, arrive at, reach; cf. Milton's divorce-pamphlet, The Judg- ment of Martin Bucer, "if our things here below arrive him where he is," P. W. III. 282; so Julius Cæsar, I. 2. 110, "But ere we could arrive the point proposed." In Elizabethan E. this omission of the preposition with verbs of motion is common.

410. the happy isle, i.e. the Universe of this World, hung (1051) in Chaos, which is a kind of "sea" (1011): hence the peculiar fitness of comparing Satan, as he journeys through Chaos, to a vessel making for its port (1041—44). See again III. 76.

412. senteries; so the original editions, and the metre requires the form. Perhaps the form sentry was due to the notion that the word came from Fr. sentier, 'a path,' Lat. semita; it is thought to be a corruption of sentinel. stations=Lat. stationes, 'guards, pickets.'

413. had, would have.

415. choice, care in selecting by vote some one to send.

423. astonished, struck with dismay. prime, chief, Lat. primi.

425. proffer, offer himself, volunteer.

430. With this speech cf. P. R. I. 44—105. The scenes are similar. In each case Satan undertakes a design from which his followers shrink—here against Mankind, there against Christ. And there he reminds them how he alone faced the former danger, and argues that, having succeeded once, he will succeed again.

432, 433. An echo of Æneid VI. 126—29, where the Sibyl tells Æneas that the descent into Avernus is easy:

"But to return, and view the cheerful skies,

In this the task and mighty labour lies" (Dryden).

The slow monosyllabic rhythm and the alliteration seem intended by Milton to suggest the laborious effort of ascent.

434. convex, vault (=Lat. convexum); a poetical use; cf. VII. 266.

438. the void profound=Lucretius' inane profundum. Cf. Tennyson's line, "Ruining along the illimitable inane" (Lucretius).

439. unessential Night, i.e. having no substance or being. essence=Lat. essentia (from esse)=Gk. οὐσία (or τὸ ὄν, 'that which really exists'). Night, he means, is a mere vacuity (932).

441. abortive, monstrous, because unnatural, i.e. born prematurely. He speaks of the gulf as though it were some monstrosity, horrible through premature birth. Others says 'rendering abortive.'

448. moment, importance. Cf. "of great moment," Hamlet, III. I. 86; "of no moment," 3 Henry VI. I. 2. 22.

450. me; purposely emphatic by position.

452. refusing, if I refuse: honours and dangers go together.

457. intend, consider; a Latinism.

461. deceive, beguile; cf. Cowper, "to deceive the time, not waste it." So Lat. decipere—e.g. in Horace's dulci laborum decipitur sono = is beguiled into forgetting his troubles (Od. 11. 13. 38).

465, 466. The abrupt form of the ending is significant.

467. prevented, anticipated, forestalled.

468. raised, encouraged; agreeing with others.

478. awful, full of awe, respect; cf. Nat. Ode, 59.

483—85. i.e. "Let not bad men set much store by those casual acts of seeming nobleness to which glory or ambition may doubtless spur even the worst of them; for neither have that other class of evil beings...lost such virtue as this" (Masson).

485. close, secret; often in Shakespeare. varnished...with, speciously hidden by.

488—95. This simile is typical of many in Milton: similes classical in manner, more like Vergil's than Shakespeare's. The peculiarity is that he works the simile out, in all its bearings, into a picture complete in itself but rather detached from the context. Cf. I. 768—75.

489. while the North-wind sleeps = Homer's  $\delta\phi\rho' \epsilon\upsilon\delta\eta\sigma\iota \mu\acute{\epsilon}\nu\omicron\varsigma \text{Βορ\acute{\epsilon}\alpha}\omicron$  (Il. v. 524), "that wind generally...dispersing clouds" (Newton). See XI. 842, note.

490, 491. element, sky.

492. if chance, if it chances that; cf. Comus, 508, "How chance she is not in your company?" The verb-construction (e.g. 'how does it chance that?') is influenced by the noun-phrase ('by what chance?'). So in A Midsummer-Night's Dream, I. 1. 129, "How chance the roses there do fade so fast?"

497—502. The Civil Wars in England; the Thirty Years' War in Germany (1618—48); the Civil War of the Fronde in France (1648—52).

501. Dr Bradshaw notes that the phrase to levy war (see XI. 219), which Johnson censured, was a technical term found in legal documents and statutes. He cites from one of Barrow's Sermons (May 29, 1676), "those in the late times who, instead of praying for their sovereign,... did raise tumults, and levy war against him." Add Tennyson, Queen Mary, II. 1, "must we levy war against the Queen's Grace?"

503. to accord, to agree among ourselves.

508. Paramount, lord, chief.

512. globe, compact band; cf. P. R. IV. 581. Lat. globus is used similarly of a close mass of men.

513. emblazonry, i.e. shields emblazoned (I. 538) or figured with designs. horrent, bristling (see I. 563, note).

514. Only the great angels had taken part in the council (I. 792—98); the others were awaiting its result.

516. i.e. towards the four quarters of the compass; cf. III. 326, and see Ezekiel xxxvii. 9, "Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live."

517, 518. alchymy, trumpets made of the metal called 'alchymy gold' or 'alchemy.' Misunderstanding the word, Bentley proposed Orichalc; Gk. ορείχαλκος, Lat. orichalcum (cf. Æneid XII. 87), yellow copper ore, and the brass made therefrom. harald; cf. I. 752.

522. ranged, assembled in ranks.

526. entertain, pass, while away; cf. the Argument of this book, "to entertain the time till Satan return," a phrase used by Shakespeare; cf. Lucrece, 1361, "The weary time she cannot entertain," and Sonnet 39. The picture of the angels variously employed recalls Vergil's description of the souls of the blessed in Elysium with their diversions, Æneid VI. 640 et seq.

528—32. These "heroic games" (IV. 551, a similar scene) are Milton's counterpart to the Trojan sports, Æneid V. 577 et seq., and those of the Myrmidons, withheld from war, Iliad II. 773 et seq.: whence too the contests in The Dunciad.

528. sublime = Lat. sublimis in the literal sense 'aloft,' 'uplifted'; cf. P. R. IV. 542, "through the air sublime."

530. Two of the great festivals of Greece were the Olympic games held every fifth year at Olympia, a small plain of Elis, and the Pythian at Delphi in honour of Apollo (the Pythian god).

531, 532. Cf. XI. 643, "Part curb the foaming steed," i.e. in horse-races. or shum; alluding (cf. Arceopagitica, P. W. II. 68) to Horace, Od. I. I. 4, 5, metaque fervidis | evitata rotis, i.e. in chariot-races. To the chariot-races at Olympia M. refers in his sixth Elegy, 26 (volat Eleo pulvere fuscus eques), in the lines on Pindar. Cf. Dryden, Annus Mirabilis, stanza 56. brigads; cf. I. 675.

533. Probably the Aurora Borealis is meant. to warn; because considered omens.

534. Newton quotes I Henry IV. I. I. 10, "like the meteors of a troubled heaven."

535. van, vanguard; Fr. avant-garde.

539. Typhæan; see I. 199, and cf. Astræa Redux, 37, 38:

"Thus when the bold Typhæus scaled the sky

And forced great Jove from his own heaven to fly."

But Typhon is the commoner form in English.

540. ride the air; cf. Macbeth, IV. I. 138; see 662, note.

542. Alcides, Hercules, grandson of Alcæus. The story, as commonly told, was: Hercules, returning to Trachis from Cēchalia where he had killed Eurytus, landed at Cenæum, the N.W. promontory of Eubœa, and sent Lichas, his companion, to Trachis to fetch a white robe wherein to sacrifice to Zeus; Deianira, his wife, sent instead a robe dipped in what she thought to be a love-potion that would make Hercules true to her: the potion was a poison, and when Hercules put the robe on it ate into his flesh, and could not be removed: in his agony he hurled (i.e. from Cenæum) Lichas into the sea, and himself afterwards ascended Mt Ceta in Thessaly, raised a pile of wood, and was burnt thereon. The story forms the subject of Sophocles' Trachiniæ; it is told also by Ovid, Metamorphoses IX., whom M. follows closely, e.g. in making Mt Ceta the scene; cf. Marvell, The Loyal Scot:

“When Ceta and Alcides are forgot,

Our English youth shall sing the valiant Scot.”

There is a fine application of the tale in S. A. 1038, 1039, where an ill-matched wife is called “a cleaving mischief” to her husband.

from Æchalia crowned; Ovid's victor ab Æchalia (136). Æchalia, a town in Thessaly. The First Ed. has Oealia.

543. envenomed, because steeped by Deianira in the blood of the Centaur Nessus, whom Hercules had slain with a poisoned arrow. Cf. M. in In Obitum Procancellarii Medici, 10, 11 (alluding to the same story), ferus Hercules | Nessi venenatus cruore.

545. Lichas; see The Merchant of Venice, II. I. 32—35.

546. Euboic sea, between Eubœa and the mainland.

546—55. Heywood says of the infernal angels, “in Musicke they are skill'd” (Hierarchy, p. 441).

552. partial, prejudiced—in favour of themselves; it “was silent as to the corrupt motive of their conduct, and dwelt only on the sad consequences of it” (Cowper).

554. suspended, held rapt, thrilled. took, enchanted.

557. Cf. Scott's happy allusion—“others apart sat on a bench retired, and reasoned highly on the doctrines of crime” (describing the lawyers at the trial of Effie Dean, The Heart of Midlothian).

558—69. Cf. S. A. 300 et seq., P. R. IV. 286 et seq., where Greek philosophies are sneered at; and contrast Comus, 476—80 (“How charming is divine Philosophy”).

559, 560. Probably M. is ridiculing the theological controversies of his own age: yet he himself discourses on free-will and predestination, not only in The Christian Doctrine, I. iv. (P. W. IV. 43—77), but even in P. L.; cf. III. 96—128, v. 524—40.

564, 565. Referring primarily to the Stoics, whose philosophy he condemns in P. R. IV. 300 et seq.: apathy (Gk. ἀ-, ‘not’ + παθεῖν, ‘to suffer’) signifying in their system insensibility to suffering, hence freedom from passion or feeling—i.e. a passionless tranquillitas, “contemning all,” P. R. IV. 304. Cf. the Essay on Man, II. 101, 102:

“In lazy apathy let Stoics boast
Their virtue fixed; ’tis fixed as in a frost.”

There is a passing allusion to “Stoic apathy” in An Apology for Smeectymnuus (P. W. III. 136).

568, 569. Horace, Od. I. 3. 9, illi robur et æs triplex | circa pectus erat, where æs, like “steel” here, is figurative. obdured; cf. VI. 785.

570. gross, dense, compact.

572. clime, region; see I. 242.

575, 576. In the main this picture of the infernal rivers is modelled on the classics (cf. Æneid VI.), with touches perhaps from the much fuller treatment in the Inferno. But M. has added some details, e.g. the making of the four rivers unite in the burning lake, i.e. the “lake of fire” of the Revelation (xix. 20, xx. 10). He refers to the meaning of each river’s name, the collective allusion being to the lamentations of the souls of the wicked, borne to their punishment. baleful, sorrowful.

577. Styx; from στυγῆν, ‘to hate, abhor’; the chief river of the nether world, round which it flowed “with nine circling streams” (Dryden) = novies Styx interfusa (Æneid VI. 439).

578. Acheron = ὁ ἄχαια ῥέων, ‘the stream of woe.’

579, 580. Cocytus; Gk. κωκυτός, ‘wailing,’ from κωκύειν, ‘to wail.’

580, 581. Phlegethon; φλεγέθων, ‘flaming’; also called “Pyriphlegethon”; waves of fire (πῦρ), not water, flowing in its “torrent.”

583. Lethe; Gk. λήθη, ‘a forgetting.’ “A river in the lower world was called Lethe. The souls of the departed drank of this river, and thus forgot all they had said or done in the upper world” (Class. Dict.). Cf. Dryden, Æneid, VI. 957, “The gliding Lethe leads her silent flood,” and 968, “In Lethe’s lake they long oblivion taste.” There is extant a copy of Browne’s Britannia’s Pastorals with MS. notes pronounced by some to be by Milton, and over against a description of this river are written the words, “They who drinke of Lethe never think of love or ye world.”

“The topography of the infernal rivers is rather indefinite and varied in classical writers. Lethe is generally removed from the rivers of horror as in Milton” (Osgood, Classical Mythology in Milton, p. 73). So Dante placed Lethe, not in Inferno but in Purgatorio (see canto XXVIII.), making it the cleansing influence by which all memory of sin was washed out, and inventing a companion stream, Eunoë, by which the memory of all good deeds was restored to a man.

589. dire hail; Horace’s jam satis...diræ grandinis, Od. I. 2. 1, 2.

590, 591. i.e. the ruin of some ancient building; cf. "pile high-built," S. A. 1069.

592, 593. Lake Serbonis (now dried up) lay on the coast of Lower Egypt, separated from the sea by a narrow strip of sand (Herodotus III. 5); close to Mt Casius (Herod. II. 6).

Damiata, now Damietta on the easternmost mouth of the Nile; it has been identified with Pelusium. Milton's reason for introducing the name Damiata is, no doubt, its association with the great Italian epics. Ariosto makes Orlando go to Damiata (Orlando Furioso, xv. 48), and Tasso (xv. 16) speaks of it; and in the Inferno, xiv. 104, it "stands for the Eastern civilisation which was superseded by that of Rome."

Burke quotes these lines (592—94) with great effect in his speech on Conciliation with America (Payne's ed., I. p. 196); see also his Reflections on the Revolution in France (II. p. 231).

594. Primarily from Diodorus Siculus (I. 30), who says of the Σιρβωνίς λίμνη—πολλοὶ τῶν ἀγροούντων τὴν ιδιότητα τοῦ τόπου μετὰ στρατευμάτων ὄλων ἠφανίσθησαν. How this happened, Sandys' Relation shows: the Lake, he says (and he had been there), was "borderd on each side with hills of sand, which being borne into the water by the winds so thickened the same, as not by the eye to be distinguished from a part of the Continent: by means whereof whole armies have bin devoured. For the sands neere-hand seeming firme, a good way entred slid farther off, and left no way of returning, but with a lingering cruelty swallowed the ingaged: whereupon it was called Barathrum.... Close to this standeth the mountaine Cassius (no other than a huge mole of sand)," p. 137. Seemingly the only historical basis of this story is the fact that when Darius Ochus, the Persian, invaded Egypt he lost part of his troops in the lake.

594, 595. parching, used of the drying, withering effect of cold (cf. Lyc. 13, "parching wind") or heat (cf. XII. 636). frore, frosty. cold...fire; Newton aptly quotes Ecclus. xliii. 21, "The cold north wind...burneth the wilderness, and consumeth the grass as fire"; and Vergil, Georg. I. 93, ne...frigus adurat. The r...r sound may be meant to suggest shuddering. Aubrey says that M. "pronounced the letter R very hard" (and adds, "a certaine signe of a satyricall wit").

596—603. "This idea of making the pains of Hell consist in cold as well as heat [i.e. by alternations] was current in the Middle Ages... it seems to have come from the Rabbin [Jewish commentators], for they make the torments of Gehenna to consist of fire and of frost and snow" (Keightley). Cf. Dante, Inferno, III. 86, 87, where Charon says, "Woe to you, depraved spirits! I come to lead you...into the eternal darkness, into fire and into ice," and the Purgatorio, III. 31, 32. Dante makes the last circle, the ninth, of the Inferno the frozen circle, where the greatest sinners are confined (xxxii.—xxxiv.). I find the idea worked out in Giles Fletcher's Christ's Victory on Earth, 22, and in the Faust-book (1587), where Mephistophiles describes Hell to Faustus in a passage closely resembling these lines: also, when Faustus is suffered to visit Hell, out of curiosity, he finds there "a most pleasant, clear and cold water; into the which many tormented souls sprang out of the fire to cool themselves, but being so freezing cold, they were constrained to return again into the fire, and thus wearied themselves and spent their endless torments out of one labyrinth into another, one while in heat, another while in cold," Thoms' English Prose Romances, III. pp. 194, 212. The notion was known to Shakespeare; see Measure for Measure, III. I. 121—23. And Sir Thomas Browne introduces it in his Urn Burial, IV.

596, 597. harpy-footed, with feet like the talons of Harpies (hideous winged creatures, with hooked claws—see Æn. III. 211—18, P. R. II. 403). haled=hauled, dragged; in First Ed. hail'd, i.e. summoned—a possible reading. revolutions, i.e. of time.

600. starve, afflict, perish with cold. O.E. steruen=to perish, die.

604. sound, strait.

611. Medusa, one of the three Gorgons; the one most mentioned in classical writers. Her hair being changed into serpents by Athene, her appearance became so terrible that all who looked at her were changed into stone. See the allusion in Comus, 447, to "that snaky-headed Gorgon shield" worn by Athene, and cf. the note on X. 526, 527. So Gray, Adversity, 35, "Not in thy Gorgon terrors clad."

612—14. According to legend, Tantalus, for divulging the secrets of Zeus, was "punished in the lower world by being afflicted with a raging thirst, and at the same time placed in the midst of a lake, the waters of which always receded from him as soon as he attempted to drink them" (Class. Dict.). See S. A. 500, 501.

615—18. See I. 733, note. first, for the first time. found no rest; editors compare Mat. xii. 43, Luke xi. 24.

620. Alp; used of any high snow-capped mountain.

621. The number of monosyllables suggests variety, i.e. of scenery.

625. prodigious, unnatural, monstrous.

628. Cf. X. 524 (for rhythm) and Comus, 517. Hesiod mentions three Gorgons, daughters of Phorcys, monsters with wings and brazen claws, and hissing serpents, instead of hair, on their heads. The Lernean Hydra was a serpent with nine heads that ravaged the country near Argos; slain by Hercules (his 2nd 'labour'). In Of Reformation in England, II, M. has the phrase "a continual hydra of mischief and molestation," P. W. II. 411. See also his Sonnet to Fairfax. The Chimæra was a fire-breathing monster, πρῶθε λέων, ὄπιθεν δὲ δράκων, μέσση δὲ χίμαιρα (Iliad VI. 181), i.e. part lion, part dragon, part goat. M. mentions these three monsters together because Vergil (Æn. VI. 287—89) and Tasso (IV. 5) had done the same.

634. shaves, skims; cf. radit iter liquidum—Æneid V. 217.

635. concave, roof.

636. "What simile was ever so vast as this?" (Tennyson). His other favourite simile in Paradise Lost was "the gunpowder one" (IV. 814—19). Note here how fully the simile is worked out, beyond the precise point of comparison (see 488, note): how also the proper names convey an impression of mysterious remoteness (see I. 583—87). Milton's great similes are introduced with a peculiar hush, a thrill of expectancy.

637—40. hangs, i.e. seems to the distant spectator to be in the clouds. equinoctial winds, "the trade-winds, which blow from east to west at the time of the equinoxes" (Bradshaw); afterwards (640) M. transfers "trading" from the wind to the sea. close, i.e. together, so as to form, seen from far, a single object—like the single figure of Satan.

M. had in his mind's eye a fleet of East Indiamen (Newton). The importance of the East Indian trade, especially the Dutch, is felt in Dryden's Annus Mirabilis; cf. especially stanzas 2, 3, 4, 24—30, and 304, with its picture of merchantmen "doubling the Cape" (cf. 641). Cf. also Marvell's description of the merchant ships sunk in the Thames to prevent the victorious Dutch going further up the river in 1667 (Last Instructions to a Painter, 660—74).

638. Bengala, a relic of the old form Bangdli=Bengal. In Hexham's ed. of Mercator's Atlas the Bay of Bengal is marked "Golfo di Bengala" in the map of Asia. Some of our earliest trading-settlements were along the Bengal coast (cf. 2—4, note).

639. Ternate and Tidore, two of the Moluccas or 'Spice Islands' in the Malay Archipelago, close together. Hexham describes the "Molluccoes" as "famous throughout the world, in regard of the abundance of all sorts of sweete spices, but especially for the Cloues which come from them...Tidor and Ternate are the principallest" (II. 423, 424).

640. they, the ships. flood; used similarly of the sea by Shakespeare, e.g. in A Midsummer-Night's Dream, II. I. 127, "Marking the embarked traders on the flood."

641. A glance at the map will show that Milton uses "the wide Ethiopian" (i.e. sea)=the Indian Ocean—that is, the ocean east of Africa. This was in accordance with classical usage, Æthiopia being limited to the only part of Africa south of the Red Sea which the ancients knew, namely, its eastern coast. Gradually the use of the term "Ethiopia" expanded with the progress of Portuguese geographical discovery westward, until it applied to the vast region stretching from ocean to ocean. And the name "Ethiopic Sea" was transferred from the sea washing its eastern shores, which had come to be known as the "Indian Ocean" (Mare Indicum), to the sea on its western side. Thus in Hexham's Mercator, in the map of Africa, I find the name Oceanus Æthiopicus given to the sea west of Africa—what we call the 'South Atlantic'; and in the letterpress the terms "Æthiopicke Ocean," "Æthiopicke Sea," are always used so. The same is the case in Heylin's map of Africa; while speaking of the Atlantic, he says, "some parts hereof, which wash the Westerne Shores of Æthiopia Inferior, be called the Æthiopicke Ocean" (Cosmography, Lib. IV. 71). One can scarce do else than conclude that for Milton's readers the title Ethiopian might more naturally have meant the South Atlantic (or western sea), not the Indian Ocean (= Oceanus Orientalis in Mercator).

641, 642. Cape, of Good Hope. stemming, pressing forward, i.e. breasting the waves; cf. Julius Cæsar, I. 2. 109. the pole, the South Pole.

643—48. Cf. 434—37. For nine as a sacred number, see I. 50. impaled, encircled. The double alliteration (i...i and p...p) has a fine effect of emphasis.

648—73. The basis of the allegory of Sin and Death lies, appropriately, in Scripture: "Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death," James i. 15. In IX. 12 Death is called the "shadow" of Sin, and in the poem we never meet with them apart. How far M. means us to read an allegorical meaning into his description is hard to say. I doubt, e.g., whether the "yelling monsters" (795) should be regarded as typifying "the mental torments that are the consequence of sin" (Keightley). To me they seem to be introduced—without allegorical intent—partly because they intensify the element of mere horror, partly for the sake of the literary parallel. On the other hand, the "mortal sting" is plainly symbolical; cf. 1 Cor. xv. 56.

650. the one. Milton's figure of Sin is own sister to Spenser's Error (The Faerie Queene, I. I. 14, 15) and Phineas Fletcher's Hamartia or Sin (The Purple Island, XII. 27—cf. also his Apollyonists, I. 10 et seq.): their common origin being the classical accounts of Scylla, notably Ovid's (Metamorphoses XIV.) and Vergil's (Æneid III. 424 et seq.). It is therefore as a study in a familiar style, not as a fresh creation, that the picture should be viewed. So with his figure of Death. The subject of his poem, in itself, supplied him with few characters.

651, 652. So Hesiod describes Echidna, Theogony 298.

voluminous; perhaps with the literal sense 'in rolls or folds' (Lat. volumen, from volvare, 'to roll'); cf. Pope, Windsor Forest, "The silver eel in shining volumes roll'd." So in Dryden's Annus Mirabilis, st. 123.

654—56. cry, pack. Cerberian, as of Cerberus, the many-headed dog that guarded the entrance to Hades. list, wished, chose.

659—61. According to the legend, Circe threw magic herbs into the waters where Scylla bathed, so that she was changed in the way M. implies. See Bacon's application of the myth in The Advancement of Learning, I. 4. 6. abhorred, to be abhorred. Calabria, in South Italy. Trinacria, Sicily, so called from its triangular shape.

662. the night-hag; probably Hecate, the goddess of sorcery, is meant. Cf. Macbeth, III. 5 (from which M. quotes in Comus, 1017), especially 20, where Hecate says, "I am for the air," and Dryden, Annus Mirabilis, st. 248. See Comus, 135.

called, i.e. invoked to take part in rites; cf. Macbeth, III. 5. 8 and 34 ("Hark! I am call'd").

664. infant blood; alluding to an ancient superstition. When the witches in Jonson's Masque of Queens assemble and relate what they have been doing, one says: "Under a cradle I did creep, By day; and when the child was asleep, At night I sucked the breath"; whereto the next: "I had a dagger: what did I with that? Killed an infant." In the footnote Jonson adds, "Their killing of infants is common... Sprenger reports that a witch confessed to have killed above forty infants...which she had offered to the devil"; and then he cites authorities, e.g. Horace, Epod. v. Cf., perhaps, Macbeth, IV. 1. 30.

to dance; like the witches in Macbeth; cf. IV. 1. 132, stage-direction, "The Witches dance, and then vanish, with Hecate." So Jonson makes his witches, in the midst of their rites, fall "into a sudden magical dance"—commenting that this is in accordance with tradition (Masque of Queens). Upon the significance of the custom, see Tylor's Primitive Culture, II. 133.

665. Lapland was traditionally a home of witchcraft; cf. Burton's Anatomy, I. ii. 1, 2 ("Digression of Spirits"), The Comedy of Errors, IV. 3. 11, "Lapland sorcerers," and Hudibras, III. 1. 113, 114. Heylyn calls the Laplanders "great sorcerers" (Cosmography, II. 122). Their chief instrument of divination was an oval cylinder or drum figured with various designs, notably of the moon and heavenly bodies. See "Regnard's Journey to Lapland" (1681), which contains a full account of the 'sorcerers' and their incantations; also the narrative of Leems (1767), on the "Magic Arts of the Laplanders" (both in Pinkerton's Voyages, 1808, vol. 1.).

665, 666. The belief that the moon (see I. 785, 786) and heavenly bodies are affected by magic is very old and widespread. Cf. Pliny, Nat. Hist. II. xii. 1, "As for the Moone, mortall men imagine that by Magicke sorcerie, and charms, she is inchaunted" (Philemon Holland's translation, 1601). See Vergil, Ecl. VIII. 69, Ovid, Metamorphoses VII. 192 et seq., Horace, Epod. v. 45, 46. Marlowe's Doctor Faustus claims (III. 38) that Mephistophilis must do "whatever Faustus shall command,

Be it to make the moon drop from her sphere."

So in Fairfax, Tasso, IX. 15, "The moon and stars for fear of spiritres were fled," and XIII. 9.

labouring; cf. Cowper (translating Milton's Italian sonnet to Diodati), "And from her sphere draw down the labouring moon." So Lat. labores = 'eclipse,' laborare, 'to suffer eclipse.' Cf. Vergil, Georg. II. 478, defectus solis varios, lunæque labores.

666. the other Shape. Joseph Warton thought that Milton owed the "person of Death" to the θάνατος of Euripides in the Alcestis; cf. the Sonnet, "On his Deceased Wife." But Death as a personified figure had been described by Spenser (F. Q. VII. 7. 46), and introduced (as Todd noted) in Morality and early Elizabethan plays. I daresay too that a similar allegorical presentment might be found in some popular Book of Emblems, or in the famous wood-cuts, The Dance of Death (1538). In any case we must remember that the tendency to personify (fostered by the very important influence of the Morality-plays and, later, of the Masque) was a characteristic of early 17th century poetry. Roughly it may be said that this allegorising habit came from the Latin tendency to personify abstract words, the two great masters of it being Dante and Spenser.

670. Cf. Homer's ἐρεμνῆ νυκτὶ ἐοικώς, Od. XI. 605 (Newton).

672. The "dart" of Death, a symbol of the force by which humanity is laid low, is mentioned in XI. 491.

what seemed. In his fine criticism of this passage Coleridge notes how the abstract vagueness of such description appeals to the imagination with a subtle force which concrete, more clearly defined, imagery would lack altogether. Cf. IV. 990.

673. a kingly crown; cf. Job xviii. 14, Rev. vi. 2.

677. admired, wondered; cf. I. 690.

678, 679. Strictly, the construction includes "God and his Son" among "created things"; but the sense is clear.

686, 687. taste, i.e. its effects. Hell-born! echoed in 697.

688. Goblin, demon, evil spirit. Cowper remarks on the variety of titles for Death: "the poet...seems to exhaust both invention and language for subtle appellations."

692. See Rev. xii. 4, and cf. v. 710, vi. 156. In ix. 141, 142 Satan boasts that his followers were "well nigh half" the angels. Their number was a point of dispute among the Schoolmen.

693. conjured, sworn together (conjurati).

695. waste, spend, pass; cf. The Tempest, v. 302.

701. whip of scorpions. Cf. I Kings xii. 11.

706. deform = Lat. deformis, 'hideous, unsightly.'

706—11. Cf. iv. 985 et seq. (Satan's meeting with Gabriel).

708. The comparison of a warrior clad in armour to a comet is at least as old as the Aeneid (x. 272, 273), and is finely employed by Tasso (ii. 52). The vast scale of the simile here conveys a profound impression of Satan's majesty.

709. Ophiuchus, a constellation of the northern (cf. "arctic") hemisphere, consisting of some 80 stars and extending about forty degrees in length: lit. 'the Serpent-holder,' from Gk. ὄφις, 'a snake' and ἔχειν; Lat. Anguitenens or Serpentarius; cf. Heywood's Hierarchy (p. 124), and for an apt illustration of the simile, Henry More's Song of the Soul:

"Ye flaming comets wandering on high,
And new-fixt starres found in that Circle blue,
The one espide in glittering Cassiopie,
The other near to Ophiuchus high."

710, 711. The appearance of a comet was traditionally held an omen, generally of disaster. Cf. a passage in Batman vppon Bartholome (1582), viii. 32, curiously like this: "Cometa is a starre beclipped with burning gleames...and is sodeinly bred and betokeneth changing of kings, and is a token of pestilence or of war...and they spread their beames toward the North" (= "arctic sky"). horrid hair, i.e. the tail of the comet (= κομήτης, 'long-haired,' from κόμη, 'hair'). Cf. I Henry VI. I. I. 2, 3:

"Comets, importing change of times and states, Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky."

711. Cf. the encounter of Michael and Satan in the battle in Heaven, compared to the clash of two planets, vi. 310—15.

715, 716. Cf. Dryden:

"Lightning and thunder (heaven's artillery)
As harbingers before th' Almighty fly."

But the phrase was common. Caspian; chosen as typical in poets of a tempestuous region; cf. Tasso vi. 38, The Faerie Queene, II.

719. so, thus; completing the simile; cf. 947, I. 209, 311, 775. that, so that; a constant use in M. Cf. The Tempest, I. 2. 370, 371:

“[I’ll] make thee roar,

That beasts shall tremble at thy din.”

722. foe, i.e. Christ. See I Cor. xv. 25, 26, Heb. ii. 14.

730. and know’st, though knowing; in original eds. not a question.

739. s pares to, refrains from; cf. Lat. parcere followed by infinitive. So M. in prose; cf. Of Reformation in England, 11, “neither doth the author spare to record,” P. W. II. 411.

746. Phineas Fletcher in his Apollyonists has the line, “The Porter to th’ infernall gate is Sin.”

749—51. By a fitting stroke of allègory, the birth of Sin is made to synchronise with the first sign of disobedience in Heaven.

755—58. As Athene sprang from the head of Zeus.

787—89. Cf. Georgic IV. 525—27 (with Pope’s imitation, St Cecilia’s Day, VI.), where the river-banks re-echo the name ‘Eurydice’; also Tennyson’s Merlin and Vivien (end). Other Vergilian references are Eclogue VI. 43, 44, Æneid II. 53.

809. So Satan recognises Fate as the highest power (I. 116, note).

813. To temper metal is to harden it by cooling after it has been heated; cf. I. 285, VI. 322. mortal dint, deadly blow.

815. lore, lesson, what he had to learn (lore and learn cognate). Note the change in his tone. When in bk. IX. Eve tells (659—63) Satan that she may not touch the forbidden fruit under pain of death, Satan affects (695) not to know what death is. He is “the father of lies.”

818. pledge; cf. the use of Lat. pignus.

823. Cf. VI. 877 (note).

825. pretences, claims; or ‘designs, ambitions’; cf. VI. 421.

829. unfounded, bottomless, lit. ‘having no base’ (Lat. fundus).

830. foretold; see 345—53.

833. purlieus, outskirts.

836, 837. surcharged, overfull. broils, turmoils; Fr. brouiller.

839—44. Cf. X. 397—409, where after the Temptation Satan bids Sin and Death make Mankind their prey and the Earth their possession—“There dwell and reign in bliss.” See Psalms xlix. 14.

842. buxom, yielding. Cf. V. 270, and The Faerie Queene, I. II. 37, “And therewith scourge the buxome aire so sore.” The phrase is a reminiscence, as Keightley noted, of Horace’s pete cedentem [‘yielding’] aera disco (Sat. II. 2. 13). embalmed; made fragrant; cf. balmy = ‘fragrant,’ from balm = ‘aromatic resin or oil.’

847. famine, hunger; “the cause for the effect” (Cowper).

855. might; the edition of 1678 (the third) has wight (from 613?).

868. Homer's θεοὶ πέλα ζῶοντες, Iliad vi. 138; cf. Comus, 2—6, and Tennyson, Ænone:

"the Gods who have attain'd
Rest in a happy place and quiet seats
Above the thunder, with undying bliss."

There is a similar passage in The Lotos-Eaters, 8.

869. As the Son sits at the right hand of the Father (v. 606, vi. 892); profane sarcasm seems intended.

880. The sound, especially the r sound, echoes the sense; see II. 594, 595, note.

883, 884. That Sin cannot close the gates is symbolical.

885. that, so that; cf. 719.

889. redounding, in clouds, volleys; Lat. redundare, 'to overflow.'

890. In this picture of Chaos, to be compared with Ovid's, Metamorphoses I. 5—20, Milton labours (as Masson notes) to convey to the reader an impression of the utter confusion of the scene described: heaping image on image, idea on idea, by which the imagination may be baffled (e.g. in 892—94), and the mind bewildered with an insistent sense of the inconceivable. And the rhythm heightens the effect. It is to this part of P. L. that M. alludes in III. 15—21.

891. "One would think the deep to be hoary," Job xli. 32. Perhaps secrets = 'secret places,' Lat. secretæ, here and again in 972 (Newton).

894—96. "All the ancient naturalists [i.e. men of science], philosophers, and poets held that Chaos was the first principle of all things; and the poets particularly make Night a Goddess, and represent Night or darkness, and Chaos or confusion, as exercising uncontrolled dominion from the beginning" (Newton). But in personifying Chaos as a distinct divinity Milton seems to have extended the classical conception. His epithets referring to the antiquity of Night ("the ancestress of gods and men") are drawn from the classics. (See Osgood, s.v. "Chaos" and "Night.") Nature, the created Universe.

898. The four "elements" are meant, Milton's terms for them being, I suppose, proverbial; cf. Drummond of Hawthornden, Flowers of Zion ("The Muses' Library" edition of Drummond's Works, II. 9). See 274, 275, note, 912, III. 714, 715 (closely parallel); and cf. Dryden, St Cecilia's Day, 1—10:

"From harmony, from heav'nly harmony
This universal frame [cf. 924] began.
When Nature underneath a heap
Of jarring atoms lay,

And could not heave her head,
 The tuneful voice was heard from high:
     Arise, ye more than dead.
 Then cold and hot and moist and dry
     In order to their stations leap,
     And Musick's pow'r obey."

899. mastery. The original editions have the curious form Maistrie, up till the fourth (1688), which changes to Mast'ry.

900. embryon, embryo; the semina rerum of Lucretius.

903, 904. unnumbered, innumerable. Barca...Cyrene, the chief cities of Cyrenaica in northern Africa, a region often treated as typical of sand. Cf. Fairfax, Tasso, XVII. 5, "From Syria's coasts as far as Cirene sands."

905, 906. levied, raised (Fr. lever), but also with the notion 'to levy troops'—cf. "warring winds"; it qualifies sands. poise, give weight to (Fr. peser). their...wings, i.e. of the winds. lighter, which would be too light but for the sand.

906, 907. i.e. the element, or champion, to whom for the moment most atoms cling, is victor.

910—27. Satan's pause is artfully contrived so as to enable the poet to describe Chaos without seeming to delay the narrative (Richardson).

911. As Nature, i.e. the Universe, was born out of Chaos (= "this Abyss"), so may she at last fall back again into Chaos. He is varying an old thought, that all things proceed from Nature and, perishing, pass back into Nature. Cf. Romeo and Juliet, II. 3. 9, 10:

"The earth that's nature's mother is her tomb;
 What is her burying grave that is her womb";

and Tennyson, Lucretius, "the womb and tomb of all, Great Nature" (from Lucretius v. 260, omniparens eadem rerum commune sepulcrum). The idea occurs also in Shakespeare's 86th Sonnet.

918, 919. i.e. standing looked. frith, channel, estuary, firth.

921, 922. Cf. Vergil's sic parvis componere magna solebam, Ecl. I. 24, and Georg. IV. 176, si parva licet componere magnis; so in VI. 310, 311, X. 305, P. R. IV. 563, 564. Bellona, the goddess of war; cf. Macbeth, I. 2. 54.

923. engines; probably cannon are meant.

924. frame, fabric, structure.

927. steadfast, i.e. according to the Ptolemaic system; cf. VIII. 32 ("the sedentary Earth"). vans, wings, Ital. vanni.

933. pennons, i.e. pinions, Lat. pennæ.

934. fathom; in the original edition fadom (cf. the Middle E. form

fadme), and M. himself evidently intended this spelling, since the ms. of Comus (in his own beautiful handwriting) has the cancelled line "And halfe the slow unfadom'd poole of styx" (i.e. Styx). The d sound gives a stronger sense of depth.

937. instinct, filled, charged with. nitre, saltpetre.

939. Syrtis, quicksand.

941. consistence, substance or mixture, of sea and land.

943—47. Cf. Herodotus III. 116, "The northern parts of Europe are very much richer in gold than any other region: but how it is procured I have no certain knowledge. The story runs, that the one-eyed Arimaspi purloin it from the griffins" (Rawlinson); and IV. 13, 27, where he speaks of "the gold-guarding (χρυσοφύλακες) griffins." Pliny (Nat. Hist. VII. 2) says that these Arimaspi live near the Scythians, "toward the pole Arkticke," and that they "maintaine warre ordinarily about the mettall mines of gold, especially with griffons, a kind of wild beasts that flie, and use to fetch gold out of the veines of those mines: which savage beasts strive as eagerly to keepe and hold those golden mines, as the Arimaspians to disseize them thereof, and to get away the gold from them" (Philemon Holland's translation, 1601, I. 154). See Lucan, Pharsalia III. 280, VII. 756.

The legend, which Sir Thomas Browne places among his Vulgar Errors, III. xi., may have had some connection with the fact that gold is found in the Ural mountains near which the Arimaspi were thought to dwell.

943. gryphon, a mythic monster, a sort of chimæra; "sum men seyn that thei han the body upward as an eagle, and benethe as a lyoune.... But a griffoun hathe the body more gret, and is more strong thanne viij. lyouns, and more gret and strongere than an C (i.e. 100) egles, suche as we han amonges us"—Sir John Mandeville, who knew a country where the "griffoun" was quite common. See The Faerie Queene, I. 5. 8. Jonson makes it a type of "swiftness and strength," Masque of Queens.

945. Herodotus (IV. 27) says that the name Arimaspi means 'one-eyed,' "in the Scythian language."

948. dense, or rare, i.e. matter now thick, packed close—now thin; raro e denso, as Dante says (Paradiso, II. 67, XXII. 141); "dense," or "condense" (VI. 353), and "rare" are exact opposites. The rhythm expresses the difficulty of Satan's journey.

958, 959. i.e. the nearest way to the point where darkness borders on light. There should be no comma after "lies."

959—67. This picture of the palace of Chaos is as conventional and classical as that of Sin. Cf. the cave of Death, thronged with personified Shapes of evil and disease (XI. 477—93); or the abode of Murder in Milton's Latin poem on the Gunpowder plot, In Quintum Novembris, 139—54. So Spenser describes the palace of Pluto: Payne and Strife at his side: Revenge, Treason, Hate hard by: Care guarding the door (The Faerie Queene, II. 7. 21—25). Such passages owe their similarity to their common origin, viz. Vergil's account of the realm of Pluto, Æneid VI. 273—81. Of 959—63 Pope has a most felicitous parody in The Dunciad, IV. (ad fin.); see also canto I. where he makes Dulness the "Daughter of Chaos and eternal Night." Indeed, all Pope's burlesque of epic machinery and style, in The Rape of the Lock and The Dunciad, derives, I think, more from Paradise Lost than from the classics. The same Miltonic influence is strongly felt in Gray's satirical Hymn to Ignorance, which starts, as his editors note, with a humorous echo of P. L. I. 250.

960, 961. pavilion, palace; see Psalm xviii. 11. wide...wasteful (= vast, desolate), Milton's favourite form of alliteration. Cf. Nat. Ode, 51, 64, Arcades, 47, Lycidas, 13, and compounds of wide; see VI. 253, XI. 121, 487, Il Penseroso, 75.

962. In Euripides, Ion 1150, μελάμπειλος is said of night.

963. consort; in Hesiod (Theogony 123) Night is the daughter of Chaos. It has been said that Milton sometimes makes his own mythology, e.g. in his genealogy of Mirth, L'Allegro, 1—8.

964. Orcus, Ades; Lat. and Greek names of Pluto, god of Hell.

964, 965. name of Demogorgon = Demogorgon himself; a Latinism. Demogorgon, a deity supposed to be alluded to by Lucan, Pharsalia VI. 744, and said to be first mentioned by name by Lactantius (fourth century A.D.); also to be mentioned by the Italian writers, Boccaccio, Boiardo, Tasso, and Ariosto.

Spenser makes Demogorgon the lord of Chaos—"Downe in the bottome of the deepe Abyesse"—The Faerie Queene, IV. 2. 47; Marlowe recognises him as co-ruler with Beelzebub of the nether world, Faustus, III. 18; Greene speaks of "Demogorgon, master of the fates," Friar Bacon, XI. 110, and "Demogorgon, ruler of the fates," Orlando Furioso; and he is an important character in Shelley's Prometheus Unbound. Apparently too he is identical with the "Great Gorgon prince of darkness and dead night," at the sound of whose name "Cocytus quakes, and Styx is put to flight" (The Faerie Queene, I. 1. 37). The name has been considered a corruption of δημουργός; it is at least noticeable that Demogorgon became the patron of alchemists. Thus Howell, in his Instructions for Forraine Travell, calls alchemists "devout Naturalists and Disciples of Demogorgon" (Arber's ed., p. 81).

967. "A thousand busy tongues the goddess bears"—Pope describing Fame (Temple of Fame).

977. confine with, border on.

983—86. Cf. iv. 665—67.

988. Anarch; cf. The Dunciad, iv. 655.

989. incomposed, disturbed, discomposed (Lat. incompositus).

993—98. See the closely parallel passage, vi. 871—74.

1001. our; so the original editions; changed by some to your. But by our Chaos proclaims himself an ally with Satan against their common foe: their cause is the same.

1004, 1005. Heaven, the sky of this world. chain; see 1051.

1006. Heaven; here the Empyrean is meant.

1007—9. Chaos, we see, directs Satan's course, as he had been asked (980), and wishes him good speed. Yet when Satan, after the Temptation, descends to Hell and announces to his followers the result of his mission (x. 460 et seq.), he pretends that Chaos had "fiercely opposed" (478) his journey.

1011. Cf. xi. 750.

1017, 1018. Argo, the vessel in which Jason and the 50 Argonauts sailed to Æa (afterwards called Colchis) to fetch the golden fleece. Bosporus, the Thracian Bosporus, now the Straits of Constantinople; connecting the Propontis (Sea of Marmora) with the Pontus Euxinus (Black Sea). At its eastern entrance, i.e. where it opens into the Black Sea, stood two rocks, one on either side, the Symplegades, so called (from Gk. συν + πλήσσειν, 'to strike'), because when a ship was passing through they clashed together and crushed it. By the advice of the seer Phineus and the help of Hera, the Argonauts managed to pass, and thenceforth the rocks were fixed motionless. Juvenal calls them concurrentia saxa (Sat. xv. 19), i.e. "justling."

1019, 1020. Scylla (660) and Charybdis were two rocks, close together, in the Straits of Messina between Italy and Sicily. The currents or whirlpools were so strong that sailors seeking to avoid the one rock were generally driven on the other: whence the proverbial line, from the Alexandreis of Philip Gaultier, incidit in Scyllam cupiens vitare Charybdim. Cf. Milton's pamphlet the Animadversions, 4: "you have rowed yourself fairly between the Scylla and Charybdis, either of impudence or nonsense," P. W. III. 67. It is a very common poetic allusion; cf. The Merchant of Venice, III. 5. 18—20.

larboard, the left side of a ship; Ulysses, by steering to the left, nearer to Scylla, thus avoided Charybdis on his right.

1028. a bridge; see x. 293 et seq.

1032, 1033. For the thought that Guardian Angels watch over men, see Comus, 216—20, 453—69, S. A. 1431. In The Christian Doctrine, I. 9, Milton deals with the ministry on earth of Angels. Todd quotes Richard III. v. 3. 175, "God and good angels fight on Richmond's side."

1034. Cf. IX. 107 (said of the stars), and 192. sacred; since "God is light," III. 3. Cf. Dante's lume santo in the Paradiso, IX. 7.

1037. glimmering dawn. Cf. Lycidas, 26, where the MS. shows that M. first wrote "Under the glimmering eyelids of the morne," but substituted opening—which heightens the personification.

1039. her outmost works, i.e. Nature's.

1042—44. holds, makes for; cf. Lat. tenere, which implies, also, reaching a destination (portum, terram etc.).

1048. undetermined qualifying heaven. "Its extent was such that from the portion that was seen the eye could not determine whether its margin was straight or curved" (Keightley). See X. 381. "Take a segment of a great circle, and you shall doubt whether it be straight or no" (Selden, Table-Talk, Reynolds' ed., p. 198).

1050. living sapphire; again in IV. 605. M. is fond of this use of living, exactly = 'vivid.' Cf. Dante's la viva luce of Paradise (XXIII. 31, XXXI. 46), and vivo lume (XXXIII. 110).

1051. golden chain; alluding to Homer's story of the golden chain of Zeus, suspended from Heaven, whereby he can draw up the gods, and the earth and sea, and the whole universe, though they cannot draw him down (Iliad VIII. 18—27). Cf. Chapman, Shadow of Night, "The golden chain of Homer's high device." Plato (Theatetus 153 C) interprets it of the Sun. It is curious to note how poets apply the story. Spenser uses it of the chain of Ambition by which men strive to rise in the world (The Faerie Queene, II. 7. 46, 47). Dryden, in his character of "The Good Parson," says:

"For, letting down the golden chain from high,

He drew his audience upward to the sky."

Milton himself in his Latin piece De Spherarum Concentu says that Homer meant the golden chain as a symbol of the chain of connection and design that runs through the universe; and Pope follows him (Essay on Man, I. 33, 34):

"Is the great chain that draws all to agree,

And drawn supports, upheld by God or thee?"

Jonson (Masque of Hymen—see his note) writes of marriage, "Such was the golden chain let down from heaven"; and Tennyson of prayer (Morte D'Arthur):

"For so the whole round earth is every way

Bound by gold chains about the feet of God."

Among prose-references we may add Bacon, The Advancement of Learning, I. i. 3, and II. vi. 1 ("that excellent and divine fable of the golden chain"); Drummond of Hawthornden's Platonic discourse on Death entitled A Cypress Grove (1623)—see "The Muses' Library" ed.,

II. 265; and Sir Thomas Browne: "There is a nearer way to heaven than Homer's chain" (Religio Medici, I. xviii.).

1052, 1053. i.e. the Universe, hung in space, looked in comparison with the Empyrean as small as some minor star which being close to the moon's superior light seems insignificant. Cf. Tennyson:

"a candle in the sun

Is all but smoke—a star beside the moon

Is all but lost" (Queen Mary, v. 1).

"This pendent world," as Newton notes, cannot mean the Earth, which Satan does not see till he has gained entrance through the outer surface of the Universe (III. 498—543).

In IV. 1000 M. uses a similar expression—"the pendulous round Earth"—in a different sense. There the Earth itself is meant, and "pendulous" expresses its relation ("self-balanced," VII. 242) to surrounding space within the Universe.

BOOK III.

The exordium (1—55), apart from its beauty of thought and diction, has a twofold interest—personal, in that it is touched with the pathos of Milton's resignation under his affliction of blindness; artistic, in that it is a fitting prelude to a fresh development in the action of the poem. Hitherto the scene has been the gloomy regions of Hell or Chaos: now our imagination is lifted to the Empyrean and the new-created Universe, still in its primal splendour. The transition from darkness to light is aptly marked by this celebrated introduction.

Lines 1, 2 and 21—26 are (I believe) the first lines quoted from Paradise Lost in any work by a writer contemporary with Milton. They are cited contemptuously in The Transproser Rehears'd, or the Fifth Act of Mr Bayes's Play, Oxford, 1673, by Richard Leigh of Queen's College (see Notes and Queries, IV. I. 456, 457); the title of which is an obvious echo of Marvell's controversy with Parker (see p. 366).

1, 2. Either Light was subsequent to the Deity, as being the first thing created by Him, or Light existed from Eternity equally with Him. See VII. 243—52 (with notes).

first-born; cf. VII. 244, and S. A. 70, "Light, the prime work of God, to me is extinct," and 83, "O first-created beam."

It has been well said that there is something peculiarly personal and sensitive in Milton's references to light.

2, 3. i.e. or may I, without blame, call ("express") thee co-eternal with the Deity? since; he gives his reasons (from Scripture) for terming Light "co-eternal." Cf. 1 John i. 5, "God is light," and 1 Tim. vi. 16, "Who only hath immortality dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto."

4. The passage in Thomson's Summer beginning, "How shall I then attempt to sing," is a typical example of the spell that Milton exercised over him and his contemporaries, especially in the sphere of blank verse.

7. hear'st thou rather, dost thou prefer to be called? A classicism; cf. Gk. κλῦειν, Lat. audire, as in Horace's seu Jane libentius audis (Sat. II. vi. 20). So M. in his Lat. poems, e.g. in the Epitaphium Damonis, 209, sive æquior audis | Diodotus; also in his prose-works, e.g. in Areopagitica, "what more national corruption, for which England hears ill abroad [κακῶς κλῦει, male audit], than household gluttony?" (P. W. II. 73).

9—12. Genesis i. 3—5. wert; an old preterite, cognate with was.

10. invest, enwrap; Lat. investire. Cf. I. 208.

12. won from the...infinite, formed out of the realm of Chaos. void, i.e. of form, not of matter.

13—15. wing...flight. His favourite metaphor, "wing" (like penna) being a natural emblem of that which uplifts the poet's genius. Cf. I. 14.

14. the Stygian pool, i.e. Hell. The phrase occurs in a cancelled line (early) of the Comus ms. Dante speaks of himself as having passed "from the deepest pool [dall' infima lacuna] of the universe," i.e. from Inferno, up to Paradise (Paradiso, XXXIII. 22—24).

long detained; the action of books I. and II. (up to 927) being laid in Hell.

16. utter...darkness, of Hell, as always in M. (cf. I. 72, v. 614): middle darkness, of Chaos. M. means that in II. 629—1055 he described the flight of Satan through Hell, and thence upward through Chaos towards Heaven. utter, outer.

17. i.e. with loftier strains than those of the Orphic Hymn to Night (one of the poems of unknown authorship attributed to the mythic Orpheus). M. says "other," implying 'greater,' because he regarded himself as literally an inspired teacher—perhaps in the same sense that the Hebrew prophets were inspired. See I. 17—26, note.

19. the Heavenly Muse, Urania, the power whom he invokes at the beginning of the poem (I. 6).

20, 21. An echo of Æneid VI. 126—29; cf. II. 432, 433. rare, seldom achieved. safe; carrying on the idea of "escaped" (14).

25, 26. drop serene...dim suffusion. See Appendix, pp. 682, 683. quenched; the metaphor of putting out a light; cf. S. A. 95.

orbs; used of the eye-balls; cf. oculorum orbes in Æneid XII. 670, and Gk. κύκλοι, e.g. in Sophocles, Antigone 974 (ὀμμάτων κύκλοι).

26—29. His love of literature, in particular classical poetry, has not failed. He is still devoted to those ancient poets inspired by the Muses (note the plural here and contrast 19) who haunted the “hill” of Helicon, with its “clear springs” Aganippe and Hippocrene (where was the famous “grove” of the Muses), and Parnassus with the famed Castalian fountain.

29. So Vergil (Georg. II. 476) describes himself as serving the Muses, ingenti percussus amore.

sacred; in the general sense ‘divine.’

29—32. But his love of the classics is exceeded by his love of Scripture. “Sion hill” (I. 10), and “Siloa’s brook” (I. 11) and the brook Kidron: these scenes and the literature associated with them—the Psalms of David and the works of the singers of Israel—are dearest to him. See the closely similar lines in bk. I. (6—13). For Milton’s preference of sacred Hebrew poetry to classical, cf. P. R. IV. 346, 347, where he makes our Saviour say that the works of Greek poets

“Will far be found unworthy to compare

With Sion’s songs, to all true tastes excelling.”

And in The Reason of Church Government, 11 (Preface), he pronounces “those frequent songs throughout the law and prophets...over all the kinds of lyric poesy...incomparable,” P. W. II. 479.

32. nightly. Milton was best inspired at night or daybreak. This is clear from VII. 28—30 and IX. 21—24. Newton in his Life of M. says that the poet’s widow, “being asked...who the Muse was, replied it was God’s grace, and the Holy Spirit that visited him nightly.” (Cf. Shakespeare’s famous 86th Sonnet.) Johnson refers to the statement in Richardson’s Life of Milton (1734), that M. “would sometimes lie awake whole nights...and on a sudden his poetical faculty would rush upon him with an impetus, and his daughter was immediately called to secure what came” (a similar story is told of Pope).

nor sometimes forget, and constantly call to mind; see v. 178, note.

33. those other two, i.e. Thamyris and Mæonides, poets as well as “prophets”—rather than Tiresias and Phineus, “prophets” alone. equalled...in fate, i.e. blind.

34. i.e. and would that I might be equal; a parenthesis.

so; probably = Lat. sic introducing an imperative clause, i.e. as a formula of wishing; cf. Horace’s sic te diva potens etc., Od. I. 3. 1—4. M. apparently uses this Latin “formula of invocation” several times; cf. P. R. II. 125, Lycidas, 19.

35. Thamyris; according to Homer, Iliad II. 595—600, a Thracian bard, who, for boasting that he could surpass the Muses in song, was deprived of his sight and of the power of singing. Plato mentions him together with Orpheus twice (Laws VIII. 829 E, Republic X. 620 A).

Mæonides, i.e. Homer's Mæonides, either as a son of Mæon, or as a native of Mæon, an ancient name of Lydia. Hence he is also called Mæonius. In his poems the Mæoniæ chartæ or Mæonium carmen. See also the praise of Queen Elizabeth an "Argument worthy of the Faerie Queill" (The Faerie Queene, II. 10. 3). Pope ironically laments that he cannot do justice to the merits of George II. (Satires, v. 1. 103).

"Oh! could I sing you on the Mæonian wing,

Your airy motions, your repose to sing!"

See also the quotation in Paradise Lost on p. 688. The tradition of Homer's blindness is mentioned as early as the Homeric Hymn to the Delian Apollo.

36. Tiresias, the blind prophet-killer of Thebes, famous through the Edipus Rex of Sophocles and many other works down to Tennyson's Tiresias. In De Ideis (1652), 26, M. refers to him as "the Theban seer whose blindness proved the best illumination"; so in the Second Defence (P. W. I. 236), where he is speaking of his own affliction.

Phineus, another blind prophet, king of Salmydessus in Thrace; best known in connection with the Harpies (Æneid III. 211—13), from whose torments two of the Argonauts freed him. In his second Letter to Leonard Philaras (Sept. 28, 1654) M. compares himself with Phineus, quoting the account of the prophet's blindness in the Argonautica of Apollonius Rhodius.

Dante was another sufferer, though from weakness of sight not blindness, and seems to allude similarly to the fact in the Inferno, II. 97—98, where the note in the "Temple" edition gives other references, e.g. the Vita Nuova, XL. 27—34.

38. numbers, verse. the wakeful bird, the nightingale, Milton's favourite bird, if we may judge by his many references to it. See IV. 602, 603, VII. 435, 436, Il Penseroso, 56—64.

44. human face divine; his favourite word-order; cf. 396, 439, 692. See I. 733, note.

45. Cf. I. 22, 23 ("what in me is dark" etc.). dark; an adj. = noun is common in M.; cf. 380.

50. and wisdom...shut out; an absolute construction, added rather loosely as a sort of climax to the whole sentence. Cf. Lycidas, 128, 129:

"Besides what the grim wolf with privy paw
Daily devours apace, and nothing said."

This elliptical idiom occurs in Milton's prose-works. Cf. the Animadversions, 4: "seeing the power of Thy grace is not passed away with the primitive times, as fond and faithless men imagine, but Thy Kingdom is now at hand, and Thou standing at the door" (P. W. III. 72, 90).

55. His favourite claim (in some degree, traditional with epic poets) to peculiar inspiration and novelty of theme.

57. Empyrean, Heaven, the abode of the Deity and his angels.

60, 61. the Sanctities, the divine beings; abstract for concrete. Editors refer to 2 Henry IV. iv. 2. 21.

61, 62. his sight, the sight of him. An allusion to the Visio Beatifica; see I. 684. Hooker, speaking of the three types of "angelical actions," says that the first is "most delectable love, arising from the visible apprehension of the purity, glory and beauty of God, invisible save only unto spirits that are pure," Ecclesiastical Polity, I. iv. 1. Cf. M. in The Christian Doctrine, I. 33, "Perfect glorification [of the righteous] consists in eternal life and perfect happiness, arising chiefly from the divine vision." Sir Thomas Browne has a fine passage on the idea (Christian Morals, III. xv.), and so has Drummond (A Cypress Grove), giving it a Platonic colouring (Works, II. 277, 278).

62—64. "Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person...sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high," Hebrews i. 3. See 138—42, 384.

69—76. The last lines of bk. II. described Satan reaching in his ascent from Hell the upper regions of Chaos and making his way towards the Empyrean, close to which he perceived the globe of this World hung in Chaos by that golden chain (II. 1051) which is fastened to the Empyrean. Now he has arrived at the "crystal battlements" (I. 742) that separate the Empyrean from Chaos, and is flying along them—of course, on the outside. Below him lies the globe of the World; he prepares to swoop down to its surface; by 422 he has done so.

70. the gulf, Chaos, "the main Abyss" (83). there, in Chaos.

71. this side, i.e. the side nearest to the Empyrean. The realm of Night (personified) lies in Chaos, between Hell and the Empyrean. Into the upper regions of this realm penetrates the light reflected from the battlements of the Empyrean, and forms a kind of half-light, "a glimmering dawn" (II. 1037)—what M. calls (72) a "dun" atmosphere, i.e. brownish, dusky (like Dante's l' aer bruno). See again 427—29.

72. sublime = Lat. sublimis in its literal sense 'aloft'; cf. II. 528.

73. The alliteration may be meant to indicate Satan's exhaustion.

75. Viewed from outside, this Universe appeared to be a solid, spherical mass of land, without sky (the sky which we see being supposed to be inside the "first convex" or outer crust).

76. uncertain; it being uncertain. This is an absolute construction modelled on the elliptical use of Lat. incertum, e.g. in Livy XXXI. 41. 2, clausurunt portas incertum vi an voluntate. Cf. IV. 593.

in ocean. So in II. 410 Satan speaks of the World as "the happy isle." Chaos, in which it hung, was a mixture of land and sea (II. 939, 940).

80—343. This Council in Heaven has been called a less dramatic counterpart to the Council in Hell in book II. It is perhaps to some of these speeches that Pope would have pointed for the justification of his famous sneer ("To Augustus," 99—102, Imitations of Horace):

"Milton's strong pinion now not Heaven can bound,
Now serpent-like in prose he sweeps the ground;
In quibbles angel and archangel join,
And God the Father turns a School-divine."

Addison showed, with more sympathy, the difficulty inherent in the subject: the poet here "dares not give his imagination full play."

82, 83. the chains. Cf. I. 48.

84. wide interrupt, with its wide division, i.e. between Hell and Heaven. interrupt; a past participle = Lat. interruptus.

90. assay, attempt.

93. glozing, flattering; with the idea of falsehood.

94. the sole command, i.e. to abstain from the forbidden tree.

100. Cf. Satan's own words, IV. 63—68. That the rebellious angels, like Adam and Eve, had free will, to obey or disobey, is emphasised in V. 525—43 and elsewhere. Cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 3, "in assigning the gift of free will, God suffered both men and angels to stand or fall at their own uncontrolled choice" (P. W. IV. 38).

101. failed. Bentley thought that M. dictated fell; cf. 102.

106, 107. Cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 4, "the acceptableness of duties done under a law of necessity is...annihilated altogether" (P. W. IV. 63).

108. "When God gave him [Adam] reason, he gave him freedom to choose, for reason is but choosing," Areopagitica (P. W. II. 74). Reason is speculative: will, practical—in fact, the power of putting reason into action. It is by reason that we choose the right course, by will that we take it. Such seems Milton's meaning.

129. the first sort, the fallen angels. suggestion, temptation; a common Elizabethan sense; cf. IX. 90.

135. ambrosial, delicious.

136. Cf. I Timothy v. 21, "the elect angels," which M. explains in The Christian Doctrine, I. 9, to mean "beloved, or excellent." See 360, VI. 374, 375. In P. L. this Scriptural word marks off the good angels from the revolted.

- 138—42. Cf. VI. 681, 682, note.
143. which, viz. his compassion, love and grace (=graciousness).
147. The hymns and songs are “innumerable,” not their “sound.”
150. should Man...be lost? ‘would it be right that Man should be lost?’ The original editions mark that it is a question.
- 153, 154. “That be far from thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked,” Gen. xviii. 25.
156. The name Satan means ‘adversary’; cf. Dante’s l’ antico avversaro (Purgatorio, XI. 20); and “foe” in 179.
159. return, i.e. to Hell.
163. abolish thy creation; as Beelzebub hoped (II. 368—70).
166. blasphemed, impiously spoken ill of.
168. “This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased,” Mat. iii. 17.
169. “The only-begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father,” John i. 18. Cf. 239, 279.
170. my word; referring to the use in the New Testament of ‘Word,’ Gk. λογος (Vulgate verbum), as a title of the Son; see 383, note. effectual might, i.e. power by whom the will of the Father was effected, e.g. in the creation of the World (John i. 1—3; cf. P. L. VII.).
176. lapsed, lost through man’s offence. forfeit, forfeited. The tone and wording of the line are legal; cf. 219.
177. exorbitant, excessive.
179. mortal, deadly; cf. I. 2.
- 183, 184. The doctrine of predestination here alluded to is discussed by M. at some length in The Christian Doctrine, I. 4.
- 185, 186. i.e. be warned of their state and advised to appease.
189. Perhaps M. refers to Ezekiel xxxvi. 26.
197. persisting; in a good sense = ‘continuing steadfast.’
safe arrive, i.e. attain salvation ultimately. Cf. Matthew x. 22.
206. The Serpent tempts Eve with the promise of godhead, IX.
208. Cf. Gen. iii. 5, “in the day ye eat thereof...ye shall be as gods.”
affecting, seeking to win; Lat. affectare, ‘to aim at.’
208. sacred and devote, utterly doomed. The words have practically the same meaning: sacred = Lat. sacer, ‘dedicated to a deity for destruction’; devote = Lat. devotus, ‘set apart as by a vow (votum)’ with the same object.
211. as willing, i.e. not less willing than able.
215. mortal crime, i.e. deadly; the use of mortal in its two senses (cf. 214) is an intentional quibble. Cf. I. 642, note, IV. 181.
- to save*, i.e. which of ye will be so just as to save the unjust?

(Newton). Cf. 1 Pet. iii. 18, "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust."

216. charity, love.

217. All the angels of Heaven shrink from the task of saving man, just as all the fallen angels—their leader excepted—shrank from undertaking the expedition to ruin man (II. 417—26). The Saviour himself must achieve the one work, as the Tempter himself the other (Newton). Dryden challenged comparison when he wrote The Hind and the Panther, II. 499—514.

218. "There was silence in heaven," Rev. viii. 1.

219. The metaphor of the passage being legal, probably patron = Lat. patronus in its legal sense, 'defender,' "advocate" (I John ii. 1). Cf. Minshew's old Dictionary (1625): "A Patrone, or defender... L. advocatus qui alterum defendit."

intercessor. "And he saw that there was no man, and wondered that there was no intercessor," Isaiah lix. 16.

225. "For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily," Colossians ii. 9.

226. dearest, most heartfelt, earnest.

227. passed, pledged.

231. For this favourite form of verse see II. 185, note, and cf. Hamlet, I. 5. 77, "Unhousel'd, disappointed, unaneled."

unprevented, unanticipated (i.e. by prayer); grace comes before man has prayed for her. prevent = Lat. prævenire, 'to come before.'

233. dead in sins; from Colossians ii. 13.

236, 237. me...me. For this emphatic repetition see VI. 812—19.

243. given me to possess. A Latinism; cf. I. 736, XI. 339.

244—65. Texts of Scripture referred to are: John v. 26; Psalms xvi. 10, 11, lxxviii. 18; Acts ii. 27; I Cor. xv. 26, 55; Col. ii. 15; Rev. xx. 14. In the speeches which he assigns to the Almighty or the Son M. employs largely the words of Scripture.

246. all; qualifying I in the previous sentence: 'I am his due—at least, all of me that can die.'

255. maugre, in spite of; O. Fr. maugre = modern Fr. malgré. show, i.e. to the Almighty.

258. ruin, hurl down. M. uses ruin = Lat. ruina in its literal sense 'fall.' Thus in I. 46 he speaks of the "ruin" of the angels from heaven, and in S. A. 1514, 1515 of the "ruin" of Dagon's temple, i.e. 'fall.'

266. Scan asp'ct, as usually in M. and Shakespeare; cf. IV. 541.

270. attends, awaits; cf. Fr. attendre.

271. admiration. wonder; cf. the verb in II. 677, 678.
275. under wrath; referring to the future, when man shall have incurred the Almighty's wrath by the disobedience of Adam and Eve.
276. complacence, pleasure, i.e. in whom pleasure is taken.
- 277, 278. An allusion to the proverbial phrase; cf. Julius Cæsar, III. I. 189, "Though last, not least, in love"; and King Lear, I. I. 85, 86, "our joy, Although the last, not least."
285. room, place, stead.
- 285—89. See 1 Cor. xi. 3, xv. 22 ("as in Adam all die").
- 290—94. Referring to the doctrine of imputed righteousness which M. deals with in the chapter "Of Justification," The Christian Doctrine, I. 22. He writes, "As therefore our sins are imputed to Christ, so the merits or righteousness of Christ are imputed to us through faith"; then he illustrates the doctrine from Scripture. Cf. P. L. XII. 407—10.
- 299, 300. giving to, yielding, submitting, to; somewhat similar is 2 Henry IV. I. I. 164, 165, "if you give o'er to stormy passion," i.e. yield to. Some interpret, 'giving himself.' so dearly, at such a cost.
306. equal to God. Philippians ii. 6.
- 312—41. Among the texts embodied in these lines are: Phil. i. 9, ii. 10; Mat. xxiv. 30, 31, xxviii. 18; 1 Cor. xv. 51, 52; 1 Thess. iv. 16.
317. anointed; alluding to the meaning of Messiah = 'anointed.'
- 318, 319. Cf. Horace's sume superbiam | quasitam meritis (Od. III. 30. 14, 15). merits, deserts.
319. Cf. Ephes. iv. 15, "the head, even Christ." So in v. 606.
320. All titles of the three Hierarchies of Heavenly beings. *Princedom*s = 'Principalities' (VI. 447), Gk. ἀρχαί. See Appendix, pp. 680—82.
326. i.e. from the four quarters of the compass. Cf. II. 516, note. See The Merchant of Venice, I. I. 168, and cf. Tennyson, Pelleas and Ettarre:
 "Then Arthur made vast banquets, and strange knights
 From the four winds came in."
327. cited, summoned.
328. doom, judgment. Cf. Romeo and Juliet, III. 2. 67, "Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!"; and Lucrece, 924, "From the creation to the general doom."
329. a peal, i.e. of the last trumpet (1 Cor. xv. 52). Cf. Nat. Ode, 155, 156.
330. Saints, righteous men; a favourite word in this sense with M. and with the Puritans; cf. 461, and XII. 200, note.
- 333—35. Based on 2 Peter iii. 12, 13, as to which Dr Salmon wrote—"Many parts of the Canonical Scriptures speak of fire as the future punishment of the wicked; but I do not remember any other place where it is said that the whole world itself shall be burned" (Introduction to New Test.). The doctrine is conspicuous in works like the Revelation of Peter which reveal the influence of the Second Epistle. M. recurs to it XI. 900, 901, XII. 546—51.

335. "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth," Rev. xxi. 1.

338. For the apparent accentuation (triumphing), see I. 123, note.

340. need, be necessary; cf. IV. 235.

341. "That God may be all in all," I Cor. xv. 28.

gods; M. applies this title (= 'angelic or divine being') alike to the "elect" and to the fallen angels (I. 116).

344—415. A parallel to the account in II. 521—628 how the fallen angels "spent their hours" (417) in Hell.

344—47. all the multitude...uttering; an absolute construction. The Angels are a "Chorus" such as M. contemplated for his drama on the subject of Paradise Lost (Dunster).

350. towards either throne; i.e. towards the Father and the Son. See the vision of "the four and twenty elders," Revelation iv.

353. amarant, the unfading flower; "immortal"; see XI. 78, note.

356. Perhaps the idea of the flower being transferred was suggested by the Rabbinical doctrine that after the Fall of Man "the Garden [of Eden], with its contents, was removed to Heaven" (Keightley).

357, 358. Alluding to the "pure river of water of life, clear as crystal" (xxii. 1), the "living fountains of waters" (vii. 17), mentioned in Revelation; "on either side of the river was there the tree of life" (xxii. 2).

359. Elysian, such as might grow in Elysium = in Vergil and other classical writers the region in which dwelt the souls of the good. Cf. Shelley, Prometheus, II. 2, "Elysian flowers, Nepenthe, Moly, Amaranth." Milton's 'Heaven' is, in the main, the 'Paradise' described by the early apocalyptic writings of Christianity; and in this 'Paradise' flowers are a conspicuous feature.

amber, clear, transparent as amber; one of those literary epithets (cf. P. R. III. 288, Gray, Progress of Poesy, 69) due to the classics; cf. Vergil's purior electro...amnis—Georg. III. 522.

362—64. 'Now the pavement was bright ("smiled") with roses in garlands which the angels threw down thick.'

363. "And before the throne there was a sea of glass, like unto crystal," Rev. iv. 6.

364. impurpled, made brilliant. Cf. Lycidas, 141, "And purple all the ground with vernal flowers."

smiled; cf. the use of Lat. ridere = 'to be bright, gay with,' e.g. as a field with flowers.

368. symphony, harmonious strains; cf. I. 712.

371. part; used in its musical sense, as in 'part-song.'

375—77. Cf. 3—8. The construction is—'Invisible, except when thou shadest...and thy skirts appear.'

380. dark with excessive bright. Scientifically a fact; as a figure of speech, an oxymoron (see IV. 314, note). Similar is v. 598, 599. Cf. Drummond's Hymn of the Fairest Fair (apostrophising the Trinity):

"Incomprehensible by reachless height,
And unperceived by excessive light."

Spenser had had the same idea; cf. An Hymne of Heavenly Beautie, 118, 119, 176—79.

381, 382. Cf. Isaiah vi. 2, "Above it stood the seraphims: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face." M. chooses the Seraphim as being the most lustrous, the "brightest" (667), of the Heavenly Orders; yet even they cannot bear the extreme radiance. See Gray's lines on Milton, Appendix, p. 683.

383. Cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 5, "certain it is...that the Son existed in the beginning, under the name of the logos or Word [see 170, note], and was the first of the whole creation" (P. W. IV. 80). That chapter ("Of the Son of God") reveals Milton's Arianism very clearly.

389. Cf. VI. 704.

391—99. Closely similar to the account of the battle in Heaven in which Satan and his host are overthrown by Messiah (VI. 831—92).

392. Dominations; the title (Gk. κυβήτῆρες) of one of the Orders of Heavenly beings.

395. frame, fabric; a favourite word with M.; cf. II. 924, v. 154.

398. thee only; since Messiah drove out the foe unaided (VI. 880).

406. Supply than or but; the main verb is offered (409).

413, 414. my song...my harp. Probably the speaker is intended to be the chorus of angels, regarded as one individual (in accordance with the constant practice of the Greek dramatists—cf. the choruses of S. A.); the reference to harp (cf. 365) makes this probable. But it is possible that M. himself is speaking.

416. starry sphere, the starlit sky of this World; so in v. 620.

418. opacous, gloomy, because hung in Chaos.

419, 420. first convex, the Primum Mobile or tenth sphere, formed of solid matter (cf. "firm," 418), and serving as the outer shell of the World, and so dividing from Chaos the nine other spheres (= "luminous inferior orbs") which are inside. See Appendix, p. 666.

422, 423. The Universe was so vast that its spherical shape was only perceptible from a distance; standing on its surface, Satan might have supposed it to be a plain. Cf. II. 1047, 1048.

429. glimmering; a favourite epithet of Tennyson; it suggests the faint light of early morning (II. 1037, Nat. Ode, 75) and twilight (I. 182, Il Penseroso, 27). The latter use is Gray's (Elegy, 5, "the glimmering landscape"—recalling Macbeth, III. 3. 5).

430. at large, freely, without restraint; cf. I. 790.

431—39. Upon the geography see Appendix, pp. 683, 684. The elaborate form of the simile is very characteristic. Like Vergil, M. often works a simile out in all its bearings. Here the comparison is very apposite; the vulture=Satan; the flocks=mankind, Satan's prey; the barren plains=the "continent" where he alighted. Addison dwells on the peculiar grandeur of Milton's similes, which almost always convey "some very great idea"—"some glorious image or sentiment." Dante's similes, much more numerous than Milton's, are less classical in form, and often drawn from homely subjects; sometimes he is very minute in the details.

432. snowy. The name Imaus is cognate with the Sanskrit himavat, 'snowy,' and survives in Himdlaya, 'the region of cold.'

434. yea-ling, newly born.

435, 436. Ganges or Hydaspes; both have their "springs" (i.e. sources) in the Himalayas. Drummond mentions the two rivers, as typifying India or the East, in the same couplet of Forth Feasting. Hydaspes was the classical name for the modern Jhelum. The form of the line is a favourite with M.; cf. 36, and I. 469, "Of Abbana and Pharphar, lucid streams."

438, 439. Newton quotes from Heylyn's Cosmography (the best known English geographical work of the 17th century), "the country [China] is so plain [flat] and level, that they have carts and coaches driven with sails"; and I find in Jonson's News from the New World: "Herald. Yes, but the coaches...go only with wind. Chronicler. Pretty! like China waggons." The following is from Staunton's Embassy to China (1797), cited by Todd: "The custom mentioned by some old travellers, of the Chinese applying sails to carriages by land is still, in some degree, retained. [He then quotes Milton's lines and continues:]

Those cany waggons are small carts, or double barrows, of bamboo, with one large wheel between them. When there is no wind to favour the progress of such a cart, it is drawn by a man, who is regularly harnessed to it, while another keeps it steady from behind, besides assisting in pushing it forward. The sail, when the wind is favourable, saves the labour of the former of these two men. It consists only of a mat fixed between two poles rising from the opposite sides of the cart. This simple contrivance can only be of use when the cart is intended to run before the wind" (II. p. 76).

The plural Chineses was in regular use during the 17th cent.; cf. the title of a work published in 1606, "An exact Discourse of the East Indians as well as Chyneses and Jauans" (see New English Dict.).

440. so; Milton's constant manner of completing a simile. Cf. IV. 166, 192, 819. sea; perhaps suggested by "sails" (439).

444—97. The germ of the whole idea lies in Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, canto 34, of which M. himself translates several lines in Of Reformation (P. W. II. 383). The passage represents Astolfo, the English knight, as being taken up in Elijah's chariot into the moon and led by St John

"Into a goodly valley, where he sees

A mighty mass of things strangely confus'd,

Things that on earth were lost, or were abus'd."

M. says that there is (as people thought) a Paradise of Fools (496), the rubbish-heap of the Universe: only it is situated, not in the moon (459), but on this outside of the globe where Satan is walking. And from the interior of the World it is approached thus (481—86): vain things and souls (448) mount upward from Earth past the ten spheres, reach the opening in the globe's surface, where the ladder leads up to Heaven (cf. 503 et seq.), and emerge on to the outside—when, lo! (486—89) cross-winds suddenly sweep them clean away from the ladder, and, whirled into space, they descend into their appointed Paradise, on the backside (494) of the globe.

The almost burlesque satire of the passage seems scarce in keeping with the dignity of an epic; it has too the demerit of improbability. Probably Milton's main purpose was to introduce the attack on the Church of Rome, carefully placed at the end as a climax. Hardly less bitter, though less direct, are his assaults on the Church of England; see IV. 193, note. He could have pointed to the precedent of Dante's invective against the Papacy, e.g. in the Purgatorio, XVI., and Paradiso, XXVII.

Milton's brother Christopher became a Roman Catholic; see Hearne's Collections, Doble's ed., I. 288, 289, II. 63.

For the Ariosto allusion see also Dryden's 2nd Prologue (1681) to the University of Oxford, lines 1—6.

444. store, plenty. "Store is no sore" (an old proverb).

449. fond, foolish; so fondly = 'foolishly' in 470.

451—54. Mainly a sarcasm against priestcraft. M., like Lucretius, detested "superstition," classing it with "tyranny"; see II. 59, note.

456. abortive, born before their time. unkindly, unnaturally.

457. in vain, at random, without purpose (Richardson).

459. some, viz. Ariosto. Cf. Pope, The Rape of the Lock, v. 113, 114, referring to Belinda's tress:

"Some thought it mounted to the Lunar sphere,

Since all things lost on Earth are treasur'd there."

460, 461. Apparently M. thought that the moon is inhabited; cf. VIII. 140—58. translated saints, e.g. Enoch (Gen. v. 24), Elijah (2 Kings ii.). middle; explained in the next line.

463—65. He means the "mighty men...men of renown," who were born of the "sons of God" and "the daughters of men" (Gen. vi. 4). In XI. 621—25 M. identifies the "sons of God" with the pious descendants of Seth; in v. 447 and P. R. II. 178, 179 he regards them as angels. Gen. vi. 4 has been interpreted in both ways. Dryden may have recollected these lines; cf. The Hind and the Panther, I. 341—44.

466, 467. See the fuller reference to the building of Babel, XII. 38—62. Sennaar = Shinar (Gen. xi. 2). M. uses the Vulgate form of the name; the Septuagint has Σενάαρ.

469—71. Empedocles, a Greek philosopher of Agrigentum in Sicily; 'flourished' about B.C. 444. "He threw himself into the flames of Mount Ætna, that by his sudden disappearance he might be believed to be a god; but...the volcano threw up one of his sandals and thus revealed the manner of his death" (Classical Dictionary).

Ætna; this adjectival use of names (to avoid 's followed by s) is common in Shakespeare; cf. "Philippi fields," Julius Cæsar, v. 5. 19.

471—73. Cleombrotus, a philosopher of Ambracia in Epirus; according to the legend, he drowned himself after reading Plato's description of Elysium in the Phædo, in order that he might exchange this life for a better. too long, i.e. to tell.

474. embryos, beings in an immature, undeveloped state. He uses embryon for the adjective; cf. II. 900, VII. 277. eremites = hermits; from Gk. ἐρημίτης, 'a dweller in a desert' (Gk. ἐρημία).

friar = Fr. frère (cf. frere in Chaucer), the distinguishing title of the mendicant orders, of which, till the 15th century, there were four; cf.

Chaucer, Prologue, 210, "alle the ordres foure." M. mentions three, the fourth being the Augustinian hermits or Austin Friars.

475. white, the Carmelites, so called after Mt Carmel, where the crusader Berthold established the order, about 1156. They wear a white cloak.

black, the Dominicans, an order of preaching friars (Fratres Prædicantes) founded in 1215 by St Dominic, a Spaniard; cf. 479. A long black mantle or cappa forms part of their dress.

grey, the Franciscans, founded in 1209 by St Francis of Assisi; cf. 480. They wear a grey gown of coarse cloth—what M. in his In Quintum Novembris, 81, 82, calls cineracea vestis, i.e. ash-coloured.

From their respective garbs the three orders were known in England as the White Friars, the Black Friars, and the Grey Friars.

476, 477. An allusion to the pilgrimages in the Middle Ages, to the tomb of Christ in the garden (John xix. 41) of the place Golgotha, where Christ was crucified.

478—80. Alluding to the belief that even laymen, if they died in friars' robes ("weeds") would pass into Heaven (Masson).

481—83. To understand these lines one must know something about the Ptolemaic cosmology; see Appendix, pp. 664—66.

A close parallel is Donne's Progress of the Soul, in which he describes how the soul ascends through the air, passes the planets (he names them) one after another, and so reaches Heaven.

481. the fixed, i.e. stars, set in the eighth sphere = Cælum Stellatum. Note that 'stars,' not 'sphere,' is the word understood: the stars in this sphere are fixed, but the sphere itself revolves—nay, is marked by the rapidity of its revolution (cf. v. 176, "orb that flies").

482, 483. i.e. that sphere which with its balance determines the amount of the swaying motion ("trepidation") so much talked about. See the notes on VIII. 130—40.

that, the well-known, Lat. ille. Scan crystalline.

talked, talked of; this contemptuous word rather implies that M. did not believe in the theory of the "trepidation."

that first moved, the Primum Mobile, or tenth sphere; cf. The Death of a Fair Infant, 39, "that high first-moving sphere."

484, 485. Intended as a sneer (cf. the depreciatory word "wicket") at the Roman Catholic doctrine of 'the power of the keys'; cf. Mat. xvi. 19, "And I will give unto thee [Peter] the keys of the kingdom of heaven." M. discusses the subject in The Christian Doctrine, I. 29. Other references to it in his works are Lycidas, 108—11; In Quintum Novembris, 101; and Areopagitica, where, ridiculing the Roman Catholic censorship of publications and the Papal imprimatur, he says: "as if St Peter had bequeathed them the keys of the press also as well as of Paradise!" (P. W. II. 60).

485—89. For a parallel to this idea see the extract from the English Faust-book (1592) in the Appendix, p. 663.

488. transverse, in a cross-direction, aside.

489. devious, out of their course; the epithet is transferred (by hypallage) from them to air (cf. 147).

490—93. All terms specially associated with the Roman Catholic Church. reliques, relics, like the remains of the bodies or clothes of Saints and Martyrs; Lat. reliquiæ. See the Prayer-Book, "Articles of Religion," xxii. beads, of the rosary. indulgences, such as the Roman Church grants. dispenses, dispensations. pardons, absolutions. bulls, papal edicts; so called from the round leaden seal, bulła.

493. the sport; alluding to Æneid VI. 74, 75, where Æneas begs of the Sibyl:

"But oh! commit not thy prophetic mind
To flitting leaves, the sport of every wind"

(ludibria ventis)—Dryden.

495. limbo, region.

496. Paradise of Fools; a proverbial phrase; cf. Romeo and Juliet, II. 4. 176.

501. travelled; some interpret 'tired.'

502. degrees, steps; cf. Julius Cæsar, II. I. 25, 26.

510. Gen. xxviii. 11—17. Probably Milton's notion of a stair connecting the Universe with Heaven was suggested by Jacob's dream; cf. the Paradiso, XXI. There is some verbal likeness (and possibly the same Scriptural allusion) in a cancelled passage of Comus, after line 215:

"I see yee visibly & while I see yee this dusky hollow is a paradise & heaven gates ore my head."

516. mysteriously, i.e. had a mystic, allegorical meaning.

517, 518. i.e. was drawn up and became "viewless" (=unseen).

518—22. He means the Crystalline sphere = the "wide Crystalline ocean" (VII. 271), "the glassy sea" (VII. 619), which the angels behold—through the opening (cf. 526—28) in the surface of the Universe—as they stand at Heaven's gate and look down the stairs (VII. 617—19). M. has already said that souls ascending Heavenward from Earth must pass this sphere (482).

521. wafted, carried: like Lazarus (Luke xvi. 22).

522. rapt, caught up: like Elijah (2 Kings ii. 11). Cf. P. R. II. 16, 17.

526—39. This is the only opening in the surface of the outer shell (Primum Mobile) of the Universe.

527. i.e. immediately above the site of the Garden of Eden.

530. though that, i.e. the second passage mentioned in 531. The Old Testament often speaks of angels visiting the Earth, and here we are told that there were two aerial paths for their descent, one leading straight down from Heaven on to Mount Sion, the other extending over the whole Promised Land.

534. his eye, viz. passed. choice regard, careful watch, look.

535, 536. i.e. "from Dan even to Beer-sheba" = from N. to S. of Canaan. Paneas, the later Greek name of Dan, a little S. of Mount Hermon, at the foot of which the Jordan has its chief source.

The form Beërsaba, instead of 'Beersheba,' illustrates M.'s avoidance of the sound sh in proper names; cf. I. 398, note. He often uses the Septuagint or Vulgate form. The Septuagint has Βηρσαβέε, the Vulgate Bersabee.

540. on the lower stair, at the bottom of the stairs.

541. scaled, ascended like a ladder (Lat. scala).

546. obtains, attains to, reaches (obtinēt).

547. discovers, unfolds; Fr. découvrir.

549. Was M. recalling to memory one of the Italian cities visited on that tour in 1638—39 to which his thoughts reverted so gladly? Perhaps Florence on which he had looked down from Fiesolé (see I. 289, 290, notes); or, yet more likely, Rome. The epithet "glistening" suggests an Italian scene. Cf. the famous description in P. R. of imperial Rome and the "glittering spires" of the Palatine (IV. 54).

551. To complete the sense, understand some words like "he (the scout) is seized with wonder" (Keightley).

552. though after, i.e. although he was familiar with the splendours of Heaven. For the Latinism (post cælum visum) cf. I. 573.

555—57. Standing at the topmost point of the globe, just at the opening, Satan can survey the whole interior of the Universe—from E. to W. (557—60), and from N. to S. (560, 561).

He is far above the night that we know on Earth simply because he is far above the sun. circling, surrounding. canopy; used somewhat similarly, of the sky in general, in Hamlet, II. 2. 311, and Coriolanus, IV. 5. 41. Cf. "cope" in IV. 992.

558—60. the fleecy star, Aries, the Ram—exactly opposite in the Zodiac (in the west) to Libra, the Balance (in the east). M. says that the constellation Andromeda is borne by Aries because it lies above Aries in the sky, though rather to the west. the horizon, i.e. of this Earth.

No poet, I think, conveys a sense of vast distance so acutely as does Milton, perhaps from his blindness, and these lines are a signal example of his gift; excelling perhaps in the suggestion of sheer remoteness and space even the simile of the ships (II. 636—43).

562. first region, i.e. the uppermost of the three "regions" (a technical term) into which mediæval physicists supposed the air to be divided; it was distinguished by the pure dry heat of its atmosphere.

563. and winds. In his downward flight Satan has passed through two spheres, the Primum Mobile and Crystalline. Now he is in the Calum Stellatum, moving up and down (cf. "oblique way") among the host of fixed stars (cf. 481). Till 573 we must picture him in this sphere.

564. marble, lucid, bright as marble = marmoreus; cf. Cymbeline, V. 4. 120, "the marble pavement," i.e. the sky, heavens.

565, 566. i.e. that at a distance seemed to be stars. A Greek idiom.

567. happy isles = those Islands of the Blessed, to which, according to an early Greek belief, favoured mortals passed without dying. Later these Fortunate Insulæ came to be identified with islands off the west coast of Africa (probably the Canaries). One of Ben Jonson's Masques is called "The Fortunate Isles."

568. i.e. the gardens (cf. Comus, 981—83, P. R. II. 357) in which grew the golden apples (IV. 250, Comus, 393—97) guarded by the daughters of Hesperus and the dragon Ladon. The Hesperidum Insulæ in which the gardens were commonly placed by writers have been identified with the Cape de Verde islands (so perhaps by M. himself in VIII. 631, 632). There is a hitherto unpublished poem, of some length, on The Hesperides by Tennyson, in his Life, and lines 981—83 of Comus are prefixed to it as motto.

571. above, more than—not 'over,' connoting place, since the sphere of the sun is below the sphere of the fixed stars; in fact, being the middle one of the spheres of the seven planets (cf. Troilus and Cressida, I. 3. 89—91), it is separated from the Calum Stellatum by three spheres, viz. those of Saturn, Jupiter and Mars (in that order).

574—76. Newton explains: up or down, north or south; by centre or eccentric, towards the centre, or from the centre...by longitude, east or west (cf. IV. 539). Other editors note (1) that M. leaves it undetermined whether the sun (cf. VIII. 122, 123) or the Earth is the centre of the Universe, i.e. whether the Copernican or Ptolemaic astronomy is right: (2) that he makes longitude = east to west, and breadth (561), i.e. latitude = north to south: a use which we just reverse.

577. aloof, apart from; rare as preposition.

580, 581. numbers, measures = Lat. numeri used of the measures of a dance. See VIII. 123—25.

compute days etc.; cf. Genesis i. 14. Plato speaks of the planets as created by the Deity εἰς διορισμὸν καὶ φυλακὴν ἀριθμῶν χρόνου, "for defining and preserving the numbers of time," Timæus 38 c.

586. virtue, efficacy; cf. 608. A favourite word with Dante; cf. the Paradiso, II. 68, 70, 113, 139. the deep, the lowest part of the Universe.

588—90. Probably he is thinking of Galileo, who in 1609 constructed a telescope ("optic tube") by which the spots on the solar disc were perceptible. See I. 288, note.

tube; the common 17th century word for the telescope; cf. Marvell's Satires ("To the King"):

"So his bold tube man to the sun applied,
And spots unknown in the bright star descried."

Sir Thomas Browne says: "Let intellectual tubes give thee a glance of things which visive organs reach not" (Christian Morals, III. xiv.).

592. The First and Second Eds. have medal here, but metal in 595.

593. informed, pervaded by, filled, inspired with. In this sense, which does not occur elsewhere in M., inform became one of the stereotyped, poetic words of the 18th century.

594. glowing iron, i.e. 'like iron glowing with fire.'

596—98. chrysolite...ruby. Exodus xxviii. 17—20. In verse 20 the Heb. tarshish, rendered "beryl" in the A.V., is a chrysolite according to the Septuagint and Vulgate; and in verse 17 the margin of the A.V. has "ruby" instead of "sardius."

to, to the full number of the twelve.

600. that stone = "the philosopher's stone"; cf. The Hind and the Panther, II. 112, 113.

601. philosophers, alchemists, who tried to compose a stone which would transmute other metals into gold. Cf. Reginald Scot, Discoverie of Witchcraft, 1584, xiv. 11, speaking of alchemists, "Now you must understand that the end and drift of all their worke is, to atteine unto the composition of the philosopher's stone, called Alixer": i.e. elixir.

602, 603. bind...Hermes, solidify and fix mercury or quicksilver. Cf. Ben Jonson's Mercury Vindicated from the Alchemists; the scene is "a Laboratory or Alchemist's-workhouse," Mercury appears, and Vulcan as the chief alchemist cries out—"Stay, see! our Mercury is coming forth...call forth our philosophers [cf. 601]. He will be gone, he will evaporate...Precious golden Mercury, be fixt: be not so volatile!" And later (speaking to his assistants): "Begin your charm, sound music, circle him in, and take him: if he will not obey, bind him."

Hermes; the Greek name of Mercury (Lat. Mercurius).

603—605. old Proteus; the prophetic old man of the sea (ἄλιος γέρον). To escape prophesying, he would transform himself into "various shapes" (cf. Protean = 'shifting, changeable'); but when he was firmly seized, as by Menelaus (Odyssey IV. 454, 455) and Aristæus (Georgic IV. 437—40), he would return to "his native form" and foretell the future. Milton uses this legend to illustrate the processes of alchemists: the matter on which they experiment is, like Proteus, transformed by being drained through alembics (= 'limbecs') or stills, till at last they restore it to its original ("native") form.

call up. According to legend, no one had this power over Proteus: he only issued from the sea of his own accord, at midday, to sleep on the shore. But, to emphasise the "powerful art" of the alchemists, M. suggests that they might even summon up Proteus at their will.

606. here, in the sun: if the sun's heat can produce such marvellous effects on the far-off Earth (611), how much more on its own orb! The sun is compared with an alchemist in King John, III. I. 77—80 (Newton).

607, 608. breathe...elixir, i.e. exhale a force similar to that life-prolonging force or principle called elixir vitæ, which the alchemists believed to be contained in a tincture of gold called aurum potabile = the "potable gold" of 608.

610. i.e. though mixed with moisture which weakens his power.

611. here, on Earth. in the dark, underground. precious things, precious stones, metals. "It was the belief of those times that these were produced by the influence of the sun" (Keightley). Cf. Dryden's Annus Mirabilis, st. 3, with his footnote: "Precious stones at first are dew condensed, and hardened by the warmth of the sun or subterranean fires." Dryden's editor in the Clarendon Press Series gives other references (p. 244). The idea seems to be present in Pope's Moral Essays, I. 141—48, II. 285—92, and Collins's Ode to Liberty (end).

613. gaze; often transitive; cf. v. 272, VIII. 258. Similarly the noun is used in the sense of a thing gazed at; cf. Macbeth, v. 8. 23, 24:

"Then yield thee, coward,

And live to be the show and gaze o' the time."

616—19. "Where Satan was,—i.e. on the Sun itself,—all was sunshine without visible shadow, just as, on Earth, at the equator at noon, the Sun's beams striking vertically downwards, in the self-same manner that they were now shooting directly upwards, cause opaque objects to have no slanting shadow round them" (Masson).

617. This position of the sun is technically called his culmination.

620. visual ray = 'power of seeing'; light which makes sight possible is put for sight itself. Cf. S. A. 163.

623. "And I saw an angel standing in the sun," Rev. xix. 17. Young (Night Thoughts) says, "A Christian dwells, like Uriel, in the sun."

625—28. Cf. The Passing of Arthur, 384—86 :

"the light and lustrous curls
That made his forehead like a rising sun
High from the dais-throne";

and Enone :

"his sunny hair
Cluster'd about his temples like a God's."

Tennyson has it too in Tithonus.

tiar, crown. illustrious, bright (Lat. illustris). fledge, feathered.

628. charge, office, duty; cf. 688.

634. casts, plans; perhaps the metaphor of cast = 'calculate.'

637. i.e. not very young, yet youthful-looking (638); or 'not one of the great Cherubim' (prime = 'chief').

643, 644. habit, dress, Lat. habitus; probably in apposition to wings, as Milton's angels are always "feathered" (v. 284), not clothed (Newton). succinct, literally 'girt up'; hence 'ready, prepared,' taken with habit = "wings." decent, graceful, becoming.

648, 649. In the chapter (1. 9) of The Christian Doctrine on angels, M. says, "Seven of these, in particular, are described [i.e. in Scripture] as traversing the earth in the execution of their ministry." They are "the seven angels which stood before God," Rev. viii. 2, "the seven Spirits which are before his throne," Rev. i. 4. Of these Uriel was one. He is mentioned four times in 2 Esdras, and in three places (iv. 1, v. 20, x. 28) is called "Uriel the angel," but in the fourth (iv. 36) "Uriel the archangel." That he was "regent of the sun" (690) and dispenser of heat was a tradition, due probably to his name which signifies 'the fire of God.' Thus Heywood says that the four quarters of the world are assigned to the government of four angelic beings, and "The South, whence Auster comes, rules Uriel" (Hierarchie of the Blessed Angells, 1635 ed., p. 214). There is a passage to the same effect in Scot's Discourse on Devils (1584), Nicholson's ed., p. 527. Cf. too Henry More (Song of the Soul, Cambridge ed., 1647, p. 53):

"The fiery scorching shafts which Uriel

From Southern quarter darted with strong hand."

650—53. "Those seven: they are the eyes of the LORD, which run to and fro through the whole earth," Zechariah iv. 10.

654. The sentence introduces Satan's reason for asking information of Uriel: he does so because Uriel, as chief "interpreter" of God, is likely to know about the new Universe and its inhabitants. But strictly the sense is never completed; it takes a fresh turn in 662.

655. Only these seven archangels may come so near to the Deity.

656. authentic, authoritative, because received at first-hand, i.e. from God himself. Gk. αὐθέρης, 'one who does a thing himself.'

657, 658. Uriel brings the command of God to the inferior angels, who await it at a distance. attend; cf. 270.

659. here, in the sun.

667. Seraph; strictly not applicable to Uriel (an archangel).

670. i.e. but hath his choice to dwell in all these orbs.

674. graces, favours, marks of grace.

681. unperceived, not discovered, undetected.

686—89. A fine and just allegory that a wise man may be deceived through the very greatness of his nature: for he is filled with high thoughts, not mean suspicions: which makes him trust his fellow-men, and credit them with being as honest and true as himself.

Had M. not dwelt on the power of hypocrisy it might have seemed strange to us that even Uriel should be deceived (Newton).

699. M. always accents empýreal (but empýrean).

704. had in remembrance; a Scriptural phrase; Acts x. 31.

708. I saw. Uriel must have been among the angels who accompanied Messiah when he went forth to create the World, VII. 192—215. This rapid sketch (708—21) prepares us for the full narrative of the creation in book VII.; such links between the different books are an important element in the construction of the whole. The lines reveal the influence of Plato's account of the creation (Timæus) and of Ovid's description of Chaos (Metamorphoses I. 5 et seq.). For Milton's knowledge of the Timæus cf. v. 580—82, note.

709. this World's material mould, i.e. the substance whereof the World was made, being matter in its primal state; see v. 471, note.

712. his...bidding, viz. "Let there be light," Gen. i. 3.

713. order from disorder. Εἰς τάξιν αὐτὸ ἤγαγεν ἐκ τῆς ἀταξίας, Plato, Timæus 30 A; id ex inordinato in ordinem adduxit, Cicero, De Universo 3 (a translation of parts of the Timæus). Compare the discourse on order in canto I. of the Paradiso, e.g. 103—105: "All things whatsoever observe a mutual order; and this is the form that maketh the universe like unto God"; also XXIX. 22—33. See also Bacon, The Advancement of Learning, II. 25. 20.

715. i.e. the four elements or constituent parts of which all things were thought to consist. See II. 274, 275, 898, notes.

cumbrous; the epithet points the difference between them and the "ethereal" fifth element. Cf. Batman (1582), "Heaven is the fift Element, severed from the nether Elements, and distinguished by propertie of kinde: for it is not heavie, for then it might come downward" (p. 120). flood, water.

716. M. refers to Aristotle's conception of a fifth element called "ether," and he introduces the two main points of Aristotle's theory: (1) that "the ether fills the celestial spaces, and of it the spheres and stars are made" (cf. 718, 721); (2) that "the nature of the ether... adapts it especially for circular motion" (cf. "orbicular," 718), whereas the motion of the four elements is vertical, up and down. Ueberweg, from whose summary of Aristotle's views the foregoing quotations are made, says, "Ether is the first element in rank [i.e. according to Aristotle]; but if we enumerate, beginning with the elements directly known by the senses, it is the fifth, the subsequently so-called πέμπτον στοιχείον, quinta essentia."

It is disputed whether this "fifth essence" ought to be called an element, since it lacks the principle of contraries that belongs to the four elements; and M. does not apply the title "element" to it. Practically he identifies the "fifth essence" or "ether" with Light (cf. VII. 243, 244), though "ether" (Gk. αἰθήρ, from αἰθεῖν, 'to glow') rather implies very bright atmosphere.

Heaven, sky; cf. a definition of "ether" cited by G. H. Lewes from an Alexandrian treatise: "Ether is the substance of the heavens and the stars; so named because of its eternal circular motion" (an allusion to the false derivation of αἰθήρ from αἰεῖν, 'always' + θεῖν, 'to run').

717. spirited, animated.

718. orbicular, with circular motion.

721. i.e. what remained of the ether after the stars were made.

730. See VII. 375—78, and cf. Hamlet, III. 2. 167, "moons with borrowed sheen"; and Drummond, Flowers of Zion:

"The moon moves lowest, silver sun of night,

Dispersing through the world her borrowed light."

triform, referring to the three phases of the moon—crescent, full and waning. But there is also an allusion to Lat. triformis as an epithet of the moon indicating her threefold capacity as Luna, Diana and Hecate; cf. Horace's diva triformis, Od. III. 22. 4. So in Ben Jonson's Masque of Queens the moon is addressed as "thou three-formèd star...to whose triple name...we incline"; cf. A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v. 391, "By the triple Hecate's team."

737. Cf. v. 360, "As to a superior nature, bowing low."

739. coast, region; as often in M.

740. the ecliptic, i.e. "as then understood, the Sun's orbit round the Earth" (Masson).

741, 742. An instance of Milton's power of making the sound an echo to the sense. The rapid movement of the latter half of 741 conveys an impression of Satan's swift descent, while the slow, measured rhythm of 742 suggests rest.

Niphates, 'the snowy range'; a mountain of Armenia, part of the Taurus range—on the borders of Assyria (IV. 126).

BOOK IV.

This book has been described as "the most varied of all in interest and beauty." It introduces, at last, "Man, the central figure of the Epic," and straightway (1—8) "raises the horror and attention of the reader."

1, 2. O for, i.e. would that that voice had sounded. he who, St John. See Rev. xii. 12, "Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath." Apocalypse, revelation, 'uncovering'; Gk. ἀπὸ, 'off' + καλύπτειν, 'to cover.' heard cry, i.e. the words "Woe to the inhabitants on Earth!"

3. then when; M. uses this emphatic phrase often; cf. 838, 970. the Dragon, Satan; cf. "The old Dragon," Nativity Ode, 168. The title is from Rev. xii. 7 and means 'Serpent' (Gk. δράκων).

10. i.e. the tempter before he was the accuser. Cf. Rev. xii. 10, "the accuser of our brethren is cast down." The word devil is a corruption of Greek διάβολος, 'slanderer,' from διαβάλλειν, 'to slander.'

11, 12. These lines give the main motive of Satan's action against man. wreak...his loss, avenge himself for his loss.

12, 13. Contrast III. 740. The nearer Satan approaches to the scene of his task the more he realises its enormity and peril, and the less his confidence becomes.

20—23. For this conception of Hell cf. 75—78 and see I. 254, 255.

24, 25. i.e. rouses the memory of what he was and the thought (understood from memory) of what he is and will be. So Samson Agonistes is beset by thoughts of "Times past, what once I was, and what am now," S. A. 22. In both passages, but more particularly in the line in S. A., the influence is clear of Dante's famous words: "There is no greater pain than to recall a happy time in wretchedness," Inferno, v. 121—23. It has been shown that Dante paraphrased the sentiment (an obvious one) from Boethius' De Consolatione Philosophiæ, and that Chaucer (Troilus and Cresside) had anticipated Milton in imitating Dante; the latter being "the poet" of Tennyson's familiar couplet in Locksley Hall:

"This is truth the poet sings

That a sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things."
See also Sir Thomas Browne, Christian Morals, II. x. Classical parallels have been found in Pindar and Thucydides.

25. what must be worse, i.e. how he must become worse. One of the most powerful features of Paradise Lost is the presentment of the gradual debasement and decline of Satan as the evil he works against man masters himself—"back recoils."

27, 28. Eden...pleasant. "Eden" means 'pleasure.' Cf. 132.

31. much revolving, pondering many things (multa volvens). The speech that follows throws much light on Milton's conception of Satan.

32—41. The lines written as early as 1642; see Introduction. Addison considered this speech (32—113) "the finest ascribed to Satan in the whole poem."

35. One of the most familiar quotations from Milton. Cf. Pope, Epistles, III. 281, 282:

"Blush, Grandeur, blush! proud Courts, withdraw your blaze!
Ye little stars! hide your diminished rays."

37—39. Before his fall Satan was lustrous as the sun itself: now his splendour is faded and wan (835—40, 870).

40. worse; because it adds fuel to the flame of pride (Hume).

43. In bk. v. when he is inciting the angels to rebel Satan pretends that he and they are "self-begot, self-raised" (860), i.e. not created by the Almighty and so not justly his servants; cf. I. 116.

45. upbraided, reproached; cf. James i. 5.

50. sdeined, disdained.

51. quit, pay off, settle. Burke (who quotes Milton much) speaks of "the immense, ever-growing, eternal debt, which is due to generous Government from protected freedom"—Conciliation with America (Payne's ed., p. 230).

55—57. On the one hand, true gratitude is in itself payment: on the other, a grateful man, though he may formally have discharged his debt, still retains a sense of indebtedness to his benefactor. Bentley compared Cicero's sentiment, gratiam autem et qui retulerit habere, et qui habeat retulisse (De Officiis II. 20), i.e. he who has repaid an obligation is still conscious of it, and he who is conscious of it, his obligation has repaid it.

66, 67. Cf. III. 102.

73. me miserable! Latin me miserum!

79. Satan addresses himself; or possibly the Almighty. Cf. 79, 80. Cf. Hebrews xii. 17, "he found no place of rest."

81, 82. i.e. disdain forbids me (to use) that word "miserable."

84. other...other; see x. 861, 862, note.

87. abide, suffer for.

90. advanced, raised to eminence; it qualifies me in 89. Cf. 359.

94. act of grace, doing penance, asking pardon (cf. Fr. grace).

97. violent, extorted by compulsion. void, of no effect, null.

Burke quotes these lines, 96, 97, with fine effect in his speech on Conciliation with America just before the other Milton allusion (line 51, note).

110. Just as evil is to be his good, so later (IX. 122, 123) he confesses, "all good to me becomes Bane" (i.e. evil).

112. by thee; repeated for emphasis. more than half; since he rules Hell already and hopes to rule the World, thus leaving the Almighty only Heaven. Cf. x. 375—382.

114, 115. i.e. each of the three passions—anger, envy, despair—dimmed his face which was three times changed with the paleness caused by them. Cf. such expressions as 'pale with anger,' 'pale with envy.' Newton notes that for ire the Argument of the book has fear. passion; used by M., as by Shakespeare, of any strong emotion, deep feeling. pale=paleness.

116. borrowed; see III. 634—44.

118, 119. An allusion perhaps (as certainly in VI. 788, IX. 729, 730) to Aeneid I. 11. Cf. The Faerie Queene, II. 8. 1:

"And is there care in heaven? And is there love
In heavenly spirits to these creatures base?"

123. couched with, united with; it implies lying hid (Fr. couché).

124—30. Cf. Uriel's words, 564—75.

126. the Assyrian mount, Niphates; see III. 742.

132. Eden...Paradise. Masson says: "Eden is the whole tract or district of Western Asia [see 210—14] wherein the Creator has designed that men should first dwell; Paradise is the Happy Garden [208—10] situated in one particular spot of this Eden—on its eastern side." Cf. Gen. ii. 8, "God planted a garden eastward in Eden." Paradise=Gk. παράδεισος, 'a park'; a word of Persian origin.

134. champain head, an open, level summit of open land.

The garden occupies a plateau or table-land, circular in shape (VIII.

304) and surrounded by a grassy mound or wall (143). On the inner side of this mound is a circling row of fruit trees; their tops are visible from the outside. On the outer side of the mound the hill slopes steep down, covered with shrubs and trees, the tops of which, though lofty, are below the level of the mound and so do not obstruct Adam's view from it over the plain beneath.

This idea of setting the Garden on the summit of a hill is traced to Ezekiel xxviii. 13, 14, "Thou hast been in Eden the garden of God... thou wast upon the holy mountain of God." Dante and Ariosto had previously given the Garden a similar site (Keightley).

Thus when Adam meets and converses with Dante in Paradise, he says that he was placed by God "in the uplifted Garden" (nell' eccelso giardino)—Paradiso, xxvi. 109, 110. See also the Purgatorio, xxviii., where Dante reaches and describes the Garden, which crowns the summit of the Mount of Purgatory—an obvious piece of symbolism. Collins has the allusion in the striking passage about Milton, in his Ode on the Poetical Character, 3.

138, 139. Cf. 693, 694. The second line is intended to suggest variety. Cf. II, 621.

140. ranks; like the ascending tiers of seats in an amphitheatre; cf. P. R. II. 294. Perhaps Vallombrosa was in Milton's thoughts; see I. 303, 304 (note). Verbally ("sylvan scene") there is just a suggestion of Aeneid I. 164, 165.

151. Cf. Comus, 992, "Iris there with humid bow" (=the rainbow).

153. landskip, landscape.

of, after, following upon; cf. Wordsworth, Recluse, "Happier of happy though I be." The idiom is modelled on the use of ἐκ in Greek and ex in Latin to express one condition following on another; cf. e.g. τυφλὸς ἐκ δεδορκότος (Sophocles, Œdipus Rex 454) or Horace's ex humili potens (Od. III. 30. 12). Cf. VIII. 433, X. 720, 723, XII. 167.

156. gales; the conventional 18th century word for a gentle wind, in poems like Gray's Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College (15—20); Collins's Eclogues.

158. native, i.e. of the trees, flowers etc.; implying 'natural, not artificial.'

159—65. "The fragrance thus wafted out to sea, sometimes to a distance of twenty or more miles, is well known to every sailor who has been in the West Indies or in the Indian Archipelago" (Keightley). Editors quote various similar allusions in classical, Italian, and other writers, e.g. Waller (Night-piece):

"So we the Arabian coast do know,
At distance, when the spices blow."

Diodorus Siculus (III. 46) describes how in spring-time, when the wind is from the land, the fragrance of the myrrh and similar trees reaches the passing vessels, even far out to sea. Probably M. had this special description in mind, as it is removed only a few chapters from that account of Ammon and Amalthea which was the undoubted source of 275—79.

161. Mozambic; more commonly Mozambique; a Portuguese province on the east coast of Africa, opposite Madagascar.

north-east; rather north, according to modern geography.

162. Sabaean, of or from Saba = Sheba.

163. Araby the Blest = Gk. Ἀραβία ἡ εὐδαίμων, Lat. Arabia Felix, each epithet indicating the fertility of the region. The notion of the fragrances and spices of Arabia—myrrh, frankincense etc.—is a commonplace of poetry; cf. Lady Macbeth's famous "all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand" (v. 1. 57, 58).

166. so; his favourite completion of a simile; cf. 192, III. 440.

167—71. There is a similar allusion in v. 221—23 to the story of Tobias and the evil spirit Asmodæus told in the Apocryphal Book of Tobit. Tobias was sent on a journey by his father Tobit to fetch ten talents of silver deposited with a friend in Media. The angel Raphael appeared to Tobias in human form, acted as his guide, and bade him marry a Jewish maiden, Sara, who lived at Ecbatana in Media. Her seven husbands had been destroyed in succession by Asmodæus who was in love with her. To escape their fate, Tobias was instructed by Raphael to burn the heart and liver of a fish, since the smell ("fishy fume") would drive away the spirit. This he did after his betrothal to Sara, and the plan succeeded: for Asmodæus "fled into the utmost parts of Egypt, and the angel bound him" (chap. viii.).

Cf. Reginald Scot, Discoverie of Witchcraft (1584), speaking of burnt incense as a charm against evil spirits: "wheresoever the fume or smoke thereof shall come, everie kind and sort of devils may be driven awaie, and expelled; as they were at the incense of the liver of fish, which the archangel Raphael made" (bk. xv. chap. 18). Dante has the allusion, calling Raphael "him who made Tobias sound again" (Paradiso, IV. 48). Sir Thomas Browne thought the story not quite "naturally made out" (Vulgar Errors, I. 10).

168. Asmodæus, one of the rebellious angels expelled from Heaven; called by M. Asmadai in vi. 365 and Asmodai in P. R. II. 151—forms closer to the Heb. Aschmedai, 'the destroyer.' He is thought to be connected with the Aeshmā Daevā (an evil demon) of the ancient Persian religion. He is sometimes taken as a type of lust, perhaps through the story in the Book of Tobit; cf. P. R. II. 150—52, and

Tennyson, St Simeon Stylites, 159, "Abaddon and Asmodeus caught at me."

170. with a vengeance; an intensive phrase, used here with a certain grim humour = 'in all speed.' Cf. Coriolanus, II. 2. 6, "he's vengeance proud," i.e. intensely; but there the use is more colloquial.

172. savage, wild; cf. P. R. III. 23, "savage wilderness." It is derived through the French from Lat. silvaticus, 'woody.'

176. perplexed, made difficult (or entangled).

177. that passed, i.e. that might have passed.

181. bound...bound. Cf. I. 642 (with the note). Here Satan's contempt of the barrier is expressed.

186. secure; implying a false sense of security; cf. Lat. securus.

192. Cf. the parable of 'the Good Shepherd,' John x.

193. One of Milton's prose-works was a treatise on "The Likeliest Means to remove Hirclings out of the Church" (1659). It seemed to him wrong that ministers of religion should receive salaries, and he was ever ready to bring the charge of avarice and love of lucre against the clergy of the Church of England. Cf. XII. 507—11, and the denunciation (appropriately assigned to Saint Peter—cf. I Pet. v. 2) in Lycidas of the false, greedy shepherds who "Creep, and intrude, and climb into the fold" (115). We must remember that he speaks as an enemy, a bitter enemy, of the English Church. lewd, base.

194. the Tree of Life; Genesis ii. 9.

196. i.e. in the shape of a cormorant, chosen because a ravenous bird of prey (cf. III. 431) and thus symbolical of Satan himself; cf. Richard II. II. 1. 38, Coriolanus, I. 1. 125. As a sea-bird it does not seem very appropriate in Paradise; but cf. Isaiah xxxiv. 11 (where, however, 'pelican' is the correct rendering).

198. virtue, efficacy; cf. 671 and see III. 586, note.

199—201. well used. What use could Satan have made of the tree? He was already immortal. Perhaps M. means that if Satan had eaten of the tree's fruit its saving power might have given him true life—a regeneration of spirit that, leading to repentance, would have enabled him to regain his true archangelic immortality.

203. perverts; the subject is he understood from "before him."

210—14. According to these limits, which indicate, however, only its eastern and western points, Eden lay in Syria and Mesopotamia—mainly in the latter.

211. Auran, or Hauran, a district of Syria, about 50 miles S. of Damascus; Gk. Αὐραῖρος. Probably M. remembered that it is mentioned in Ezek. xlvii. 16, 18, as an eastern bound of Palestine.

212. Seleucia; long the capital of Western Asia; on the right bank of the Tigris, about 20 miles S.E. of the modern Bagdad; sometimes called Seleucia ad Tigrin or Seleucia Babylonia. Here, and again in P.R. III. 291, M. terms it "great Seleucia" to distinguish it from other cities of the same name, such as the Seleucia near Antioch. It was built by Seleucus, a Macedonian who became one of Alexander's generals, and about 312 B.C. founded the dynasty of the Seleucidæ, kings of Syria (cf. "Grecian kings").

213, 214. A second description of the site of Eden: it was in that region of Telassar (or Thelasar) where the "children of Eden" dwelt (2 Kings xix. 12, Isai. xxxvii. 12). They "appear from the Assyrian inscriptions to have inhabited the country on the east bank of the Euphrates, about the modern Balis. Here they had a city called Beth-Adina, which was taken by the Assyrians about B.C. 880" (Speaker's Commentary).

219. blooming, bearing luxuriantly.

223. "And a river went out of Eden to water the garden," Gen. ii. 10. In IX. 71—73 M. identifies this river with the Tigris.

224. shaggy; as a wood-covered hill appears, seen sideways; see VI. 645, note.

225—35. The river flowing through Eden reaches the hill on the level summit (cf. 134) of which is Paradise. Part of the river goes straight through by a subterranean passage and issues in the plain (cf. 145) on the other side. But part of its water is drawn up through the hill to the surface in the form of a fountain, the waters of which become rills. These rills irrigate Paradise and then, uniting into a water-course, run down the "hairy side" (135) of the hill to join the rest of the river where it emerges from its underground channel. Then the whole river divides into four great streams.

233. See Genesis ii. 10—14; cf. Tennyson's Enid:

"And never yet, since high in Paradise
O'er the four rivers the first roses blew,
Came purer pleasure unto mortal kind
Than lived thro' her."

Dante pictures "Euphrates and Tigris welling up from one spring, and parting like friends that linger" (Purgatorio, XXXIII. 112—14).

234. wandering; transitive; cf. XI. 779.

236, 237. The original texts have a comma after tell (236), not after how in 237. Some modern texts reverse this punctuation; to the detriment of the rhythm, I think.

sapphire, sapphire-coloured, i.e. light blue. fount, source; cf. III.

535. crisped, rippling; often used of wind ruffling the surface of water; cf. Byron, Childe Harold, IV. 211, "I would not their vile breath should crisp the stream." See Comus, 984.

239. error; in the literal sense of Lat. error, 'a wandering.' Cf. Tennyson, Gareth, "The damsel's headlong error through the wood."

241. nice, precise, fastidious. Supply some verb like 'set.'

242. curious knots, plots of ground laid out in a fanciful style. boon, bounteous (Lat. alma).

246. imbrowned, darkened; an imitation of the Italian use.

246, 247. thus was, i.e. such was—seat being in apposition to place. Some editors change the construction by removing the comma after place. view, appearance, aspect.

248. gums, i.e. aromatic resins like myrrh and balsam (= balm), produced by the balsam-tree (βαλσαμύδενδρον) and other trees of the same genus. See 630, v. 23. wept; cf. Othello, v. 2. 348—51.

250. amiable, lovely; cf. "thy amiable cheeks," A Midsummer-Night's Dream, IV. 1. 2; and Psalms lxxxiv. 1.

250, 251. Hesperian...here only; "the stories told of the apples of the Hesperides being true only of this place, if at all." It is an absolute clause in parenthesis. For the allusion see III. 568, and cf. the cancelled passage (especially "fruits of golden rind") at the beginning of Comus.

252. lawns, glades, wide spaces clear of trees.

255. irriguous, well-watered (Lat. irriguus).

256. Thyer quotes Herrick, Noble Numbers:

"Before man's fall the rose was born,
Saint Ambrose says, without a thorn."

Others of the Church Fathers held the same fancy, which seems to have been applied also to the fabulous gardens of Adonis (see IX. 439, 440, note); cf. Ben Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, v. 3.

Part of the curse (Genesis iii. 18) was that the earth should bring forth thorns and thistles; hence the presumption that there were no thorns before Adam's sin (Newton).

258. mantling vine; Comus, 294.

264. apply; either 'practise' or 'add.'

266—68. An allegorical way of saying, with classical imagery, such as he had used in his fifth Latin Elegy (In Adventum Veris), that in Eden only one season was known, viz. spring (see X. 678, 679, note), and that it was a time of universal luxuriance of growth and freshness. M. might well have had in mind some picture seen in Italy, e.g. Botticelli's famous "Spring." Cf. too the allegorical dance of the Virtues in the Purgatorio, XXIX.

Pan; here regarded as the god of all nature, and called "universal" in allusion to his name (Gk. πᾶν, 'all').

Graces, Lat. Gratiæ, Gk. χάριτες; three goddesses (Euphrosyne, Aglaia, Thalia) who personified the refinements and elevated joys of life.

Hours, Lat. Horæ, Gk. ὥραι; goddesses personifying the seasons of the year; the course of the seasons was symbolically described as "the dance of the Horæ" (compare v. 394, 395). Classical writers often mention them along with the Graces.

led on; the metaphor of a dance; cf. Milton's Sonnet "To the Nightingale," 4, "While the jolly hours lead on propitious May." So in Collins's Persian Eclogues, III. 39, 40.

268. Cf. Marvell's pretty lines on the Bermudas:

"He gave us this eternal spring,
Which here enamels every thing."

268—87. He indicates the beauty of Paradise by saying that it surpassed various spots celebrated for their charm. In describing Nature, Milton "on most occasions calls learning to his assistance" (Johnson).

268—72. According to the classical legend, Proserpine was carried off by Pluto=Dis (270), to the nether world, unknown to her mother Ceres, and became his wife. Latin poets (e.g. Ovid, Fasti IV. 421—62) made Enna in Sicily the scene of the incident, the worship of Ceres having been introduced into Rome from Sicily.

Scan Proserpin, and cf. the Latin accent and form in IX. 396. Line 270 is echoed in IX. 432. Marvell in his poem Upon Appleton House says of his pupil in her garden:

"she Seems with the flowers a flower to be."

271. that, the well-known, Lat. ille; so in 272, 275.

272, 273. "Near the city of Antioch, on the Orontes, lay a grove sacred to Apollo, in which was a temple of the god, whence he gave oracles. It was named Daphnè, and a spring which watered it was called the Castalian spring, after that at Delphi" (Keightley).

275—79. See Appendix, pp. 685, 686; and cf. P. R. II. 356.

278. florid, ruddy, being the god of wine; cf. Dryden, Alexander's Feast, 42, "Flushed with a purple grace" (said of Bacchus).

280—85. Todd quotes Heylin: "the hill of Amara is a day's journey high, on the top whereof are thirty-four palaces in which the younger sons of the Emperor [i.e. of Abyssinia] are continually enclosed to avoid sedition;...though not much distant from the Equator, if not plainly under it, yet [it is] blessed with such a temperate air that some have taken (but mistaken) it for the place of Paradise." M. had clearly read this passage in Heylin, who seems to have been his chief authority in matters relating to the customs of foreign nations and geography.

The tradition with regard to the Abyssinian princes is used by Johnson in Rasselas, but he speaks of a single palace, and places it in a 'happy valley,' not on the top of a mountain.

280, 281. Abassin, Abyssinian; the Arabic name.

Amara; correctly Amhara; it is rather a range of hills than a single "mount."

282. Ethiop line, the equator. Ethiop; the people of Abyssinia still call their land Itiopia and themselves Itiopyavan.

283. Shakespeare uses Nilus and Nile. head, source.

288, 289. The repetition of "erect" is important, since M. treats man's stature as a symbol of his sovereignty over the "prone" beast-creation, VII. 506—10.

M. "drew the portrait of Adam not without regard to his own person, of which he had no mean opinion" (Newton); and which he describes in the autobiographical part of his Second Defence of the People of England (P. W. I. 235, 236).

291, 292. See Genesis i. 26, 27.

295. whence; it refers to "truth, wisdom, sanctitude" (i.e. holiness), these qualities, not birth and position, conferring true authority. Cf. Burke, Reflections on the Revolution in France, "There is no qualification for government, but virtue and wisdom, actual or presumptive" (Payne's ed., p. 58).

295—99. This relation of woman to man—"not equal"—runs throughout the scenes in which Adam and Eve are introduced. Johnson says, "Both before and after the fall, the superiority of Adam is diligently sustained" (Life of Milton). Such lines as these and 635—38 express Milton's personal conception of woman's status and capacities; and how much it differed from modern views may be illustrated by the single fact that his treatise On Education makes no reference to the education of women. There is only a touch of exaggeration in Johnson's remark that Milton's works reveal "something like a Turkish contempt of females as subordinate and inferior beings"; the contrast, in fact, between Puritan austerity and the exaggerated chivalry of the Cavaliers. See also IX. 823, note.

God in him; modified by Bentley to "God and him."

300. front, forehead (Lat. frons); often in Shakespeare.

301. hyacinthine; a classical epithet. Homer speaks of hair (κόμας) 'like to a hyacinth' (ὑακινθίνῳ ἀνθει ὀμολας), Odyssey VI. 231. A dark colour, perhaps deep brown, seems implied. Milton's own hair was auburn; the Bodleian Library has a lock of it, considered genuine.

303—306. See 1 Cor. xi. 14 and 15 ("if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her: for her hair is given her for a covering"—in the margin, veil). Some think that M. was condemning as effeminate (cf. "but not beneath" etc.) the Cavalier fashion for men to wear the hair long.

wanton, unrestrained; cf. 629 and Arcades, 46, 47.

307, 308. implied subjection; M. infers this from 1 Cor. xi. 8—15.

310, 311. coy, modest. The slow rhythm suggests "delay." This line is the obvious original of Collins's line "Reluctant pride, and amorous faint consent" (Verses written on a Paper, etc.).

✓ 313. dishonest, unchaste; cf. "honest" in the Prayer-Book.

314. honour dishonourable. Cf. Tennyson's famous line, "His honour rooted in dishonour stood" (Lancelot and Elaine). M. often uses this classical figure of speech called oxymoron by which two words connoting opposite ideas are closely associated. Cf. I. 63, II. 252. See 1 Cor. xii. 23, 24.

323, 324. A famous example of an idiom often used by Elizabethan, as it had been by Greek, writers. It combines the comparative and superlative constructions—thus: 'Eve fair-er than all her daughters' + 'Eve fair-est of all women.' So M. writes in Arcopagitica, "this very opinion...is the worst and newest opinion of all others" (P. W. II. 98); and Shakespeare in A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v. 250, "This is the greatest error of all the rest." Examples in Bacon occur in The Advancement of Learning, I. 4. 8, and 5. 11; and Sir Thomas Browne has it in a curiously similar context; cf. the Vulgar Errors, I. 1, where he refers to Adam as (in the opinion of some) "the wisest of all men since." Its independent existence in Greek and English proves that the idiom, though illogical, is natural—due perhaps to over-emphasis. It is just the sort of combined construction into which people slip in conversation.

329. recommend, make pleasant.

✓ 332. compliant; probably in the rare sense 'pliant, easily bent,' due to the false derivation from Fr. plier, Lat. plicare; the true etymological connection being with Ital. complire, Lat. complere.

✓ 333. recline = Lat. reclinis, 'reclining.'

✓ 334. damasked, variegated.

✓ 337. purpose, conversation.

340—47. Contrast x. 710—14 (note).

✓ 343. ramped, sprang.

344. ounce, a lynx (felis uncia); from Persian yuz, 'a panther.'

347. Note that the serpent is the most fully described (Newton).

✓ 348, 349. insinuating, winding himself into folds (Lat. sinus). Gordian twine, intricate tangle. his braided train, his twisted, interlaced tail; or perhaps the whole length of his body.

"That intricate form into which he put himself was a sort of symbol or type of his fraud, though not then regarded" (Richardson).

352. bedward ruminating; chewing the cud (Lat. ruminantes) before they go to bed (Hume).

354. the Ocean Isles, i.e. in the Atlantic, in which, according to the classical fancy, the sun set; cf. Comus, 95—97. In VIII. 631, 632, M. seems to identify them with the Cape de Verde islands.

ascending scale; to be taken, I think, not literally as a reference to an astronomical fact or theory, but merely as a metaphor for the alternations of day and night.

355. Cf. Shakespeare, Sonnet 132, "Nor that full star that ushers in the even."

357. failed, that had failed him. The pause, indicating Satan's "dumb admiration," has enabled the poet to "enlarge (288—355) his description" (Newton).

360. mould; in M. a constant word for 'material, substance.'

361, 362. "A little lower than the angels," Psalms viii. 5.

368. ye; often used in Elizabethan E. for the objective you.

370. for so happy, considering how happy they are: their security is not in proportion to their happiness. Cf. for in 372.

374. forlorn, defenceless, "ill secured" (370).

381—83. An allusion to Isaiah xiv. 9.

387. for him, instead of him; or perhaps 'because of.'

389—91. 'Public reason—viz. honour and empire—compels.'

public reason; so in S. A. 865—70 Dalila excuses her treachery to Samson on the ground that "the public good" of her country required it.

393, 394. necessity. Perhaps an allusion to Charles's plea for ship-money (Newton). Cromwell pleaded the same excuse for the execution of Charles. Dryden puts the plea ironically in the mouth of the "Panther" (III. 835—38). In On Education M. sneers at those to whom "tyrannous aphorisms appear...the highest points of wisdom" (P. W. III. 466).

398. end, purpose, aim, viz. "to view"; cf. "end" in 442.

402. a lion. Cf. I Peter v. 8. See I. 428, note.

404. purlieu, the outskirts of a forest.

405. couches; some modern texts misprint crouches.

408. M. always uses the older form gripe, not grip; cf. VI. 543.

408—10. The construction is—'When Adam, by beginning to address Eve, made Satan turn.' Observe how naturally Satan gains (419—32) the information he requires (Newton).

411. There is, I think, an almost quibbling use of sole = (1) 'only,' (2) 'unique' (implying 'chief'). Eve is the only sharer in Adam's joys—and herself the chief element of them.

419. See Acts xvii. 25.
431. possess, occupy; cf. Romeo and Juliet, III. 2. 27.
433. one; emphatic by position; 'only one.' easy, to keep (but also to break); an unconscious irony.
- 441—43. flesh of thy flesh; cf. Genesis ii. 23. head; "the head of the woman is the man," I Cor. xi. 3.
447. odds, superiority; often used so by Shakespeare; cf. Richard II. III. 4. 89; Titus Andronicus, v. 2. 19.
- 449, 450. In VIII. 253—55 Adam likens his creation to awaking. So death is often likened to sleep.
451. on flowers; so the First Ed.; the Second Ed. has of flowers.
- 453—65. M. had in mind Ovid's story of Narcissus, Metamorphoses III. 407 et seq.
470. stays, i.e. for—awaits.
475. Cf. XI. 159. The name Eve is thought to mean 'life.'
478. platane, plane-tree (Lat. platanus).
- 483—85. "And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman," Gen. ii. 23.
486. individual, in the literal sense 'not to be divided' = inseparable; cf. v. 610. Lat. individuus.
- 487, 488. So Horace calls Mæcenas mæ partem animæ, and Vergil animæ dimidium mææ (Odes II. 17. 5; I. 3. 8).
493. unreproved, not to be reprovèd, blameless; cf. 987.
500. impregns, impregnates; O. Fr. empreigner, Lat. impregnare. The word occurs in More's Song of the Soul (Cambridge ed., 1647, p. 205).
503. envy; cf. IX. 264.
506. imparadisèd; used by other writers of the 17th century. Cf. Giles Fletcher, Christ's Triumph after Death, 44, "in his burning throne he sits emparadis'd"; and Phineas Fletcher, The Purple Island, I. 15. Dante has it in the Paradiso, XXVIII. 3.
511. pinè; probably transitive = 'makes me pine.' Cf. XII. 77, and P. R. I. 325, "pined with hunger."
526. equal with gods. See III. 206, note.
530. a chance but, it is a chance, just a possibility, that chance may lead, etc.: the grim sort of quibble in which bitterness (here jealousy) finds vent.
539. in utmost longitude, in the farthest west. See III. 574—76.
- 540—43. The rays of the setting sun fell on the inner side of the towering rock which formed the gate of Paradise on the east (XII. 638).
549. Gabriel, 'man of God'; one of the seven great Spirits; see

III. 648, 649, note. Following, no doubt, some tradition, M. makes him in P. L. one of the chief warriors of the Heavenly host, though inferior to Michael (vi. 44—46). In the Bible Gabriel is always a peaceful intermediary between Heaven and Earth and the bearer of tidings to man (cf. Daniel viii., ix., Luke i.), and that is the ordinary conception of his office; see the sketch of Adam unparadis'd in the Introduction, and cf. Fairfax, Tasso, I. 11:

“Out of the Hierarchies of angels sheen
The gentle Gabriel call'd he [the Almighty] from the rest,
'Twixt God and souls of men that righteous been Ambassador is he, for ever blest;
The just commands of Heaven's Eternal King,
'Twixt skies and earth, he up and down doth bring.”

That aspect of Gabriel is presented in P. R. I. 129, IV. 504.

551—54. Cf. a similar scene in II. 528—32 (note).

553. armoury, weapons; in apposition to “shields,” etc.

555. the even; that part of the hemisphere where it was then evening (Todd).

557. thwarts, crosses.

560. he thus began. This abruptness expresses his haste (Newton).

561. When M. speaks of the offices assigned to the Heavenly beings he seems to have in his mind the Temple-service of the Jews and the distribution of the Levites “by lot,” I Chronicles xxiii.—xxv. Note also the “courses” of service in I Chronicles xxvii., and cf. P. L. v. 655.

565, 566. Cf. Satan's words in III. 667—76.

567. God's latest image; the first being Christ; cf. III. 63.

described; Uriel had directed Satan's course, III. 722—35. Described, which some modern texts print, gives a more natural sense, but it has no authority apart from the parallel passage in IX. 60—62.

568. aery gait, course through the air.

569—73. Cf. 124—30. in=on; a common Elizabethan use; cf. the Lord's Prayer, “in earth, as it is in heaven.”

580. vigilance, guards: abstract for concrete. Cf. II. 130 (“watch”).

590—92. “While Uriel and Gabriel have been conversing, the Sun has fallen to the horizon, so that the sunbeam on which Uriel returns inclines from Paradise to the Sun” (Masson).

592. beneath the Azores, i.e. in the extreme west.

592—97. He will not decide whether the sun had revolved to the west or the Earth to the east, i.e. whether the Ptolemaic astronomy (according to which the Earth was a stationary body) or the Copernican is right. Cf. III. 574—76, note. For the general purposes of his poem

M. accepts the old Ptolemaic system, but he lets the reader see that he knows the Copernican. See the notes on VIII. 130—40.

prime orb; surely the sun, "the great luminary" (cf. prime = chief), with "lucent orb," III. 576, 589, the "diurnal star," x. 1069; not, as some think, the Primum Mobile.

593. incredible how swift; an absolute construction like III. 76.

594. volúbil; in form, accent and sense = Lat. volúbilis, 'rolling.' The Latin accentuation of words derived from Latin was very marked in Elizabethan E.; it has steadily declined, the Teutonic tendency in E. being to throw the accent forward, e.g. voluble; aspect, not asp'ct = Lat. aspéctus (see 541, III. 266); édict, not edict (S. A. 301).

598, 599. Cf. "the grey-hooded Even," Comus, 188. livery, dress. Thyer notes that Milton is very fond of describing twilight, perhaps because of his eyesight.

603. she; see v. 41. descant, song with variations. Gray borrowed Milton's phrase, in that Sonnet which Wordsworth took as a type of the Augustan style of poetic diction: "The Birds in vain their amorous Descant join." Cf. Vergil, Georg. iv. 511—15.

604. So in Comus, 557—60, when "The Lady" sang, "even Silence" was enchanted.

605. living sapphires; cf. II. 1050.

608. apparent queen, revealed a queen—manifestly a queen.

614. Cf. Richard III. iv. 1. 84, "the golden dew of sleep," and Julius Cæsar, II. 1. 230, "Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber."

620. regard, watch (cf. III. 534); in 877 = 'look' (Fr. regard).

628. manuring, cultivation.

632. ask, require; a common Elizabethan use; cf. The Taming of the Shrew, II. 115, "Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste."

635. author, i.e. the source of her being (see book VIII.).

640. seasons, times of the day, not year (see x. 678, 679).

641—56. A striking example of the poetic artifice called epanadiplosis or 'repetition'; cf. VII. 26, note. The passage illustrates well Milton's love of Nature; see ix. 445—54, note.

642. charm, song; used sometimes in the wider sense of harmonious notes, music; cf. The Holy War ("Temple" ed., p. 293): "The men of Mansoul also were greatly concerned at this melodious charm of 'the trumpets.'"

657, 658. Pope probably recollected this when he wrote the Essay on Man, l. 131, 132:

"Ask for what end the heavenly bodies shine,

Earth for whose use? Pride answers, 'Tis for mine."

659. our general ancestor; cf. "our general mother" (Eve), 492.

660. accomplished; a complimentary address; cf. Twelfth Night, III. 1. 95, "Most excellent accomplished lady!"

661. those. Newton substituted these, perhaps rightly; cf. 657, 674.

665. Darkness, i.e. the "original darkness" (II. 984) of Chaos.

667—73. A reference to current astrology.

673. Cf. what is said of the sun's power in III. 606—12.

674. Cf. Julius Cæsar, IV. 3. 226, "The deep of night is crept upon our talk"; and The Merry Wives of Windsor, IV. 4. 40.

675. none; placed last for emphasis; cf. 704, XI. 612.

684—88. 'Often, while they keep watch or make the nightly rounds, their songs, joined in harmonious measures ("number") with the notes of instruments skilfully touched, divide the night.'

688. divide, i.e. into watches. divide the night; literally = the Latin phrase dividere noctem used of Roman soldiers marking the watches of the night by sounding on a trumpet the signal for relieving guard. Cf. Silius Italicus VII. 154, 155, median somni cum buccina noctem | divideret. So Lucan uses dividere horas, II. 689. Tennyson gives a fresh turn to the phrase; cf. A Dream of Fair Women, "Saw God divide the night with flying flame."

This part of Paradise Lost inspired, mainly, the graceful Miltonic passage in Campbell's Pleasures of Hope, II., early ("Till Hymen brought...").

697—703. Cf. the description of the flowers with which the bier of Lycidas is to be decked, Lyc. 139—51. The "bower" in Tennyson's Ænone owes something to these lines; cf. too the "moonlit sward" in his Arabian Nights.

703. emblem, inlaid work; Gk. ἐμβλημα, 'a thing put on, an ornament.'

706. feigned, i.e. by poets.

707, 708. Sylvanus, a Latin divinity of the fields and woods (Lat. silva, wood), much the same as Faunus, the god of fields and shepherds, or the Greek Pan, god of flocks and pastoral life. The three deities were often identified.

711. the hymenæan, the marriage-song; from Hymen, the classical marriage-god.

712. genial = Lat. genialis in the sense 'nuptial'; cf. lectus genialis.

713—19. To benefit mankind, Prometheus ('fore-thought') stole the fire of Zeus (Jove); Zeus in revenge caused Hephæstus (Vulcan) to make a woman out of earth who should bring misery on mankind. She was called Pandora or All-gifted (Gk. πάντα, 'all' + δῶρα, 'gifts') because each of the gods endowed her with some power fatal to mankind. Hermes, the messenger of the gods, conducted her to Epimetheus ('after-thought'), "the unwiser son"; and he, forgetting the advice of his brother, Prometheus, not to accept anything from Zeus, married her. Pandora brought with her from heaven a box containing all human ills and let them loose upon mankind. Thus Zeus was revenged upon Prometheus, the benefactor of mankind. Another version of the legend said that the box contained blessings, all which, save hope, escaped and abandoned the world when Pandora opened the lid.

M. had made a precisely similar application of the story in his Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce, 3, calling Eve "a consummate and most adorned Pandora," and Adam "our true Epimetheus" (P. W. III. 224).

716—19. The construction is—'when, brought by Hermes to the unwiser son, she ensnared mankind, so as to bring vengeance (i.e. of Jove) on him who etc.' event, issue, result, Lat. eventus. unwiser, i.e. less wise than Prometheus. Some take it as a Latinism = 'not so wise as he should have been' (imprudentialior).

717. Japhet = Gk. Ἰαπετός, one of the Titans, father of Prometheus and Epimetheus. Apparently M. identifies him with the Japhet of Scripture. Cf. S. A. 715, 716, where, as in Isaiah lxvi. 19, Javan stands for the Greek race—Javan being the son of the Scriptural Japhet, Genesis x. 2. See I. 508.

719. stole; so the original texts; we find it in Shakespeare; cf. Macbeth, II. 3. 73, Julius Cæsar, II. 1. 238.

authentic, original, genuine; cf. III. 656.

720. stood. In The Christian Doctrine, II. 4, M. says, "No particular posture of the body in prayer was enjoined, even under the law" (P. W. v. 34). He makes Adam and Eve sometimes stand (XI. 1, 2), sometimes kneel (XI. 150), when they pray.

722. The use of both with more than two things is quite Elizabethan; cf. Venus and Adonis, 747, "Both favour, savour, hue and qualities."

724—35. The words of adoration offered by Adam and Eve. M. may have had in mind Psalms lxxiv. 16, 17.

733. fill the Earth = "replenish the earth," Genesis i. 28.

735. "For so he giveth his beloved sleep," Psalms cxxvii. 2. Homer speaks of the "gift of sleep," ὕπνου δῶρον, Iliad IX. 713, and Vergil has a similar thought, Æneid II. 269.

736, 737. M. often shows his dislike of ceremonies and forms in worship; cf. XII. 534, 535.

741—62. Various texts of Scripture dealing with marriage are referred to, e.g. Gen. i. 28; 1 Tim. iv. 1—3; Ephes. v. 32; Heb. xiii. 4.

744—47. The allusion is to monachism and the celibacy of priests.

751. sole propriety, the one thing held by its owners (Adam and Eve) as their exclusive possession. Lat. proprius, 'one's own.'

756. charities, feelings of love, affections (Lat. caritates).

763. According to legend, "winged Cupid" (A Midsummer-Night's Dream, I. I. 235), the god of love, had two sorts of arrows, one tipped with gold to inspire love, the other with lead to repel love (Ovid, Metamorphoses I. 468—71). Cf. the Glosse to Spenser's The Shepheards Calender, March, "He [Cupid] is sayd to have shafts, some leaden, some golden." Orsino in Twelfth Night, I. I. 35, speaks of love's "rich golden shaft." The allusion is common in Elizabethan poets.

764. constant lamp; cf. XI. 590. The antithesis to "constant" is "casual" in 767. purple, lustrous. The imagery of the couplet is classical; cf. 708—13.

767. court-amours. Probably M. is glancing particularly at the dissolute court of Charles II. Cf. a similar sarcasm in I. 497; also in P. R. II. 183.

768. mixed dance. The Puritans greatly disliked the practice of men and women dancing together. In Of Reformation in England, II., M. unites "gaming, wassailing, and mixed dancing" in one condemnation, P. W. II. 402.

mask, a private form of theatrical entertainment, the forerunner of the opera; so called because originally the performers wore masks or vizards. The mask was much patronised by the court (especially under the Stuarts) and great nobles from Elizabeth's reign up to the outbreak of the Civil War; after the Restoration mask-performances were very rare, so that the allusion here had not very much point in 1667. M. was thinking of the past generation to which really he belonged. He himself wrote a mask in Comus, 1634; but the Milton of Paradise Lost, 1667, was a very different person. In the Preface to Eikonoklastes he had ridiculed the "conceited portraiture...drawn out of the full measure of a masking scene," of Charles I. which was prefixed to Eikon Basilike; and in his pamphlet on A Free Commonwealth (1660) he had condemned "masks and revels" as an appanage of court-life (P. W. I. 312, II. 116). See the account of the mask appended to Comus.

769. serenate, serenade. starved, perishing with cold; similarly used in II. 600. Cf. Horace's picture of a lover shivering by night outside the house of his "proud fair" Lydia or Lyce (Odes I. 25 and III. 10).

773. repaired, made good the loss of, i.e. with fresh roses.

775. know to know no more, are wise enough to seek no further knowledge.

776, 777. "As the earth is a globe, her shadow, the sun being so much larger than she is, must form a cone, which moves as the sun moves, and on the opposite side. Night and day then in Paradise consisting each of twelve hours, the earth's cone would, at midnight, be in the meridian, and the half-way uphill to it [the meridian] would be therefore nine o'clock, the commencement of the second watch" (Keightley).

sublunar vault, the expanse of heaven below the moon. The epithet helps to fix how far up the heaven the Earth's shadow had climbed: by nine o'clock it had not got as far as the moon.

778—80. M. always assigns to the Cherubim the duty of sentinels, for the reason explained later (p. 681).

778. port, gate (porta); cf. Coriolanus, v. 6. 6.

782. Uzziel, 'strength of God.' The name occurs in the Bible (e.g. in Exod. vi. 18), but not as that of an angel. coast, skirt.

784. as flame; an apt simile, since the Cherubim are literally lustrous beings—"radiant files" (797).

785. M. has borrowed the Greek phrases ἐπὶ ἀσπίδα, 'on the shield side, i.e. to the left,' and ἐπὶ δόρυ, 'to the spear side, i.e. to the right.' We find παρ' ἀσπίδα and παρὰ δόρυ used thus. The military terms suit the context and lend dignity.

786. from these, i.e. from the band of Cherubim which had wheeled "to the spear" and were to be under the command of Gabriel himself.

788. Ithuriel, 'the discovery of God.' Zephon, 'a looking out.' The names suit the duty which Gabriel assigns to these two Cherubim.

✓ 791. secure of, unsuspecting of, not fearing.

792, 793. i.e. there arrived one who (Lat. quis) tells (namely, Uriel).

797. files, lines; cf. I. 567, "the armed files."

798. these, Ithuriel and Zephon.

799—809. This episode is made the occasion of a philosophical explanation of dreams in v. 100—21.

800. Pope has an effective allusion to this line in the famous satire on 'Sporus' (Lord Hervey), Epistle to Arbuthnot. See also S. A. 857, 858, P. R. IV. 407—409.

802. Cf. The Merry Wives of Windsor, v. 5. 54, 55, "ere she sleep... Raise up the organs of her fantasy" (=imagination).

803. list; a past tense, as in II. 656.

804. or if. M. varies the construction: 'trying to reach...trying if he might' etc.

811. lightly, i.e. with only a light touch, for etc.

812. temper, a thing tempered, i.e. a weapon: abstract for concrete.

814. "Tennyson used to say that the two grandest of all Similes were those of the Ships hanging in the Air [II. 636—43], and 'the Gunpowder one,' which he used slowly and grimly to enact, in the Days that are no more" (Edward Fitzgerald, Letter, p. 156 of Life by A. C. Benson).

815. Nitre or saltpetre is an ingredient of gunpowder; cf. VI. 512.

816. tun, barrel; Low Lat. tunna, a cask, Fr. tonneau.

817. against, in preparation for. Various battle-touches in P. L. (especially in bk. VI.) seem like a reminiscence of the Civil War. Cf. Milton's Sonnet "When the Assault."

829. there, i.e. in the higher places of Heaven, where the inferior angels would not "sit."

830. Cf. S. A. 1081, 1082:

"thou know'st me now,

If thou at all art known."

argues, proves, shows (Lat. arguere); cf. 931. ✓

835, 836. Apparently M. uses think with different constructions, thus: 'Do not think thy shape the same, or suppose thy undiminished brightness to be known as it was in Heaven,' i.e. 'do not suppose thy brightness to be undiminished and recognised.' Some interpret: 'Do not think thy shape the same or thy brightness undiminished, so as to be known.'

840. obscure; in the literal sense 'dark, gloomy' (Lat. obscurus). ✓

843. these; Zephon points to Adam and Eve.

845—47. Remembered by Dryden; cf. The Hind and the Panther, III. 1040, 1041:

"For vice, though frontless and of hardened face,
Is daunted at the sight of awful grace."

There are parallels to this scene in Paradise Regained, where Satan, not insensible to goodness, is abashed in the presence of the Saviour (e.g. in III. 145—49).

847—49. A reminiscence of Persius III. 38, virtutem vidcant, intabescantque relicta.

848. shape = Lat. forma in its philosophical sense 'outward manifestation of'; cf. forma honesti = 'shape of virtue,' Cicero, De Officiis I. 5. 15. So M. in his prose-works; cf. The Reason of Church Government, I. 1, "the very visible shape and image of virtue"; and again, I. 2, "the lovely shapes of virtues and graces," P. W. II. 442, 446.

856. Cf. S. A. 834, "All wickedness is weakness."

862. those half-rounding guards, i.e. the Cherubim under Uzziel and the others under Gabriel. Each band had made half the circuit of Paradise, and now they met at its western extremity (cf. 784).

869. port, bearing. "Their port was more than human," Comus, 297.

870, 871. Gabriel, belonging to one of the highest of the Heavenly Orders, has known Satan (an archangel) in the past, and so recognises him here; Zephon, an inferior angel, did not (830, 831).

872. contést. M. always accents the noun, as we do the verb, contést; cf. XI. 800, "In sharp contést of battle found no aid."

886. the esteem of wise, the reputation of being wise.

891—93. whatever, any; cf. 587. to change...with, to exchange for; compare the double use of Lat. mutare.

894. dole; Lat. dolor, 'pain.' which...I sought, i.e. to do, viz. 'to exchange torment for ease' etc.

896. object, urge as an objection to my breaking from Hell.

899. durance, prison, strictly 'imprisonment.'

thus much, i.e. thus much in reply to your question. The style of the speech reflects Satan's "contemptuous" bearing (885).

906. returns; probably the subject is "Satan," returns him being the reflexive use so common in Elizabethan E. with many verbs now intransitive; cf. I Henry VI. III. 3. 56. Some editors take folly as the subject, and return = 'bring back.'

911. however, howsoever, by any means.

925. 'I do not come because I have less power to endure.'

926, 927. Either (1) 'I withstood, resisted, thy fiercest attack'—cf. phrases like 'do thy worst'; or (2) 'I proved myself ("stood") thy fiercest foe.' The first way, which makes stood transitive, is preferable; for the noun-use of thy fiercest, cf. II. 278, XI. 497.

927, 928. Book VI. describes how on the third day of the great battle in Heaven the Messiah came forth to end the contest, and, hurling "ten thousand thunders," smote the rebels down into Hell.

vollied; cf. Campbell, "From rank to rank your volleyed thunder flew" (said of guns).

930, 931. i.e. show thy ignorance of what is the duty of a leader after disaster; cf. "argue" in 949.

938. fame = Lat. fama in the literal sense 'report'; cf. I. 651.

v | 939. afflicted, struck down (afflictus); cf. I. 186.

940. An allusion to the Rabbinical view, commonly adopted by mediæval writers, that the angels who fell with Satan were the same as the spirits or "dæmons" who inhabited the "elements" of earth and air. See II. 274, 275, note; and for the ancient division of the air into three "regions," see Appendix, pp. 674—76.

941. put to try, made, forced, to try. Cf. Cymbeline, II. 3. 110, "You put me to forget a lady's manners."

942. gay, fine; perhaps a retort to "obscure and foul" in 840.

943—45. Here Satan is very like the Prometheus of Æschylus; cf. Prometheus Vincit 937, 938 (Todd).

949. Gabriel is replying to Satan's words in 930—33.

953—56. In these lines Gabriel speaks to the host of Satan's followers, as though they were present; your refers to them—not, of course, to Satan, whom Gabriel addresses as thou. In Shakespeare thou is often a contemptuous form of address.

958. patron, champion; see III. 219, note.

962. areed, advise.

965—67. drag; a vivid present. chained; see I. 48, III. 82. seal; cf. Rev. xx. 3, "And [he] cast him [Satan] into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him." facile, easily passed.

971. limitary = Lat. limitaris, 'guarding the frontier' (Lat. limes). | ✓
Satan refers sarcastically to "hallowed limits" in Gabriel's speech (964).

973—76. Alluding to the throne-chariot of the Deity conceived as formed of the wings of the Cherubim. Cf. VI. 771. Satan called Gabriel a cherub (971), though properly he was an archangel.

the road of Heaven. Cf. VII. 576—78, and the description of "the floor of heaven" in The Merchant of Venice, v. 58, 59.

977—79. i.e. the close array of angels spread itself out in the shape of a crescent moon. Cf. Fairfax, Tasso, xx. 22, "Like the new moon, his host two horns did spread." phalanx, battalion (Gk. φάλαγξ).

980. with ported spears, i.e. "with their spears held in their hands across their breasts and slanting beyond the left shoulder, ready to be brought down to the 'charge' if necessary. The Angels have not the points of their spears turned to Satan [as the phrase used to be explained by editors]; they have them only grasped in the position preparatory to turning them against him" (Masson). "Port" is really a military term. Anyone who has ever executed, or seen executed, the command "Arms port" (formerly "Port arms"), will be able to picture to himself the band of Cherubim with slanting spears thick as the slanting stalks of corn—a very appropriate simile, used by other poets; Newton compares Iliad II. 147. See VII. 321, 322.

981—83. Ceres, corn; strictly the goddess of agriculture. The beard is the prickles on the ears of corn. careful, anxious.

984. hopeful, from which he had hoped so much; or 'which had made him so hopeful' (the epithet being transferred). M. is thinking of Vergil's expectata seges, Georg. I. 226.

985. alarmed, prepared, on his guard.

986. dilated, expanded. Spirits (he says in I. 428, 429) can | distend or contract their shapes as they please.

987. Atlas, the mountain in Libya on which the sky was supposed by the Greeks to rest (II. 306). unremoved, not to be removed; cf. 493.

988, 989. his stature reached the sky. Editors compare Homer's goddess of Discord and Vergil's Fame; and refer to the book of Wisdom xviii. 16. crest, i.e. of his helmet. Probably M. remembered Henry V. II. Prolog. 8. See also VI. 306, 307.

990. Cf. the picture of Death in II. 672, 673. The intentional vagueness of such descriptions is so effective because it stirs but does not satisfy the imagination, rousing a sense of the mysterious and indescribable.

992. cope, "canopy" (III. 556), roof; akin to cape, cap. Cf. Pericles, IV. 6. 132, "the cheapest country under the cope," i.e. firmament.

993. all the elements, the whole fabric of this Universe.

994. wrack, destruction; the old form of wreck.

996—1004. The general idea of the "golden scales" of the Almighty is from Homer, Iliad VIII. 69—72: "then did the Father [i.e. Zeus] balance his golden scales (χρύσεια τάλαντα) and put therein two fates of death...one for horse-taming Trojans, one for mail-clad Achaians; and he took the scale-yard by the midst and lifted it, and the Achaians' day of destiny sank down" (Leaf). The idea is repeated in Il. XXII. 209—12, with reference to the contest between Achilles and Hector, and imitated by Vergil, Æn. XII. 725—27, with reference to Æneas and Turnus.

M. does not borrow without adding or varying, and we may note the fresh turns which he has given to Homer's notion: (1) he identifies the Scales with the sign of the Zodiac called Libra = 'the Balance'—a poetic fancy which gives at once a certain reality to the fiction of the Scales and a new association and interest to Libra itself; (2) he represents the Scales as those with which the Almighty measured out the Universe and its elements—and this, by adding to the importance of the Scales, heightens our sense of the greatness of Satan whose fate is weighed in them, and increases the grandeur of the whole scene.

M. had referred to the Scales—Fatorum lances—in his Latin poem Naturam non Pati Senium, 34, 35. Pope employs them with fine mock-heroic effect in The Rape of the Lock, 711—14.

998. Astræa; the constellation Virgo. the...sign, i.e. of the Zodiac.

999—1001. Cf. Isaiah xl. 12, "Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with the span,...and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance?" also Job xxviii. 25, xxxvii. 16.

pendulous, hanging (Lat. pendulus), i.e. as the central body—"self-balanced"—of the Universe; cf. "hung" in VII. 242 and the Nativity Ode, 122. This is what Bacon means by "the pensileness of the earth"

(The Advancement of Learning, I. 6. 10). In II. 1052, the idea is different, though the wording is similar. ponders, weighs.

1002, 1003. Again M. varies the classical idea: (1) he does not weigh Satan against Gabriel, as Homer weighed the Greeks against the Trojans, Hector against Achilles, or Vergil Turnus against Æneas: only Satan himself is weighed. The one weight represents the consequence (= "sequel") to Satan of fighting, the other the consequence of departing: the scale containing the weight that symbolises fighting shows, by its ascent, that Satan's chance of success is light—weighed and found wanting (Daniel v. 27); i.e. that the result of departing will be better for him. (2) In Homer and Vergil the descent of the scale, since it is weighted with death, is the evil sign. The English use of the image is the reverse—ascent typifying worthlessness and its consequences.

1004. beam, the cross-piece from which the scales of a balance are suspended. To 'kick (or 'strike') the beam' means that one scale immediately ascends as far as it can, being greatly outweighed by the other: hence the figurative application of the phrase to things 'of little weight.' Cf. The Hind and the Panther, II. 622—24:

"If such a one you find, let truth prevail;
Till when, your weights will in the balance fail;
A Church unprincipled kicks up the scale."

1008. since thine, i.e. can do; referring to "strength."

1010. "To tread them down like the mire of the streets," Isaiah x. 6.

1014. nor more, i.e. nor said more. This omission of verbs of saying (cf. v. 67) is common in Vergil, whose influence on M. was so great. Addison thought that in regard to style Milton was affected more by Vergil than by Homer.

1015. fled the shades of night. The action of the next book begins at daybreak. Books v.—VIII. are filled mainly with the account of events which preceded the creation of man. Satan, though spoken of, does not appear again till IX. 53.

BOOK V.

1. now morn. "This is the morning of the day after Satan's coming to the earth" (Todd).

rosy steps. Contrast Lycidas, 186, 187:

"Thus sang the uncouth swain to the oaks and rills, While the still Morn went out with sandals gray."

So in VII. 373, 374, and P. R. IV. 426, 427. Some scholars say that the Homeric epithet for the Dawn, ῥοδοδάκτυλος, refers to her feet, not hands; Milton, however, followed the ordinary interpretation (VI. 3).

"Gray" and "rosy" (VI. 3) are, of course, traditional epithets for the morning in its early and later stages. clime, region.

2. sowed; the metaphor of scattering corn, to which the dew-drops ("orient pearl") bear some resemblance. Spenser speaks of the sky "All sowed with glistening stars," An Hymne of Heavenly Beautie. Cf. VII. 358. Shakespeare often likens moisture (746, 747), especially tears, to pearl; cf. Lucrece, 1213, 1553. orient, lustrous.

3—5. i.e. Adam's sleep was not the heavy drowsiness that clouds the brain with its vapours after intemperate eating or drinking. Cf. IX. 1046—51; Macbeth, I. 7. 63—68; Pope, Satires, II. 73, 74 (obvious Miltonic reminiscences); and Thomson, Spring, 245, 246.

5. temperate vapours bland; Milton's favourite word-order; cf. VI. 249, and see the note on I. 733, where an illustration might be added from Campbell's Pleasures of Hope, "Of cultured soul, and sapient eye serene" (an echo of Gray's Elegy, 53).

bland, soothing. which, i.e. "sleep." the only sound, the single sound, the sound alone. Todd quotes the phrase in The Faerie Queene, V. 11. 30. This use of only is Spenserian; cf. "the only breath" = "only the breath, the mere breath," F. Q. I. 7. 13.

6. fuming, i.e. with the steam that rises in early morning; see 185, 186. For this literal use of fume cf. VII. 600.

Aurora's fan = the "leaves." The wind which ushers in the dawn (cf. S. A. 10, 11) stirs the leaves as a fan, and their rustling helps to awake Adam.

16. i.e. mild as the west wind ("that breathes the spring," L'Allegro, 18) passing over a bank of flowers. Flora, the goddess of flowers, symbolises the flower-world, as in P. R. II. 365. Her association with Zephyrus is a poetic convention; cf. Garth's Dispensary, 1699:

"Where Flora treads, her Zephyr garlands flings,
And scatters odours from his purple wings."

17—25. Keightley cites the Song of Solomon II. 10—13. Cf. too the lines "Wake now, my love, awake! etc." in Spenser's Epithalamion; the Song of Solomon is referred to directly in IX. 442, 443.

21. prime, daybreak, the early part of the day.

22. tended; so the First Ed.; but in many texts (as Dr Bradshaw notes) it has been corrupted into tender. Compare, however, passages like IV. 438, "To prune these growing plants, and tend these flowers," and IX. 206. blows, i.e. blooms.

23. balmy reed, i.e. balm (= balsam, etymologically); cf. "corny reed" = corn, VII. 321. drops; myrrh and balm are aromatic resins, of much the same nature, produced by the balsam-tree (βαλσαμόδενδρον) and other trees of the same genus. Cf. IV. 248, and Othello, V. 2. 348—50:

"one whose subdued eyes,
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gum";

lines which Marvell remembered in the Nymph's lament over her dying fawn:

"See how it weeps! the tears do come
Sad, slowly, dropping like a gum.
So weeps the wounded balsam; so
The holy frankincense doth flow;
The brotherless Heliades
Melt in such amber tears as these."

The perfume myrrh is to be distinguished from the resin; it is thought to have been distilled from a kind of rock-roses.

30, 31. I...have dreamed. Explained by IV. 799 et seq. "The author...shews a wonderful art throughout his whole poem in preparing the reader for the several occurrences that arise in it" (Addison). The abruptness of the sentences expresses Eve's confusion on just awakening, and her agitation of mind.

35—93. Belinda's vision in the first canto of The Rape of the Lock is an amusing but by no means "respectful perversion" of Eve's dream.

39—41. i.e. the nightingale; the poet's favourite bird, as many allusions show. Cf. his first Sonnet, Comus, 234 ("the love-lorn Nightingale"), Il Penseroso, 61—64, VII. 435, 436, and the fifth Elegy, 25—28. No doubt, the garden of his father's house at Horton (cf. Il Pen. 49, 50) was a haunt of the bird.

his; poetic tradition (due to the classical story of Philomela) would say her, but the male bird is the songster. Elsewhere, however, Milton follows the poetic convention; cf. IV. 602, 603. Thomson, Spring, speaks of the "love-taught song" of birds, remembering perhaps Spenser, Epithalamion, 88 ("love-learned song").

43, 44. Contrast IV. 657 et seq., where Eve asks wherefore, for whom, do the stars shine all night, to which Adam replies that there are "millions of spiritual creatures" on earth, unseen by men, and that they behold and praise God's works by night as by day.

50—92. A foretaste of the much fuller passage in IX. 494—833.

54—57. It is implied that the figure which appeared was that of Satan; cf. III. 636—44 where, to deceive Uriel, he puts on the form of a Cherub, winged and with flowing locks—as here.

56, 57. Almost a paraphrase of Aeneid I. 403:

Ambrosiaëque comæ divinum vertice odorem Spiravere.

ambrosia, fragrance. The adjective is used in a similar context by Tennyson, in the description of Aphrodite (Enone).

60. god, i.e. angelic being; so in 70 and 117. In The Christian Doctrine, I. 5, M. explains why he applies the word 'god' to angels (P. W. IV. 106).

61. i.e. is it envy (cf. Satan's words in IX. 729, 730) or some reservation, restraint, that keeps you from being tasted?

66. vouched, made good with, confirmed by; cf. Henry V. V. I. 77.

67. he thus, i.e. spake; cf. IV. 1014.

71—73. See 318—20, note.

76. The resemblance to Euripides, Alcestis 182, has been remarked. There is a striking allusion to the Alcestis in Milton's Sonnet "On his Deceased Wife." Euripides was his favourite—after Homer—among the Greek poets. A copy of Euripides with MS. notes by Milton is extant, and one of his textual emendations—ἠδέως for ἠδέων in the Bacchæ 188—is universally adopted. In his edition of the Bacchæ (Cambridge Press) Dr Sandys points out several Euripidean reminiscences in Comus. He notes too what seems to have escaped Milton's editors, viz. the fact that the year in which M. bought the copy of Euripides above referred to, and may reasonably be supposed to have devoted some special attention to the works of the Greek poet, was the year which saw the production at Ludlow, and probably the composition, of Comus. The direct allusions to Euripides in Milton's prose-works are very numerous. See the Appendix to Sonnets VIII. and XXIII., with the Notes on those Sonnets.

77, 78. Cf. IX. 705—709. The allusion is to Genesis iii. 5.

79. in the Air. Satan speaks as "prince of air" (XII. 454). In P. R. I. 39—46 he addresses his followers as "ancient powers of air," and in P. R. II. 117, "the middle region of thick air" is their council-chamber. The idea can be traced to Ephesians ii. 2. Lines 78, 79 are the appropriate motto of Wordsworth's poem, "Devotional Incitements."

84—86. Cf. the scene of the Temptation in IX. 739—41. In XI. 517—19, Michael warns Adam against "ungoverned appetite," that having been the main cause of Eve's sin.

91. i.e. I found that he was gone; the sense connects wondering (89) with I (91). In the First and Second Eds. the punctuation is peculiar: there is a colon after various and a semicolon after exaltation. Perhaps by isolating the clause thus Milton intended an abruptness of speech corresponding with the surprise which Eve felt when she found herself alone.

94. sad, seriously.

98. uncouth, strange.

102—105. For Milton "Fancy" is the loftiest form of imagination; cf. VIII. 461, where he terms it "internal sight," i.e. the highest power of conceiving mentally that which is not present to the eye. We must remember what "Fancy" means to him when we read his line on Shakespeare in L'Allegro, "Or sweetest Shakespeare, Fancy's child" (133). "Fancy" is the normal 18th century word for 'imagination.' Cf. for instance, Collins's poems passim (e.g. the lines to Sir Thomas Hanmer on his edition of Shakespeare).

Johnson considered Adam's discourse on dreams to be too philosophical for a new-created being. But "to find sentiments for the state of innocence was very difficult; and something of anticipation perhaps is now and then discovered."

104. represent, i.e. present, give representations of.

106, 107. frames, i.e. frames into what we affirm etc.

115. our last evening's talk; related in IV. 411—39, where Adam reminds Eve of the prohibition not to taste of the tree of knowledge.

118. so, i.e. as in your case: evil, he says, if unapproved (by Reason) in the way Eve has described, leaves no blame. Keightley explains so = 'provided that it be.' Todd prints unreprov'd.

129. "A manner of speaking that occurs in Jeremiah xx. 7: 'thou hast deceived me, and I was deceived'" (Newton).

133. each...their. A frequent idiom in M.; cf. VII. 453, XI. 889. In Elizabethan E. each could be used as a plural word; cf. Coriolanus, III. 2. 44.

crystal; a constant epithet of tears; cf. Shakespeare, Venus and Adonis, 956, 957:

"She vail'd her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopt
The crystal tide."

137. arborous roof. Cf. the beautiful description of their bower in IV. 690—708.

139. day-spring, dawn, daybreak; so in VI. 521, and S. A. 11. Cf. Luke i. 78, "the day-spring from on high" (margin sunrising), and Job xxxviii. 12 in the Authorised Version and also in Coverdale's version (1535), "Haste thou shewed the daye springe his place?"

141, 142. shot. Cf. IV. 539—43, Comus, 98, 99.

144, 145. Cf. IX. 197—99. lowly they bowed; contrast XI. 1, 2. orisons, prayers.

147. nor...wanted they, nor did they lack; cf. 514.

149. We must observe the strong emphasis on “unmeditated,” and the repetition of “various” in 146—unmistakeable hints at the poet’s “preference of extemporaneous prayer over set forms” (Keightley). In Eikonoklastes, 25, he sneers at the use of a “service-book.” His poems are full of these covert attacks on the Church (IV. 193, note).

150. numerous, melodious.

151. It is worth while to remember that the lute, now obsolete, was in Milton’s time a very popular instrument. Cf. the frequent allusions to it in Shakespeare. “To hear the lute well touched” is one of the pleasures that M. promises himself in the Sonnet to Henry Lawrence, and without doubt he had often delighted in the skill of his friend Henry Lawes, a famed lutenist.

153—208. The hymn is obviously based upon Psalms cxlviii. and the Canticle, “O all ye Works of the Lord.” Thomson’s poem, A Hymn (“These, as they change”), is inspired by the same sources and by the present passage. Thomson’s admiration of Milton finds vent in frequent imitations and in the very Miltonic lines, addressed to “Britannia,” in Summer:

“Is not wild Shakespeare thine and nature’s boast?
Is not each great, each amiable muse
Of classic ages in thy Milton met?
A genius universal as his theme,
Astonishing as chaos, as the bloom
Of blowing Eden fair, as heaven sublime.”

154. frame, fabric, structure; cf. II. 924, VIII. 15. Bacon uses “the frame of things” and “the universal frame of nature” as synonyms for ‘the Universe’ (The Advancement of Learning, I. 8. 1, II. 7. 7).

160. See 716, note, and contrast VI. 715.

162. symphonies, harmonies; see XI. 595, note.

day without night; “that is, without such night as ours, for the darkness there [i.e. in Heaven] is no more than ‘grateful twilight’” (Newton). See 645.

163. circle. Cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 9, “They (the angels) are represented (in Scripture) as standing dispersed around the throne of God in the capacity of ministering agents.” Cf. 655—57.

165. Cf. II. 324, note.

166. He refers to the planet Venus, which, when west of the sun, rises and sets before him, and is called the Morning-star, Lucifer—cf. the Gk. titles 'Εωσφόρος ('dawn-bringer') and Φωσφόρος ('light-bringer'); when the planet is east of the sun, it rises and sets after him, and is called the Evening-star, Hesperus (IV. 605). Cf. Tennyson, In Memoriam, CXXI.:

“Sweet Hesper-Phosphor, double name,

For what is one, the first, the last.”

fairest of stars; cf. Iliad XXII. 318, “Ἐσπερος, ὃς κάλλιστος ἐν οὐρανῷ ἴσταται ἀστὴρ, and the Glosse to The Shepherds Calender, December, “he seemeth to be one of the brightest of starres, and also first ryseth, and setteth last.”

171. Newton notes that Ovid (Metamorphoses IV. 228) calls the sun mundi oculus, and Pliny (Nat. Hist. II. 4) mundi animus. With Elizabethan writers “eye of heaven” is a favourite periphrasis; cf. Marlowe, 2 Tamburlaine, IV. 3. 88, “A greater lamp than that bright eye of heaven,” and Shakespeare’s Sonnets 18, 33. See note on Il Penseroso, 141 (“Day’s garish eye”).

175. The general sense is that the moon, together with the fixed stars and the planets, is to resound his praise.

176. the fixed stars; cf. III. 481, note. “They are fixed in their orb, but their orb flies, that is, moves round with the utmost rapidity” (Newton). orb = ‘sphere’; M. treats the terms as interchangeable.

177. ye five, i.e. the planets; “wandering fire” is partly a translation of the Gk. πλανήτης, ‘a wanderer,’ from πλανᾶσθαι, ‘to wander’—whence planet. Cf. Drummond of Hawthornden, Forth Feasting (1617), where he is celebrating James I.’s thirst for knowledge:

“Thou sought’st to know this All’s eternal source,

Of everturning heavens the restless course,

Their fixed eyes [cf. 176], their lights which wand’ring run,

Whence moon her silver hath, his gold the sun.”

Drummond (1585—1649) has not a little in common with Milton, and the fact that his poems were issued in 1656 with a Preface by Milton’s nephew Edward Phillips is suggestive. In his Theatrum Poetarum (1675) Phillips deplores that they are “utterly disregarded and laid aside at present,” in spite of their “smooth and delightful” style. Drummond’s lament for Prince Henry (1613) and his Pastoral Elegy (1637) may be compared with Lycidas. He is fond, too, of geographical names, especially river-names like “Hydaspes” (III. 436). And his “constant preoccupation with the starry heavens and the Ptolemaic universe” makes another link with Paradise Lost.

five. He has already mentioned the Sun, Moon (then reckoned planets) and Venus (166—70): hence only four planets remain—

Mercury, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. Possibly M. by a mere error said five instead of four (which Bentley read); but I think that he intended to include Venus again. In 166—70 he addressed the planet emphatically under its special aspect as the Morning-star, giving this particular manifestation of it an individuality apart from that of Venus considered generally as one of the seven planets. The Earth can scarcely be taken as making up the five, since not (as Masson notes) till VIII. 128—30 does Adam learn that it may possibly be a planet.

178. The metaphor in "dance" is Milton's favourite means of suggesting the motions of stellar bodies; cf. III. 579, 580, and IX. 103. Shakespeare also applies "dance" (the vb.) to the heavenly bodies—apparently to suggest their quivering light; cf. Much Ado About Nothing, II. I. 349. Cf. too Shelley, "I sang of the dancing stars," Hymn of Apollo.

not without; Lat. non sine. M. is fond of this classical turn of phrase (meiosis); cf. III. 32. He has it in his prose; cf. the fine passage (with its Horatian reminiscence) in the Areopagitica: "I cannot praise a fugitive and cloistered Virtue...that...slinks out of the race, where that immortal garland is to be run for, not without dust and heat" (P. W. II. 68).

song, i.e. "the music of the spheres"; cf. 625—27. Perhaps the most elaborate account of this idea in the classics is that given in the Myth of Er, bk. x. of the Republic (617, 618). Plato there says that on each of the spheres—he recognises eight—"stands a siren, who travels round with the circle (i.e. revolution), uttering one note in one tone; and from all the eight notes there results a single harmony." See Arcades, 61—73, where M. has adapted Plato's words (which are quoted at length in my note there), and recalled Lorenzo's speech in The Merchant of Venice, v. 60—65; Comus, 241, 1021; Twelfth Night, III. I. 121, Antony and Cleopatra, v. 2. 84, As You Like It, II. 7. 6.

According to tradition, Pythagoras was the only man who ever heard this music; cf. Milton's treatise De Spherarum Concertu: "solus inter mortales concertum audisse fertur Pythagoras." Plato explains that the music is inaudible because continuous; we should hear it if there were a break. M. (cf. The Merchant of Venice, v. 64, 65) offers elsewhere a purely moral view—that sin has deadened the human senses, once so keen. Cf. Arcades, 72, 73:

"After the heavenly tune, which none can hear

Of human mould with gross unpurged ear."

Here, before the Fall, Adam and Eve possess the power which through their sin humanity lost. Somewhat similar is the Ode At a Solemn Music (19—24).

180. Elements; see II. 274, 275, note. Among many illustrations in Shakespeare of this belief cf. Antony and Cleopatra, v. 2. 292, 293, Julius Cæsar, v. 5. 73, Twelfth Night, II. 3. 9, 10.

181—83. that in quaternion run. "That in a fourfold mixture and combination run a perpetual circle, one element continually changing into another" (Newton). He shows that here and later, 415—18, Milton is thinking of a passage in Cicero's De Natura Deorum, II. 33.

Lines 180—83 should be compared with II. 910—16.

189. uncoloured, i.e. having a single colour, unvariegated.

191. advance, raise aloft; see 588.

193, 194. Cf. Thomson, A Hymn, "Ye forests bend, ye harvests wave, to Him."

198. Cf. Cymbeline, II. 3. 21, "Hark, hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings," and Sonnet 29:

"Like to the lark at break of day arising

From sullen earth, sings hymns at heaven's gate."

But Shakespeare 'conveyed' the idea from a song in Lyly's play, Campaspe, where the lark "at heaven's gate claps her wings."

202—204. witness, bear witness. I...my song. Bentley read we...our song, and some other editors find the singular inappropriate, since Eve joined in the hymn. Pearce thought that M. was following the practice of Greek dramatists with whom "sometimes the plural, and sometimes the singular number is used" in the choruses (cf. the choruses of S. A.). Perhaps, after all, M. only means that each of the worshippers speaks for himself.

205. to give us only good. Editors think that M. had in mind "that celebrated prayer in Plato": "O Jupiter, give us good things, whether we pray for them or not, and remove from us all evil things, even though we pray for them." Xenophon in his Memorabilia says "that Socrates was wont to pray to the gods only to give good things, as they knew best what things were so." Cf. the Collect for the 8th Sunday after Trinity. (Newton's note.)

212—15. Cf. IV. 625—29, IX. 209—12. pampered, too luxuriant. Newton aptly observed that pamper used to be connected with Lat. pampinus, a 'vine-leaf,' and M. may have accepted the etymology. Really pamper is of Old Low Germ. origin, being a nasalised form of the word which we get in pap; Skeat mentions a Low Germ. vb. slampampen, 'to live daintily.'

215—19. Alluding to the pretty classical fancy of the vine being wedded to (because trained to grow up) the elm; cf. Horace, Od. IV. 5. 30, Epod. II. 9, 10, Vergil, Georg. II. 367. M. in the Epitaphium

Damonis, 65, speaks of the innuba uva, and in Of Reformation in England, I., writes: "I am not of opinion to think the Church a vine in this respect, because, as they take it, she cannot subsist without clasping about the elm of worldly strength and felicity," P. W. II. 380. Cf. Fairfax's Tasso, III. 76, "The married elm fell with his fruitful vine"; and XX. 99.

221—23. There is the same allusion in IV. 167—71 (a passage which Tennyson "hated") to the story of Tobias and his victory over Asmodæus (one of the evil angels) as told in the Apocryphal Book of Tobit. Cf. The Hind and the Panther, III. 750—54:

"Still thank yourselves, you cry; your noble race

We banish not, but they forsake the place:

Our doors are open. True, but ere they come,

You toss your censuring Test and fume the room;

As if 'twere Toby's rival to expel,

And fright the fiend who could not bear the smell."

the sociable Spirit. Cf. VII. 41, "Raphael, The affable archangel," and XI. 234, where Adam says that Michael is not "sociably mild, as Raphael." The name means 'divine healer,' or 'health of God.' Raphael and Michael (who in bks. VI. and XI. is entrusted with high duties by the Almighty) are archangels, and therefore intermediaries between Heaven and earth. Addison considered that "the angels are as much diversified in Milton, and distinguished by their proper parts, as the gods are in Homer or Virgil." See XI. 234, 235, note.

230. what, i.e. whatsoever, as often in M.

238. secure; it implies a false feeling of security.

248. after his charge received; M. uses this Latin idiom often; see I. 573.

249. Ardours, i.e. Seraphim. "The poet, I suppose, only made use of this term to diversify his language a little, as he is forced to mention the word Seraph and Seraphim in so many places" (Thyer).

254. self-opened; suggested, perhaps, by Ezekiel i.; see VI. 749—59 for an undoubted use of the Vision.

257, 258. i.e. no cloud or star being interposed to obstruct his sight; an absolute construction. however small; qualifying star; but some connect it with Earth in 260.

259. not unconform to, like to.

261—63. Cf. the well-known passage in I. 287—91. A similar but indirect reference to Galileo occurs in III. 588—90. Galileo died in 1642; "glass of Galileo" is only a general term for the instrument associated with his name. Cf. Pope, The Rape of the Lock, v. 137, 138:

“This Partridge soon shall view in cloudless skies,
When next he looks thro’ Galilæo’s eyes”;

“this” being Belinda’s lock, translated to the skies.

264—66. He has just said that the earth, as it appeared from afar to the angel, resembled the regions in the moon as they appear to an astronomer; now he compares it to the dim speck in the distance which the pilot perceives when first he comes within sight of an island. Strictly, Delos (see x. 296, note) was, and Samos was not, one of the circular group of islands in the Ægæan called Cyclades (from κύκλος, ‘a circle’).

The lines as they stand in the First Ed. have no commas. Some editors place a comma before kens, making cloudy spot the accusative and taking Delos...appearing as an absolute construction. It seems to me preferable to make Delos or Samos the object after kens—with cloudy spot in apposition.

269, 270. The metaphor is that of separating grain from the chaff; cf. Isaiah xxx. 24, “clean provender, which hath been winnowed with the shovel and with the fan.” Fan is from Lat. vannus, whence also van = ‘a wing’ (II. 927). M. may have recollected Fairfax, Tasso, xviii. 49, “with nimble fan the yielding air she rent.” winnows, parts, cleaves; cf. Thomson, Spring:

“their self-taught wings

Winnow the waving element”

(i.e. the air). There is a similar use of the word in Tennyson’s early poem The Kraken. For buxom = ‘yielding,’ see the note on II. 842.

271—74. Cf. Fairfax, Tasso, xvii. 35, 36:

“As when the new-born Phoenix doth begin
To fly to Ethiopæ-ward, at the fair bent
Of her rich wings, strange plumes and feathers thin,
Her crowns and chains, with native gold besprent,
The world amazed stands; and with her fly
An host of wond’ring birds, that sing, and cry:
So past Armida, look’t on, gaz’d on so.”

A similar passage occurs in Dryden’s lines to the Duchess of York in the Preface to Annus Mirabilis.

Most accounts describe the Phoenix as a solitary bird, living “in the Arabian woods” (S. A. 1700) for 500 years (so say Herodotus and Ovid, Metamorphoses xv. 395); at the end of that time (but Pliny who also tells the story—Nat. Hist. x. 2—gives the period as exactly 509 years), “when hœe (the bird) groweth old, and begins to decay, he builds himself a nest with the twigs and branches of the Canell or Cinamon, and Frankincense trees: and when hee hath filled it with all sort of sweet aromaticall spices, yieldeth up his life thereupon ...of his bones and marrow there breedeth at first as it were a little worme: which afterwards proveth to be a pretie bird" (Philemon Holland's Pliny, 1601, vol. I. p. 271). And the first thing that this "pretie bird" does is to collect the 'reliques' of its former body (the aforesaid "bones and marrow"), and carry them away to the temple of the Sun at Heliopolis in Lower Egypt. M. however says at Thebes, meaning the famous city of that name in Upper Egypt, which he calls "Egyptian" to distinguish it from the Bœotian town. Why he should prefer Thebes to Heliopolis does not appear; probably he is following some version of the legend—and there are many—which has not been traced. There is a famous application of the myth in S. A. 1699--1707.

271. lowering; cf. XI. 185, note.

272. gazed by all, i.e. gazed on; it is often a transitive verb in M.; cf. VIII. 258. What attracted the attention of the other birds was the plumage of the Phœnix—his body cæruleum fulgens (as M. writes in the Epitaphium Damonis, 188), his tail white, his neck and head golden. Cf. Spenser, Visions of Petrarch:

"I saw a Phœnix in the wood alone,
With purple wings, and crest of golden hewe;
Strange bird he was, whereby I thought anone,
That of some heavenly wight I had the vewe."

The splendour of Raphael's wings (also cerulean) caused him to be mistaken for a Phœnix.

sole bird. Only one Phœnix lived at a time; unica semper avis, says Ovid, Amores II. 6. 54, and M. imitates him in the Epitaphium Damonis, 187 (Phœnix, divina avis, unica terris). Cf. Lyly's Euphues, "as there is but one Phœnix in the world, so there is but one tree in Arabia, wherein she buyldeth."

276, 277. i.e. "he seemed again, what he really was, 'a seraph winged'; whereas in his flight he appeared, what he was not, a Phœnix" (Newton).

277—85. A favourite passage with Tennyson.

277, 278. Suggested, obviously, by Isaiah vi. 2: "Above it stood the seraphims: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly." M. has varied this account in certain details, borrowing something from the description of the Cherubim in Ezekiel i. and x. lineaments, his limbs generally; not merely the features of his face. So in VII. 477.

280. with regal ornament. This seems to show that the colour of the first pair was purple; cf. XI. 241—44. So Gray (Hymn to Adversity) speaks of "purple tyrants," i.e. 'born to the purple,' as the phrase is. Cf. too Pope, Essay on Criticism, 320, 321:

"A vile conceit in pompous words expressed
Is like a clown in regal purple dressed."

The contrast between the first and second pairs of wings, i.e. between purple and gold, is a favourite with M.; see IV. 596, 763, 764, VII. 479, IX. 429.

283. i.e. colours brilliant as the lustrous hues of heaven; the reference to gold suggests that the rich hues of sunset are meant.

Pope arrayed the Sylphs in The Rape of the Lock (II. 213) in robes "Dipt in the richest tincture of the skies"; and Wordsworth speaks of clouds "Grain-tinctured, drenched in empyrean light" (The Prelude, IV. 328).

283—85. the third etc. What hue is here intended? Dr Masson says violet—Dr Bradshaw, purple. Perhaps light blue—in fact, the colour technically called 'sky-blue.' This would suit the sense of grain, and it adds to the variety of the whole picture.

mail, coat of mail, armour. sky-tinctured; cf. Comus, 83, "These my sky-ropes, spun out of Iris' wool" (i.e. out of the rainbow). For tinctured = 'dyed,' cf. "vermeil-tinctured," Comus, 752. The "sky-worn Robes" of Pity represent one of the many Miltonisms in Collins (Ode to Pity, stanza 2).

285—87. Maia's son, Hermes (or Mercury), son of Zeus and Maia—the winged messenger of the gods. Probably M. is thinking of Æneid IV. 222 et seq., where Mercury is sent by Jupiter to bid Æneas leave Carthage; perhaps also of Hamlet, III. 4. 58, 59. The point of the simile lies in the fact that Mercury was typical of grace and beauty. So in the Masque of Oberon Jonson makes a character say that Oberon ("Beauty dwells but in his face") surpasses even Mercury, whereon Jonson's footnote comments, "Mercury...was called the giver of grace, χαριδότης, φαιδρὸς καὶ λευκός."

Some of Milton's readers would bethink them of the Jacobean Masque-stage, on which the god was a favourite character. These lines (285—87) would exactly describe the opening scene of Carew's famous Cælum Britannicum (known almost certainly to M.), and I doubt not that the heavenly herald "shook his plumes" in Jonson's Penates. For a similar episode, equally suggestive of the Masque-literature, which had evidently affected M. strongly, cf. the descent of Peace in the Nativity Ode, 45—52.

288. state, stately bearing, majesty; a common Shakespearian sense of a word then used with great variety of signification.

292, 293. The plants are often mentioned together—no doubt, from their association in Scripture. Cf. IX. 629, Comus, 991 ("Nard and cassia's balmy smells"). So in Fairfax, Tasso, xv. 53, "The winds breathed spikenard, myrrh, and balm around." The cassia spoken of in the Bible was a spice of the nature of cinnamon; cf. Cotgrave, "Casse aromatique: the aromaticall wood, barke, or bastard cinnamon." Cassia is now used of an extract of laurel-bark. The nard or spikenard (i.e. spiked nard, nardus spicatus) of Scripture (Mark xiv. 3, John xii. 3) was a fragrant Indian root. The epithet Ἰνδικός is often applied to it. The word comes from the Sanskrit nal, 'to smell.' Probably the Jews got the perfume and its name through the Persians.

295—97. In the First Ed. the lines read:

"and plaid at will

Her Virgin Fancies, pouring forth more sweet,
Wilde above rule or art; enormous bliss."

With this punctuation, enormous bliss is in apposition to the previous sentence; and pouring is intransitive. It appears to me a defensible text; but editors place a comma after art, and make bliss the object after pouring. more sweet, more sweetly (i.e. than now). enormous, out of all rule (Lat. norma, 'rule').

299. "And the Lord appeared unto him [Abraham] in the plains of Mamre: and he sat in the tent door in the heat of the day," Genesis xviii. 1. The whole chapter is in Milton's thoughts here where he describes Adam's entertainment of Raphael.

302. needs; so the Second Ed. ; the First has need.

306. milky. So in S. A. 550, "clear milky juice" is a periphrasis for fresh water. Perhaps in each case milky = 'sweet as milk.' Drayton (Polyolbion, XIII. 171) speaks of "milch dew," where he seems to mean 'sweet' or 'fragrant.'

318—20. Here, as in 71—73, M. remembers Comus, 706 et seq. where the magician argues that we should enjoy Nature's gifts and 'disburden' her of them:

"Who would be quite surcharged with her own weight,
And strangled with her waste fertility."

321, 322. inspired, i.e. filled with "the breath of life" (Gen. ii. 7). The name Adam is said to signify 'red earth.'

324, 325. i.e. she has only stored (cf. 314) or put away such things as are best kept awhile; for the rest, the trees and plants supply their daily wants. In 322 store is used in two senses, viz. 'storing,' and 'abundance.'

327. gourd, i.e. melons of various sorts.

328. as = 'that' is common in Elizabethan E.

331—49. "The housewifery of our first parent" (Addison).

333. choice to choose. "This sort of jingle is very usual in Milton, as to move motion, VIII. 130.... And it is not unusual in the best classick authors, as in... Æneid XII. 680" (Newton). Verbal repetition of the sort is thoroughly Elizabethan. Mr Bond in his introductory Essay to Lyly's Works (I. 120—24) notes that it is one of the characteristic features of style in Euphues; imitated, doubtless, from the classics. It explains and confirms the Folio's reading in Macbeth, v. 3. 44, where emendations like load or grief for stuff, or fraught for stuff'd, really proceed from ignorance of Elizabethan usage.

334—36. The punctuation of the First and Second Eds. (which I have retained) seems to show that the sense is—'tastes which are inelegant if not well joined.' Some take inelegant adverbially—'not to mix inelegantly tastes which are not well joined.' Either way, cf. IX. 1017, 1018. bring, i.e. to bring—dependent on contrived: one taste is to induce another. kindliest, most natural; cf. "the kindly fruits of the earth" (The Litany).

338. Earth, all-bearing mother; παμμήτηρ γῆ; Omniparens.

338—41. He supposes the garden of Eden to produce the fruits for which in after-times different parts of the world were famous; and, as usual, he selects places round the names of which cluster literary (especially classical) associations.

339. middle shore, i.e. between the East and West Indies; the countries on the seaboard of the Mediterranean are meant.

340. Pontus, in the N.E. region of Asia Minor, on the coast of the Euxine or Black Sea, was noted for its fruit and nut trees. From the town of Cerasus the cherry is said to have been introduced into Europe by Lucullus, together with its name (Gk. κέρασος). In Philemon Holland's Pliny (1601) we find: "Filberds and Hazels...also are a kind of nut. They came out of Pontus into Natolia and Greece, and therefore they be called Ponticke nuts. These Filberds are covered with a soft bearded [cf. 342] huske," vol. I. p. 446. He mentions similarly the introduction of the cherry-tree into Italy from Pontus (p. 448).

Punic coast, i.e. Africa, more particularly Carthage; it was remarkable for at least one kind of fruit, as the anecdote of Cato and the figs reminds us. Cf. Holland's Pliny, "touching the Affricane Figs, many men prefer [them] before all others," I. 442.

340, 341. Alcinous was the king of the Phæaciens, a fabulous race whom Homer places in the island of Scheria (afterwards identified with Corcyra, now Corfu—whence Corcyra was called by Roman poets Phæacia tellus; but probably Scheria was quite mythical). He entertained Odysseus, and Homer describes his palace and gardens at length. M. refers in two other passages to those books (VI.—XIII.)

of the Odyssey in which Odysseus stays "where Alcinous reigned"; cf. the Vacation Exercise, 48—52 (alluding to Od. VIII.), and P. L. IX. 439—41. See also his third Elegy, 43, 44:

Non dea tam variis ornavit floribus hortos Alcinoi Zephyro Chloris amata levi.

342. rined; some texts print rind (i.e. the noun); but the First and Second Eds. read rin'd, and M. meant it to be a participial adjective, 'having a smooth rine (i.e. rind).' I think that we may fairly hyphen the words and make a compound "smooth-rined," on the analogy of "smooth-dittied," "smooth-haired," in Comus, 86, 716, and "smooth-shaven" in Il Penseroso, 66. It seems to me best to make the adj. qualify coat.

345. Cf. Comus, 46, 47:

"Bacchus, that first from out the purple grape Crushed the sweet poison of misused wine."

inoffensive, not intoxicating, as it became through "the later invention of fermenting the juice of the grape" (Thyer). must, new wine; Lat. mustum. Cf. The Faerie Queene, VII. 7. 39. meaths, sweet beverages.

347, 348. nor...wants. The construction seems to be due to a combination of the personal use of want (which here would be plural) and the impersonal, which is singular='there wants.' "An abundance of impersonal verbs is a mark of an early stage in a language.... There are many more impersonal verbs... in Elizabethan than in modern English" (Abbott).

349. the shrub unfumed. "That is, not burnt and exhaling smoke as in fumigations, but with its natural scent" (note in Todd).

354—57. One of those passing touches in which M. reveals his republicanism and dislike of ostentation.

Scan retinue, as in P. R. II. 419, "What followers, what retinue canst thou gain?" So in Tennyson, Aylmer's Field, "The dark retinue reverencing death"; and in Guinevere. Cf. revenue in Shakespeare, e.g. in Hamlet, III. 2. 63. bismear'd; editors compare Horace's aurum vestibis illitum (Odes IV. 9. 14).

360—62. See III. 736—38. Cf. Adam's meeting with Michael in XI. 249, and 296—98.

for; the clause gives the reason why Adam has addressed the angel as "Native of Heaven." Cf. Arcades, 26, 27:

"Stay, gentle Swains, for, though in this disguise,

I see bright honour sparkle through your eyes";

where "for I see" explains why they have been called "gentle," i.e. well-born. Cf. II. 12—14, X. 460—62.

371. Virtue. The word must not be pressed, as in P. L. Raphael is an archangel (cf. VII. 41). Heywood in his Hierarchie (1635) ranks Raphael among the Powers (ἐξουσίαι).

378. Pomona, the Roman goddess of fruit (Lat. pomum); she "might well be supposed to have a delightful arbour" (Newton).

381, 382. Alluding to the judicium Paridis. The three goddesses, Hera, Athena and Aphrodite, each claimed the golden apple inscribed with the words "to the fairest" which Eris (Strife) had thrown among the guests at the nuptials of Peleus and Thetis. The matter was referred to the shepherd Paris (afterwards the lover of Helen), who decided in favour of Aphrodite—"the fairest goddess feigned." Perhaps to many readers the story is most familiar through Tennyson's Cenone.

Ida, the "many-fountained" mountain (πολυπίδαξ Ἴδα, Iliad VIII. 47) in Mysia, Asia Minor. Spenser speaks of Paris as "The Shepheard of Ida that judged beauties Queene," in The Shepheards Calender, August.

384. virtue-proof, strong in (or 'through') virtue. Commonly in these compounds proof implies being strong against a thing. Thus in Love's Labour's Lost, v. 2. 513, shame-proof = 'strong against, i.e. impenetrable to, shame'; and in Arcades, 89, "branching elm star-proof" means that the leaves are so dense that the star-light cannot penetrate.

385—87. "And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favoured, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women," Luke i. 28. Cf. P. R. II. 66—68. second Eve; so Christ is "the last Adam," I Cor. xv. 45.

388. Cf. xi. 159, "Eve, rightly called Mother of all Mankind."

393. her, the table's; he avoids using its.

394. all autumn piled, i.e. had all the produce of the autumn piled on it; the auxiliary verb can easily be understood from 392.

394, 395. i.e. the different charms of spring and autumn (as we know them) were then united in one continuous season. Cf. IV. 266—68, which anticipates the metaphor ("danced") of this passage. Drummond, A Cypress Grove, uses the same image: "One year is sufficient to behold all the magnificence of nature, nay, even one day and night; for more is but the same brought again. This sun, that moon, these stars, the varying dance of the Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter, is that very same which the golden age did see" (Works, II. 256).

396. "A terrible bathos after the beautiful imagery, but shows Milton's simplicity" (Tennyson).

Addison had noted that the line is one of the few colloquialisms in Paradise Lost; another being x. 736.

407. We hear of "angels' food," Psalms lxxviii. 25. See 633.

409. as doth; the singular verb is required, substance (not substances) being understood from 408.

409—13. Cf. The Christian Doctrine, i. 7, "spirit being the more excellent substance, virtually and essentially contains within itself the inferior one (i.e. body); as the spiritual and rational faculty contains the corporeal," P. W. iv. 181. The drift of Milton's thought becomes clearer when we read lines 469 et seq., where he dwells upon what he conceives to be the radical connection between matter and spirit.

412. concoct, digest.

415—18. See 180—83.

419, 420. M. regards the spots in the moon as vapours not entirely assimilated to her substance, and therefore visible against their luminous background. So in VIII. 145, 146 he compares them to clouds. A somewhat similar notion is found in Pliny's Natural History; cf. Philemon Holland's translation: "Now that planets are fed doubtlesse with earthly moisture, it is evident by the Moone: which so long as she appeareth by the halfe in sight, never sheweth any spots, because as yet she hath not her full power of light sufficient, to draw humour unto her. For these spots be nothing els but the dregs of the earth, caught up with other moisture among the vapors" (1601 ed., vol. II. p. 7). It seems as if the true explanation of the spots, that they are unevennesses on the surface of the moon caused by mountains and valleys, were really known to Milton; cf. i. 287—91.

425, 426. For the poetic fancy that the sun rises from and sets in the sea, cf. Comus, 95—97.

427, 428. The introduction of nectar (cf. 633) was doubtless due to its classical associations as the drink of the gods. There are occasions when Milton's classical touches seem a little out of harmony with the Scriptural character of his theme. Instances of this confusion of effect are very marked in Lycidas.

428, 429. A recollection of Arcades, 50, "[I] from the boughs brush off the evil dew." Everyone will recall Gray's "Brushing with hasty steps the dew away," Elegy, 99. The emphatic word is "mellifluous": the dews of Eden are of no common kind.

430. pearly grain, i.e. dew-drops; cf. 2, 746, 747. But some take it to mean manna; cf. Exodus xvi. 14.

433. nice, dainty, fastidious. It is a characteristic epithet of the 18th century, "Augustan" school of writers; cf. Pope, Essay on Criticism, 285, 286:

"Thus critics of less judgment than caprice, Curious, not knowing, not exact but nice."

434—36. i.e. the angel did actually eat—not merely appear to eat, as theologians explain in such cases. Bishop Newton remarks—"Several of the Fathers and ancient Doctors were of opinion, that the Angels did not really eat, but only seemed to do so; and they ground that opinion principally upon what the Angel Raphael says in the book of Tobit, xii. 19, 'All these days did I appear unto you, but I did neither eat nor drink, but you did see a vision.'"

We have already had an allusion to the Book of Tobit in lines 221—23; Keightley notes that it was evidently a favourite with M.; probably he was here glancing at the verse cited by Newton.

435. gloss, interpretation, viz. of passages like Gen. xix. 3.

438. what redounds, i.e. all that is redundant, not assimilated.

439—43. Cf. Of Reformation in England, II., "Their trade being, by...alchemy to extract heaps of gold and silver out of the drossy bullion of the people's sins," P. W. II. 403. The point of the present comparison is that—"as by means of the heat produced by coal, the alchemist can drive off the grosser particles and leave the pure gold remaining; so the internal heat of the angelic body drives off through the pores the innutritious particles of the food" (Keightley).

empiric, experimentising; Gk. ἐμπειρικός. Used with some notion of contempt = 'quack'; cf. Of Reformation, I., "Did he go about to pitch down his court, as an empiric does his bank, to inveigle in all the money of the country?" (P. W. II. 376). drossiest, full of impurities; cf. I. 704, and see The Faerie Queene, II. 7. 36, "Some scumd the drosse that from the metall came."

443, 444. Eve minister'd. The passage illustrates Milton's conception of the relation of the sexes.

444. flowing cups; a Shakespearian phrase; cf. Henry V. IV. 3. 55, "Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd," and Othello, II. 3. 60. So in Lovelace's famous Song, To Althea from Prison:

"When flowing cups run swiftly round
With no allaying Thames;
Our careless heads with roses bound,
Our hearts with loyal flames."

445. crowned, brimming; a reminiscence of Homer's (Iliad I. 470) κητήρας ἐπεστέψαντο ποτόιο (to which Vergil gave a fresh turn in his socii cratera coronant—Georg. II. 528). Cf. The Faerie Queene,

I. 3. 31, and Dryden, Æneid, III. 688, "My sire Anchises crowned a cup with wine" (where, however, corona is used literally of the chaplet of flowers).

447. Sons of God. The phrase (from Gen. vi. 2) has been taken to mean either the angels or the pious descendants of Seth. Here (and in P. R. II. 178, 179) M. apparently adopts the former view; but in XI. 621, 622, the other. Josephus, Antiq. I. iii. 1, makes "sons of God" = angelic beings.

451, 452. See XI. 531, note.

460. framed; it implies care, skill; cf. "wary" in 459.

467. i.e. what comparison can there be between Heaven's feasts and this? compare; not uncommon as a noun in Shakespeare; cf. Venus and Adonis, 8, "The field's chief flower sweet above compare." See VI. 705.

468. Hierarch, member of the Hierarchies, i.e. 'heavenly being'; used once elsewhere, XI. 220 (of Michael).

469 et seq. This is one of the passages in which the treatise on The Christian Doctrine is valuable as explaining Milton's philosophical and theological views. Chapter 7 of the first book treats "Of the Creation," and he expounds at great length his conception of the "one first matter." His views, as admirably summarised by Dr Masson, amount to this—"that all created Being, whether called soul or body, consists of but one primordial matter, a direct efflux from the very substance of the Eternal and Infinite Spirit.....that there are graduated varieties or sorts of this first material efflux from Deity, all radically one, but differentiated into an ascending series of forms, from the inorganic as the lowest, up to the vegetable, thence to the animal, thence to the human, and so to the angelic, or nearest in nature to the Divine original." This passage in fact gives us what Adam afterwards (509) calls "the scale of Nature."

The long discourses and explanations which Milton puts in the mouth of Raphael seem to come much more naturally from him, an archangel, than the discourses with which Beatrice enlightens Dante in the Paradiso, e.g. on Free Will (v.), the Atonement (VII.), the motion of the heavenly bodies, such as the Primum Mobile (XXVII.), the Creation (XXIX.).

471. created all, i.e. all things created such (namely "good") to a perfect degree, and all made of one first original matter. Cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 7, "For the original matter of which we speak, is not to be looked upon as an evil or trivial thing, but as intrinsically good, and the chief productive stock of every subsequent good. It was a substance, and derivable from no other source than from the fountain of every substance, though at first confused and formless, being afterwards adorned and digested into order by the hand of God" (P. W. IV. 179). Cf. VII. 233.

The influence of these lines is very marked in the Essay on Man, I.; cf. especially 233—46, and the great passage, "All are but parts of one stupendous whole" etc.

478. This idea (cf. 497) of body refining into spirit (i.e. of matter passing from a lower to a higher stage) is very characteristic of Milton. Cf. Comus, 459—63:

"Till oft converse with heavenly habitants
Begin to cast a beam on the outward shape,
The unpolluted temple of the mind,
And turns it by degrees to the soul's essence,
Till all be made immortal."

In the same speech he passes (467—69) to the converse idea that, as the body by self-discipline may become soul, so the soul by self-indulgence may become body:

"The soul grows clotted by contagion,
Imbodies, and imbrutes, till she quite lose
The divine property of her first being."

Cf. again VI. 660, 661, IX. 166. Newton thinks, very justly, that the whole idea was suggested by the Scriptural doctrine (cf. 1 Cor. xv.) of a natural body changed into a spiritual; perhaps also the influence of Plato is to be traced; cf. the notes on the passage in Comus.

482. To take the first two feet as cases of inverted rhythm gives a perfectly Miltonic effect—"spirits | ódor|ous" etc.

483. scale, ladder, Lat. scala; cf. 509, VIII. 591. Pope speaks of the continuity of Nature, "Where, one step broken, the great scale's destroyed," Essay on Man, I. 244. Cf. also Thomson, Spring:

"who knows, how raised to higher life,

From stage to stage, the vital scale ascends?"

sublimed, raised; the metaphor (as in I. 235) is probably from the science of chemistry, in which to sublime is to 'raise or elevate by heat.' Cf. Bacon, "Metals are sublimed by joining them with mercury or salts." Cf. the chemical term 'sublimate.'

487—90. This contrast between intuition and discourse (in its old sense) occurs often: intuition, as its derivation (Lat. intueri, 'to look into') implies, being the faculty of seeing into things straightway and apprehending truth without any process of reasoning: discourse, the lower faculty of understanding things by means of reasoning processes. M. naturally assigns the higher power to the angels; so in The Christian Doctrine, I. 9, he says that the good angels understand by means of "revelation." Compare the analysis of the different types of the intellectual faculty in the Purgatorio, XVIII., and the Paradiso, XXIX.; also Browne, Religio Medici, I. xxxiii.

493. proper, i.e. my own; Lat. proprius.

499. The underlying doctrine (taught by many of the Fathers) is that Adam, had he not sinned and thereby become "mortal" (VIII. 331), i.e. liable to death, would have been translated to Heaven.

504. your fill, i.e. enjoy to your fill. This adverbial use is Biblical; cf. Deuteronomy xxiii. 24, "When thou comest into thy neighbour's vineyard, then thou mayest eat grapes thy fill at thine own pleasure." M. has the expression (now colloquial) in Sonnet XIV. 14, "And drink thy fill of pure immortal streams." Cf. Leviticus xxv. 19, "And the land shall yield her fruit, and ye shall eat your fill."

509, 510. "Matter" (472) is the "centre," and "Nature" the "scale" which reaches to the utmost of our conceptions, all round. By ascending this ladder, i.e. by the study of Nature, we are led to God (Richardson).

520. "The sentences here are very short, as everything ought to be in the preceptive way. Quicquid præcipies, esto brevis, is the rule of Horace de Arte Poetica, 335" (Newton).

525—34. A discourse on free will and predestination, similar to that in III. 96—128. It is one of the subjects whereof the fallen angels dispute in II. 557—61; and of course M. treats it at great length in The Christian Doctrine, P. W. IV. 43—77.

535. Cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 3, "in assigning the gift of free will, God suffered both men and angels to stand or fall at their own uncontrolled choice" (P. W. IV. 38).

538. i.e. on no other surety; in these cases none, from its peculiar position, expresses emphasis. Cf. XI. 612.

543. from what...into what. An antithetic turn of phrase used by M. more than once. Cf. I. 91, 92.

546—48. Cf. the allusion to "celestial voices" in IV. 680—88.

552. single is yet so just, i.e. since he has laid on us only one command, whereas he might have imposed many, we ought to feel bound to obey that command, even if it were not "just," as it is.

556, 557. relation, report, account; a common Elizabethan use. Cf. The Tempest, v. 164. Richardson noted the Horatian reminiscence (Odes II. 13. 29, 30) in 557:

*Utrumque sacro digna silentio
Mirantur umbræ dicere.*

563. We may compare the long episodic description that follows of the expulsion of the apostate angels from Heaven with Æneas' narrative to Dido of the fall of Troy and of his subsequent fortunes. Æneas' monologue occupies two books (II., III.) of the Æneid; Raphael is briefer; his narrative closes at 892 of bk. VI. Such episodical narratives of what preceded the commencement of the action of the poem have been part of the machinery of the epic, since Homer made Odysseus relate his adventures to Alcinous (Newton).

Milton was bound to describe these events; and he appropriately lays the description in the mouth of one who had taken part in them. The obvious danger that besets a passage of this kind in which we are lifted from earth to Heaven is, that the poet may seem to materialise and degrade things spiritual and supernatural by delineating them under imagery and in language associated with things corporal and earthly. M. warns us of this difficulty at the outset (571—74); and hints that after all earth may be but a symbol of Heaven—an idea which under various forms has occurred to many thinkers. Dante also dwells on the impossibility of describing ("figuring") Paradise (XXIII. 61). The other "episode" in Paradise Lost occurs in bks. XI., XII.; see note on XI. 356—58. Newton notes that the form of the beginning (563, 564) of Raphael's narrative recalls the opening words of Æneas in Æneid II. 3.

Spenser's two Hymnes—Of Heavenly Love and Of Heavenly Beautie—are like an introduction to Milton's narrative of the fall of the angels and the subsequent creation of Man and the Universe. No part of Spenser presents closer parallels to Paradise Lost.

566. remorse, pity.

578. these Heavens, i.e. the sky above them; not the upper Heaven or Empyrean in which the Deity dwells (Masson).

579. upon her centre poised. See VII. 242. In each passage there is an allusion to Ovid's account of the earth hanging ponderibus librata suis (Metamorphoses I. 13). So Pope, Temple of Fame:

"In air self-balanced hung the globe below,

Where mountains rise and circling oceans flow."

when on a day. This curious phrase occurs in Cowper's Heroism, II.

580—82. M. refers to the definition of 'Time as the measure of motion'; cf. Aristotle, Physics IV. II. 219, τοῦτο γὰρ ἐστὶν ὁ χρόνος, ἀριθμὸς κινήσεως κατὰ τὸ πρότερον καὶ ὕστερον: and Phys. VIII. I. 251, εἰ δὴ ἐστὶν ὁ χρόνος κινήσεως ἀριθμὸς ἢ κινήσεως τῆς... The same idea had occurred in Plato, Timæus 37 D—39 D. Cf. Milton's second epitaph on Hobson the carrier:

"Time numbers motion, yet (without a crime

'Gainst old truth) motion numbered out his time."

Milton's purpose in 580—82 is to justify his introduction of the notion of Time in the word "day," 579: for that which he is describing took place before the creation of the universe: whereas, says Plato, "days and nights and months and years were not before the universe was created...he (the Deity) devised the generation of them along with the fashioning of the universe," Timæus 37 D; and again, "Time then has come into being along with the universe"—χρόνος δ' οὖν μετ' οὐρανοῦ γέγονεν, Timæus 38 B. See Spenser's Hymne of Heavenly Love, 22—28. It would be impossible to discuss the matter: we can only note that M. dissents from Plato—both here and in The Christian Doctrine, I. 7, where he writes: "There is no sufficient foundation for the common opinion, that motion and time (which is the measure of motion) could not, according to the ratio of priority and subsequence, have existed before this world was made" (P. W. IV. 185).

by...past and future, i.e. by the standard of—or, in relation to; cf. Aristotle's κατὰ τὸ πρότερον καὶ ὕστερον, and the extract in italics from The Christian Doctrine.

582—87. Editors refer to 1 Kings xxii. 19, Job i. 6.

583. great year. He has borrowed Plato's conception of the Annus Magnus. This was the vast period (estimated by Mr Adam in his pamphlet on the Nuptial Number of Plato to be 36,000 years) at the close of which the heavenly spheres, having completed their several revolutions, come back to the position whence they started. Cf. the passage from Censorinus (a scientific writer of Rome of the 3rd century A. D.) quoted by Mr Newman, Politics of Aristotle, I. 576, Est præterea annus...quem solis lunæ vagarumque quinque stellarum orbes conficiunt, cum ad idem signum, ubi quondam simul fuerunt, una referuntur. Cf. too Heywood's Hierarchy (1635), p. 147:

"There is a yeare, that in Times large progresse
Is Annus Magnus call'd:.....

.....in this 'tis sayd,

The Stars and Planets, howsoever sway'd,
Be they or fixt, or wandring; in this yeare
Returne to their first state, and then appeare
In their owne Orbs, unwearied, and instated
As fresh and new as when at first created"; and the Religio Medici, I. vi.: "To see ourselves again, we need not look for Plato's year; every man is not only himself...men are lived over again." Marvell (The First Anniversary, 17, 18), contrasting unprogressive rulers with Cromwell under an astronomical simile, says:

"And though they all Platonic yeares should reign,
In the same posture [they] would be found again."

M. conceives some such Platonic cycles to have existed "in eternity," and the close of one of them to have been marked by the event of which he proceeds to speak. There is a glance at the same thought in 861, 862. Wordsworth in the poem on his infant daughter ("Hast thou then survived!") evidently had Milton's lines in mind, though he seems to have quoted from memory, substituting "Heaven's eternal year" for "great."

587. Hierarchs...orders; see Appendix, pp. 680—82.

588. advanced, uplifted; cf. I. 536, and King John, II. 207, "These flags of France, that are advanced here."

589. gonfalons, flags, ensigns.

592—94. i.e. on the standards are portrayed scenes illustrative of zeal or love. emblazed; see I. 538.

594. orbs, circles; cf. Pope, The Dunciad, IV. 79, 80:

"Not closer, orb in orb, conglobed are seen
The buzzing bees about their dusky queen."

So in The Rape of the Lock, 283, 284:

"He spoke; the spirits from the sails descend.
Some, orb in orb, around the nymph extend."

597. in bliss; cf. VI. 892. embosomed. M. has the same allusion (John i. 18) in III. 169, 239, and 279. Cf. too Spenser, An Hymne of Heavenly Love, 134—37:

"Out of the bosome of eternall blisse,
In which he reigned with his glorious syre,
He downe descended, like a most demisse
And abject thrall, in fleshes fraile attyre."

598. flaming mount; see 643. Cf. Exodus xix.

599. Cf. III. 380, "Dark with excessive bright." Dante says of angels: "in their faces the eye was dazed, like a faculty which by excess is confounded" (Purgatorio, VIII. 35, 36). Cf. also the Paradiso, V. (end).

600. progeny of light. Cf. III. 3, "God is light."

603—608. Upon the peculiar theological bearing of this passage it is unnecessary to comment; we have—III. 383 (note)—already seen Milton's Arianism. Many texts of Scripture are alluded to here. Cf. Ps. ii. 6, 7 ("Yet have I set my King upon my holy hill of Zion.... Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee"), Ps. cx. 1 ("The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand"), Ephes. iv. 15 ("the head, even Christ"), Gen. xxii. 16 ("By myself have I sworn, saith the LORD"—see also Isai. xlv. 23), Philip. ii. 10, 11, Heb. i. 5.

"Milton was very cautious what sentiments and language he ascribed to the Almighty, and generally confined himself to the phrases and expressions of Scripture" (Newton).

605. anointed. 'Messiah' means 'anointed.'

610. individual; in the literal sense 'not to be divided'=inseparable. So Adam called Eve "an individual solace dear," IV. 486. M. uses dividual= 'separable or separate' in VII. 382, XII. 85.

613. blessed vision; the "beatific vision" (I. 684).

614. utter darkness; cf. I. 72, III. 16.

618. solemn days, holy or festival days, Lat. solemnis.

620—27. Alluding again to the music of the spheres; see 178, note. He compares the rhythmic movements of the angels to the revolutions ("wheels") of the planets and fixed stars.

623. eccentric; used three times by M.—here and in III. 575, VIII. 83; in each case there is a reference to its astronomical sense. Applied to the heavenly bodies eccentric signifies 'moving in an orb that deviates from a circle,' i.e. it connotes motion which is not strictly circular. Here the "mystical dance" does not describe true circles.

624. then...when; his favourite form of emphasis; cf. 894, 895, IV. 838, 970. So Pope, Essay on Criticism, 502, 503:

"Then most our trouble still when most admired,
And still the more we give, the more required."

Similarly we find there...where.

627. now; not in the First Ed., inserted in the Second.

633. Angels' food. See 407, note. rubied nectar, i.e. Homer's ρέκταρ ἐρυθρόν. rubied= 'red as rubies'; in S. A. 543, "dancing ruby" is said of sparkling wine. Cf. Fitzgerald's Omar Khayyám, v.:

"But still a Ruby kindles in the Vine."

636—41. In the First Ed. the passage reads thus:

"They eat, they drink, and with refection sweet
Are fill'd, before th' all bounteous King, who showrd
With copious hand, rejoycing in thir joy."

It will be seen that the Second Ed. has three additional lines. The word refection (refreshment) is not used elsewhere by M.

637, 638. communion; we are reminded of the doctrine of the 'Communion of Saints.' Cf. the "fellowships of joy" in XI. 80, and the "sweet societies" of Lycidas, 179. Newton noted the allusion in 638 to Ps. xxxvi. 8, 9, "thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures. For with thee is the fountain of life."

642. ambrosial, fragrant; an epithet of night in Iliad II. 57.

exhaled; Keightley connects it with clouds, but I think that VII. 255 shows that it belongs to night.

643. See VI. 4—12, VII. 584—86. The "high mount of God" is what M. in The Christian Doctrine, I. 7, calls "the highest heaven... as it were the supreme citadel and habitation of God" (P. W. IV. 182).

He cites the texts upon which he has based this conception—among them being 1 Kings viii. 27 (“behold, the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee”), and Isaiah lvii. 15 (“I dwell in the high and holy place”).

645. night comes not there. See 162, and cf. Rev. xxi. 25, “for there shall be no night there.”

646, 647. deus; used, I suppose, figuratively (though some take it in the literal sense), as in Richard III. iv. 1. 84. Cf. iv. 6, 4—16. See Il Penseoso, 146 (“the dewy-feathered sleep”).

unsleeping: “Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep,” Ps. cxxi. 4. The same is said of Zeus, Iliad II. 1—3.

652. Cf. III. 357, 358 (note), XI. 79, Lycidas, 174, and the Synnet, The Religious Memory, 14. We may remember Vergil’s description (Aeneid vi. 673—75) of the lives of the blessed in Elysium: \

“In groves we live, and lie on mossy beds

By crystal streams, that murmur through the meads” (Dryden).

653, 654. pavilions, tents=tabernacles (from Lat. tabernaculum, a dimin. of taberna, ‘a shed or hut’). Tabernaculum is used in the Vulgate of the tent that sheltered the Ark, whence it passed into the Authorised Version. Milton has the word (=‘tent’) satirically in his prose: “They had found a good tabernacle, they sat under a spreading vine, their lot was fallen in a fair inheritance” (P. W. II. 374).

655. in their course. Is he thinking of the Temple-service, and the division of offices among the Levites? See iv. 561, note.

657. alternate, sing in turns. Cf. iv. 682—84, where Adam speaks of the celestial voices he hears at night.

658, 659. Satan; cf. I. 82.

his former name; what this was we are not told, because, as M. says in I. 361—63, the names which the apostate angels had before their fall were “blotted out and razed,” so that there might be no memorial of them. Cf. vi. 373—85.

of the first. Cf. Milton’s minor treatise on divorce, The Judgment of Martin Bucer, “a city for learning and constancy in the true faith honourable among the first,” P. W. III. 279. The idiom is something like the Gk. ἐν τοῖς πρώτοις.

665. impaired, perhaps ‘made unequal,’ inferior, Lat. impar. Cf. vi. 691.

671. his next subordinate, Beelzebub; see II. 299, 300, note. In the scene (vi.) in Marlowe’s Dr Faustus in which Lucifer and Beelzebub appear, the former announcing himself to Faustus says:

“I am Lucifer,

And this is my companion-prince in hell”;

cf. "companion dear" in 673. No doubt, M. knew Marlowe's play; cf. 1. 254, 255, IV. 20—23 and 75—78 with Dr Faustus, III. 75—77, V. 119—21. The suggestion has been made—not unreasonably, I think—that the Theatrum Poetarum (1675) of Milton's nephew Edward Phillips, in which short biographies and notices of the poets are given, "especially the most eminent of all ages," reflects in some degree Milton's own opinions. It is significant therefore that Phillips calls Marlowe "a kind of a second Shakespeare," and specially mentions this tragedy: "of all that he hath written to the Stage his Dr Faustus hath made the greatest noise." The judgment pronounced on Shakespeare himself is plainly Miltonic, viz. that "where the polishments of Art are most wanting, as his Learning was not extraordinary, he pleaseth with a certain wild and native elegance"; cf. L'Allegro, 133, 134.

673. sleep'st thou...? Cf. Iliad II. 60—62.

674. and rememberest, i.e. though remembering; cf. II. 730.

684. the chief, i.e. chiefs (which Bentley read).

688, 689. homeward...the North. Cf. 726, 755, 756, and the Argument of the book. So in Tennyson, The Last Tournament:

"Thieves, bandits..."

Make their last head like Satan in the North."

Bunyan follows the same tradition; cf. The Holy War: "Now upon Mount Diabolus, which was raised on the north side of the town [Mansoul], there did the tyrant [Diabolus] set up his standard" ("Temple" ed., p. 252).

According to some systems of demonology the four quarters of the world were assigned to four angels prior to the expulsion of the rebels from Heaven. Commonly Lucifer was made monarch of the north—in allusion to Isai. xiv. 12, 13, "How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning!.....For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north." But the systems varied; thus Dr Ward in his edition of Marlowe's Faustus notes that in the old Faust-book it is Beelzebub who rules in the north, in Septentrione, while Lucifer rules in Oriente; cf. the title "prince of the East" applied to him by Marlowe (Faustus, v. 104).

The general reference to the north as the dominion of evil spirits might be illustrated from many sources. Greene in Friar Bacon speaks of a demon Asmenoth as "guider of the north" (ix. 144), and "ruler of the north" (xi. 109). Cf. 1 Henry VI. v. 3. 6. In the Appendix added in 1665 to Scot's Discourse on Devils there are similar references—e.g. in chap. VIII., "Luridan is a Familiar Domestick Spirit of the North, who is now become servant to Balkin, Lord and King of the Northern Mountains" (p. 485, Nicholson's ed.); and again in chap. ix., "These are the names...of Olympick Angels, governing the North, and ruling over every Airy Spirit that belongs unto the Northern Climate," p. 487. A correspondent of Notes and Queries gives similar references in the Old English poem "The Fall of the Angels," and Piers Plowman, B text, l. 118, and quotes Skelton, Colin Clout:

"Some say ye sit in trones
Like princes aquilonis."

Dr Cheyne remarks that there was "a mysterious sanctity attaching to the north," and that we have indications of this in Levit. i. 11, Ezek. i. 4, Job xxxvii. 22 (Prophecies of Isaiah, 3rd ed., l. 92).

It has been suggested that M. intended the passage as a sneer at Scotland, the headquarters of Presbyterianism, to which he was bitterly hostile (see the note on S. A. 1461—71); but the notion seems fanciful.

689—91. "He begins his revolt with a lie. So well doth Milton preserve the character given of him in Scripture, John viii. 44, 'he is a liar, and the father of it'" (Newton).

702. suggested, i.e. by Satan, 685—91.

703. ambiguous words, hints of disloyalty; cf. Aeneid II. 98, 99, hinc spargere voces...ambiguas. For the obedience which his followers pay to Satan, cf. l. 331—38.

708. Alluding to Satan's subsequent title Lucifer = 'day-star.'

710. See II. 692, VI. 156, and cf. Spenser, An Hymne of Heavenly Love, 83, 84:

"The brightest Angell, even the Child of Light, Drew millions more against their God to fight."

713, 714. "And there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne," Rev. iv. 5. When M. speaks of Heaven his language, as we have seen, is full of reminiscences of the Revelation.

716. Cf. the Nativity Ode, 119, "But when of old the Sons of Morning sung." The phrase is from Isaiah xiv. 12.

734. lightening. I should be inclined to take it as a noun, in apposition to "Son"—cf. 457, 458—did not the First Ed. print it Light'ning, which implies that it was meant to be a participle (divine = 'divinely'). Contrast VI. 642: there it is a noun, and the First Ed. has Lightning; so in I. 175, II. 66.

736, 737. Cf. II. 190, 191, note.

739. illustrates, makes illustrious. Richardson (Dict.) cites Hakluyt, Voyages, I. 352, "to the illustrating of the Queenes most excellent Maiestie, the honour and commoditie of this her highnesse realme." So in Ben Jonson's fine saying: "Good men are the stars, the planets of the ages wherein they live and illustrate the times" (Discoveries, LXXXVI.).

740. event, issue, result, Lat. eventus; a common Elizabethan sense. Cf. I. 624, Much Ado About Nothing, I. 2. 7, Hamlet, IV. 4. 50.

744. an host. So the First Ed.; we should say a. Cf., however, Antony and Cleopatra, II. 5. 87, "An host of tongues"; and 2 Henry VI. III. I. 342, "To send me packing with an host of men."

745—47. "What an imagination the old man had! Milton beats everyone in the material sublime" (Tennyson).

Wordsworth uses impearl similarly of dew in To the Daisy.

748. regencies, dominions; the abstract (used passively) for the concrete. So we find reign = 'realm'; cf. I. 543, and Gray's Elegy, 12, "her ancient solitary reign."

750. in their triple degrees. Cf. Spenser, An Hymne of Heavenly Love, 64, 65:

"There they in their trinall triplicities
About him wait, and on his will depend."

753, 754. i.e. elongated from its form as a globe.

Among the Schoolmen it was a vexed question, "whether some angels fell from each of the Orders." In the Paradiso, xxix., Dante only says "a part of the Angels," but in the Convivio, II. 6. 95—99, "he had expressly declared that some, perhaps a tenth, of each Order fell" (note in "Temple" ed.).

759. See VI. 364, note.

762—66. The main verb is called. The allusion is to Isaiah xiv. 13 (see 688, 689, note), where the "mount of the congregation" may be Zion. See VII. 131.

763. affecting, aiming at, seeking to obtain; cf. Lat. affectare. Cf. III. 206, "affecting Godhead," and 2 Henry VI. IV. 7. 104, "Have I affected wealth or honour? Speak."

768. pretending...commanded; cf. perhaps S. A. 212, "pretend they ne'er so wise," which may mean 'pretend to be wise.' M. is imitating the Lat. simulo; cf. Livy xxv. 8 [Hannibal] ægrum simulabat.

772. In the First Ed. there is only a comma at the end of this line and I see no occasion to change the punctuation. Satan addresses the angels by their habitual titles, and then sarcastically adds that he is not quite sure whether they ought still to claim those titles. For the same brevity of phrase, in which it is easy to trace the half-expressed train of thought in the speaker's mind, cf. 360—62, note. Keightley says, "it is evident there is a break at the end"—and marks the supposed break in his text.

782—88. See 606—608. Todd cites Richard II. I. 4. 33, "And had the tribute of his supple knee." See also Hamlet, III. 2. 66, and cf. Gray's fragment of a tragedy, Agrippina, 99—102:

"Rubellius lives,
And Sylla has his friends, though school'd by fear
To bow the supple knee, and court the times
With shows of fair obeisance."

The whole drift of this passage (782—88) may be contrasted with IV. 958—60, where Gabriel taunts Satan with his previous servility.

789, 790. i.e. if I may be sure that I know you aright, or if you know yourselves to be—as you are—sons of Heaven.

possessed; implying that formerly "Heaven" was equally enjoyed by all its inhabitants, but now has been usurped by the Almighty as His alone.

793. jar not with, harmonise with; a metaphor from music. Shakespeare uses the verb jar = 'to be discordant, out of tune' (cf. The Two Gentlemen of Verona, IV. 2. 67, King Lear, IV. 7. 16), and the noun jar = 'discord'; cf. As You Like It, II. 7. 5, "If he, compact of jars, grow musical." consist, are consistent with. Cf. Pope, Essay on Man, IV. 81, 82:

"But health consists with temperance alone,
And peace, O Virtue! peace is all thy own."

798. Scan edict, as in S. A. 301, the only other place in M. where it occurs. Shakespeare has both edict (A Midsummer-Night's Dream, I. 1. 151) and édict (1 Henry IV. IV. 3. 79), the modern accentuation.

798, 799. who without law, i.e. who, as it is, without the restraint of any law, avoid sin. Why, he contends, impose laws on those who need no law to make them walk aright?

799. The line is a well-known crux. I think that for this = 'for this reason, on this account' (cf. for that, 874), namely, that the angels are "without law." 'If,' argues Satan, 'we can do right without the restrictions of laws, surely that is a reason why we should not have a law-giving lord set over us.' The clause seems added as an afterthought, to be having no strict construction, but depending on some words like 'ought he' or 'is he' which the speaker has in his mind, though he does not express them. We must remember that the line is spoken, and that M. introduces into his speeches (see 772, note) just the kind of verbal irregularities, the swift turns of thought and phrase, that belong to oratory—such e.g. as we get constantly in Thucydides. They are frequent in S. A. where, as Coleridge happily said, the "logic of passion" often prevails over the "logic of grammar."

Some take for this = 'for this purpose': 'who can claim lordship for the purpose of introducing laws and edicts?'

Others interpret: 'who can in reason...introduce law and edict upon them?...much less for [i.e. because of] this introduction of law and edict claim the right of dominion?'

805. Abdiel, 'servant of God.'

807. The Seraphim typified ardour, and the idea is reflected appropriately in the passion ("flame") of Abdiel's speech.

809. Scan blasphemous, as in VI. 360.

819. flatly; cf. II. 143, "flat despair."

821. unsucceeded, having no successor, i.e. everlasting.

822—25. "Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?" Romans ix. 20, where observe the marginal reading "disputest with God." The thought is worked out in S. A. 307—14.

835—41. The main reference is to Colos. i. 16, 17; see 853—64. his Word; cf. III. 170, 383, notes.

842—45. The argument seems to be that Christ, by becoming the head of the angels, became in a measure one of them, and so ennobled their nature.

853—64. Contrast IV. 42, 43, where Satan admits (to himself) what he here denies, viz. that he and the other angels were created by God; and see IX. 146, 147. In The Christian Doctrine, I. 7, M. says, "That the angels were created at some particular period, we have the testimony of Numbers xvi. 22 and xxvii. 16"; and he instances other texts, among them being Colos. i. 16.

The great distinction drawn in the Paradiso, XXIX., between the good angels and the evil is that the former admitted their creation by the Almighty. Beatrice says to Dante (58—60): "Those whom thou seest here [in Paradise] were modest to acknowledge themselves derived from that same Excellence which made them swift to so great understanding."

857, 858. Cf. VIII. 251.

861, 862. See 583, note. fatal course, the course of fate. "Our author [says Newton] makes Satan a sort of fatalist...No compliment to fatalism to put it into the mouth of the Devil."

864. "Thy right hand shall teach thee terrible things," Ps. xlv. 4.

869. beseeking or besieging; another of those jingles which M. uses generally to express sarcasm or contempt—as here. Cf. I. 642. The Elizabethan writers may have adopted this literary artifice from the Italians; cf. Marlowe, 2 Tamburlaine, v. 3, "Hell and darkness pitch their pitchy tents," and Faustus (first chorus):

"We must perform
The form of Faustus' fortunes."

872. "And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters," Rev. xix. 6. It is, in character, essentially a Miltonic simile. Cf. his pamphlet Animadversions, 5: "O thou the ever-begotten Light and perfect Image of the Father!... Thou hast sent out the spirit of prayer upon thy servants over all the land to this effect, and stirred up their vows as the sound of many waters about thy throne" (P. W. III. 71).

Wordsworth applies the comparison to Milton himself in the first of his two Sonnets on Milton ("Thou hadst a voice whose sound was like the sea").

875. flaming Seraph; cf. 807, and see p. 681.

878—81. In the First Ed. there is no comma after crew, the construction being, 'I see thy fall determined, thy crew involved etc., and contagion spread' (i.e. three clauses dependent on I see), spread being a p.p. like determined and involved. Some editors place a comma after crew and make spread an infinitive—'I see thy crew, being involved etc., spread destruction' (i.e. only two clauses dependent on I see). "Foul contagion spread" occurs in Lycidas, 127.

886—88. See II. 327, 328, note. In his treatise Of Reformation in England, II, M. writes: "let him advise how he can reject the pastorly rod and sheephook of Christ, and those cords of love, and not fear to fall under the iron sceptre of his anger, that will dash him to pieces like a potsherd" (P. W. II. 412).

890. Cf. Numbers xvi. 26, "Depart, I pray you, from the tents of these wicked men"—an appropriate allusion, as Moses is there dissuading the congregation of Israel from joining Korah and his followers who, like Satan and his angels, were rebels. Cf. XI. 607, 608.

devoted, doomed. Abdiel's meaning, put rather tersely, is—"I do not fly because of your advice (871) or threats, but lest the wrath etc.'

893. his thunder: see VI. 834—38.

899. A favourite type of verse with M. and many other English poets. Cf. II. 185, III. 231. Perhaps, when he wrote this line (899) Milton had in mind his own position at the Restoration. The personal note is strong in his poetry. Cf. VI. 29—37, note.

906, 907. retorted, flung back; for this, the literal use, cf. Romeo and Juliet, III. 1. 169, Troilus and Cressida, III. 3. 101.

BOOK VI.

Addison evidently considered this book one of the greatest in the poem. He notes that our expectation has been raised by allusions to the struggle in books I. and II.

1, 2. the...Angel, Abdiel. champain, plains.

2—4. From Ovid, Metamorphoses II. 112—14:

ecce vigil nitido patrefecit ab ortu purpureas Aurora fores et plena rosarum atria.

Homer makes the Hours keep the gates of Olympus; cf. Giles Fletcher, Death of Elizabeth:

“The early Howres were readie to unlocke
The doore of Morne, to let abroad the Day.”

3. with rosy hand. Cf. Jonson, Masque of Oberon, “And with her rosy hand puts back the stars” (said of the morn). It is suggested by Homer’s ροδοδάκτυλος ἠώς, whence “rosy-fingered” became in poetry a traditional epithet of the dawn; cf. Crashaw’s pretty lines in To the Morning:

“And the same rosy-finger’d hand of thine
That shuts Night’s dying eyes shall open mine.”

4—12. See v. 643, 644. The notion of light and darkness “dislodging by turns,” the one going out as the other comes in, had its origin in Hesiod, Theogony 747, 748 (Newton).

8. vicissitude, alternation; cf. VII. 351.

10. obsequious, obedient, doing its duty (cf. 783); not in the modern depreciatory sense, ‘servile.’

11, 12. i.e. what is thought darkness in Heaven (where there is no night, v. 645) would seem twilight on earth.

19. in procinct, ready. “The Roman soldiers were said to stand in procinctu, when ready to give the onset” (Hume); from the noun procinctus, ‘a being prepared for battle.’ Cf. the p.p. procinctus, ‘prepared’—literally ‘girded up,’ from procingere, ‘to gird or tuck up the dress.’ M. uses succinct in that sense, III. 643.

29—37. Servant of God; see v. 805. Texts glanced at are: Mat. xxv. 21; 1 Tim. vi. 12; 2 Tim. iv. 7, “I have fought a good fight”; Ps. lxix. 7, “for thy sake I have borne reproach”; and 2 Tim. ii. 15.

Is Milton here thinking of himself? He too had sacrificed all to “the testimony of truth” (as he judged), and borne reproach for his allegiance to the cause of republicanism when the “revolted multitudes” went back to the old order of things and acclaimed the Restoration. There is a constant play of personal and contemporary allusion in his poems. See 462, XI. 542—46, 632—36, 808—18, and S. A. 697—700, 1457—72 (with the notes); and compare Dante’s allusions to his treatment by Florence, and her corruptions, e.g. in the Paradiso, XXXI. 37—39.

34. “Evill deedes may better then bad words be bore,” The Faerie Queene, IV. 4. 4.

42. right reason; cf. XII. 84. M seems to use the phrase = ‘conscience’; cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 2, “that feeling, whether we term it conscience or right reason” (P. W. IV. 15). Pope has it in a different sense = ‘the reasoning faculty’; cf. the Essay on Criticism, 211, 212:

“If once right reason drives that cloud away, Truth breaks upon us with resistless day”;

where the “cloud” is the pride that obscures our judgment. It was a term of the Stoics, reproduced in the Schoolmen’s phrase recta ratio. See Selden’s Table-Talk, CXXI. (“Reason”).

44—55. Revelation xii. 7—9.

44. Michael, ‘who is like unto God?’; being an archangel he is chosen to fulfil high office. In The Christian Doctrine, I. 9, M. writes: “There appears to be one who presides over the rest of the good angels, to whom the name of Michael is often given... Michael, the leader of the angels, is introduced (Rev. xii.) in the capacity of a hostile commander waging war with the prince of the devils, the armies on both sides being drawn out in battle array” (cf. 105—107). prince; cf. Dan. xii. 1, “Michael... the great prince.”

45, 46. Gabriel; cf. IV. 549, note. He is inferior to Michael (“next,” 45) because only an angel. Heywood (Hierarchy, 1635) draws the same distinction.

52. from God and bliss; cf. III. 61, 62.

53—55. Hell has already been created. Tartarus; cf. II. 69, note, 858.

56—59. A reminiscence of Exodus xix. 16, 18.

57, 58. to roll, i.e. smoke began to roll flames in wreaths. Keightley takes roll = ‘enroll, enwrap.’ reluctant, struggling, forcing their way through the smoke; a Latinism; luctantes flammæ occurs in Silius Italicus. Newton took reluctant in the opposite sense, ‘slow and unwilling to break forth,’ but the word has its Latin notion (‘struggling’) in Milton, except in IV. 311.

59, 60. the...trumpet. Cf. XI. 73—76, where the angels are summoned by a trumpet which M. suggests may be the one afterwards heard on Mount Horeb (Exod. xix. 16—19) :

“When God descended, and perhaps once more
To sound at general doom.”

gan blow, i.e. began; Shakespeare also omits to; cf. Coriolanus, II. 2. 119, “the din of war gan pierce.” Probably the omission was partly due to the old use of gan, the pret. of ginnen, as an auxiliary verb = ‘did.’ Thus in Spenser “gan blow” might mean ‘did blow’; and M. may have revived the idiom, as some think. But wherever he uses gan, ‘beginning’ is implied; cf. IX. 1016, X. 710, P. R. IV. 410.

62. stood for, fought for; cf. Coriolanus, II. 2. 45, IV. 6. 45.

63—68. The very similar scene in I. 549—62; there (as in Of Education) M. dwells on the influence of music.

in silence. “Homer thus marches his Grecians silent and sedate, Iliad III. 8” (Todd).

69. obvious, lying in their way—Lat. obvius; cf. XI. 374.

73—76. A simile that would appeal to Adam. “And Adam gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field,” Gen. ii. 20. See VII. 493.

Milton’s angels glide through the air like the classical gods (Newton).

79. to the North. See v. 688, 689, note. M. clearly places the conflict in some part of Heaven; but this was a point much disputed among theologians. Cf. Reginald Scot, Discourse on Devils (1584): “Now where this battell was fought...there is great contention. The Thomists say...in the empyrean heaven, where the abode is of blessed spirits.... Augustine and manie others saie...in the highest region of aier; others saie, in the firmament; others in paradise,” p. 423.

81—85. i.e. and at nearer view there bristled the banded powers. bristled; this seems to be the main verb; it conveys the same impression as Lat. horrere, Gk. φπλσσεω; cf. “horrent arms,” II. 513. Many editors take bristled as a p.p., supplying appeared from 79 as the main verb to go with powers in 85—an awkward ellipse surely. beams, shafts of the spears. various, varied, made diverse.

Heywood (Hierarchy, p. 341) says of the combat :

“No Lances, Swords, nor Bombards they had then,
Or other weapons now in use with men;
None of the least materiall substance made,
Spirits by such giue no offence or aid,
Onely spiritual Armes to them were lent.”

Milton’s description is throughout material and realistic. His battle is a Homeric fray, slightly idealised. Editors refer also to many passages in Ariosto and Tasso and Spenser (especially) which show what models Milton had in his mind when he pictured the single combats between the warrior angels.

84. argument, designs, subjects; a Latinism. Cf. the Epitaphium Damonis, 184, gemino celaverat argumento (said of an artist working designs on a goblet). Cf. too Milton's Lat. use of argument = 'subject-matter of a poem,' I. 24, IX. 13.

93. hosting, encounter. wont, are wont; but it may be a preterite, as in I. 764.

101, 102. idol, image. flaming Cherubim; M. always invests the Cherubim with brilliance, following Ezekiel (chap. i.—especially verses 13, 14). In IV. 797 they are "radiant files"; in the Nativity Ode, 114, "glittering ranks."

105. interval, the space between two armies; τὸ μεταχρῆμον.

107, 108. cloudy van, i.e. the van-guard (Fr. avant-garde) dense as a cloud. edge, Lat. acies, the front line of a fight; cf. I. 276.

114. Newton notes that such soliloquies (or thinkings aloud) are common in epic poets, e.g. in Homer. Like speeches and dialogues they serve, somewhat artificially, to vary the narrative which, cast in one continuous form, would become monotonous. Somewhat similar is Shakespeare's use of interruptions and questions to vivify a lengthy piece of narrative, e.g. in The Tempest, I. 2, where Miranda breaks in on the long story in which Prospero unfolds their history, and in Coriolanus, I. 1, in Menenius's "fable." See XII. 270, note.

115. reälty, reality; the form occurs in Henry More's Life of the Soul, II. 12. Some editors explain reälty = 'loyalty,' i.e. as used in the sense of Ital. realta, 'loyalty,' reale, 'loyal.' But there is no evidence that the word ever bore this meaning, and surely the ordinary sense suffices: since what Abdiel deplores is that Satan retains the outward semblance of greatness after the inward reality has gone from him. An obvious correction is fealty.

116. Cf. the sentiment in IV. 856, "wicked and thence weak."

120, 121. Referring to the last scene in bk. v. (809 et seq.).

tried, i.e. tried, or tested, and found unsound.

124. Scan contést, as always in M.; cf. IV. 872, S. A. 461, 865.

129. prevention, coming before; the lit. sense of Lat. prævenire.

130. securely, without anxiety, boldly—Lat. secure.

143. there be who, i.e. some who. Morris says: "The root be was conjugated in the present tense, singular and plural, as late as Milton's time." This phrase there be was common; cf. Comus, 519.

147, 148. sect, followers (Lat. sequi); in modern E. depreciatory. Language tends to deteriorate in sense; few English words have risen in meaning. M. may have brought in the word ironically, "in order to sneer at the Loyalists of his time, who branded all Dissenters, of whom he was one, with the opprobrious name of Sectaries" (Thyer).

151. sought for, i.e. by Satan; it qualifies thou.

156. See v. 710, note. synod; specially used by Shakespeare of an assembly of the gods; cf. Coriolanus, v. 2. 74, "The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity." So M. in II. 391, XI. 67.

161. success, fortune; here 'ill-fortune.'

162, 163. this pause, i.e. let there be. Satan will pause a moment to reply to Abdiel's speech, lest the latter should boast that his arguments have been unanswered.

165, 166. M. is glancing at one of his favourite maxims, that too many men had rather purchase ease at the expense of slavery than liberty at the cost of effort. Cf. S. A. 268—71, and contrast II. 255—57.

167—69. ministering...minstrelsy. A contemptuous jingle, as in v. 869 (note); both words are from Lat. minister. There is a reference to Hebrews i. 14, "Are they not all ministering spirits?"

minstrelsy, minstrels; servility, slaves; freedom, free men. The use of the abstract for the concrete (active or passive) is common in M., as in Shakespeare, as we have seen.

174, 175. i.e. unjustly do you depreciate ("depravest") service to God's Son by calling it servitude. For deprave = 'detract, depreciate,' cf. Much Ado About Nothing, v. 1. 95, "flout (i.e. jeer), deprave and slander," and Troilus and Cressida, v. 2. 132, where depravation = 'detraction.'

181. Editors compare Horace, Satires II. vii. 80—82. The thought is expanded in P. R. II. 466—72. See note on Sonnet XII. 11, 12.

182. lewdly, basely.

183, 184. Cf. Satan's words in I. 263; see the note there.

thy kingdom, i.e. in the future.

195. his...spear; taller than a vessel-mast (I. 292).

195—98. These similes occur in I. 230, 231 and S. A. 1647, 1648. The idea that earthquakes were due to the escape of winds pent up underground comes in Dante (Purgatorio, XXI. 55, 56).

207. In the description that follows editors find echoes of Hesiod's account of the strife between the Titans and Zeus. M. evidently admired the Theogony; cf. 4—12, note, and Lycidas, 15, 16 (modelled on the commencement of the Theogony).

212, 213. the dismal hiss of...darts; the use of the abstract form of phrase lends a touch of vagueness which increases the horror of the scene.

215. cope; cf. IV. 992.

216. battles, armies; a common use in Milton and Shakespeare; cf. Richard III. v. 3. 88, "Prepare thy battle early in the morning."

219. centre; sometimes used alone to signify the middle point of the earth; cf. I. 686, Comus, 382.

222. i.e. the four elements; see II. 274, 275, note.

225. combustion, confusion, turmoil.

229—36. "Each legion was in number like an army, each single warrior was in strength like a legion, and, though led in fight, was as expert as a commander in chief. So that the Angels are celebrated first for their number, then for their strength, and lastly for their expertness in war" (Newton).

229. numbered such, so numerous; cf. VIII. 19.

236. ridges, i.e. the ranks of troops; the metaphor, perhaps, of furrows in a ploughed field. Cf. Shakespeare, Lucrece, 1439.

239. moment, the impulse that should turn the scale (cf. 245) on the side of victory; Lat. momentum. Cf. X. 45—47 (a close parallel), and The Christian Doctrine, I. 10, "the balance of earthly happiness or misery," where the original has tantum vitæ momentum vel beatæ vel miseræ.

248. no equal; he had been foiled temporarily by Abdiel, but the combat between them was broken off (Newton).

249. For the order of the words cf. v. 5, note.

250—53. For the sword of Michael (mentioned neither in Revelation nor in Daniel), see II. 294, 295, and XI. 247, 248, where it is called "Satan's dire dread." Cf. the sword of Æneas and King Arthur's mystic Excalibur in the Idylls of the King. Supernatural equipment of the hero is an epic convention.

two-handed, i.e. wielded with both hands because of its size and weight; cf. 2 Henry VI. II. 1. 46, "Come with thy two-hand sword."

This passage gave rise to the notion that the "two-handed engine" of Lycidas, 130, meant Michael's sword, where the allusion, probably, is to either "the axe laid unto the root of the trees" (Matthew iii. 10, Luke iii. 9) or the sword of justice.

255. his...shield; vast as the moon's orb (I. 287). tenfold, with ten layers; cf. "seven-times-folded shield," i.e. septemplex, S. A. 1122.

275, 276. evil...thy offspring. Cf. the famous allegory of Sin and Death, II. 648 et seq.

277. broils; cf. II. 837.

282. Adversary, Satan; see v. 658, 659, note.

285—87. i.e. even if they have fallen, yet they have risen again. 'Have you,' says Satan, 'been so successful in putting these to flight, that you should hope to deal ("transact") easily with me?'

288. err not that, do not foolishly think that.

289. evil; we might have expected hateful (264); but Abdiel implied (262) that the strife was part of the evil due to Satan.

291—93. Cf. 183, I. 255. to dwell, i.e. "we mean" to dwell.

296. Shakespeare and M. have both parle and parley.

306, 307. Cf. Henry V. II. Prologue, 8:

"For now sits Expectation in the air

And hides a sword, from hilts unto the point,

With crowns imperial, crowns and coronets";

and Troilus and Cressida, Prologue, 20—22. Cf. the personification of Horror in iv. 989, and see II. 666, note. The Faerie Queene gave a lasting vogue to personification.

309. within the wind; the phrase recalls Hamlet, II. 2. 495.

310—15. i.e. such commotion as there would be, if, nature's concord having been broken, war should arise among the constellations, and two planets should combat. Cf. II. 533—38, 714—20.

311. great things by small; see II. 921, 922, note.

313, 314. aspect; in Elizabethan E. often used as an astrological term signifying the position of a planet in the sky, and its "influence," which was favourable or "malign" according to its position. Cf. Troilus and Cressida, I. 3. 89—92:

"And therefore is the glorious planet Sol

In noble eminence enthroned and sphered

Amidst the other [i.e. planets]; whose medicinable eye

Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil."

M. mentions the five main "aspects," x. 657—61.

When two planets are distant from each other by half the circle, i.e. are in diametrically opposite parts of the heavens, they are said, in astrological language, to be "in opposition." And it is "a malign aspect," because the rays of the two bodies collide and strive for mastery, shedding a "noxious efficacy" (x. 660) on the earth. The Elizabethans often refer to this notion; cf. Dr Faustus, vi. 65, "why have we not...oppositions, eclipses all at one time?" Dr Ward in his edition of Dr Faustus, p. 172, also refers to Marlowe's 2 Tamburlaine, III. 5, and to Greene's James IV. I. 1. See pp. 691, 692.

318. determine, make an end of the matter; cf. II. 330.

repeat, repetition ; cf. its substantival use as a term in music.

320—23. Cf. Spenser's description of Artegall's sword, The Faerie Queene, v. 1. 10. the armoury; "The Lord hath opened his armoury," Jeremiah 1. 25. Cf. vii. 200, and Tennyson's lines on Milton:

"Gabriel, Abdiel,

Starr'd from Jehovah's gorgeous armouries."

323—27. "Michael's sword with the down-stroke cut that of Satan in two, and then with an up-stroke (coup de revers) it 'shared' his side" (Keightley).

shared, cut, laid open ; used by Spenser, e.g. in The Faerie Queene, iv. 2. 17, v. 5. 9. Cf. shear, share (a portion), plough-share,—all from the root skar, seen in Gk. kelpew, Lat. secare.

327. first knew pain. See 362, 394, 431, 432. Only the rebellious angels are sensible of physical pain ; and the reason is given in 691—"sin hath impaired." Through sin they have made gross (cf. 661) the pure "essence" of their original forms ; and spirit has deteriorated into matter (cf. v. 478, note), rendering them vulnerable. The obedient angels are invulnerable because innocent (400—403).

Johnson's criticism, however, seems just : "The confusion of spirit and matter, which pervades the whole narration of the war of heaven, fills it with incongruity."

329. griding, piercing, cutting through. "Discontinuous wound is said in allusion to the old definition of a wound, that it separates the continuity of the parts" (Newton). In surgical language, vulnus est solutio continui. Bacon uses discontinuation in the medical sense, 'solution of continuity,' in a list of diseases (The Advancement of Learning, II. 10. 5). Cf. also his Essay Of Unity in Religion : "as in the natural body a wound or solution of continuity is worse than a corrupt humour, so in the spiritual."

330, 331. Happily imitated in The Rape of the Lock, III. 151, 152 :

"Fate urg'd the shears, and cut the Sylph in twain

(But airy substance soon unites again)."

Cf. too Wordsworth, Laodamia, "The Phantom parts, but parts to reunite." Todd quotes from Burton's Anatomy to the effect that "devils...feele paine if they be hurt that, if their bodies be cut, with admirable celerity they come together againe ; that, in their fall, their bodies were changed into a more...grosse substance [cf. 661]." M. has worked in all three ideas ; he may have owed them to the Anatomy (with which he was certainly acquainted—see Introduction to L'Allegro).

332. nectarous, divine, heavenly. Bentley with misdirected ingenuity proposed ichorous, from Gk. ιχώρ, Homer's name (cf. The Dunciad, III. 92) for the fluid that issued from the gods when wounded; cf. Iliad v. 340, ἀμβροτον αἷμα θεῶν, | ιχώρ, οἷός τε πέρι πέρι μακάρεσσι θεοῖσι.

335. was run, i.e. Lat. cursum est; cf. x. 229. The whole picture of the wounded chief being rescued by his friends and borne from the field to his chariot is Homeric (e.g. Iliad XIV. 428—32).

339. files, ranks; cf. I. 567, "the armed files."

348, 349. liquid texture, i.e. the "essence" of which he speaks in I. 424, 425—"soft and uncompounded."

no more than can the fluid air. A favourite poetic comparison; cf. Hamlet, I. I. 143—46, referring to the Ghost, at which the watchmen have struck with their halberds:

"We do it wrong, being so majestic,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery."

Macbeth, deeming himself invulnerable, says to Macduff (v. 8. 9, 10):

"As easy mayst thou the intrenchant air

With thy keen sword impress as make me bleed";

where intrenchant = 'not to be cut' (Fr. trencher, 'to cut'), the whole phrase being a variation on Hamlet, IV. I. 44, "the woundless air" (i.e. that cannot be wounded). There is the same idea in The Tempest, III. 3. 61—63. Sir Thomas Browne writes: "The ghosts are afraid of swords in Homer; yet Sibylla tells Æneas in Virgil, the thin habit of spirits was beyond the force of weapons" (Urn Burial, IV.).

351—53. Cf. I. 428, 429, II. 948, notes.

354—85. With regard to some of the names here and later we have seen (I. 361—75) that M. adopted the mediæval notion that the deities of heathenism, oriental and classical, were the apostate angels. He could not describe their rebellion without giving them some titles: this belief (based upon texts such as Levit. xvii. 7, I Cor. x. 20) supplied him with suitable names.

355. the might of Gabriel, the mighty Gabriel; exactly the Homeric use of βῆ, as in 'the might of Hercules,' or 'the Herculean might,' for 'the mighty Hercules.' Cf. the use of the abstract in Latin, as in Horace's mitis sapientia Læli ('the wisdom of Lælius' = the wise Lælius), or prisci Catonis...virtus. Cf. Dryden, Æn. VI. 942, "the filial duty thus replies," i.e. the dutiful son. See 371, 372, VI. 722, VII. 175.

357. Moloch illustrates his character in his speech in II. 51—105:

his "ferocious character," says Johnson, "appears, both in the battle and the council, with exact consistency." Cf. I. 392, 393.

359, 360. Alluding to 2 Kings xix. 22. Scan blasphémous.

362. uncouth, strange.

363. Uriel. See III. 648, 649, note. Raphael can speak of his own exploits thus because his name was not known to Adam (Bentley).

364. See note on 831—41. Some editors interpret diamond = 'adamant' (cf. 110, 255); the words, etymologically identical, were sometimes treated as synonymous. But we hear of "diamond quarries," v. 759, and of "diamond rocks," Comus, 881, where diamond must bear its common sense: perhaps it does here: applied to angelic beings the description would not be extravagant.

365. Adramelech, 'magnificence of the king'; a deity whose worship was brought to Samaria by the colonists from Sepharvaim (2 Kings xvii. 31). He represented an aspect of the Sun-god.

Asmadai; see IV. 168, where M. uses the form Asmodeus, now generally employed (and perhaps most familiar through Le Sage's work, Le Diable Boiteux). Editors refer to the account of Asmodeus in the Book of Tobit v. (see 221—23).

In the systems of demonology popular in the 16th and 17th centuries Asmodeus held very high rank, and was a type of might; cf. "potent," 366. Thus Heywood (Hierarchie, 1635) says that the fallen angels, like the faithful angels, were divided into nine Orders, and that Asmodeus was head of the fourth Order (p. 436). Reginald Scot (Discoverie of Witchcraft, 1584) speaks of "Sidonay, alias Asmoday, a great king, strong and mightie" (Nicholson's ed., p. 321); and in the Faust-book (1594), second part, we read of "Asmody a king mighty and puissant" (Thoms' English Prose Romances, 1858, III. 319). There can be no doubt that Milton was deeply versed in these mediæval traditions; and this particular tradition as to the might and prowess of Asmodeus lends, I think, significance to the present passage.

Compare Dante's use of non-biblical tradition, as where he places among the denizens of his Inferno "that caitiff choir of the angels, who were not rebellious, nor were faithful to God; but were for themselves" (III. 37—39). "There is" (says the note in the "Temple" edition of the Inferno, p. 34) "no mention of these angels in the Bible. Dante evidently followed a popular tradition, traces of which may be found in the mediæval Voyage of St Brandan" (celebrated in Matthew Arnold's poem).

368. plate, armour made of solid pieces of metal; mail, a sort of chainwork.

371. Ariel, 'lion of God'; cf. Isaiah xxix. 1 (margin), where Ariel seems to be a title of Jerusalem; it is the name of one of the "chief men" whom Ezra summoned (Ezra viii. 16). Probably M. has used the name merely because its meaning is so descriptive of a great warrior.

Arioch, 'lion-like'; cf. Gen. xiv. 1, Dan. ii. 14 (where Nebuchadnezzar's "captain of the king's guard" is so called). That the name was applied, possibly in Rabbinical writings, to some evil spirit, seems proved by Nash's Pierce Pennilesse, "great Arioch, that is termed the spirit of revenge" (Keightley, Life of Milton, p. 472).

372. Ramiel, 'exaltation of God'; whence M. took the name (or whether he coined it) is not known. "Milton's proper names are often chosen for their full sounds" (Tennyson).

373. I might relate. A skilful way of closing this particular account.

374. eternize, make eternal in fame, immortalise; rather a favourite word with the Elizabethans. Cf. 2 Henry VI. v. 3. 29—31:

"Now, by my faith, lords, 'twas a glorious day:
Saint Alban's battle won by famous York
Shall be eternized in all age to come."

So in The Faerie Queene, I. 10. 59, and The Teares of the Muses, 582.

374, 375. elect Angels; cf. III. 136, note. True fame is of Heaven alone (Lycidas, 78—84).

379, 380. See I. 361—75, v. 658, 659, notes.

387. deformed, hideous, Lat. deformis.

390. charioter; for the form cf. "pioner" (I. 676).

391—96. what stood; unlike that which "lay overturned," 390. The sense is—"such part of the army as had not been laid low, now either retreated, all along the line of the Satanic host (which scarce offered any resistance), or fled in utter disorder." Orderly retreat and panic-stricken flight are contrasted.

399. cubic, four-square; not an exact use of the word, but editors compare Milton's Reason of Church Government, "as those smaller squares in battle unite in one great cube, the main phalanx." Masson takes cubic literally, arguing that as the angels are not subject to the law of gravitation they can form a cube or any other solid figure.

404. unobnoxious, not liable; a Latinism.

405. though...moved. "This circumstance is judiciously added to prepare the reader for what happens in the next fight" (Newton).

407. inducing, bringing on; exactly Horace's jam nox inducere terris | umbras...parabat (Satires I. 5. 9, 10).

410. the foughten field; an old ballad-phrase. It occurs in Henry V. iv. 6. 18, 19:

“As in this glorious and well-foughten field
We kept together in our chivalry!”

It is one of the old-world phrases revived by Tennyson; cf. The Coming of Arthur:

“Then quickly from the foughten field he sent Ulfius and Brastias and Bedivere
His new-made knights to King Leodogran”;

The Holy Grail, and The Princess, v. 287. He uses foughten also simply as a poetic variant form=fought:

“And ever since the lords
Have foughten like wild beasts among themselves,”

The Coming of Arthur.

413. Cherubic...fires, i.e. the “flaming Cherubim,” 102, to whom, throughout P. L., falls the duty of sentinels.

Cf. the description of the sword “which turned every way” (Genesis iii. 24) in XII. 592, 593, 643.

415. i.e. far removed into the dark. dislodged; cf. v. 669.

421. too mean pretence, too mean ambition: they aimed at something better than mere liberty. Shakespeare uses pretence=‘design, ambition’; cf. Coriolanus, I. 2. 20. So M. in II. 825. affect; see v. 763.

429. of future; cf. phrases like ‘of late,’ ‘of old.’

447. Nisroch; the Assyrian deity in whose temple Sennacherib was murdered by his sons, 2 Kings xix. 37, Isaiah xxxvii. 38. Reginald Scot says (Discourse on Devils, p. 435), “Nisroch signifieth a delicate tentation”; but probably it means ‘great eagle.’

455. i.e. against those who cannot be pained (cf. 404, 405) or suffer. Cf. Dryden, speaking of the ghosts in Hades, “Forms without bodies and impassive air,” Æn. vi. 409.

458. remiss; used in the literal sense of Lat. remissus, ‘slack, relaxed, languid.’

462—64. A sentiment “suitable enough to a deity of the effeminate Assyrians” (Newton).

In the reference to “pain” there may be a personal glance; see XI. 542—46.

465. offend=Lat. offendere, ‘to strike, hit.’

467, 468. to me deserves; i.e. in my opinion he deserves no less gratitude than we owe to Satan for our deliverance. Cf. to in phrases like ‘to my thinking,’ ‘to my knowledge,’ ‘to my mind,’ all found in Shakespeare.

470. Editors show that the notion that cannon were invented in Hell is found in Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, IX. 28, The Faerie Queene, I. 7. 13, and Drayton's Polyolbion, 18.

478. crude, in their raw (Lat. crudus), unwrought state; cf. 511.

479. spiritous; so the original editions; there seems no need to change it to 'spirituous.' The materials, he says, "contain spirituous and fiery particles (cf. 483) which, if they be melted, will foam up out of them" (Keightley).

481. ambient light. Cf. VII. 89, and Shelley's Alastor :

"every sight

And sound from the vast earth and ambient air
Sent to his heart the choicest impulses."

482. nativity, native state (or place). the deep, the underground.

495. i.e. to be despaired of, exactly Lat. desperandus; cf. I. 660. So Macbeth, v. 8. 13, "despair thy charm."

496. cheer, spirits; generally high spirits, joy, but not always; cf. Shakespeare, Sonnet 97, 13, "so dull a cheer," and Marlowe's Faustus, XIII. 61, "I go, sweet Faustus, but with heavy cheer." Properly cheer means face, from O. Fr. chère = Late Lat. cara, 'face' (= Gk. κάρη, 'head' ?); and some editors think that it has that sense here.

498. and each, i.e. "admired" = "wondered."

501—506. thy race, Adam's. Probably M. is thinking of the Civil War. Descriptions of civil strife and its incidents must have appealed with the force of personal experience to many of his readers. The same thing is felt in reading Bunyan's Holy War.

502. in future days. "This speaking in the spirit of prophecy adds great dignity to poetry" (Newton). He compares Æneid IV. 625, and adds: "this, here, very properly comes from the mouth of an Angel."

507—509. The abrupt style is "admirably contrived to express the hurry of the Angels" (Newton).

512. Cf. "nitrous powder" in IV. 815.

513. found; surely the preterite of find; but it has been taken as found = 'to melt or cast metals.' That scarcely suits "foam"; moreover, founded (cf. I. 703) would be required.

514. concocted and adusted, baked and dried.

518, 519. engines, i.e. cannon. When cannon were first used, the balls were made of stone, not iron; cf. the allusion to "gunstones" in Henry V. I. 2. 282, with the passage from Caxton's Chronicles quoted by Stevens—" [he] lette make...grete gonne stones for the Dolphynne to play wyth all." It should be remembered that gun originally meant a sort of catapult for throwing stones. Cf. Selden's Table-Talk, LXXVI. : "The Word Gun was in use in England for an Engine, to cast a thing from a Man, long before there was any Gun-powder found out."

incentive reed, i.e. the gunner's match. incentive, enkindling.

520. pernicious...to fire, so full of destruction as to kindle—viz. the powder. Newton takes pernicious=Lat. pernix, 'quick'; but could the word bear this meaning? M. elsewhere (cf. 849) always uses it='fraught with destruction' (Lat. pernicium).

521. See v. 139. conscious, i.e. that witnessed what they did; Hume aptly cites Ovid, Metamorphoses XIII. 15, quorum nox conscia sola est.

528, 529. dawning hills; "great Rarities," said Bentley, and read "downs and hills." Many of his proposals justified Pope's sneer at

"Thy [i.e. of Dulness] mighty Scholiast, whose unwearied pains Made Horace dull, and humbled Milton's strains."

See Tennyson, Ænone :

"I waited underneath the dawning hills,
Aloft the mountain lawn was dewy-dark,
And dewy-dark aloft the mountain pine."

535. i.e. the swiftest-winged Cherub. Zophiel, 'spy of God.' M. seems to have invented the name—appropriately, since the Cherub is one of the scouts sent out (529).

539. so thick a cloud. Cf. "cloud...of war" in the Sonnet to Cromwell, where editors quote Vergil's phrase nubes belli—Æneid x. 809.

541. sad, steadfast. secure, without fear.

542. Cf. Horace's Martem tunica tectum adamantina, Od. I. 6. 13.

543, 544. gripe; cf. IV. 408, XI. 264. orbed, circular; cf. 254. The shields were held either straight out from the body, or high to protect the head (Masson).

546. barbed with fire, i.e. arrows with fire at their points; cf. Shelley, Adonais, 99, "And dull the barbed fire against his frozen cheek," i.e. piercing. Cotgrave explains flèche barbelée by "a bearded or barbed arrow." A barb is a hook or jag on an arrow-head.

547—49. Most modern texts have a semicolon after themselves and a comma after impediment—reversing the original punctuation.

impediment; cf. Lat. impedimenta, 'the carriages and baggage of an army.' The good angels are not encumbered, like their enemy, with artillery.

took alarm, sprang to arms; this was a current phrase; cf. Bunyan, The Holy War : "Now, Diabolus and his men being expertly accustomed to night-work, took the alarm presently [at once], and were as ready to give them battle as if they had sent them word of their coming" ("Temple" ed., p. 267).

550. move; there is no authority for moved; but it is tempting, all the verbs being in the past tense.

553. Cf. Henry V. III. Prologue, 33, "the devilish cannon." training, dragging, Fr. traîner.

558—67. The irony and verbal quibbles—"discharge," "touch," etc.—are too obvious to need comment. This scene of the introduction of artillery can scarce be reckoned among the great achievements in Paradise Lost. Humour is not Milton's forte: and are there not signs in what follows of some want of care? e.g. in the involved lines 571—78, and in 579—81, where stood occurs three times.

Addison considered this part "the most exceptionable in the whole poem" (i.e. open to exception), on account of these quibbles.

560. composure="composition" in 613, i.e. agreement, settlement.

571—78. The sense appears to be: 'We saw a row of brazen or iron pillars—at least things which but for their hollow mouths we should have supposed to be pillars (for they were very like them).'

576. iron...mould. M. may have recollected the description of Sir Artegall's page, "His name was Talus, made of yron mould" (The Faerie Queene, v. 1. 12). mould, substance.

578. hollow, i.e. deceitful, as applied to "truce"; but there is a quibbling reference to the hollow barrels of the guns.

580. stood, i.e. a "reed" stood. Some think that M. dictated held, or some such verb, to which Seraph would be the subject. suspense, in suspense, Lat. suspensi.

581. amused, musing, wondering (cf. 623); the original sense—cf. Cotgrave, "to amuse, make to muse or think of, to gaze at." Fr. amuser is a compound of à and O. Fr. muser, 'to gaze at, muse over.'

582. at once, simultaneously. It seems best to make all the subject to put, and to mark this by placing at once within commas: 'all did it, and did it simultaneously.' Some editors take all at once as a single adverbial phrase; but this is repetition after sudden, and leaves put without a subject.

584. nicest, most exact, accurate.

586. Newton compares Othello, III. 3. 355, 356.

587. embowelled, filled.

589. glut, i.e. the ammunition wherewith they were charged.

595—97. Cf. 656—61. M. attributes to spiritual beings the power of reducing or expanding ("dilating," I. 429) themselves at will. Cf. 351—53, and I. 789, 790.

598. dissipation, scattering, flight; cf. Lat. dissipare, 'to rout, put to flight.'

599. serried; cf. I. 548.

601. indecent, disgraceful; cf. decent = 'graceful, comely,' Lat. decens, III. 644, and Il Penseroso, 36.

605. displode, let off, fire. tire, rank, row; cf. The Hind and the Panther, III. 316—19:

"Constrained to quit his cause, no succour found,
The foe discharges every tire around,
In clouds of smoke abandoning the fight;
But his own thundering peals proclaim his flight."

So in Marvell's The First Anniversary, 361, 362:

"An hideous shoal of wood Leviathans, Armed with three tire of brazen hurricanes."

609—27. The two speeches are full of obvious quibbles.

620—27. Newton notes that the speech is appropriate to the character of Belial as drawn in the first two books of the poem; that it could not come from the statesman-angel Beelzebub or the fierce warrior-angel Moloch. There Belial was described as a god of the unwarlike (I. 493—502), himself "timorous and slothful" (II. 117), and here, in the great battle, "we find him celebrated for nothing but that scoffing speech" (Addison).

622. urged home, i.e. thoroughly, to the full effect; frequent in Shakespeare; cf. King Lear, III. 3. 13, "revenged home," and III. 4. 16, "I will punish home."

625, 626. Cf. Twelfth Night, III. 1. 89, and The Two Gentlemen of Verona, II. 5. 28: "Speed. I understand thee not...Launce. My staff understands me."

635. Vergil's furor arma ministrat, Æn. I. 150.

644—46. Cf. II. 539, 540. shaggy; cf. IV. 224, Lycidas, 54. It is one of Gray's many Miltonic classical touches; cf. The Bard, II, 12:

"As down the steep of Snowdon's shaggy side
He wound with toilsome march his long array."

Similar is Lat. horrens or horridus applied to woodland scenery.

665. jaculation, Lat. jaculatio, 'a casting, hurling.' Addison compares the classical legends about Pelion and Ossa in the Giants' war.

668, 669. Cf. II. 993—96.

670. On the first day the struggle of the angels only makes Heaven resound (217, 218); now it threatens to wreck the whole fabric of the Empyrean.

673. i.e. guiding all things, directing the Universe. M. seems to use "sum of things" = the summarum summa of Lucretius (v. 362), i.e. the All, the Universe. "The All" and "this All" (τὸδε τὸ πᾶν—Timæus 37 D) are favourite phrases of Drummond for the Universe.

Cf. Spenser's Hymne of Heavenly Beautie describing the creation of the Universe, 41, 42:

"And, last, that mightie shining christall wall, Wherewith he hath encompassed this All."

674. advised, advisedly, purposely.

679. assessor, i.e. the sharer of his throne—lit. 'one who sits by.'

This literal use occurs in Tennyson's Queen Mary, I. 5:

"He slew not him alone who wore the purple,
But his assessor in the throne."

681, 682. i.e. in whose face that which is invisible—namely, what I by Deity am—is visibly beheld. Cf. Colos. i. 15, "Who is the image of the invisible God." So in P. L. III. 138—42, 384—87, VII. 192—96, X. 63—67. M. expounds the idea in The Christian Doctrine, I. 5 (P. W. IV. 142—45).

invisible...beheld visibly; an instance of oxymoron. invisible; apparently a noun='the invisible thing.'

691, 692. suspend, delay. The sense is—"Though sin has done them some harm, yet it has not made them so inferior to the good angels that the latter can win a decisive victory.'

695. "Within the compass of this one book we have all the variety of battles that can well be conceived. We have a single combat, and a general engagement" under many phases (Newton). And, as in Homer, the "battles still rise one above another, and improve in horror" (Addison).

698. the main, the whole "continent" (474) of Heaven, or the whole Universe. For main= 'land' (not sea, as commonly), cf. King Lear, III. I. 5, 6:

"Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main";

and Tennyson, The Princess, IV.:

"Each was like a Druid rock;
Or like a spire of land that stands apart
Cleft from the main, and wail'd about with mews."

703. virtue; cf. III. 586.

709. Cf. v. 605; Psalms xlv. 7.

715, 716. Contrast v. 716 ("the Sons of Morn"). utter, outer.

719—21. Slightly varied in X. 63—67.

724—34. There are allusions to: John xvii. 1, 4, 5, 21—23 (cf. P. L. XI. 44); Matt. xvii. 5 (cf. P. R. I. 85); I Cor. xv. 28; Ps. cxxxix. 21.

738, 739. prepared. Cf. 53—55; and see Rev. xx. 1, 2; 2 Pet. ii. 4; and Jude 6. The same reference occurs in 186, I. 48, II. 169, III. 82, XII. 454. the undying worm; Isai. lxvi. 24; Mark ix. 44.

744. Contrast II. 239—43.

747. See v. 606; cf. 679, 892.

748. Newton says—"Milton, by continuing the war for three days, and reserving the victory upon the third for the Messiah alone, plainly alludes to the circumstances of his death and resurrection." M. was not alone in dividing the struggle into three parts. The Schoolmen who discussed most things discussed the point how long the contest lasted, and (writes Reginald Scot) "the greatest number affirm that... it stood with God's justice to give them [the rebellious angels] three warnings; so as at the third warning Lucifer fell downe like led to the bottom of hell," Discourse, Nicholson's ed., p. 423. Another point is—M. has assigned the overthrow of the rebels to Messiah, whereas in Rev. xii. 3—9 it is implied that Michael was their vanquisher; cf., however, verse 11 on which M. may have based his view. In any case it belonged to the scheme of his work to make the Messiah the subduer of Satan in Heaven, as on earth: the first victory foreshadows that later one by which Paradise Lost became for humanity Paradise Regained.

749—59. This description of the throne-chariot of the Deity (IV. 973—76, VII. 218—20), and of the Cherubic Shapes whereby it was conveyed, is modelled very closely on Ezekiel's Vision, chap. i. M. has worked in detail after detail of the Scriptural original, and the whole chapter should be compared with his narrative. Paradise Lost contains no more striking instance of his skill in adapting Scripture to the purposes of his work. With 752 cf. VII. 204.

756. beryl, a kind of crystal. Fr. briller, whence brilliant, represents a corruption of Lat. beryllus = Gk. βήρυλλος. careering, darting; the metaphor of a tournament. Cf. I. 766.

758. sapphire throne; cf. Collins, Ode on the Poetical Character, 2, one of the poems in which the influence of Milton, that affected Collins's style so greatly, is specially conspicuous.

760. panoply, "the whole armour of God (πανοπλία)," Ephes. vi. 11.

761. Concerning the much-discussed Urim, it seems to be agreed that they were certain material objects placed inside the breastplate of judgment which formed part of the high priest's ephod (Exod. xxviii. 30); and that they were a means by which, through him, the will of Jehovah was ascertained. It has been variously suggested that these objects were (1) diamonds and other precious stones, (2) metal slips marked with affirmative and negative answers, (3) small images like the 'teraphim.' M. (cf. P. R. III. 13—15) takes the first view, so that the general sense is—'armed in celestial equipment wrought of precious stones'; cf. 364, and the passage from An Apology for Smectymnuus, quoted at 831 ("arming in complete diamond"). Tennyson seems to follow this idea, where he describes (The Coming of Arthur, 297, 298) King Arthur's sword Excalibur as

"rich

With jewels, elfin Urim, on the hilt,"

i.e. mysterious precious stones placed there magically.

That famous Elizabethan book, Reginald Scot's Discoverie of Witchcraft (1584), speaks of the Jews being "informed by Urim: so as the preests by the brightness of the twelve pretious stones contained therein, could prognosticate or expound anie thing" (bk. IX. chap. v. p. 139, Nicholson's ed.).

The word Urim is said to mean 'light'—whence the view that the Urim were of Egyptian origin, and connected with the symbol of light worn by members of the priestly caste in Egypt; or 'revelation'—cf. the rendering of it in the Septuagint, ἡ δῆλωσις, and in the Vulgate, doctrina. In The Reason of Church Government, I. 5, Milton speaks of "the oracle of urim" and "the judgment of urim," P. W. II. 455.

762, 763. Cf. the personification of Victory in Richard III. v. 3. 79, "Fortune and Victory sit on thy helm" (i.e. helmet). So Expectation was personified, 306. Todd quotes Richard II. I. 3. 129 ("eagle-winged pride").

766. bickering, quivering, flashing.

767—70. Jude 14; Ps. lxxviii. 17; Rev. v. 11.

770. Tennyson remarked on the "grand pause" in the line after God, lending tremendous emphasis.

771. "And he rode upon a cherub and did fly," 2 Sam. xxii. 11; Ps. xviii. 10. M. generally uses sublime = Lat. sublimis in its literal sense, 'uplifted'; cf. II. 528.

772. M. always scans crystalline; cf. VII. 271, S. A. 546, "Allure thee from the cool crystalline stream."

776. "And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven," Mat. xxiv. 30.

777. reduced, brought back—Lat. reduxit; cf. x. 438. The word is used similarly in the sense 'to bring back' in his treatise On Education (P. W. III. 472).

779. their Head, i.e. the Messiah; see v. 606. Editors quote Romans xii. 5, Colossians i. 18.

787. insensate, senseless; once elsewhere in M.—cf. S. A. 1685, where the context shows that it is a very strong word.

788. Vergil's tantane animis caelestibus iræ? Æn. I. 11. Cf. The

Rape of the Lock, II, 12:

“In tasks so bold can little men engage?
And in soft bosoms dwells such mighty rage?”

So IX. 729, 730. Cf. IV. 118, 119, note.

791. harden'd more; like Pharaoh.

797. last, at last; an obvious suggestion is lost.

801. Exodus xiv. 13.

808. “Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord,” Romans xii. 19; cf. Deuteronomy xxxii. 35.

831—41. This description recalls III. 392—96, and An Apology for Smectymnuus: “then Zeal, whose substance is ethereal, arming in complete diamond [cf. 364, 760, 761], ascends his fiery chariot, drawn with two blazing meteors, figured like beasts, resembling two of those four which Ezekiel and St John saw...with these the invincible warrior, Zeal, shaking loosely the slack reins, drives over the heads of scarlet prelates...bruising their stiff necks under his flaming wheels,” P. W. III. 129.

833, 834. Cf. 711, 712. In I. 105 Satan boasts that the battle did shake the throne. Thyer compares Hesiod, Theogony 841.

838. astonished, thunder-struck, stupefied.

841. Spenser has the accentuation prostrate; cf. The Faerie Queene, III. 12. 39.

842, 843. “And [they] said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the...wrath of the Lamb,” Rev. vi. 16. The irony of the lines, in view of 639—66, is obvious.

864—66. Cf. I. 44—49, 169—77, P. R. I. 90, 360, 361. The “bottomless pit” is the lowest region of Hell—that “fiery gulf” on which the angels are depicted as tossing in I. 52. In the Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce, 3, M. calls it “that uttermost and bottomless gulf of chaos, deeper from holy bliss than the world’s diameter multiplied” (P. W. III. 224). Similar allusions to “the bottomless pit” occur in The Tenure of Kings (end), Areopagitica, and Of Reformation in England, II. (P. W. II. 47, 61, 417).

868. ruining, falling; see III. 258, and cf. Tennyson, Lucretius.

869, 870. Repeated from the Nativity Ode, 123; see the note on VII. 253—60. Cf. positi late fundamina Mundi in Milton’s lines Ad Patrem, 47. her, of Hell.

871. nine; traditionally a significant number. See I. 50.

873. i.e. through his wild, disordered realm (“the wasteful deep”); cf. VII. 271, 272, X. 283. In II. 993—96 Chaos, speaking of the expulsion of the angels, tells Satan how he “saw and heard.”

874, 875. Isaiah v. 14.

877. Cf. II. 823. Tasso, IX. 59, calls it "the house of grief and pain" (Newton). Compare too Dante's synonyms for Hell, such as "the doleful houses" (dolenti case) and "the doleful realm" (dolente regno); see the Inferno, VIII. 120, Purgatorio, VII. 22.

880—92. Rev. xii. 10, iv. 11; I Tim. iii. 16; Heb. i. 3. Cf. III. 397—99.

885. The grave of Samson Agonistes (1735) is shaded with "branching palm," a symbol of victory. See the Ode At a Solemn Music, 14, and cf. Crashaw's picture of the "Assembly of the Saints"—"The palm blooms in each hand, the garland on each brow." See Rev. vii. 9.

886. sung triumph. M. is thinking perhaps of the Lat. Io Triumphe, the cry raised by the crowd and soldiers when a Roman general celebrated his triumph. Cf. Horace, Odes IV. 2. 49, 50, Epodes IX. 21, 23.

893. Cf. v. 570—74. "The reader cannot but admire the dignity and emphasis with which the Angel's speech concludes. The same brief sentences, and solemn pauses, may be observed in the fine moral instruction which the heavenly messenger gives Adam, at the close of the eighth book" (Todd).

899. There is a ring of Milton in Pope's couplet (Essay on Man, I. 127, 128):

"Aspiring to be gods, if angels fell, Aspiring to be angels, men rebel."

See IX. 685—712, note.

900. he who; him would have been more regular. But he sounds more emphatic, and the context requires strong emphasis (Dunster).

900—906. These lines give the two main motives of Satan's resolve to ruin mankind, namely, envy and desire to spite God by marring his creatures: man shall be ruined that Satan may be revenged on the Most High for his defeat (IV. 11, 12).

907. Cf. P. R. I. 397, 398; Satan is the speaker:

"Envy, they say, excites me, thus to gain Companions of my misery and woe!"

It is the sentiment expressed in the proverbial line of unknown origin, solamen miseris socios habuisse doloris (or malorum). So Shakespeare, Lucrece, 790, 791:

"And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage,

As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage," and Romeo and Juliet, III. 2. 116. When Faustus asks why Lucifer tempts mortals Mephistophiles in reply quotes the line solamen miseris etc., Faustus, v. 42—where Dr Ward in his note cites Seneca, De Consolatione XII. 2: est autem hoc ipsum solatii loco, inter multos dolorem suum dividere. See x. 126—28.

Sir Thomas Browne gives the idea a moral turn: "Delude not thyself into iniquities from participation or community, which abate the sense but not the obliquity of them. To conceive sins less or less of sins, because others also transgress, were morally to commit that natural fallacy of man, to take comfort from society, and think adversities less because others also suffer them" (Christian Morals, I. xviii.).

909. thy weaker; Eve, "the weaker vessel," I Pet. iii. 7.

BOOK VII.

1—39. With this exordium compare I. 1—26; III. 1—55; IX. 1—47. All four passages mark a significant stage in the development of the story, and in each passage the notion implied in "above the Olympian hill I soar" finds expression. The first serves as prelude to the whole poem and indicates the subject; the second transfers the scene of the action from Hell to Heaven, and later to the Earth; the third is a pause before the history of Creation is unfolded; and the fourth prepares us for the Temptation and Fall of Man. Compare Homer's method of stopping to invoke the Muse afresh before some great event is narrated. Pope parodies this epic convention in the Argument and (very Miltonic) first lines of the fourth book of The Dunciad.

We may note in these four passages the number of personal allusions, e.g. to Milton's consciousness of the greatness of his subject (I. 12—16, 24—26, III. 54, 55, VII. 12—15, IX. 13—19, 41—43); his blindness (III. 21—55, VII. 27); loneliness (VII. 28); and advanced years (IX. 45).

1. descend from Heaven; cf. Horace's descende cælo... Calliope—Odes III. 4. 1, 2. Here the invocation is specially appropriate as the scene of the action of the poem passes literally from Heaven to Earth (the Creation of which is about to be described).

2. if rightly thou art called; an indication that he was conscious of using the name not in its usual classical sense.

3. the Olympian hill; Mount Olympus (cf. I. 516) in the north of Greece. Like Mount Helicon in Bœotia, it was a resort of the Muses to whom classical poets appealed for inspiration. Hence lines 3, 4 are a figurative way of claiming loftier inspiration than that of classical poets.

3, 4. soar...flight...wing; his favourite metaphor to describe uplifting inspiration; cf. I. 14, note, P. R. I. 14.

Pegasus was the famous winged horse (cf. "flying," 17) that ascended to the heaven of the classical gods and afterwards used to bear the thunder and lightning of Zeus. M. had ascended far higher, into the Heaven of the Almighty.

5. "Urania" means 'the Heavenly one' and it is on a Heavenly power that he calls, not on the classical Muse named 'Urania.' See pp. 686—88.

In this book of Paradise Lost the classical influence, which predominated in the last, naturally gives way to the Biblical (Genesis); the subject being the Creation.

6. nor of; understand art from the verb in the next line.

7. old; often in M. almost a title of reverence; cf. "Mount Casius old," II. 593; "the fable of Bellerus old," Lycidas, 160. Cold is a needless change.

8—12. The allusion is to Proverbs viii. 23—30, where the word rendered "rejoicing" in verse 30 may mean 'playing' (ludens in the Vulgate); cf. "didst play," 10. M. quotes the verse in Tetrachordon (P. W. III. 331) and substitutes "playing" for "rejoicing" (Newton).

9. eternal Wisdom. "The Eternal Wisdom created man an excellent creature, though he fain would unmake himself and return into nothing; and though he seek his felicity among the reasonless wights, He hath fixed it above" (Drummond, A Cypress Grove, Works, II. 274).

converse, live in company with (Lat. conversari); cf. II. 184.

13. In books III., v., vi., he has described events which took place in the "Heaven of Heavens," i.e. the Empyrean.

14. drawn; cf. VIII. 284.

15. thy tempering, tempered by thee, i.e. made to suit the breathing of "an earthly guest."

16. element, i.e. the Earth.

17. He implies that, guided by the Muse (12), he has been borne aloft on a winged Pegasus of his own, superior to the Pegasus (4) of mythology. Diva Pegasea is a synonym for the Muse in Dante, Paradiso, XVIII. 82. unreined, unbridled, Lat. infrenis.

18, 19. An allusion to the legend that Bellerophon attempted to ascend to heaven on the back of Pegasus, but was flung to the ground. Incurring the anger of the gods, he roamed alone in the Aleian plain,

'the land of wandering' (Gk. ἀλη = 'wandering'), became distracted and died; cf. Homer, Iliad VI. 200—202. clime, region; cf. II. 572.

20. erroneous; in the literal sense 'straying' (Lat. erroneus).

21. Henceforth the action of the poem, of which "half remains unsung," takes place on Earth (save in some brief passages of books X., XI.).

22. the visible diurnal sphere, i.e. "the Astronomical Universe of Man, which appears to revolve round the Earth daily in twenty-four hours" (Masson). Wordsworth (The Prelude, I. 459, 460), may have recollected the line.

23. rapt, caught up.

the pole, the highest point of the Universe, i.e. where it is fastened to the golden chain which suspends it from the Empyrean.

25—39. M. refers to his own position after the Restoration. There are similar allusions in S. A.; see 697—700, with notes.

26. The verbal repetition gives an effect of pathos; cf. S. A. 80, 81. Note how he inverts the order of the words; cf. 184—87.

Perhaps the most remarkable example of the poetic device of repetition in Paradise Lost is IV. 641—56. It is a favourite artifice (expressive of great emphasis) with Tennyson, from whose works many striking illustrations might be quoted, e.g. the passage in Enoch Arden beginning "The splendour on the waters," and the description of the descent of the Grail in the Holy Grail, 473—76, where each line commences with "blood-red." In the Marriage of Geraint five consecutive lines start on the same note:

"Forgetful of his promise to the king,
Forgetful of the falcon and the hunt,
Forgetful of the tilt and tournament,
Forgetful of his glory and his name,
Forgetful of his principedom and its cares."

evil tongues. M. had many bitter enemies among the Royalist party; as was only natural considering the attitude which he had adopted towards Charles I. in The Tenure of Kings and Eikonoklastes. Johnson (not always a friendly critic of the poet) grimly remarks that Milton himself had "never spared any asperity of reproach or brutality of insolence" in his polemical writings against Salmasius and others.

27. The original of Wordsworth's line—"Darkness before, and danger's voice behind"—in the passage on Milton in The Prelude, III.

darkness, i.e. blindness. Cf. I. 22, III. 45.

dangers. At the Restoration M. was arrested and imprisoned for some months, probably from August to December 1660, for having defended the execution of Charles I.; and though, thanks to the efforts of Andrew Marvell (see pp. 365, 366) and some other influential friends he was eventually allowed to take advantage of the Act of Oblivion (1660), yet he must for a time have felt insecure. After the publication of his great work his position was different. He was, says Burnet, "much visited by all strangers, and much admired by all at home, for the poems he wrote...chiefly that of 'Paradise Lost.'"

28. solitude. It has been justly said of Milton that throughout his life as a whole he "was aloof and solitary beyond any other great English writer." Cf. Wordsworth's famous description of him ("Thy soul was like a Star, and dwelt apart").

29. nightly. Cf. III. 29—32 and IX. 21—24 (notes). "The poet might here remember the nightly vision of Beatrice to Dante, Purgatorio, xxx. 133" (Todd).

30. purples, dyes with rosy hues.

31. Cf. Horace, Satires I. 10. 74, contentus paucis lectoribus. As to the reception accorded to Paradise Lost on its publication see the Introduction. Johnson says: "The sale, if it be considered, will justify the public....The call for books was not in Milton's age, what it is at present [1779—1781]." He notes that between 1623 and 1664 there were only two editions, perhaps one thousand copies in all, of the works of Shakespeare.

Part of this line (31) is quoted by Wordsworth in the opening of The Recluse, and the outline of his subject that follows is full of the atmosphere of Paradise Lost.

32—38. Cf. the similar allusion in Lycidas, 58—63, to the classical legend that Orpheus was torn to pieces, and his head thrown into the river Hebrus, by Thracian women in their Bacchanalian orgies, his mother Calliope, the Muse of epic poetry, being unable to do aught for his defence. See Ovid, Metamorphoses XI. 1—55, Vergil, Georg. IV. 517—27; and cf. A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v. 48, 49:

"The riot of the tipsy Bacchanals, Tearing the Thracian singer in their rage."

No doubt M. intends a comparison between the "wild rout" (a contemptuous word) of Bacchanals and the dissolute court of Charles II., and perhaps hints (cf. "dangers," 27) that he himself may suffer like Orpheus. Other passages in his poems which probably refer to the court are I. 497, P. R. II. 44—48, 183; see also the notes on S. A. 1418, 1605—1607.

34. Thracian; Orpheus lived in a cave in Thrace.

35. Rhodope, a mountain range in Thrace; the Hebrus on the banks of which Orpheus was killed rises in Rhodope. Ovid calls Orpheus "Rhodopeius heros" (Metamorphoses x. 50). Cf. Pope, Ode on St Cecilia's Day, vi.

36. to rapture, i.e. to drink in strains that enraptured them, though the "revellers" were deaf to the harmony. Cf. the song "Orpheus with his lute made trees," Henry VIII. III. I. 3.

37. harp, the golden lyre given to Orpheus by Apollo.

39. thou, Urania. she, the Muse, Calliope. M. always refers contemptuously to classical mythology as mere 'fables' or 'dreams'; cf. I. 197, II. 627.

41. affable; see VIII. 648, 649, and cf. v. 221, "Raphael, the sociable Spirit." Probably M. in depicting Raphael thus as a power friendly to man is thinking of the story in the Apocryphal Book of Tobit how the archangel befriended Tobias; cf. the two allusions to it, IV. 167—71, v. 221—23.

43. apostasy, falling away from his obedience to God; cf. 610.

46. Genesis ii. 17.

50. his consorted Eve, Eve his consort or partner. Cf. Richard II. v. 3. 138, "With all the rest of that consorted crew," i.e. associated, acting as partners.

52. admiration, wonder.

57. redounded, recoiled, came back upon.

59—69. The main sentence is 'Whence Adam repealed the doubts and, being led on with desire to know, proceeded (69) to ask.'

whence, from which subject. repealed, recalled; he did not let his thoughts dwell any longer on that matter. For repeal=Fr. rappeler, in the literal sense 'to recall,' cf. Julius Cæsar, III. I. 51, Coriolanus, v. 5. 5.

62. nearer, more closely, i.e. than the subjects just mentioned concerned him.

63. M., as we have seen, uses Heaven=(1) 'the Empyrean,' i.e. 'the abode of the Almighty,' (2) 'the sky,' i.e. of this World. Here 'sky' is meant; so in 86, 167, 232, 274, 283.

conspicuous, visible to the eye, as opposed to the unseen Empyrean, the affairs of which concerned Adam less.

65. Eden; see IV. 132, note.

66. whose drouth, who being still thirsty; abstract for concrete.

72. interpreter, expounder, explainer; cf. Interpres divinum (said of Mercury), Aeneid IV. 378. Cf. Ben Jonson, Discoveries, CXIX.: "Speech is the only benefit man hath to express his excellency of mind above other creatures. It is the instrument of society; therefore Mercury, who is the president of language, is called deorum hominumque interpres." See III. 157.

79. the end, the object, purpose; cf. Revelation iv. 11.

88, 89. yields or fills; "yields space to all bodies, and again fills up the deserted space" (Richardson). Cf. II. 842, "the buxom air"=yielding.

92. so late, i.e. after having rested "through all eternity." A reason is indicated in 150—60.

94. absolved, was completed; Lat. absolvere, 'to finish.'

97. "Remember that thou magnify his work, which men behold," Job xxxvi. 24.

98. wants, has to. run; see 372, note.

99. though steep; i.e. "though he has passed the meridian and is now on his descent, pronus" (Keightley). The standing-still of the sun was probably suggested by Joshua x. 12—14.

102. his generation, how he was created.

102, 103. i.e. and how Nature (=the Earth and all its forms of animal and vegetable life) was born and arose from the Deep.

unapparent, not appearing, invisible, because hidden in the darkness of Chaos; cf. 233, 234.

104. the star of evening, Hesperus; the classical name of the planet Venus when it appeared after sunset; seen before sunrise, it was called "Lucifer" (cf. 133). Cf. VIII. 519, 520.

106. Sleep; personified, as in Comus, 554. watch, keep awake.

116. infer, show, prove; cf. VIII. 91, and 2 Henry IV. v. 5. 14.

120. For the sentiment "knowledge within bounds," cf. VIII. 173—97.

121. inventions, thoughts, foolish imaginations; cf. its use in Psalms cvii. 29, "Thus they provoked him...with their inventions."

hope, hope for, i.e. to know. Elizabethans use hope transitively; cf. All's Well That Ends Well, II. 1. 163, "hopest thou my cure?" Cf. II. 234.

122. Cf. I Timothy i. 17.

123. Cf. Horace, Odes III. 29. 29, exitum | caliginosa nocte premit deus; and Vergil, Aeneid vi. 267, pandere res alta terra et caligine mersas.

131. The name Lucifer, 'light-bringer' (Gk. φωσφόρος), is properly a Latin title of the morning-star, but it was applied by patristic writers to Satan, in allusion perhaps to the tradition of the original "brightness" of his person. Cf. the common misinterpretation of Isaiah xiv. 12 ("How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer"), where "thou" refers to "Babylon," not to Satan, and the Hebrew word translated "Lucifer" should be rendered "day-star," as in the Revised Version.

Milton says that "Lucifer" and "Satan" were the names given to the arch-rebel after his expulsion from Heaven: what he was called in Heaven we do not know. See I. 361—75, note, and v. 658, 659. In each of the early drafts of Milton's contemplated drama of Paradise Lost the name "Lucifer," not "Satan," is assigned to him. No doubt, Milton substituted "Satan" as more distinctively Scriptural.

132. 'Bright as Lucifer' was almost a proverb like 'proud as Lucifer.' Cf. Marlowe's Faustus, v. 155:

"beautiful

As was bright Lucifer before his fall."

The old Faust-book says: "Lucifer [i.e. Satan] was so illuminated that he far surpassed the brightness of the sun, and all the stars." This brightness was dimmed after Satan's fall (l. 97, 591—99, IV. 835—40, 870).

134. Cf. l. 45, and the familiar lines in Henry VIII. III. 2. 371, 372:

"And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer, Never to hope again."

Cf. also Absalom and Achitophel, 273, 274. In the Areopagitica M. uses this image in mentioning (ad fin.) the downfall of the Court ("she is now fallen from the stars with Lucifer"). The "Fall of Lucifer" is one of the subjects of the York and Chester Miracle-plays.

135. his place, the place prepared for him, viz. Hell; cf. Acts i. 25.

136. Saints, i.e. the Heavenly beings who had remained loyal.

137. "And, behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne," Revelation iv. 2. Cf. 556, 585, 586.

139. Thyer suggested At last as the true reading.

141. Cf. v. 643, note.

142. us dispossessed; an absolute construction; cf. "him destroyed,"

IX. 130, "me overthrown," S. A. 463. In Shakespeare, as now, the absolute case is the nominative; but in older English it was the dative. Morris quotes Wyclif, Matthew xxviii. 13, "Thei han stolen him us slepinge"—an exact parallel to "us dispossessed." I believe that in such cases M. meant the pronoun to be the dative and that he sometimes employed this old idiom (with pronouns) as suggesting the Latin ablative absolute more than the nominative absolute does. Thus, "me overthrown" has more of a Latin sound than "I overthrown." He also uses the nominative absolute with the present participle.

143. fraud, crime, sin; so Lat. fraus is used.

144. Cf. v. 710. whom their place; cf. Psalm ciii. 16, "and the place thereof shall know it no more." So Job vii. 10.

145—49. In l. 633 Satan, encouraging his downcast followers, boasts that their revolt had "emptied Heaven."

146. station, post of duty. See Jude 6.

152. i.e. which thing, viz. the "dispeopling" of Heaven, he foolishly supposes to damage me.

157—61. Cf. XII. 369—71, note.

162. inhabit lax, dwell at ease (having vanquished the rebels). Some explain 'dwell at large' (cf. Lat. habitare laxe), as though the expulsion of the rebels gave the others more room in Heaven.

163—67. The Creation of the World is effected through the Son; cf. John i. 1—3, especially verse 3. See III. 170, 383, note.

164—66. Cf. Luke i. 35.

168. "There are no limits to Chaos [= 'the Deep'], because I who fill it am infinite; and it is not vacuous or empty, because I am everywhere in it, though I only exhibit my goodness in a limited space, i.e. in Heaven" (Keightley's note).

I am, i.e. "boundless" = infinite. "Immensity and Infinity" are among the "attributes" of the Almighty on which M. discourses in The Christian Doctrine, I. 2.

175. the Filial Godhead, the divine Son (VI. 722); an abstract expression for a concrete seems specially appropriate when divine powers are spoken of. Cf. 587.

178. Cf. II. 297, "By policy and long process of time."

179. earthly notion, the intellect of man. Cf. King Lear, I. 4. 248, "his notion weakens" = 'his mind is failing.' So in Macbeth, III. 1. 83.

182, 183. glory...good-will...peace. Luke ii. 13, 14.

186. just, righteous; Christ is called "the just," I Peter iii. 18.

188. See 615, 616, and I. 162, 163; and cf. Thomson, A Hymn:

"From seeming evil still educing good,

And better thence again, and better still."

194. girt; a constant Biblical metaphor of arming; cf. Psalms xviii. 39, "For thou hast girded me with strength unto the battle"; xxx. 11, "thou hast put off my sackcloth, and girded me with gladness."

196. See Hebrews i. 3, and cf. III. 138—40.

197. poured. Cf. II. 997, P. R. III. 311. "The word shows the readiness and forwardness of the Angels...they were so earnest as not to stay to form themselves into regular order, but were poured numberless about His [the Messiah's] chariot" (Pearce).

200. "The Lord hath opened his armoury," Jeremiah l. 25. The sword with which Michael overcame Satan in the great battle in Heaven was "from the armoury of God" (VI. 321).

201. "And I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came four chariots out from between two mountains; and the mountains were mountains of brass," Zechariah vi. 1.

202. against, in readiness for.

204. Cf. VI. 750, 752. See Ezekiel i. 20.

205—207. Cf. V. 253—55. ever-during = "everlasting," 565.

207. moving, producing harmonious sound by their motion. "The doors of Armida's palace turn on golden hinges," in Tasso, VI. 2 (Todd).

208. the King of Glory; Psalm xxiv. 8.

212. wasteful, like a desolate plain. For Milton's favourite alliteration w...w in 212—14, see II. 960, note, and cf. Lycidas, 13, "Unwept, and welter to the parching wind."

215. Richardson explains: "There was such confusion in Chaos, as if on earth the sea in mountainous waves should rise from its very bottom to assault Heaven (i.e. the sky), and mix the centre of the globe with the extremities of it." Of course, Chaos has no centre or pole.

216. "A magnificent line" (Tennyson). Note the effect of finality produced by the alliteration (ϕ...ϕ) and the assonance in the last two words of the verse.

217. omnific, almighty; literally 'all-making.'

218. For the throne-chariot of the Deity formed by the wings of the Cherubim see VI. 749—59.

221. heard, i.e. and obeyed. With this passage compare the rapid sketch of the Creation given by Uriel, III. 708—21.

224. fervid, glowing, i.e. with motion. M. remembered Horace, Odes I. I. 4, 5. Cf. II. 531, 532, note.

225. the golden compasses, prepared. Cf. Proverbs viii. 27, "When he prepared the heavens, I was there: when he set a compass upon the face of the depth."

226. circumscribe, mark out the limits of. So in the Paradiso, XIX. 40—42: "He who rolled the compass round the limit of the Universe, and within it marked out so much both hidden and revealed."

228. one foot, i.e. of the compasses.

229. For the word-order cf. 17, 270, 323, 477. See note on I. 733.

232. Milton's account of the Creation must be compared with Genesis i., ii. He follows the Scripture closely, especially where the Almighty speaks, but supplements it, giving free scope to his imagination (Newton). See also Ovid, Metamorphoses I.

233. unformed, formless; see V. 471, note.

darkness. In II. 961—63 he speaks of Night as the consort of Chaos and co-ruler of his realm, personifying them as spirits: an allegory by which we are to understand that the "Abyss," i.e. Chaos, is a region of gloom. It is so represented in the poem always. See Genesis i. 2.

234—37. Cf. I. 19—22.

235. wings, i.e. as of a dove, the idea being based on Luke iii. 22; see the note on I. 21.

the Spirit of God; in The Christian Doctrine, I. 7, Milton explains that he understands this to mean, in this context, God's "divine power, rather than any person" of the Trinity.

236. vital virtue, the efficacy of life.

237, 238. downward purged, caused to sink, i.e. down into Chaos. The language seems to be recalled in Pope's Essay on Criticism, 526, 527:

"But if in noble minds some dregs remain,
Not yet purged off, of spleen and sour disdain."

Milton's influence on Pope's diction has been observed already. See I. 423, 424; also XI. 244.

tartareous, 'belonging to Tartarus or Hell'; hence 'gloomy.'

239—41. founded...conglobed, established and caused to coalesce. At first the Universe carved out of Chaos is a "fluid mass" (237) of "matter unformed" (233). Now atoms (semina rerum) of a like nature are brought together so as to form a solid substance.

I believe that by this process M. means us to understand the formation of the Earth, and that in what follows, "the rest...disparted," he refers to the formation of the outer crust which encases the whole Universe. The air is diffused "between" the central Earth and this crust = the Primum Mobile.

The rhythm of the passage seems to me to prove that founded and conglobed are past tenses, not participles. They are in antithesis to "fluid mass"; and conglobed also gives a contrast to "matter unformed" as it implies that the Earth, at first without form, now is moulded into a spherical form: cf. v. 649, "this globous Earth."

239. founded; from Lat. fundare, 'to lay the foundation of'; editors compare Psalms lxxxix. 11, Proverbs iii. 19.

240. the rest, i.e. the matter which had not been used to form the Earth. several; with the idea 'each thing to its own place.'

241. disparted, separated in different directions (dis-).

spun out; the metaphor of a spindle drawing out the wool on a distaff.

242. self-balanced. "By this he probably meant to express the adjustment of the Earth in the exact centre of the World" (Keightley). See v. 579 (note), and cf. "pendulous Earth," iv. 1000.

243—52. Genesis i. 3—5. M. does not say that light was created now: it existed previously (i.e. before the Universe itself) and is now introduced into the new region. This accords with

III. 1—6, where we read that light either existed from eternity and was thus “co-eternal” with the Almighty; or, if not existent “from eternity,” was certainly the first thing made by the Almighty.

244. ethereal, partaking of the nature of ether. Properly ether means very bright atmosphere; light, therefore, may well be called ‘ethereal.’ Bacon speaks of the “four mutable elements and one immutable fifth Essence,” i.e. the “quintessence.” (Essay Of Atheism.) See III. 716, note.

first of things; cf. III. 1, “Hail, holy Light, offspring of Heaven first-born!” and S. A. 83, “O first-created beam!”

245. sprung from, suddenly rose above; cf. the address to Light in III. 8—11. He chooses the east as the home of light because they are associated so in our minds through the rising of the Sun (cf. 370), but we must remember his view (which he would have supported by Genesis i. 3 compared with i. 14—18) that light exists independently of the Sun.

248. tabernacle, dwelling; cf. Psalms xix. 4, “In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun.” Cf. “her cloudy shrine,” 360.

250. by the hemisphere; i.e. “one half of the sphere of the Universe being in darkness while the other is in light” (Masson).

253—60. See Job xxxviii. 4, 7; cf. the Nativity Ode, 117—24:

“Such music (as ’tis said)

Before was never made,

But when of old the Sons of Morning [= Angels] sung,

While the Creator great

His constellations set,

And the well-balanced [cf. 242] world on hinges hung;

And cast the dark foundations [cf. 239] deep,

And bid the weltering waves their oozy channel keep.”

Note the third draft of Milton’s intended tragedy of Paradise Lost and the entry at the close of the first Act: “Chorus of Angels sing a hymne of y<sup>e</sup> Creation.”

255. exhaling; cf. v. 642.

257. the...orb, the globe of the Universe: “this great round,” 267.

261—74. Genesis i. 6—8. There are “waters” in the Universe because Chaos, of which it was a portion, was a kind of sea (210—15). At first these waters formed one great “Deep” (245): now they are divided. Part are collected round the Earth, the middle point of the Universe, and cover it (276—82). Part are placed in the Ninth or Crystalline Sphere, i.e. in the uttermost but one of the regions of space that surround the Earth. The “firmament,” according to M., is the expanse of air, stretching from the Earth to this Crystalline

Sphere (263—67). Hence the "firmament" intervenes between and "divides" (262, 269) the waters that flow immediately round the Earth and the waters of the Crystalline Sphere: the former being "the waters which were under the firmament," the latter "the waters which were above the firmament" (Genesis i. 7); as M. says, "The waters underneath" and "those above" (268).

264. In Genesis i. 6, the margin has expansion instead of firmament.

Cf. 340.

266. the uttermost convex, the farthest rim.

271. crystalline, clear as crystal, glassy; cf. 619, note. M. always scans crystalline (like Latin crystallinus); cf. III. 482, VI. 772. Contrast Cymbeline, v. 4. 113, "Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline."

misrule. Cf. the allusion in VI. 871—73 to the "wild anarchy" of Chaos.

272. Cf. II. 898—910, where we read how the elements of Heat and Cold "strive for mastery" in Chaos, sometimes one, sometimes the other, ruling supreme: hence there are "fierce" and rapidly-changing "extremes" of temperature in Chaos.

273. distemper, i.e. make the World ("the whole frame") now too hot, now too cold.

277. waters, i.e. those "under the firmament." embryon, in an undeveloped state. involved, wrapped; Lat. involvere.

281. Cf. the familiar phrase "mother earth"; see As You Like It, I. 2. 213.

282. genial, creative, fertilising. This seems to be partly the idea in Gray's "genial current of the soul"; see Tovey's note (Pitt Press ed.) on the Elegy, 52. So in the Essay on Man, I. 133, III. 118.

282—308. Genesis i. 9, 10.

285. immediately; the effect of the commands is instantaneous; cf. "forthwith," 243; "He scarce had said," 313; "sudden," 317.

The alliteration in 285, 286 is probably intended to convey an impression of bulk and solidity. See a different alliterative effect in 480.

289—91. See Psalms civ. 7, 8. bottom, valley.

293. In XII. 197, speaking of the passage of the Israelites through the Red Sea, he says that they walked "As on dry land, between two crystal walls."

The whole picture is that of a great wave just before it breaks on the sea-shore.

296. of armies thou hast heard. Raphael had described to Adam in bk. VI. the contests in Heaven between the good Angels and the rebels.

297. so; Milton's usual way of completing a simile. Understand some verb (e.g. 'hastened') from troop.

300. soft-ebbing; cf. XI. 847, 848.

301, 302. i.e. either underground, or wandering over (cf. IV. 234) a wide circuit above ground.

serpent, serpentine. error; cf. IV. 239.

306. The slow, long-drawn rhythm suits the sense.

309—38. Genesis i. 11—13.

319. smelling; referring to herbs.

321. swelling; a suitable epithet of the gourd, and in accordance with the classical descriptions, such as Propertius IV. 2. 43 (cæruleus cucumis tumidoque cucurbita ventre) and Georgic IV. 121, 122. The original editions have smelling, which is not appropriate in itself and not likely to have been repeated so soon after 319. Bentley made the change (Todd). corny reed; cf. V. 23.

322. embattled. Cf. the comparison in IV. 980—83 between the bristling spears of an army and ears of corn.

add; wrongly altered in some modern texts to and. Cf. Lat. adde introducing a fresh point or detail = 'moreover, besides'; as in Horace, Satires II. 8. 71. humble, low-growing; cf. Lat. humilis used of trees, as by Vergil, Eclog. IV. 2, humilesque myricæ.

323. hair, leaves and branches; cf. Lat. coma used both of hair and foliage. implicit = Lat. implicitus, 'entangled,' the p. p. of implicare.

325. gemmed, budded; an imitation of Lat. gemmare, 'to put forth buds,' from gemma, 'a bud.'

327. tufts. Bacon recommends that a garden should be planted "with some pretty tufts of fruit trees" (Of Gardēns).

331—37. See Genesis II. 5, 6; and cf. The Idylls of the King:

"she [Enid] did not weep,

But o'er her meek eyes came a happy mist

Like that which kept the heart of Eden green

Before the useful trouble of the rain."

338. i.e. the chorus of Angels celebrated this day like the others.

339—86. Genesis i. 14—19. Cf. III. 580, 581, note.

342. circling; cf. P. R. I. 57, "the circling hours," and Gk. κυκλείν = 'to revolve,' as in Sophocles, Electra 1365. Perhaps Milton has in mind Homer's περιπλομένων ἐνιαυτῶν ('as the years go round').

351. vicissitude, alternation, Lat. vicissitudo; cf. VI. 8. "All cannot be happy at once...there is a revolution and vicissitude of greatness" (Browne, Religio Medici, I. xvii.). And again: "the line of our lives is drawn with white and black vicissitudes," i.e. alternations of fortune (Christian Morals, II. x.).

356. mould, substance ; a common meaning in M. ; cf. III. 709.

358. See v. 2, note, and cf. Tennyson, The Gardener's Daughter :
 "The heavens between their fairy fleeces pale Sow'd all their mystic gulfs with fleeting stars."

362. firm, yet firm, i.e. although "porous."

365. urns ; used of vessels to hold water ; see Titus Andronicus,
 III. 1. 17, where most editors adopt the correction urns for ruins.

366. the morning planet, Venus (cf. 104, note) ; commonly called "Lucifer" as the morning-star and then treated as masculine. The First Ed. had "his horns" (i.e. Lucifer's), the Second Ed. her (i.e. of Venus).

367, 368. 'By absorbing (being tinged with) or reflecting the sun's rays they increase their own small possession, i.e. store (Lat. peculium), of light.' For peculiar used as a noun cf. Pope, Moral Essays, I. 15, 16 :

"There's some peculiar in each leaf and grain,
 Some unmark'd fibre, or some varying vein."

372. invested, arrayed ; Lat. investire, 'to clothe.' to run ; cf.
Psalm xix. 4, 5, "the sun, which...rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race." See 98, 99.

373. his longitude, his course direct from east to west ; M. uses longitude where we say latitude (III. 574—76, note).

374, 375. "Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades or loose the bands of Orion?" Job xxxviii. 31. The Pleiades rise about the spring equinox, and, according to a common belief, the Creation took place in spring—indeed some said that before the Fall of Man there was no change of seasons, but "the eternal Spring" (IV. 268)
 "Perpetual smiled on Earth with vernant flowers" (X. 679).

376. levelled west, due west—exactly opposite.

377. his mirror, i.e. reflecting the light from him. Cf. III. 730, and Dryden, Æn. III. 765, "Nor could the moon her borrowed light supply." So in his Religio Laici, 1, 2 :

"Dim as the borrowed beams of moon and stars
 To lonely, weary, wandering travellers."

Dante applies the same term "mirror" (specchio) to the sun, because "he receives the divine light from above, the spheres intervening, and reflects it downwards," i.e. according to Dante's cosmology (note in the "Temple" edition of the Purgatorio, p. 46).

378. none ; emphatic as coming last ; cf. IV. 675, 704, XI. 612.

379. aspect, position (an astronomical term). For the accent see
 II. 301, note, and cf. Lucrece, 13, 14 :

"Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
 With pure aspects did him peculiar duties."

382. dividual, divided, Lat. dividuus : she shares her "reign" with the stars. In XII. 85 dividual = 'separable,' or 'separate.'

387—448. Genesis i. 20—23.

388. reptile, creeping things (reptilia, ἐρπετά in the Septuagint). The term comprises fishes of all sorts. soul; used as a collective term = 'creatures.' Note the marginal readings in Genesis i. 20.

390. displayed, spread out; Lat. displicare, 'to un-fold,' Fr. déplier.

393. by their kinds, according to their species.

400. i.e. with fry (young fishes) and with shoals = sculls (402).

403. bank the mid-sea; as with a mackerel-shoal.

406. waved, undulating in the water. dropt with gold, i.e. with gold spots. For a somewhat similar use cf. Cymbeline, II. 2. 38, 39 :

"A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops
I' the bottom of a cowslip."

407. attend, "watch" (408) for.

409. jointed armour, scales; lobsters and such like fish are referred to: a very appropriate comparison. smooth, the smooth sea; cf. "on the level brine," Lycidas, 98. See Aeneid v. 594, 595.

410. bended; arching themselves as they rise and dive down again. dolphins, "i.e. porpoises, delphines" (Keightley).

412. leviathan, the whale; cf. the similar description in I. 200—

205. Thomson imitates M.:

"More to embroil the deep, leviathan
And his unwieldy train, in dreadful sport,
Tempest the brine" (Winter, 1014—16).

417. tepid; their warmth serves to hatch the eggs.

419. disclosed, unclosed, let out. Cf. Hamlet, III. 1. 174, "the hatch and the disclose"; also v. 1. 310, where it is again used so.

420. fledge, fledged.

421. summed their pens, acquired their full complement of feathers; the term sum is from falconry. sublime; cf. VI. 771.

422. Cf. XI. 835, "sea-mews' clang." Lat. clangor is used of the cry of birds; cf. Livy I. 34, aquila...cum magno clangore volitans.

422, 423. i.e. viewed from a distance (cf. 556) the ground would have seemed to be "under a cloud," so great was the mass of birds. Or he might mean that the birds seemed to fly almost into the clouds.

423, 424. "Doth the eagle mount up at thy command, and make her nest on high? She dwelleth and abideth on the rock, upon the crag of the rock, and the strong place," Job xxxix. 27, 28.

cedar-tops. Cf. Richard III. I. 3. 264, "Our aery [= eyry] buildeth in the cedar's top."

425. loosely, i.e. singly, not "in common" = together. wing; used transitively (II. 842). region, the upper air; cf. Hamlet, II. 2. 509, 607; so in Tennyson, In Memoriam, LXXVII.

426. wedge, i.e. cleave as with a wedge. He is thinking (as in P. R. III. 309) of the cuneus or 'wedge' of the Roman army, viz. the formation of troops into an acute angle, the point of which had to pierce into the massed forces of the enemy; cf. Gk. ἔμβολον. The migrations of some birds are described in similar language by Pliny, Natural History x. 32, and by Dante, Purgatorio, XXIV. 64—66. Cf. too the Essay on Man, III. 105—109:

"Who bids the stork, Columbus-like, explore
Heavens not his own, and worlds unknown before?
Who calls the council, states the certain day,
Who forms the phalanx, and who points the way?"

A passage ("When the cranes," etc.) in Somerville's Chase illustrates the immense influence of Milton's diction on the 18th century poets. Crabbe, describing the flocks of wild-fowl passing over the east coast of England, says (The Borough, I. 220—23):

"Far as the eye can glance on either side,
In a broad space and level line they glide:
All in their wedge-like figures from the North,
Day after day, flight after flight go forth."

428. caravan; troop; probably the word then had something of its oriental associations.

429, 430. "After a little time the bird that forms the apex or point [of the 'wedge' or angle] quits it and falls back, and another takes his place"—Keightley. Hence M. says "with mutual wing easing."

430. prudent. "Yea, the stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times; and the turtle and the crane and the swallow observe the time of their coming," Jeremiah viii. 7. Cf. "intelligent of seasons," 427. Dante, who was fond of illustrations drawn from bird-life, has two crane-similes; cf. the Inferno, v. 46, 47 ("as the cranes go...making a long streak of themselves in the air"), and Purgatorio, XXVI. 43—45.

432. floats, undulates. unnumbered, innumerable, "innumerable" (455). The rhythm is notable.

434. painted; cf. picte volucres (Aeneid IV. 525).

435. nightingale; cf. III. 38—40, IV. 602, 603, V. 39—41. solemn; cf. the description of it in Il Penseroso, 56—64. See VIII. 518.

439. mantling, raised (viz. "wings") so as to form a kind of mantle.

441. the dank, the water. penmons, pinions, Lat. pennæ.

446. starry, starlike; in the one place where Shakespeare uses starry ("the starry welkin," A Midsummer-Night's Dream, III. 2. 356) it means 'adorned with stars.' eyes, the eye-shaped spots on the plumage of the peacock.

450—98. Genesis i. 24, 25.

451. soul; the First Ed. misprints Foule; Bentley corrected.

453. each...their; cf. VIII. 342, 343, 393; the plural their is due to the plural sense; it refers back to the plural noun or pronoun with which each is in apposition.

454, 455. teemed, brought forth; cf. Macbeth, IV. 3. 176, "Each minute teems a new one [grief]." a birth. It is generally after a preposition that a or an = 'one'; cf. Othello, II. 3. 212, "both at a birth."

457. wons, dwells.

461. rare, here and there, Lat. rarus.

462. at once, together; so in 475. broad herds, i.e. covering a wide area (with the implied notion 'numerous'); cf. Homer's phrase αἰπόλια πλατὲ ἀγῶν, Iliad XI. 679.

463. calved, brought forth young; cf. Coriolanus, III. I. 240.

466. rampant, rearing up. brinded, brindled.

ounce, a kind of lynx; cf. IV. 344.

467. libbard; an Elizabethan form of the word leopard, so called because thought to be a cross between a lion (leo) and a panther (pardus).

471. Behemoth, the elephant; cf. Thomson's Summer:

"in plaited mail

Behemoth rears his head."

474. river-horse, hippopotamus; Gk. ἵππος + ποταμός. The verb understood is rose (472).

476. worm; the term includes serpents (cf. 482). The asp or serpent by which Cleopatra was killed is called a worm in Antony and Cleopatra, V. 2. 243, 256. Cf. IX. 1068. limber, flexible.

477. smallest lineaments exact, very small, dainty limbs. For lineaments = 'limbs' generally, not 'features of the face,' cf. v. 278. exact = Lat. exactus, 'precise, accurate'; here 'delicately made, dainty.'

478. liveries, dress.

480. these; referring to worm. The alliteration (especially l...l) expresses length. Cf. Comus, 340, "With thy long levelled rule of streaming light." Matthew Arnold uses the same obvious effect in The Scholar-Gipsy: "The line of festal light in Christ-Church Hall."

482. minims, very small creatures.

484. and added wings, and had wings as well as "snaky folds." Fabulous winged serpents such as dragons are meant.

485. parsimonious, thrifty; used in a good sense. emmet; in origin the same word as ant. M. recollected Horace's description of the ant—haud ignara ac non incauta futuri (Satires I. I. 35).

486. Cf. Vergil, speaking of bees, ingentes animos angusto in pectore versant (Georg. IV. 83). Note that "large" is not a mere translation of ingentes; it implies wisdom; cf. P. R. III. 10, and I Kings iv. 29, "God gave Solomon...largeness of heart." M. generally lends a fresh turn to what he borrows.

487. Milton shows his republicanism.

490. It was a common belief of Milton's time that the working-bees were female, the males being drones (so called from their droning buzz). Cf. Pericles, II. I. 50, 51, "We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey."

493. Genesis ii. 19, 20. Cf. VI. 73—76, VIII. 342—54.

495. Genesis iii. I. The s...s sounds in the whole description of the reptiles give a hissing effect. Cf. I. 768—75, note.

"I hate sibilation in verse" (Tennyson).

496. brazen, of the colour of brass; see IX. 500, note.

497. mane. In the famous description of the serpents that strangled Laocoon (Aeneid II. 203 et seq.) Vergil speaks (206, 207) of their sanguinea juba, 'blood-red manes.'

497, 498. to thee not noxious. Fine 'irony.'

501, 502. 'Earth, being complete in her attire, was smiling and fair.' Cf. Lat. ridere = 'to be bright,' e.g. as a field with flowers.

503. M. often uses a string of monosyllables to convey variety. Cf. II. 621. Tennyson uses such lines, e.g. often in St Simeon Stylites, where they give a suitable impression of austerity.

was flown; for this Latinism cf. VI. 335.

504. frequent, in throngs.

505. the end, the object for whom all was done. In 505—34 M. recalled Ovid's Metamorphoses I. 76—86.

506—10. M. treats man's "upright" (509) stature as a sign of his superiority to and authority over animals; cf. IV. 288, 289, Comus, 52, 53. One feels a suggestion of the old thought that the purpose of this "erection" of stature, peculiar to man, was "for to behold and look up toward heaven"; see Sir Thomas Browne's Vulgar Errors, IV. 1, where editors quote Cicero, De Natura Deorum II. 56, and Ovid, Metamorphoses I. 84—86.

508. sanctity of reason, the divine attribute of reason; cf. v. 486—90.

509. front, brow; Lat. frons; as in II. 302.

510. from thence, therefore, i.e. through the possession of these qualities.

511. magnanimous, of lofty mind. to correspond with, so as to hold intercourse or 'be in sympathy' with.

517, 518. Lines 163—66, 170, 171, 192—220, implied that the Father remained in Heaven while the Son was sent forth; yet, in virtue of his "omnipresence" (168, 169, 588—90), the Father was present in the new Universe no less than in Heaven. Cf. "let us make" (519).

519—34. Genesis i. 26—31.

528. Cf. Hebrews i. 3, "the express image of his person" (Revised Version "very"). Literally 'modelled,' Lat expressus; hence 'exact.'

535. wherever...created. That Adam was not created in Paradise, the "Garden," but was taken there afterwards, seems implied by Genesis ii. 8, 15. See VIII. 296—99.

537. Cf. "delicious Paradise," IV. 132.

541. all sorts are here; cf. v. 337—47.

544. thou diest. In X. 210, 211 we read how the sentence passed upon Adam is relaxed, and "the instant stroke of death...removed," so that after his sin he is still suffered by the Almighty to live, but no longer in Paradise.

547. In the famous allegory in II. 648—870 Sin is represented as the mother of Death. They are always in the poem introduced together, Death attending Sin as "her shadow" (IX. 12).

561. thou heard'st; cf. Adam's own words, IV. 680—88.

563. Even the planets, the 'wandering' bodies (see VIII. 128, 129, note), stood still. stations; so the First Edition; the Second has station.

564. pomp, procession.

565—67. Psalms xxiv. 7.

569—73. The Old Testament often speaks of Angels visiting the Earth, and in III. 529—37 M. says that there were two aerial paths for their descent, one leading straight down from Heaven on to Mount Sion, the other extending over the whole Promised Land. In The Christian Doctrine, I. 9, M. deals with the ministry on Earth of Angels.

577, 578. Cf. IV. 976, "the road of Heaven star-paved."

579. the Galaxy, 'the Milky way'; called lactææ plagæ ('the milky regions') in Milton's poem In Obitum Præsulis Eliensis, 60. Cf. Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy, II. 2. 111, "that via lactea, a confused light of small Stars, like so many nailes in a door" (I. 382, ninth ed.); and Pope, Essay on Man, I. 101, 102:

"His soul proud science never taught to stray Far as the solar walk or milky way."

581. powdered with stars; a phrase in Sylvester's Du Bartas.

584, 585. the holy mount; cf. 141, v. 643 (note).

591—93. Genesis ii. 2, 3, Exodus xx. 11 (whence "hallowed").

596. dulcimer; a stringed instrument, played with small hammers; said to be the primitive type from which the pianoforte was developed. Mentioned in Daniel iii. 5, 10, 15, and probably of Babylonish origin. Our name for it comes from Spanish dulcemele, a dulcimer; so called from its sweet sound (Lat. dulce + melos).

all organs, wind instruments, opposed to the stringed instruments in 597. Properly stop = 'that by which the sounds of wind instruments are regulated'; hence = 'tone, notes.' M. speaks of a "lute or soft organ-stop waiting on elegant voices, either to religious, martial, or civil ditties," On Education. A skilled musician himself, he uses musical terms often, and precisely.

597. on fret, i.e. produced upon frets. "On stringed instruments that have finger-boards, like the lute or guitar, the small pieces of wood or other material fixed transversely on the finger-board at regular intervals are called frets. The object they serve is to mark off the length of string required to produce a given note. Frets correspond in their use with the holes in the tube of a wind instrument."—Grove's Dictionary of Music.

599. unison, i.e. solo opposed to in chorus.

599, 600. incense...fuming; see Rev. viii. 3—5. Cf. xi. 17, 18. Milton "had seen their manner of incensing in the churches abroad" (Newton).

605, 606. the Giant-angels; a comparison is implied between the rebellious Angels and the Giants of classical mythology who sought to expel Zeus and the gods from Olympus. thy thunders; see the account of the battle in Heaven, vi. 834—66. Cf. Dryden, The Hind and the Panther, II. 535—37 (from the noble passage on the Catholic Church):

"Still when the giant-brood invades her throne,

She stoops from heaven and meets them half-way down,

And with paternal thunder vindicates her crown";

where "giant-brood" is an echo of Samson Agonistes, 1247.

617. witness, let this World bear witness.

619. the hyaline, "the glassy sea" = the Crystalline Sphere. Milton, "when he uses Greek words, sometimes gives the English with them, as in speaking of the rivers of Hell" (II. 577—83)—Newton. Cf. 579.

621, 622. M. refers more than once to the likelihood of the heavenly bodies being inhabited; see VIII. 153—58, and cf. the quotation from Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy in the note on VIII. 140—45.

622, 623. thou know'st their seasons; a parenthesis, qualifying the suggestion that the stars will be fit for habitation (i.e. in respect of temperature): the Angels do not know, but the Almighty does.

624. nether ocean, i.e. "the waters under the firmament."
 628—30. Cf. 519—34. See Psalm viii. 6—8.
 631, 632. O fortunatos nimium sua si bona nôrint, Vergil, Georg.
 II. 458. persevere, remain steadfastly; cf. VIII. 639.
 634. halleluiah, 'praise ye the Lord'; cf. Psalm cxlvi. 1, margin.
 636. face of things, external nature; all natural objects about us.

BOOK VIII.

The discourse on astronomy in this book (extending down to line 178) is interesting mainly as a proof that Milton was acquainted with the teaching of Copernicus. Indeed, though he accepts the Ptolemaic system throughout the poem, he makes Raphael refer to it and its later developments in not very complimentary terms (77—84) and seems to lean towards the Copernican theory. Grotius in his Adamus Exul, the tragedy on the Fall of Man with which M. is thought to have been acquainted, makes an angel explain to Adam the astronomical system and laws of the Universe.

Some striking parallels to Milton's words are presented by the chapter in Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy entitled "a Digression of the Ayre" (II. 2. III), which is a review of then current systems and theories of astronomers. Astronomy (in which, as in so many other things, he really belonged to a past generation) evidently had a great attraction for Milton: hence the references to Galileo, the only one of his contemporaries alluded to in Paradise Lost. And how significant in itself is the famous reference in bk. I. ! "The Tuscan artist"—that is the name which Milton gives to Galileo, as if to indicate that science and art are in inseparable conjunction, as they were in his own person, and in his own poetry" (Mackail). See I. 287—91, III. 588—90, v. 261—63 (with notes), and the Areopagitica, P. W. II. 82. Dante, too, and Tennyson (says another critic) "loved the stars."

1—4. In the First Edition of Paradise Lost the two books which are now VII. and VIII. of the poem formed only one book; and after the line, "Aught not surpassing human measure, say" (VII. 640), came the line (641), "To whom thus Adam gratefully replied." In the Second Edition, when book VII. was divided into two books, M. added the three lines, "The Angel ended...fixed to hear," to introduce book VIII., and changed slightly what is now the fourth line of the book. Cf. the similar alteration at the beginning of book XII., which in the First Edition formed one book with the present book XI.

2. charming; in the strong sense 'laying under a spell, enchanting.'

3. stood; perhaps = 'remained, continued.' It is not Adam's attitude that is emphasised, but his great attention; probably he sat (Richardson).

12. Scan attributed; cf. 107.

14. resolve, explain, clear up.

15. M. recollected Hamlet, II. 2. 310, "this goodly frame, the earth." Cf. "this universal frame" = the Universe, V. 154.

16. Heaven, sky; it bears this sense in most passages of this book.

See VII. 63, note.

19—38. We have the same idea again in IX. 103—107.

19. numbered; apparently = 'numerous' (cf. VI. 229, and Cymbeline, I. 6. 36), unless M. has in mind passages like Psalm cxlvii. 4, "He telleth the number of the stars."

22. officiate, supply.

23. opacous, dark, yielding no light; cf. 93 ("nor glistening").

punctual, small, no bigger than a point (Lat. punctum). Cf. Drummond, A Cypress Grove: "This globe of the earth and water, which seemeth huge to us, in respect of the universe, compared with that wide, wide pavilion of heaven, is less than little, of no sensible quantity, and but as a point.... More, if the earth were not as a point, the stars could not still in all parts of it appear to us as of a like greatness" (Works, II. 260).

24. one day, i.e. only for one; cf. one (emphatic) in 29.

25. admire, wonder.

32. sedentary, stationary (from Lat. sedere, 'to sit'); cf. 89, "Earth sitting still," and II. 927.

33. If the Earth revolved, her circuit would be far less than that of the heavenly bodies.

35—37. The construction is, 'and receives as tribute her warmth and light, brought such an incalculable distance with "speed almost spiritual" (110).'

40. Milton's reason for making Eve withdraw is seen later (354—629).

43. The number of monosyllables is, no doubt, intentional. They give a slow rhythm which suggests the calm dignity of Eve's movement.

46. her nursery, things tended by her: an abstract expression for a concrete. We speak of a 'nursery-garden.' There is a beautiful picture in IX. 423—62 of Eve among her flowers.

61. pomp, train.

64. to Adam's doubt proposed, to the point of difficulty mentioned by Adam, i.e. in 25—38; cf. 13, "something yet of doubt remains."

70, 71. this to attain; referring probably to what has preceded in 68, 69. 'To attain this knowledge, viz. of the seasons, hours etc., it makes no difference whether the heaven or the Earth moves. Such knowledge is within our comprehension; but "the rest," viz. more abstruse points, God has concealed' (Newton).

74, 75. ought...admire. There is one instance in Shakespeare of this construction; cf. Julius Cæsar, I. I. 3, "you ought not walk." Elsewhere he always has to; cf. Julius Cæsar, II. I. 270. In Middle English the present infinitive was marked by the inflection en; when this inflection became obsolete, to was used with the infinitive. Certain 'anomalous' verbs, however, on the analogy of auxiliary verbs, omitted the to, and there was much irregularity in the practice of Elizabethan writers. Cf. the two constructions with dare in modern English: 'I dare say this' and 'I dare to say.'

78. Cf. II. 190, 191, note.

wide, i.e. of the mark; 'erroneous'; cf. the adverb in Much Ado About Nothing, IV. I. 63, "Is my lord well, that he doth speak so wide?"

80—84. The object of the devices which M. ridicules in these lines was to support the Ptolemaic theory of the circular motion of the heavenly bodies by accounting for difficulties which seemed to conflict with that theory. See Appendix, pp. 688—90.

80. calculate; "make a computation of everything relating to them: their motions, distance, situation, etc." (Pearce).

82. appearances, apparent sizes, motions, etc. of the heavenly bodies; it was a technical term of astronomers, occurring often in Burton's chapter on Astronomy—"a Digression of the Ayre"—Anatomy of Melancholy, II. 2. 111. sphere, the globe of the Universe; = "frame" in 81.

83. "Centric are such spheres whose centre is the same with, and eccentric are such whose centres are different from, that of the Earth" (Richardson). scribbled; an intentionally contemptuous word.

84. epicycle. "A small circle, having its centre on the circumference of a greater circle...In the Ptolemaic system of astronomy each of the 'seven planets' was supposed to revolve in an epicycle, the centre of which moved along a greater circle called a deferent."—New English Dict.

orb in orb, sphere within sphere.

86. who; its antecedent is contained in thy (85): 'the reasoning of thee who art.' A common Shakespearian idiom; cf. Twelfth Night, III. I. 69, "He must observe their mood on whom he jests," i.e. the mood of those on whom.

and supposest; Raphael implies 'and art foolish enough to suppose.'

If Adam who is "to lead" mankind makes such mistakes, how much more will his descendants err in their "quaint opinions"?

90, 91. great...bright; each used as a noun; cf. 448, 453.

infers not, is no proof of; see VII. 116.

93. nor glistering, i.e. "opacous" (23). glistering; cf. The Merchant of Venice, II. 7. 65, "All that glisters is not gold."

94—97. Contrast III. 606—12.

97. his; a clear case of his for its; cf. itself, 95.

99. officious, ministering = Lat. officiosus, 'ready to serve by doing officia, i.e. kind acts.' This use of officious in a good sense occurs in Titus Andronicus, v. 2. 202. Cf. IX. 104.

102. "Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line upon it?" Job xxxviii. 5, where "it" refers to the Earth (verse 4).

108. numberless, that cannot be described in numbers; it refers to swiftness (cf. 38), not to circles (i.e. the Sun and heavenly bodies).

110. speed...spiritual, speed such as bodiless spirits use; cf. 37.

122, 123. the sun...centre; i.e. instead of the Earth (VII. 242, note).

124. attractive virtue; as we say, 'power of attraction.' So in III. 582, 583 he speaks of the constellations being "turned" by the Sun's "magnetic beam."

128, 129. six, i.e. the six planets or 'wanderers'; cf. "wandering course" (126). The six meant are the Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. The "seventh" planet is the Sun, according to the Ptolemaic system; but the Earth (129), according to the Copernican. Shakespeare treats the Sun and Moon as planets.

129. the planet Earth; he does not mean to state definitely that the Earth is a planet; he only hazards the supposition that she is. See the quotation from Burton's Anatomy in the note on 140—45.

130. "The three different motions which the Copernicans attribute to the Earth are (1) the diurnal round her own axis; (2) the annual round the Sun; and (3) the libration, as it is call'd, whereby the Earth so proceeds in her orbit, as that her axis is [always] parallel to the axis of the World" (Newton).

The third of these motions is the "trepidation talked," to which M. refers in III. 482, 483, and which is there attributed to the Crystalline Sphere, in accordance with the Ptolemaic system. Here it is attributed to the Earth, as the followers of Copernicus taught.

One of the points in Paradise Lost which Addison criticises adversely is Milton's "frequent use of what the learned call Technical Words, or terms of art," and he instances more particularly the astronomical terms. But Dante had set the example.

131—40. 'You must attribute the three motions just mentioned either to several spheres moving in opposite directions and crossing each other obliquely (the Ptolemaic view), or to the Earth (the Copernican view). If you attribute them to the Earth, then you save the Sun his labour, i.e. of revolving round the Earth; and you also get rid of ("save") that wheel or "rhomb" called the Primum Mobile, the motion of which is supposed to cause the revolution of the nine inner spheres round the Earth in twenty-four hours. It is only a theory that this wheel or "rhomb" exists, because it is too far off to be visible; and you need not believe in the theory, if the Earth revolves on her axis from west to east every twenty-four hours, and thus illuminates with the Sun's rays one-half of her globe while the other half, being turned away from ("averse") the Sun, is covered with darkness. The theory of the Primum Mobile was only invented to explain certain motions which really may be due to the Earth.'

132. thwart, crossing; cf. the verb thwart = 'to go across,' IV. 557.

134. nocturnal and diurnal rhomb; alluding to its revolution in twenty-four hours. "Wheel of day and night" at once varies and explains the whole phrase. rhomb, wheel, Gk. ῥόμβος. "Wheel or wheels...throughout the Paradiso is used for the revolving heavens" ("Temple" edition of Paradiso, p. 12). Cf. "the eternal wheels" (eterne rote), I. 64; see also XIII. 12, XXII. 119. Pope borrowed Dante's phrase, in the same sense; cf. the Moral Essays, III. 168. Sir Thomas Browne in one of his bold astronomical metaphors compares the "encyclopædie and round of knowledge" with "the great and exemplary wheels of heaven" (Vulgar Errors, "To the Reader").

137. fetch day, i.e. from the Sun.

140—45. Cf. Burton, "If the Earth move, it is a Planet, and shines to them in the Moon, and to the other Planetary inhabitants, as the Moon and they do to us upon the Earth; but shine she doth, as Galilie [Galileo], Kepler, and others prove, and then per consequens, the rest of the Planets are inhabited, as well as the Moon" (Anatomy of Melancholy, ninth ed., I. p. 385). He had previously (p. 383) referred to "that paradox of the Earth's motion, now (? 1621) so much in question." Some theologians found support for it in Job ix. 6. The idea that the stars are inhabited is satirised by Bunyan, as a contemporary delusion or imposture, in the introductory lines ("To the Reader") to The Holy War.

145. M. seems to have thought that the Moon is inhabited. Cf. III. 459—62. Drummond mentions, but refrains from expressing any opinion about, the belief; cf. A Cypress Grove: "Some affirm there is another world of men and sensitive creatures, with cities and palaces, in the moon" (Works, II. 250). her spots; see V. 419, 420.

148. other suns. "He seems to mean Jupiter and Saturn, whose satellites had been discovered by Galileo. Though he knew them to be planets, he might have regarded them as suns with respect to their attendant moons"; so Keightley, followed by other editors, explains. But Burton, speaking of the "Fixed Stars," says: "If our world [i.e. the Earth] be small, why may we not suppose a plurality of worlds, those infinite stars visible in the Firmament to be so many Suns, to have likewise their subordinate planets? which some have held, and some still maintain...Kepler (I confess) will by no means admit that the fixed stars should be so many Suns, with their compassing planets" (Anatomy of Melancholy, I. 386). That appears to me to be the theory to which M. alludes.

150. male, original direct light; female, reflected light; cf. "borrowed," III. 730.

153—58. 'That there should be such a vast unpeopled space, only made for the purpose of shining, and from each of its orbs only contributing (so great is the distance) a mere glimpse of light to this Earth which itself sends back light: this notion is open to dispute.'

157. this habitable, the Earth; an imitation of the Greek phrase ἡ οἰκουμένη (γῆ), 'the inhabited world.'

159. i.e. whether the Copernican system or the Ptolemaic be right.

163—66. It was objected to the Copernican theory "that if the Earth mov'd round on her axle in twenty-four hours, we should be sensible of the rapidity and violence of the motion." M. has this objection in mind when he suggests that if the Earth does revolve, her motion may be smooth and even, and that the atmosphere may move as well as the Earth—which would, of course, make the sense of motion less perceptible to us (Newton).

164. inoffensive, not striking against anything, not colliding (Lat. inoffensus). spinning, i.e. like a top.

173. Cf. Wordsworth's Ode to Duty, 53, 54:

"Give unto me, made lowly wise,
The spirit of self-sacrifice."

181. Intelligence; in Spenser "a frequent term for the celestial beings" (Todd). See the Hymn of Heavenly Beautie, 84, and cf. Drummond, A Cypress Grove: "And if these [the "eternal habitation and throne" of the Almighty] be so dazzling, what is the sight of Him, for whom and by whom all was created; of whose glory to behold the thousand thousand part, the most pure intelligences are fully satiate, and with wonder and delight rest amazed; for the beauty of His light and the light of His beauty are uncomprehensible" (Works, II. 277). It is really a Dante word; cf. the Convivio, III. vi.

183—97. Some editors regard these lines as an objection against study of the difficult problems of physical science. I think rather that Milton protested against barren speculation of all sorts, and a spirit of excessive enquiry in general; cf. II. 558—69, note.

194, 195. what is more, i.e. anything beyond that. fume, vanity; literally 'smoke' (Lat. fumus). foul, foolish. impertinence, irrelevance, that which does not belong to or concern us.

197. still to seek, always deficient, at a loss. See Comus, 366, note, and cf. the Utopia (Pitt Press ed., p. 131), "They do daylie practise... lest they should be to seek in the feate of arms," i.e. deficient in skill.

205. Raphael says later (229—46), that he was not acquainted with the story of Adam's creation, and mentions the reason why. The poet naturally varies the speakers.

212. palm-tree, i.e. the date-palm.

213. from labour, i.e. when I come from = 'after' (Gk. ἐκ).

218. "Grace is poured into thy lips," Psalms xlv. 2.

225. fellow-servant, so the Angel described himself to St John, Revelation xxii. 9, "I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren the prophets."

229. that day, viz. the sixth of Creation (VII. 519—50).

230. uncouth, unfamiliar, strange.

241. barricadoed, fortified. Sin, who kept the gates of Hell, afterwards opened them "with ease" to let Satan out, but was unable to close them again (II. 871—89).

243, 244. noise, i.e. of the outcast Angels, who for nine days after their fall from Heaven lay prostrate on the lake of fire in Hell (I. 50—53). When they arose and had re-formed their scattered ranks then (I. 666—79)

"Highly they raged

Against the Highest, and fierce with grasped arms

Clashed on their sounding shields the din of war,

Hurling defiance toward the vault of Heaven."

Those were the sounds of "furious rage" heard by Raphael. Addison compares Vergil, Aeneid VI. 552—58.

246. Sabbath-evening; the evening before the Sabbath or seventh day on which the Almighty rested from all His work (VII. 592, 593).

247. relation, report, story; cf. Fr. relation and the verb relate.

251. i.e. who was ever conscious of being created? For the idiom cf. v. 857, 858, and see IX. 792, note.

260. thitherward. See VII. 506—10, note.

266. fragrance; perhaps used figuratively to express an intense sweetness of feeling. But I think that it refers literally to the sweet-scented air, and is combined by a sort of zeugma with joy; cf. I. 502, "flown with insolence and wine" (a similar combination of the literal cause with the abstract).

268. went, walked; a common Shakespearian use. Cf. The Tempest, III. 2. 21, 22, "We'll not run...Nor go neither."

269. as. The Second Edition prints and.

281. from whom I have that, to whom I owe it that; cf. Acts xvii. 28.

284. drew air; cf. ἔλκειν τὸν ἀέρα (in rather late Greek writers). Cf. VII. 14.

292—94. dream...fancy; see v. 100—13 (the passage on dreams).

stood at my head; Keightley quotes Iliad II. 56—59. There is a vague suggestion of Il Penseoso, 147—50.

296—99. See VII. 535, note.

302. smooth sliding; an epithet of the river Mincius in Lycidas, 86.

303. M. always describes the "garden of bliss," i.e. Paradise, as situate on the level summit of a lofty hill, the steep slopes of which are covered with trees and shrubs (cf. "woody"). It is a plateau or tableland of circular shape (304). See IV. 134 (note), 172—77.

plain, flat (Fr. plain, 'level,' Lat. planus). Cf. A Midsummer-Night's Dream, III. 2. 404, "Follow me...to plainer ground."

316. submiss, cast down, prostrate (submissus). In writing a letter to "your superior," says Ben Jonson, "for your interest or favour with him, you are to be the shorter or longer, more familiar or submiss, as he will afford you time" (Discoveries, CXXVI.).

319—33. Genesis ii. 15—17. See VII. 46.

323. The inverted word-order gives great emphasis. operation, effect.

330. die, be subject to death.

331. mortal; cf. Sir Thomas Browne, Religio Medici, I. xxxiii., "before his fall, man also was immortal." Many of the Fathers of the Church taught the doctrine that Adam, if he had not sinned, would not have died but been translated to Heaven. M. speaks doubtfully on the subject (v. 493—505), and in The Christian Doctrine, I. 8, says, "it is evident that God, at least after the fall of man, limited human life to a certain term"—which implies that this limitation may have preceded the Fall.

337. purpose, discourse; cf. IV. 337. renewed; intransitive.

338—41. Genesis i. 28. See VII. 530—34.

343, 344. Cf. VII. 493. fealty; M. scans it as three syllables, fealty; cf. IX. 262. Contrast Richard II. v. 2. 45, "And lasting fealty to the new made king."

351. stooped, stooping.

352—54. M. says in The Christian Doctrine, I. 7 (ad fin.): "Man being formed after the image of God, it followed as a necessary consequence that he should be endued with natural wisdom, holiness, and righteousness....Certainly without extraordinary wisdom he could not have given names to the whole animal creation with such sudden intelligence." Cf. too his Tetrachordon: "Adam, who had the wisdom given him to know all creatures, and to name them according to their properties, no doubt but had the gift to discern perfectly that which concerned him much more; and to apprehend at first sight the true fitness of that consort which God provided him" (P. W. III. 336). See Bacon, The Advancement of Learning, I. 3. 3, and 6. 6; Dryden, The Hind and the Panther, I. 308—10.

apprehension, perception; cf. Hamlet, II. 2. 319, "What a piece of work is a man!...in apprehension how like a god!" So also in Henry V. III. 7. 145.

372, 373. The magic ring mentioned in the story of Cambuscan (Il Penseroso, 109—15) enabled its owner to understand the language of birds; see The Squyeres Tale, 138—57. Clouston says, "many Asiatic tales turn upon a knowledge of the language of birds and beasts" (Popular Tales, vol. I. p. 376)—e.g. the story in the Arabian Nights of "The Page who feigned to know the Speech of Birds."

379. Cf. Abraham's words, Genesis xviii. 30.

384. sort, prove fitting, suit; cf. X. 651, P. R. I. 200.

387. Hume explains: "the one intense; man high, wound up, and strain'd to nobler understanding, and of more lofty faculty. the other still remiss; the animal let down, and slacker, grovelling in more low and mean perceptions.

"A musical metaphor [cf. 384], from strings, of which the stretch'd and highest gave a smart and sharp sound, the slack a flat and heavy one." Lat. remissus = 'slack, relaxed.'

The construction of the line is absolute—"the one being intense' etc.

388. The subject of the verbs is which (= "society"), in 385.

390. participate; cf. IX. 717.

396. converse, have fellowship with; cf. 418 ("conversation"), and VII. 9.

399. nice, dainty; said with a touch of reproof to Adam for being fastidious and "subtle" in his tastes.

402. in pleasure, in the midst of pleasant things. Eden means 'pleasure'; cf. IV. 27, 28.

405—407. Passages like this, and III. 383, 384, v. 603—606, reveal the Arianism of Milton's theology.

407. Newton quotes Horace, Odes I. 12. 17, 18 :

*unde nil majus generatur ipso,
nec viget quicquam simile aut secundum.*

409. and those; the Heavenly beings.

412—14. An allusion to Romans xi. 33.

417. in degree, only relatively perfect. the cause, which thing, viz. his imperfection, is the cause.

421. through all numbers absolute. Newton noted that this is a Latin turn of phrase = 'perfect in every respect'; from Lat. numerus in the sense 'a part of a whole, detail.' Cf. omnibus numeris = 'in every detail' in the following passages: perfectum expletumque omnibus suis numeris atque partibus—Cicero, De Natura Deorum II. 13; and liber numeris omnibus absolutus—Pliny, Epistles IX. 38. Here M. uses the Latinism with a kind of quibble, numbers being in antithesis to one. For absolute = 'perfect,' cf. 548.

423. his single imperfection, his imperfection in being single, i.e. unwedded. Cf. phrases in Shakespeare like "single blessedness" = blessedness in being single, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, I. I. 78; cf. I. 120, note.

425. in unity defective, defective as long as he is single. unity; in its literal sense, 'oneness, the state of being one.'

which, a thing which, viz. "to manifest...and beget."

433. from prone, from being prone, i.e. not upright. M. uses this classical idiom several times in prose and verse, but commonly with the preposition of. Cf. The Tenure of Kings, "raised them to be high and rich of poor and base" (P. W. II. 47). See IV. 153, note.

440. free. "Milton is, upon all occasions, a strenuous advocate for the freedom of the human mind, against the narrow and rigid notions of the Calvinists of that age" (Thyer).

441. my image; in apposition to thee (440); cf. VII. 519, 520.

443. freely, spontaneously; without warning from his Maker.

445. Genesis ii. 18.

450. other self; so in x. 128. Cf. the classical phrases for a friend, ἕτερος αὐτός and alter ego.

452—86. Genesis ii. 21, 22.

460, 461. the cell of fancy; for this idea cf. v. 102—109. See Numbers xxiv. 4 ("falling into a trance, but having his eyes open").

462, 463. abstract, abstracted. In Gen. ii. 21, the word rendered "a deep sleep" implies a 'trance' (Newton).

465. my left side. "The Scripture says only 'one of his ribs,' but Milton follows those interpreters who suppose this rib was taken from the left side, as being nearer to the heart" (Newton). Cf. cordial, 'belonging to the heart' (Lat. cor), in 466. Sir Thomas Browne, Religio Medici, I. xxi., says, "Whether Eve was framed out of the left side of Adam, I dispute not; because I stand not yet assured which is the right side of a man; or whether there be any such distinction in nature." See also x. 886—88, notes.

466—70. In his Tetrachordon, M. says: "That there was a nearer alliance between Adam and Eve, than could be ever after between man and wife, is visible to any. For no other woman was ever moulded out of her husband's rib" (P. W. III. 335).

478. Cf. Milton's Sonnet "On his deceased Wife," 14 (Thyer).

488. Newton quotes Shakespeare, Troilus and Cressida, IV. 4. 120, "The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek."

494. enviest, grudge.

494—99. Genesis ii. 23, 24; Matthew xix. 4—6; Mark x. 6—8.

498. adhere=the Scriptural word "cleave" (Genesis ii. 24). Newton notes that the Vulgate has adhærebit uxori suæ.

500. divinely, by divine agency (cf. 485); Lat. divinitus. Cf. S. A. 226, "The work to which I was divinely called."

502. conscience, consciousness=Lat. conscientia; cf. Hebrews x. 2, "because that the worshippers once purged should have had no more conscience of sins." So in the second Sonnet ("To Cyriack Skinner") on his blindness.

503. wooded...won. Proverbial; cf. Richard III. I. 2. 228, 229:

"Was ever woman in this humour woo'd?

Was ever woman in this humour won?"

See I Henry VI. v. 3. 77, 78; Titus Andronicus, II. I. 82, 83; Sonnet 41.

504. not obvious, retiring, modest; not 'forward.'

508. honour. Cf. Hebrews xiii. 4, "Marriage is honourable in all," and the Prayer-Book, "holy Matrimony...is an honourable estate." Cf. 577.

513, 514. This notion of omens is imitated from the classical poets. Cf. IX. 782—84.

515—17. gales. Speaking of the similar passage in bk. IV.—cf. "sylvan scene" (IV. 140), "gentle gales" (156)—Tennyson justly remarked: "undoubtedly commonplace now, but M. introduced the style": which the 18th century poets did to death.

518. the amorous bird of night; see v. 39—41, note.

519, 520. Cf. XI. 588, 589. The evening-star Hesperus was also called stella Veneris. See VII. 366, note. on his hill-top; Newton compares Catullus LXII. 1, 2; Vergil, Eclogues VIII. 30.

532, 533. Cf. S. A. 1003—1007.

534—36. or...or; cf. Coriolanus, III. I. 208, 209:

“Or let us stand to our authority,
Or let us lose it”;

and Julius Cæsar, v. 5. 3, “he is or ta'en or slain.”

537—39. So in S. A. 1025—30 the Chorus ask why women are fickle:

“Is it for that such outward ornament
Was lavished on their sex, that inward gifts
Were left for haste unfinished, judgment scant,
Capacity not raised to apprehend
Or value what is best,
In choice, but ofttest to affect the wrong?”

In those lines, as here in 540—42, we have Milton's own opinion as to the relative character and intellectual capacity of man and woman. “Not equal” is his view (iv. 296); contrast Tennyson's—“diverse” (The Princess).

547. absolute, perfect, “complete” (548). Cf. 471—74.

548. so well to know, i.e. she seems (547).

555, 556. i.e. designed by God from the first, not made to supply some need or “occasion” that arose afterwards.

560. contracted, frowning, in sign of displeasure. Cicero has contrahere frontem in this sense, Pro Cluentio 26.

561—78. Cf. the very similar passage in bk. x. (145—56), where, after the Fall, Adam is rebuked by God for having yielded to Eve (Genesis iii. 12) and eaten the forbidden fruit. Raphael's warning prepares us for Adam's weakness in book ix.

569. Ephesians v. 28, 29. Cf. the Prayer-Book, “I take thee to my wedded wife...to love and to cherish.”

570. not thy subjection; a favourite sentiment with M.; cf. ix. 1182—86, S. A. 1053—60.

573. that skill, that knowledge or wisdom, i.e. self-esteem.

574. “The head of the woman is the man,” 1 Corinthians xi. 3.

576. adorn. The word is either an imitation of Ital. adorno = adornato, and M. is fond of Italianised forms; or an instance of the Elizabethan tendency to abbreviate participles.

579, 580. touch. Cf. Adam's words, 530.

590. hath his seat in reason, is based on. Compare Dante's analysis of love into two kinds—“either natural or rational” (amore o naturale o d' animo)—Purgatorio, xvii. 92, 93. That and the next canto of the Purgatorio should be compared with 586—621. The language recalls Twelfth Night, II. 4. 21, 22:

"It gives a very echo to the seat
Where Love is throned."

591. scale, ladder (Lat. scala); cf. v. 483, and Sir Thomas Browne, Religio Medici, I. xxxiii., "there is in this universe a stair, or manifest scale, of creatures, rising not disorderly, or in confusion, but with a comely method and proportion." He speaks too of "the ladder and scale of creatures" (I. xxx.). See also Bacon, New Atlantis, Pitt Press ed., p. 47. This idea of ascent is essentially Platonic and Spenserian.

592. We find this idea of Heavenly love in Comus, 1003—11 (the allegory of Cupid and Psyche), Lycidas, 176, 177, and Milton's Latin elegy, the Epitaphium Damonis, 217. Note also that in the first three drafts of his contemplated drama of Paradise Lost a personification of "Heavenly Love" appears among the characters. No doubt, the idea was suggested by Plato's discourse in the Symposium (180 et seq.) on the two types of love—οὐράνιος "Ἔρως, 'divine love,' and πάνδημος "Ἔρως; cf. Milton's reference to "the divine volumes of Plato" (by which probably he meant in particular the Symposium and Phædrus) in a well-known passage of autobiography in An Apology for Smectymnuus, P. W. III. 119. Spenser has An Hymne of Heavenly Love, the sentiment of which is Christianised Platonism, adapted from Italian sources; see the Pitt Press edition of the Four Hymnes.

thou may'st ascend. Cf. Wordsworth, Laodamia, 145—47:

"Learn by a mortal yearning to ascend,
Seeking a higher object:—Love was given,
Encouraged, sanctioned, chiefly for that end."

Thyer refers to the Symposium 211.

598. genial, nuptial; cf. Lat. genialis lectus (or torus); genialis is connected with gignere, 'to beget, to produce, bring forth.' See IV. 712.

599. mysterious, full of awe, such as befits "a great mystery" (Ephesians v. 32).

601. decencies, graceful traits, touches of comeliness.

604. Cf. the definition of friendship as 'one soul in two bodies.'

607. these subject not, these do not bring me into "subjection" (570); i.e. the charming qualities of Eve mentioned above.

608. foiled, overcome.

609—11. i.e. though he meets with various objects presented to him by his senses under various forms, yet he still preserves freedom of choice.

615. Cf. Wordsworth, Laodamia, 97, 98:

"He spake of love, such love as spirits feel
In worlds whose course is equable and pure."

624, 625. Cf. the description of spiritual forms in I. 424—28.

631. Earth's green Cape, Cape Verd (= 'green'), on the west coast of Africa. verdant Isles, the Cape Verd islands; commonly identified with the classical Hesperidum Insulæ, in which were the "Hesperian Gardens" (III. 568) where grew the golden apples guarded by the daughters of Hesperus and the dragon Ladon. See III. 568, IV. 250, notes.

632. I think the rhythm shows that Hesperian qualifies sun (630), not Isles.

633—43. Raphael "very properly closes his discourse with those moral instructions which should make the most lasting impression on the mind of Adam, and to deliver which was the principal end and design of the Angel's coming" (Newton).

634. See I John v. 3, "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments."

636. free will, your will unswayed by passion.

637. admit, approve of. Newton says 'commit' (= Lat. admittere).

639. persevering; cf. VII. 632.

648. See VII. 41, note.

651. good, propitious, gracious: sis bonus, o, felixque tuis, Vergil, Eclogue v. 65. Milton had echoed that passage twice. Cf. the end (207, 208) of his Epitaphium Damonis:

quin tu, cali post jura recepta, Dexter ades placidusque fave;

and Lycidas, 182—85:

"Now, Lycidas, the shepherds weep no more;
Henceforth thou art the Genius of the shore,
In thy large recompense, and shalt be good
To all that wander in that perilous flood."

oft return. Raphael does not appear again in the poem; after the Temptation and Fall, a sterner Archangel (XI. 234, 235) is sent from Heaven to lead Adam forth from Paradise.

BOOK IX.

1—5. This introduction refers mainly to Raphael's colloquy with Adam in the four preceding books of Paradise Lost. We were told in them how the Archangel came down to Eden, partook with Adam of the "rural repast" which Eve prepared (v. 331—450), and then held long "talk" with him; narrating the rebellion of Satan and his followers (v. 577—907), the contest and their expulsion from Heaven (vi. 1—892), and the Creation of the World (book vii.); explaining other points on which Adam asks questions (book viii.); and admonishing him against his Enemy (vi. 900—12, viii. 635—43). Raphael is referred to several times in books v.—viii. as Adam's "Angel-guest" (v. 328), "godlike guest" (v. 351), "Heavenly guest" (vii. 69, viii. 646), and it is to him that the description in lines 2—4 is meant to apply.

This book "has more story in it, and is fuller of incidents, than any other in the whole poem" (Addison).

1. no more of talk, i.e. there will be no more of this friendly conversation in the rest of the poem. In book xi. the Messenger sent from Heaven is not Raphael "the affable Archangel" (vii. 41), but the stern, warlike Michael, who has to announce to Adam and Eve their banishment from Eden and to lead them forth.

where God; understand from what follows some words like 'conversed,' 'spoke.' The reference is to book viii., where Adam says that the Almighty gave him possession of the Garden of Eden, warned him not to touch the Tree of Knowledge (viii. 316—33), and then promised him a help-mate in Eve (viii. 437—51).

2. as with his friend. Cf. Exodus xxxiii. 11.

6. tragic, i.e. "notes," to which the nouns "distrust," "breach" etc. are in apposition. The style of books ix.—xii. is less epical; we must not "expect such lofty images and descriptions as before" (Newton).

11. a world of, much of, a deal of. For the verbal quibble see 648, and cf. xi. 627. Addison quotes this line (11) to illustrate his remark that M. "often affects a kind of jingle in his words"—a figure of speech, he adds, authorised by "some of the greatest ancients" but "at present [1712] universally exploded by all the masters of polite writing."

12. Sin...Death; see x. 230. shadow, inseparable companion; compare "shade," x. 249. There is in both cases an allusion to the description of Death's appearance—"that shadow seemed," ii. 669; "the meagre Shadow," x. 264.

Misery, all kinds of physical pain and disease—the "harbingers," i.e. forerunners, of death. Cf. the vision revealed to Adam in xi. 477—90 of the "diseases dire" that Eve's disobedience brought upon men.

13—19. He means that as regards the "argument," i.e. subject, with which it is now about to deal, his poem has an advantage over the three great classical epics: (1) the Iliad, which commences with the line "Sing, O Muse, the wrath of Achilles," and describes in book xxii. his pursuit of Hector ("his foe") thrice round the wall of Troy; (2) the Odyssey, which relates the wanderings that Odysseus ("the Greek") experienced on his homeward journey after the Trojan war because Neptune was hostile to him; and (3) the Æneid, which tells of the hostility of Juno to Æneas, the son of Cytherea, i.e. Venus, and of his betrothal to Lavinia (daughter of Latinus, king of Latium), who had previously been promised in marriage to Turnus.

There is a similar summary of the themes of the three classical epics in his Second Defence of the People of England, where he writes: "The epic poet who adheres at all to the rules of that species of composition does not profess to describe the whole life of the hero whom he celebrates, but only some particular action of his life, as the resentment of Achilles at Troy, the return of Ulysses, or the coming of Æneas into Italy," P. W. I. 299. It is remarkable, I think, how much more repetition of thought and expression there is in Milton than in Shakespeare.

This claim to moral, not artistic, superiority, as of Christianity over Paganism, occurs in the two other great passages of invocation in Paradise Lost; cf. I. 12—16 and VII. 1—12. In Milton's view the great poet is a teacher in the first place, a singer in the second, and he seems to have regarded himself as literally an inspired teacher.

"Wrath" (14), "rage" (16) "ire" (18) all point back to "anger" in line 10. "The anger that he is about to sing is an 'argument' more heroic not only than the anger of men, of Achilles and Turnus, but than that even of the gods, of Neptune and Juno. The anger of the true God is a more noble subject than [the anger] of the false gods" (Newton).

20. answerable; a style corresponding with the dignity of his subject.

21. my celestial patroness, i.e. the "Heavenly Muse" (Urania) whose aid he invokes at the beginning of the poem (I. 6). Milton's references to this Muse of Sacred Song which gave him inspiration have a reality that is lacking in the conventional poetical appeals to the 'Muses.' Cf. P. R. I. 8—17.

22. nightly; cf. 47. He elsewhere speaks of himself as best inspired at night or just at dawn; cf. III. 29—32 and VII. 28—30.

These personal touches have been condemned by some critics as alien from the impersonal elevation of epic poetry. "I cannot" (says Newton) "but own that an author is generally guilty of an unpardonable self-love, when he lays aside his subject to descant upon his own person. But that human frailty is to be forgiven in Milton; nay, I am pleased with it. He gratifies the curiosity he has raised in me about his person ; when I admire the author I desire to know something of the man ; and he, whom all readers would be glad to know, is allowed to speak for himself. But this, however, is a very dangerous example for a genius of an infirm order, and is only to be justified by success."

24. The inverted stress ("eásy") in the first foot gives an easy flow of rhythm corresponding with the sense.

25. since first, i.e. about 1640; some lines of Paradise Lost (iv. 32—41) were written as early as 1642.

this subject for heroic song. See the Appendix, pp. 690, 691.

26. long choosing and beginning late; see the Introduction.

29. i.e. the chief mastery being to etc. dissect; referring to the detailed descriptions of wounds in Homer and Vergil.

30, 31. fabled...feigned. A mythical subject would not appeal to M. Probably one of his reasons for abandoning the story of King Arthur, which he at one time intended to take as the subject of his great poem, was that he found the story to be "fabled" and "feigned." His three great poems all had a solid basis; so had Lycidas, and perhaps Comus in a minor degree (see Introductions to them).

33. races and games. The allusion is to the classical poets; cf. especially the description of the games in Iliad XXIII. and Æneid v. M. makes the Angels who keep guard over the entrance to Paradise "exercise heroic games" (iv. 551, 552), but does not describe them, to avoid repetition of II. 528—38. Compare Johnson's comment: "There is perhaps no poem, of the same length [as Paradise Lost], from which so little can be taken without apparent mutilation. Here are no funeral games, nor is there any long description of a shield"—such as Homer's description of the shield of Achilles, and Vergil's of the shield of Æneas. Cf. line 34.

34—38. The allusion is to the Italian poets—e.g. Boiardo, Ariosto and Tasso—and Spenser, who describe tournaments and scenes of chivalry.

34, 35. tilting furniture, all the equipments of a tournament. imblazoned, with coats of arms portrayed on them. Such descriptions are a great feature of Boiardo's Orlando (Thyer). impresses, devices on shields; the word was particularly associated with the heraldic aspect of tournaments.

36. The base was a skirt or kilt, reaching from the waist to the knees, worn by a knight on horseback.

tinsel trappings; Keightley quotes The Faerie Queene, III. i. 15:

"Her garments all were wrought of beaten gold,
And all her steed with tinsell trappings shone."

37, 38. "The marshal placed the guests according to their rank and saw that they were properly served; the sewer marched in before the meats, and arranged them on the table; the seneshal was the household steward" (Todd).

41, 43. me...remains = me manet.

43, 44. to raise that name, i.e. to raise up, create, for my poem the title "heroic."

44. an age too late; i.e. in the world's history; implying that the conditions favourable to epic poetry had passed away. It is, I suppose, true that no great epic poem (unless Tennyson's Idylls of the King be an exception) has been written, at any rate in English, since Paradise Lost.

In his Life of Milton Johnson says: "There prevailed in his time an opinion that the world was in its decay....It was suspected that the whole creation languished, that neither trees nor animals had the height or bulk of their predecessors, and that everything was daily sinking by gradual diminution. Milton appears to suspect that souls partake of the general degeneracy, and is not without some fear that his book is to be written in 'an age too late' for heroic poesy."

The opinion to which Johnson refers (satirically, as might be expected) "is said to have been first propagated by Dr Gabriel Goodman, Bishop of Gloucester, in a work entitled 'The Fall of Man, or the Corruption of Nature proved by Natural Reason,' 1616" (C. H. Firth). Ben Jonson seems to allude to it in his Discoveries, xx. (Natura Non Effæta): "I cannot think Nature is so spent and decayed that she can bring forth nothing worth her former years. She is always the same, like herself; and when she collects her strength, is abler still. Men are decayed, and studies: She is not." The idea is glanced at by Thomson, Spring, 307, 308.

44, 45. or cold climate. Here he touches on what was a lifelong opinion. Thus in his poem Mansus (1638) he apologises for his Latin poems on the ground that his Muse was reared in the chill north; while in the History of Britain he complains that the English lack "the sun [which] ripens wits as well as fruits" (P. W. v. 240). We find the same idea in The Reason of Church Government, Preface to book II. ("if there be nothing adverse in our climate, or the fate of this age," i.e. adverse to the composition of a great poem), and in the Areopagitica; see P. W. II. 53, 479. Cf. Pope's Essay on Criticism, II., where he says that some people allow only foreign writers to have wit:

"Meanly they seek the blessing to confine,
And force that sun but on a part to shine,
Which not alone the southern wit sublimes,
But ripens spirits in cold northern climes."

The influence of climate on national character is a leading idea in Gray's philosophic fragment The Alliance of Education and Government.

or years; perhaps not far short of sixty.

During the years that he was engaged over P. L. Milton could only compose freely between the autumn equinox and May: "whatever he attempted at other times was never to his satisfaction, though he courted his fancy never so much" (Phillips's Memoir, 1694, substantiated by Toland and Aubrey).

wing; his favourite emblem; cf. III. 13, VII. 4.

46. depressed; used proleptically, and with an antithesis to "raise," 43.

53. The close of the fourth book describes how Satan was driven out of Eden by Gabriel. In the intervening books, v.—VIII., there is very little advance in the action of the poem, except that Adam receives warning of his Enemy through Raphael.

54, 55. At his first entrance into Eden Satan had overheard Adam and Eve speaking about the Tree of Knowledge and thus learned the one thing in which to tempt them and compass their ruin (IV. 408—535).

fraud; in the general sense 'deceit, guile'; see 89, 285. Cf. The Prayer-Book, "Whatsoever hath been decayed by the fraud and malice of the devil" (the Collect in "The Visitation of the Sick").

56. maugre. Milton uses it in two other places (III. 255) and P. R. III. 368, in each instance with a noun, not a clause.

59. from compassing the Earth. Cf. Job i. 7, "And the LORD said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it."

Todd quotes from Sylvester's Du Bartas, where the passage is versified thus:

"I come, said he, from walking in and out,
And compassing the earthlie ball about."

cautious of day; cf. "he rode with darkness," 63, 64.

60—62. Cf. IV. 549—88, where Uriel is described as coming to warn Gabriel, who guarded the eastern gate of Paradise with Cherubim, that one of the outcast evil angels has found his way into the "garden."

Uriel; cf. III. 648, 649, note.

descried; this favours the change of text in IV. 567.

63—66. First he gives an astronomical, then a geographical (76—82), account of Satan's wanderings.

“Of the seven days during which Satan went round and round the Earth, always keeping himself on its dark side, three were spent in moving from east to west on the equatorial line; four in moving round from pole to pole, [i.e.] from north to south and back,—in which second way of moving he would traverse (or go along) the two colures,—viz. two great circles, so named by astronomers, drawn from the poles. Originally all great circles passing through the poles were called colures (κόλουροι, ‘curtailed’); but the term was at length confined to the two great circles drawn from the poles through the equinoxes and the solstices respectively. The one was called the Equinoctial colure, the other the Solstitial” (Masson).

67. the coast averse, the side of Paradise away from the gate where the Cherubim kept watch (IV. 542—54); that this was the north side is shown, as Keightley noted, by the position assigned to the river (the Tigris) in IV. 223—32.

69—73. He identifies the Tigris with the river that “went out of Eden to water the garden,” Genesis ii. 10.

71—77. Paradise...Eden; see the notes on IV. 132, 134.

73. rose up. We have the same rhythm expressing the same effect in I. 10 and IV. 229.

74. sunk; the incorrect form used by M., presumably as more euphonious; similarly he nearly always has sung for sang.

76—82. “The Fiend, on leaving Eden, had gone northward over the Pontus Euxinus or Black Sea, and over the Palus Mæotis or Sea of Azof, and so still northward, over what is now Russian territory, as far as beyond the Siberian river Ob or Obe, which flows into the Arctic sea; whence, continuing round the pole and descending on the other side of the globe, he had gone southward again as far as the Antarctic sea and pole. So much for his travels north and south. In length, i.e. measured as longitude in an equatorial direction, his journeys had extended from the Syrian river Orontes, west of Eden, to the Isthmus of Darien, and so still west, completing the great circle [of the world] to India on the east of Eden. Observe how true to the imagined reality is the mention of Ganges here before Indus. In the circuit described Satan would come upon the Ganges first” (Masson).

77. pool, i.e. inland sea; used in allusion to its classical name, ἡ Μαιώτις λίμνη, Palus Mæotis. So in P. R. IV. 79 he calls it “the Tauric pool” (from the neighbouring Tauric Chersonese, i.e. the Crimea). Cf. “the Asphaltic pool”=the Dead Sea, I. 411. The river Ob is mentioned several times in Milton’s History of Moscovia (i.e. Russia), one of his minor prose-works, not published till 1682.

79. antarctic, south. "No particular place is mentioned near the South pole, there being [there] all sea or land unknown" (Newton).

81. Darien, i.e. the Isthmus of Panama.

82. the orb, the whole world—orbis terrarum. A similar passage comes in Milton's Latin piece In Quintum Novembris (7—10), written many years before.

83. narrow, careful, scrutinising closely.

86. "Now the Serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made," Genesis iii. 1. Cf. 560.

87, 88. irresolute of thoughts revolved, i.e. a debate that for a long time came to no decision in regard to—no settlement of—the thoughts pondered over. sentence, decision, Lat. sententia.

90. suggestions, temptations.

95. doubt, suspicion.

98. The alliteration emphasises the intensity of his emotion.

99. Cf. VII. 328, 329.

103. M. is fond of comparing the motions of the stellar bodies (= "other heavens") to a "dance"; cf. v. 178, 620—24, VIII. 125.

104. officious; cf. VIII. 99.

105. as seems. Cf. VIII. 15—38, where dealing with the same thought M. makes Adam use the same cautious language—e.g. "that seem," 19, "for aught appears," 30. Probably his reason was that he thought that some of the heavenly bodies, especially the Moon, might be inhabited (III. 459—62, VIII. 140—76).

107. sacred; used in reference to "light"; see 192, note.

113. growth, sense, reason. "The three kinds of life rising as it were by steps ['gradual,' 112], the vegetable, animal and rational; of all which Man partakes, and he only; he grows as plants...he lives as all other animated creatures, but is over and above indued with reason" (Richardson). See note on v. 469.

115. joy in aught. One joy is left to him, but only one (477—79).

119. place; implying 'fit place to dwell in.'

"Place or refuge" is not, at first sight, an obvious antithesis, and Bentley suggested "place of refuge." But the sense Milton intended is, no doubt: 'I find none of these delightful places, or parts of the earth, permitted to be a residence for me; neither can I possibly escape from that hell to which I am doomed'—the hell, namely, of his outcast condition and "torment" within him (Dunster).

122. Cf. IV. 109, 110. There, as here, Milton makes Satan soliloquise on the brink of a momentous action, and the effect is to heighten the sense of tension and expectancy.

- 126—28. For the sentiment, see VI. 907, note.
130. him destroyed; see VII. 142.
133. follow, i.e. fall, like man himself; cf. X. 651, note.
- 137—39. Meant as a sneer at the time which the work of creation had taken its Creator, though "Almighty styled."
- 140—51. Cf. the "Argument" of bk. VII.: "Raphael...relates... that God, after the expelling of Satan and his Angels out of Heaven, declared His pleasure to create another World, and other creatures to dwell therein."
140. in one night; that in which the rebellion in Heaven began; see V. 642—71.
141. well nigh half; see II. 692, note.
- "That a greater number of angels remained in heaven, than fell from it, the Schoolmen will tell us; that the number of blessed souls will not come short of that vast number of fallen spirits, we have the favourable calculation of others" (Browne, Christian Morals, III. xxviii.).
142. name; cf. Lat. nomen in the sense 'race, stock.'
- 146, 147. if they...are his created; which he denies when addressing his followers, V. 859—63, telling them that they are "self-begot, self-raised," 860. Yet he knew and elsewhere (IV. 42, 43) admitted to himself the truth.
- 148—51. Cf. Satan's words at his first sight of Adam and Eve (IV. 358—60).
150. Bunyan uses original= 'origin' several times in The Holy War, e.g. "We will, if you please, first discourse of the original of this Diabolus" ("Temple" edition, p. 12).
155. "For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways," Psalms xci. 11.
156. flaming ministers, the Cherubim (61, 62); cf. IV. 797, 798.
157. earthy; so the original editions; the mis-reading earthly occurs often in modern texts.
166. this essence, i.e. the substance variously described as "ethereal" and "empyrean" of which M. conceived the Angelic forms to consist; cf. passages like I. 117, V. 499, VI. 330, 433, and the discourse on Angels in The Christian Doctrine, I. 7. After their rebellion the "liquid texture" (VI. 348) of the forms of the evil Angels degenerated into a "gross" substance (VI. 661). See V. 478, VI. 327, notes. That the forms of the fallen Angels changed was a doctrine taught by many of the Church Fathers.
- to incarnate and imbrute*; the construction is probably varied thus: 'I am now constrained into a beast, and to incarnate this essence.'

169. down; for this use of the adverb as a verb ('sink') Newton compares 2 Henry IV. IV. 5, 120, 121.

170. obnoxious; in the sense of Lat. obnoxius, 'liable, exposed to.'

172. Cf. IV. 17, 18.

174. higher, i.e. aiming higher, against the Almighty himself.

175—78. Jealousy is one of the motives that animate Satan against man, but the strongest is desire "to spite the great Creator" (II. 384, 385). Cf. 178 and X. 1, "the...despiteful act."

176. son of despite; modelled on Hebraic phrases like "sons of valour," 2 Samuel ii. 7 (margin), "sons of Belial," 1 Samuel ii. 12.

180. like a...mist; the simile is used again, XII. 629—31. It is Homeric (Iliad I. 359). The external world had been "like a mist" to the poet himself.

192. whenas, when; so whereas, where; both are common in Elizabethan writers, and may perhaps have been originally rather more emphatic than the simple forms, though the distinction, if it existed, was soon lost.

sacred; because "God is light," 1 John i. 5. Cf. the invocation ("Hail, holy Light") in III. 1—6.

193, 194. The origin of Gray's line, Elegy, 17 :

"The breezy call of incense-breathing Morn."

196, 197. Cf. passages like Genesis viii. 21, Leviticus i. 9.

198, 199. Cf. their "Morning Hymn," v. 153—208.

200. Newton aptly notes that M. himself was an early riser, quoting the passage to that effect in An Apology for Smectymnuus, P. W. III. 112. Cf. L'Allegro, 41—68, Il Penseroso, 121—30. Among the Milton MSS. (a Common-place Book of miscellaneous jottings) found at Netherby Hall in Cumberland and printed by the Camden Society was a piece of Latin verse in praise of early rising. Aubrey in his brief Life of Milton says that it was his custom to rise at 4.30 a.m., and that he always began the day by having the Hebrew Bible read to him: "then he contemplated."

213. hear; so the First Ed.; the Second, bear.

218. spring, clump, thicket; commonly 'a sprig, single shoot of a tree,' as in Venus and Adonis, 656, "This canker that eats up Love's tender spring."

228. compare; used as a noun in III. 138, v. 467; so in Shakespeare.

229. motioned, proposed; cf. motion = 'proposal' in politics.

233. to study household good. Cf. S. A. 1046—49. Milton brought up his daughters on this principle. Apparently he had good reason to be satisfied in this respect with his third wife, "a genteel person," says Aubrey, "of a peaceful and agreeable humour," who, according to tradition, was careful "in providing such dishes" as he liked best.

241. not the lowest end, i.e. the highest object, since "without love no happiness," as Raphael tells Adam (VIII. 621).

245. wilderness, wildness; Todd compares Measure for Measure, III. I. 142 (evidently a favourite scene with Milton—cf. II. 180—82, note).

247. Scan converse; cf. 909. So in Hamlet, II. I. 42.

249. Cf. Cicero's saying which has become proverbial, nunquam minus solus quam cum solus; and the familiar lines in Childe Harold, IV., "There is a pleasure" etc.

The verse is noticeable as having two extra syllables. Cf. VIII. 216.

264. envy; cf. IV. 502, 503.

265. or this, or worse; whether this, or worse, be his design (261).

265, 266. The creation of Eve (Genesis ii. 21, 22) is described in VIII. 465—71. Cf. the allusion in II 53, II 54.

270. virgin, sinless, innocent.

276. the parting Angel, Raphael, whose last words to Adam were a warning to "beware" and "stand fast" in his obedience (VIII. 633—43).

282. thou fear'st not. "Adam had not said so expressly, but had implied as much in enlarging particularly upon [their Enemy's] 'sly assault,' 256" (Newton).

288. thoughts which; the abrupt transition to the interrogative form "how found they?" marks the agitation of the speaker.

harbour, dwelling-place, lodging; cf. 2 Henry VI. III. I. 335, 336:

"Let pale-faced fear keep with the mean-born man,
And find no harbour in a royal heart."

290. healing words; again in S. A. 605.

292. entire; in the literal sense of Lat. integer (from which entire is derived), 'untouched by, free from.'

314. unite, i.e. with the virtues implied in the preceding lines.

320. less attributed to, too little credit given to. less, i.e. than she deserved. Apparently M. scanned attributed; cf. VIII. 12.

327. only our foe; she quotes Adam's argument (296—99), and then (329) endeavours to answer it.

330. front, brow, forehead (Lat. frons); used with quibbling allusion to "affronts" in 328.

334. event, issue, result, Lat. eventus; cf. 405, 984.

336. alone; emphatic. "What is the value of these qualities till they have been tested and stood the test by their own unaided merits?"

The sentiment is that of the fine passage in the Areopagitica where M. says, "I cannot praise a fugitive and cloistered virtue," i.e. one that does not go out into the world and face evil (P. W. II. 68).

341. no Eden, i.e. "no place of happiness, not what its name denotes," i.e. 'pleasure' (Keightley).

351, 352. but God left free the will. On this point, as might be expected, M. dwells often; cf. III. 96—128, V. 524—40, X. 9. There is much bearing on the subject in chapters 3 and 4—on "The divine Decrees" and "Predestination"—of The Christian Doctrine, I.

what obeys reason is free; cf. XII. 82—101.

353. still erect, always on the alert.

358. mind, remind.

361. suborned, procured for an evil purpose; qualifying object.

367. approve, give proof of, demonstrate; cf. 2 Cor. vii. 11.

371. securer, less on our guard, "less prepared" (381).

'It may be (says Adam) that if we remain together and let the trial come to us, instead of going to meet it, we shall not be so well prepared for it when it does come as you appear to be after my warning: if you think so, then go.'

372—75. The rapid, rather abrupt style is meant, apparently, to indicate some displeasure on the part of Adam.

Newton thought that Milton here had in mind the incident of his own wife's leaving him soon after their marriage.

377. i.e. for all her submissiveness she has the last word. It is in these side-touches that M. shows his own estimate of women. Indeed the picture he draws of Eve in this book is not agreeable. She is self-willed; easily flattered by the Serpent; disobedient of command (780, 781); selfish enough to drag down Adam in her fall (831); deceitful (877, 878); and so mean-spirited as to reproach him (1155—61).

387. Oread, a nymph of the mountain (Gk. ὄρος, a 'mountain'). Dryad, a nymph of the wood—literally of the trees (Gk. δρῦς, an 'oak' or any tree). Delia, Artemis or Diana, who was born in the island of Delos; the goddess of the chase, in which capacity she was attended by a "train" of nymphs. Milton refers to her in Comus, 441, 442, as "the huntress Dian...

Fair silver-shafted queen for ever chaste."

392. The conception of fire and its uses occurs to Adam later (x. 1070—82).

393—95. Pales, a Roman divinity of flocks and shepherds. Pomona, the goddess of fruit (Lat. pomum); cf. v. 378. The story of Pomona's being wooed by Vertumnus, one of the lesser rustic deities of Roman mythology, is told by Ovid in the Metamorphoses XIV. 623 et seq.

likest; misprinted likeliest in the Second Ed. Newton restored the true reading.

395, 396. Ceres, the goddess of agriculture. yet virgin of, i.e. before she had become the mother of Proserpine by Jupiter.

Proserpina, the Latin form; cf. "the Gardin of Proserpina" in The Faerie Queene, II. 7. 53. In IV. 269 Milton uses the Englished form Proserpin.

On the appositeness of the comparisons in 386—96 Pearce has an excellent note. "She [Eve] was likened to the Nymphs and Delia in regard to her gait; but now that Milton has mentioned her being 'armed with garden tools,' he beautifully compares her to Pales, Pomona, and Ceres, all three Goddesses like to each other [and to Eve] in these circumstances, that they were handsome, that they presided over gardening and cultivation of ground, and that they are usually described by the ancient poets as carrying tools of gardening or husbandry in their hands."

401, 402. i.e. to be returned and to have all things, etc.; an instance of zeugma.

409. hellish rancour imminent; his favourite word-order; cf. 5, 1047, and see the note on I. 733.

413. mere serpent. No doubt, M. knew, and perhaps wished to brush aside, the Rabbinical gloss that Satan assumed a form half angelical (or human), half serpentine, when he appeared to Eve. Cf. Pope, Prologue to the Satires, 330, 331 (part of the bitterly satirical portrait of Lord Hervey—cf. IV. 800, note):

"Eve's tempter thus the rabbins have exprest,
A Cherub's face, a reptile all the rest."

See Mark Pattison's note on the passage.

418. more pleasant, i.e. especially pleasant.

419. tendance, that which they tended; the abstract word being used in a concrete sense, as often in M.

423. to, agreeably to, in harmony with. Cf. S. A. 1539, "And to our wish I see one hither speeding," i.e. just as we wanted.

426. bushing; there is no authority for blushing.

432. Repeated from IV. 270.

436. voluble; in the literal sense of Lat. volubilis = 'rolling.'

438. imbordered, planted so as to form a border on either side of the "walk" (434). hand, handiwork.

439, 440. There is a fuller allusion to the legend of the 'Garden of Adonis' in Comus, 998—1002. No doubt, M. knew the long description of the 'Garden' in The Faerie Queene, III. 6. 29—49, which Keats in turn followed in Endymion, II. The allusion is not uncommon in Elizabethan writers. Cf. Ben Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, v. 3, "I pray thee, light honey-bee, remember that thou art not now in Adonis' garden, but in Cynthia's presence, where thorns lie in garrison about the roses"; and Giles Fletcher, Christ's Victorie on Earth, 40, "Adonis' garden was to this but vayne." The chief classical authority for the legend is Pliny, Natural History XIX. 19, where the gardens of Adonis and Alcinous are mentioned in the same sentence.

revived, i.e. after he was slain by the boar. According to the myth, the prayers of Aphrodite (Venus) moved the gods of the lower world to allow Adonis to return to the earth every year and pass six months with the goddess. Spenser treats the story as an allegory of the immortality of love, and says (The Faerie Queene, III. 6. 46—48) that after his restoration to life Aphrodite would not let Adonis descend to the nether world but kept him in the 'Garden':

"There yet, some say, in secret he does ly,
Lapped in flowres and pretious spycery,
By her hid from the world, and from the skill
Of Stygian Gods, which doe her love envy."

440. renowned, i.e. through Homer's mention of him.

441. Alcinous; see the note on v. 340, 341, and compare the allusion to Alcinous in Milton's Vacation Exercise, 49 ("In solemn songs at King Alcinous' feast"). Laertes' son, Odysseus.

442, 443. Referring to the Garden of Solomon ("the sapient king") mentioned in the Song of Solomon vi. 2. By "fair Egyptian spouse" M. means "Pharaoh's daughter" (1 Kings iii. 1), to whom the Song alludes in vii. 1 ("O prince's daughter"). Some critics regard the Song of Solomon as an epithalamium on Solomon's marriage with this princess. Addison could "not but take notice, that Milton, in the conferences between Adam and Eve, had his eye very frequently upon the book of Canticles" (i.e. Song of Solomon). See v. 17—25, note.

not mystic. M. inserts these words as the allusion is to Scripture—not as before, to classical legend. Contrast "feigned," 439.

445—54. Perhaps "only a narrative of what befell the poet in his younger days, when living in his father's house in Bread Street, in the City" (Keightley). Cf. the seventh of his Latin Elegies, where, speaking of his youth, M. says:

Et modo qua nostri spatiantur in urbe Quirites et modo villarum proxima rura placent:

lines which Cowper renders:

"I shunned not, therefore, public haunts, but strayed Careless in city, or suburban shade."

Probably the "public haunt" specially meant was Gray's-Inn Walk, then the fashionable promenade, and not far from Milton's home.

No one can read Milton's works carefully without seeing that he was a true lover of Nature, though not minutely accurate, like Tennyson, in his descriptions of her. His favourite season was spring, and his favourite times of the day the very early morning (cf. 200, note, and 447) and twilight (see IV. 598, 599). And, like his contemporaries, Cowley and Marvell, he loved a garden (Il Penseroso, 49, 50). "He always had a garden where he lived," says Aubrey. At his ideal College, gardening is to be part of the course. Gardens, indeed, were becoming the fashion: witness Evelyn and his Sylva.

In On Education M. does not forget the influence of Nature: "in those vernal seasons of the year when the air is calm and pleasant, it were an injury and sullenness against nature, not to go out and see her riches, and partake in her rejoicing with heaven and earth."

445. Editors note that "in populous cities" occurs in Othello, I. I. 77. See also Drummond's Pastoral Elegy, 83 (Works, II. 116).

446. annoy, make noisome, pollute.

450. tedded, mown and spread out to dry. Thomson, who imitated M. much, has the word in his Summer, "Wide flies the tedded grain," i.e. the corn-sheaves are scattered to dry.

453. for her, because of her.

456. plat, plot.

467, 468. Cf. the sentiment of the famous lines, I. 254, 255.

471. recollects; in the literal sense 're-collects,' i.e. gathers together again; cf. I. 528.

476—78. i.e. not hope of enjoying pleasure but hope of destroying all pleasure, save such as lies in the work itself of destroying.

485. of terrestrial mould, i.e. "formed of earth" (149), a "man of clay" (176). mould = 'material, substance'; as often in M.

489. Cf. Tennyson's description of Helen of Troy in A Dream of Fair Women:

"A daughter of the gods, divinely tall,
And most divinely fair."

490, 491. i.e. love and beauty inspire a certain awe unless there is a still stronger influence of hate to counteract them.

not approached, i.e. if not; the metaphor is continued in "way" and "tend" (= 'direct my course'), 493.

496. indented; "going in and out like the teeth of a saw," says Newton, who refers to the snake in As You Like It, IV. 3. 113, that "with indented glides did slip away."

500. Todd aptly quotes the description of Pyrrhus in the Player's speech in Hamlet (II. 2. 485), "with eyes like carbuncles," i.e. deep red (a sign of passionate temperament and anger). See Julius Caesar, I. 2. 186, Coriolanus, V. 1. 63, 64, and Kenilworth, XXII. Cf. Dante's description of Cerberus: "his eyes are red" (gli occhi ha vermigli)—Inferno, vi. 16. See vii. 496.

502. spires, coils; Lat. spira, 'a coil, wreath.' Cf. The Rape of the Lock, iv. 43, 44:

"Now glaring fiends, and snakes on rolling spires, Pale spectres, gaping tombs, and purple fires."

505, 506. "He here enumerates all the transformed serpents of which antiquity had told, viz. those into which Cadmus and his wife Harmonia were changed in Illyria; that which accompanied the Roman ambassadors from Epidaurus to Rome; and those which were regarded as the sires of Alexander the Great and of Scipio Africanus; of which the former ['he'] was said to have been Jupiter Ammon, the latter Jupiter Capitolinus" (Keightley).

not those that...changed, i.e. not those serpents that changed into themselves Hermione and Cadmus. This interpretation—Keightley's—seems the best; but some editors insert a comma after changed, taking it intransitively and treating Hermione and Cadmus as in apposition to those.

Hermione; the name usually given is Harmonia. The story how Cadmus king of Thebes and his wife Harmonia came to Illyria and were changed into serpents is told by Ovid in the Metamorphoses iv. 562—602; a passage which M. seems to have had again in his mind when he described the final change of Satan, x. 511—32. The Metamorphoses was one of Milton's favourite books, according to his daughter's statement (see Johnson's Life); just as, in Golding's translation, it seems to have been a favourite with Shakespeare—the source, probably, of much of his knowledge of classical mythology.

506, 507. the god, Æsculapius, the god of medicine, whose chief seat of worship was at Epidaurus. At the time of a great pestilence at Rome the oracle of Delphi bade the Romans seek the aid of Æsculapius; so they sent ambassadors to Epidaurus and the god appeared to them in the form of a serpent which accompanied them back and stayed the pestilence at Rome, where Æsculapius was thenceforth worshipped. This legend also is told by Ovid, Metamorphoses xv. 622—744.

507—10. nor to which, i.e. nor those serpents into which Jupiter Ammon was changed and was seen (i.e. by mortals).

The story that Jupiter Ammon—the "Libyan Jove," iv. 277, so called in allusion to his shrine in the Libyan desert—was the father of Alexander the Great occurs in Plutarch's Life of Alexander. Dryden uses it, with obvious reference to this passage, in Alexander's Feast, 21—29. A similar fable represented Jupiter Capitolinus (i.e. of the Capitol) as the father of Scipio Africanus, the vanquisher of Hannibal. Olympias; the wife of Philip of Macedon.

516. so; his habitual way of completing a simile. The comparison of a ship with a serpent is not peculiar to any poet.

522. An allusion to the legend of the sorceress Circe who bewitched men with magic drugs, and then by a touch of her wand transformed them into animals (cf. "herd disguised") which she kept in subjection. Cf. the account in Odyssey x. how Odysseus came to the island of Ææa where she dwelt, and how she changed some of his followers into swine. Milton represents Comus as the son of Circe and assigns to him the attributes of the enchantress. See Comus, 50—77. In Eikonoklastes, 13, M. says that part of the nation is still bewitched with the idea of monarchy, "like men enchanted with the Circean cup of servitude."

525. turret, towering. enamelled, smooth and variegated like enamel. Perhaps M. recollected A Midsummer-Night's Dream, II. I. 255, "And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin" (i.e. throws off, casts).

529, 530. i.e. either he actually used the serpent's tongue as an instrument of speech (although "not made" for it, 749), or he caused a voice to sound by impression of the air.

532. This description of the temptation should be compared with Eve's account of the dream in which she supposed herself to be tempted, v. 35—93.

533. sole wonder; cf. Comus's address to "the Lady" in Comus, 265, "Hail, foreign wonder!" and The Tempest, I. 2. 426, 427.

544. shallow to, without sufficient intelligence to; rather a favourite epithet of contempt with M.

549, 550. glozed, spoke flatteringly. proem, introduction; Gk. προοίμιον, a prelude in music (cf. "tuned"), hence a preface to a poem or speech. Todd shows that M. remembered Comus, 160—64.

553—66. Milton meets the objection of improbability. Cf. Sir Thomas Browne: "It hath seemed strange unto some, she [Eve] should be deluded by a serpent, or subject her reason to a beast, which God had subjected unto hers. It hath empuzzled the enquiries of others to apprehend, and enforced them unto strange conceptions, to make out, how without fear or doubt she could discourse with such a creature, or hear a serpent speak, without suspicion of imposture," Vulgar Errors, I. 1. The first two chapters of the Errors (1646) discuss the "Causes of Errors," from that of Adam and Eve onwards, and "what we may call the intellectual and moral by-play of the situation of the first man and woman in Paradise, with strange queries about it"

(Pater). These chapters are very typical of Browne, and we may be sure that Milton knew them.

558. the latter I demur; 'as to the latter—"sense," 554—I am doubtful whether it was denied to brutes, for' etc. Probably this is an expression of Milton's own opinion; cf. VIII. 373, 374.

560, 561. i.e. thee I knew to be the subtlest beast; because Raphael had so described the serpent when speaking with Adam and Eve (VII. 494, 495).

563. of mute; for this classical idiom cf. 712 and see IV. 153, note.

575. roving the field; cf. Comus, 60, "Roving the Celtic and Iberian fields." So "roam" is transitive in I. 521.

581. fennel; of which serpents were supposed to be fond; cf. Pliny, Natural History VIII. 41, XIX. 56, XX. 95. He mentions the belief that fennel causes snakes to cast their old skins. To this association with serpents it may have been due that fennel was an emblem of dissembling and flattering: whence Ophelia's offer of fennel (probably) to the treacherous Claudius—"There's fennel for you" (Hamlet, IV. 5. 180). In An Apology for Smectymnuus M. mentions another popular belief, given by Pliny, that connects serpents with fennel: "Something I thought it was that made him so quick-sighted...now I know it was this equal temper of his affections, that gave him to see clearer than any fennel-rubbed serpent" (P. W. III. 136). The snake was thought to refresh its sight in spring-time by rubbing against the fennel-plant.

582. Serpents were supposed to suck the teats of sheep and goats (Newton).

586—88. Cf. 740, 741.

599, 600. to degree of reason, to the extent of giving me the faculty of reason. inward; cf. "internal man," 711; externally there was no change in him (601).

601. retained; in somewhat loose agreement with me (599). It is a more appropriate word than restrained (Bentley's suggestion). "For retain'd signifies the being kept within such and such bounds in a natural state; restrain'd, to be kept within them in an unnatural; but the serpent's being confined to his own shape, was being in his natural state" (Warburton).

605. middle, in the air.

606. fair; similarly used as a noun by Shakespeare. Cf. Sonnet 16, "Neither in inward worth nor outward fair," and Love's Labour's Lost, IV. 1. 17, "Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow." For the Elizabethan use of an adj. = a noun cf. 483, 986.

612. universal Dame, mistress (domina) of all. Cf. "Empress of this fair World," 568; "Queen of this Universe," 684.

613. so talk'd. "Milton has shown more art and ability in taking off the common objections to the Mosaic history of the temptation, by the addition of some circumstances of his own invention, than in any other theological part of his poem" (Warburton).

spirited, possessed by a spirit.

For a more striking instance of the same alliterative effect (s...s), designed to suggest the serpent's hiss, see x. 521—28.

615, 616. She thinks that in his excessive compliments (cf. 606—12) he has scarcely shown such "reason" (600) as he said that the fruit conferred.

623. to their provision, to enjoy what is provided for them.

624. birth, produce—'what she bears'; birth is from A.S. beran, 'to bear,' and in the original editions of P. L. the word is here spelt bearth. As in the passages where the word occurs in its ordinary sense it has its ordinary form, some editors think that M. intended the peculiar form bearth to indicate the somewhat peculiar sense, and retain the form. The New English Dictionary (which does not recognise bearth as an independent form) quotes Dryden, Georg. I. 196:

"The fruitful Earth

Was free to give her unexacted birth."

629. blowing, blossoming. The epithet does not occur elsewhere in Milton, though the Comus MS., at line 545, suggests that he thought it a safer description than flaunting.

balm, i.e. the balsam-tree (Gk. βάλσαμος), to which "myrrh," a kind of thorny shrub, is akin. Cf. v. 23.

633, 634. Quoted by Burke in his speech on American Taxation, in describing General Conway (the leader of the House of Commons) after the debate when the Stamp Act was repealed (March 18, 1766).

wandering fire, an ignis fatuus; cf. the German elf-licht.

634—42. Cf. Burton, Anatomy of Melancholy, "Fiery spirits or devils are such as commonly work by blazing Stars, Firedrakes, or Ignes Fatui; which lead men often in flumina, aut præcipitia" (ninth ed., 1800, I. 65). The chief of these spirits were Will-o'-the-Wisp and Jack-o'-the-Lantern. M. alludes to the superstition in L'Allegro, 104 (see the note), and Comus, 433; but whether he himself believes in it we do not know, as he is careful to add the qualifying words "they say." Cf. Comus, 432—37:

"Some say no evil thing that walks by night,
In fog or fire, by lake or moorish fen,

Hath hurtful power o'er true virginity."

635. compact of, composed of; cf. Titus Andronicus, v. 3. 88.

640. M. recollected A Midsummer-Night's Dream, II. 1. 39, "Mislead night-wanderers, laughing at their harm" (said of the mischievous Puck; cf. also III. 1. 112).

643. fraud, offence, crime (Lat. fraus); or 'hurt, damage.'

644. the Tree of prohibition; a "Hebraism for the prohibited or forbidden tree" (Newton).

645. root, source; used probably with a grim quibble on "Tree."

648. fruitless...fruit; the same sort of jingle or word-quibble as in line 11; see the note on I. 642. "The Italian poets...abound with such verbal quaintnesses" (Newton).

653. sole; cf. IV. 421, 433.

daughter of his voice; a literal rendering of a Hebrew phrase which implies 'a voice from Heaven.' Wordsworth describes Duty as "Stern daughter of the Voice of God," Ode to Duty.

the rest, for the rest—"in all else" (Lat. cetera).

654. Cf. Romans ii. 14, "these...are a law unto themselves."

655—63. Genesis iii. 1—3, which M. follows very closely.

655. guilefully; because he knew that only one tree—not "all"—was forbidden them.

667. new part puts on, assumes a new character, i.e. feigning indignant sympathy with man. The metaphor is that of 'playing a part'; cf. P. R. II. 239, 240, and Coriolanus, III. 2. 105, 106:

"You have put me now to such a part which never

I shall discharge to the life" (i.e. act).

As a young man Milton seems to have been fond of the theatre, which often supplies him with a simile or illustration; cf. L' Allegro, 131—34, and his first Latin Elegy.

668. fluctuates; used literally; 'undulates' (Lat. fluctuat) with his body. in act, with his whole person addressed to its task; cf. 674.

670. some orator; such as Demosthenes, to whom M. refers in P. R. IV. 268—71; or Isocrates, the "old man eloquent" of his Sonnet (x.) "To the Lady Margaret Ley," and author of the λόγος Ἀρεοπαγίτικός whence the title of the Areopagitica was adapted; or Cicero (cf. 675, note). In P. R. IV. 356—60 he makes the Saviour speak of the Prophets of Israel as better teachers of the true principles of statesmanship "Than all the oratory of Greece and Rome" (i.e. orators).

672. since mute, i.e. not merely in Greece and Rome, but altogether, as though eloquence were an extinct quality.

673. in himself collected, i.e. completely master of himself = Ital. in se raccolto (Thyer).

673, 674. each part, motion, each act, the orator's whole form, and every movement and gesture. won audience; cf. the picture of Satan addressing his followers, x. 458, 459.

675. in highth began, plunged right into the subject (in medias res). Probably M. had in mind the abrupt commencement of Cicero's first Oration against Catiline—quousque tandem abutere, Catilina, patientia nostra? (Thyer).

680. science; in its original wide sense 'knowledge' (scientia); cf. Gray's Elegy, 119, "Fair Science frown'd not on his humble birth."

681, 682. Cf. Vergil's line felix qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas—Georg. II. 490.

685—712. Genesis iii. 4, 5. Bacon says: "Aspiring to be like God in power, the angels transgressed and fell; Ascendam, et ero similis altissimo: by aspiring to be like God in knowledge, man transgressed and fell; Eritis sicut Dii, scientes bonum et malum: but by aspiring to a similitude of God in goodness or love, neither man nor angel ever transgressed, or shall transgress. For unto that imitation we are called." (The Advancement of Learning, II. 22. 15. The two Latin quotations are respectively from Isaiah xiv. 14 and Genesis iii. 5, in the Vulgate, whence Bacon usually quoted the Scripture.) See VI. 899, note.

687. to knowledge, i.e. in addition to.

700. ye; there is no need to substitute you. Originally ye was used for the nominative only and you for the objective cases; cf. "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you," John xv. 16. Elizabethan writers, however, often disregarded the distinction.

701. not feared, i.e. not to be feared.

702. The Serpent's argument is—"Your fear of death implies injustice on the part of God: but if He is "not just," then is He "not God," and so not to be feared."

710—12. So Adam also reasons; cf. 932—37.

710. should; so the original editions; shall, which some modern texts print, is obviously due to 708.

711. internal Man; though externally he is still a serpent; cf. 601.

713, 714. so ye shall die perhaps, i.e. this perhaps will be the death meant for you, of which you spoke (663). Cf. the New Testament often, e.g. Colossians iii. 9, 10, "ye have put off the old man with his deeds, and have put on the new man."

722. if they, i.e. produce.

729, 730. can envy dwell etc.; a variation of Vergil's tantæne animis caelestibus iræ? Aeneid I. 11. So in VI. 788; see also IV. 118, 119.

732. humane; a complimentary term, 'gracious.' Some editors interpret it = 'human' (a bold oxymoron); but it does not bear this sense in the two other places where Milton uses it, viz. II. 109, P. R. I. 221.

737. impregnated; cf. IV. 500.

740, 741. Cf. 586—88; v. 84—86. It is an addition to the Scriptural account. "They were deceived through the conduct of their senses, and by temptations from the object itself" (Sir Thomas Browne). with desire; cf. Genesis iii. 6, "a tree to be desired."

742. inclinable; leaning to, inclined towards (Lat. inclinabilis).

758. in plain; cf. "in few," i.e. words, x. 157.

771. author, informant. unsuspect, not to be suspected.

773, 774. 'Being ignorant of good and evil, how can I know what is to be feared?'

781. eat; a preterite = ate; so often in Shakespeare; cf. Macbeth, II. 4. 18.

782—84. The introduction of "signs" and omens after the manner of classical writers occurs at several important points in the action of the poem. Cf. 1000—1004; VIII. 513, 514; XI. 182—207. Similarly Grotius in his Adamus Exul represents Eve's disobedient act as accompanied by portents—arborque trepido tota subsiluit solo.

Moreover, "all Nature suffered by the guilt of our first parents" (see x. 651), so that these signs are not merely prodigies but appropriate "marks of her sympathising in the fall of man" (Addison).

783. The pathetic effect of the alliteration is noticeable; cf. the Nativity Ode, 186.

792. knew not eating, i.e. that she was eating; an imitation of the Greek use of a participle after verbs of knowledge or perception, as e.g. in Euripides, Hecuba 397, οὐ γὰρ οἶδα δεσπύρας κερτημένους. The Romans borrowed the idiom, as in sensit medios delapsus in hostes (Aeneid II. 377). So in S. A. 840, "Knowing, as needs I must, by thee betrayed."

793. boon, gay, cheerful; cf. 'boon companion.'

794. The Serpent has slunk away; she forgets him, in her joy.

795. virtuous...precious; equivalent to superlatives. Editors note that Ben Jonson in his English Grammar, bk. II. chap. IV., refers to this use of the positive, which may have been imitated from the Greek and Latin idiom. Editors quote δία θεδών, Iliad v. 381, and sancte deorum, Aeneid IV. 576.

797. to sapience, even to the point of conferring wisdom; cf. 599 ("to degree"). infamed, without fame, unknown.

800. not without; cf. v. 178, note.

803—805. i.e. she intends to eat of the fruit till she equals the gods ("others"), however much they may grudge ("envy") her the knowledge.

805—807. The Serpent had argued that the tree was not the gift of the gods, 718—28.

experience, making trial.

811—13. Cf. texts like Psalms x. 11, xciv. 7, Job xxii. 13, 14.

815. safe, not dangerous, not likely to harm; cf. the colloquial phrase 'safe out of the way.' Macbeth (III. 4. 25) asks the murderer "But Banquo's safe?" i.e. disposed of, so as not to cause trouble.

820. odds, balance, advantage; cf. x. 374.

823. more equal. Cf. IV. 295—99, 635—38; VIII. 540—75; x. 145—56, 888—98: passages which, taken together, are evidence of Milton's own conception of the difference between man and woman. There is indeed something curiously personal in the references to woman in his poems, as though he could not refrain from expressing his own views; cf. 377, note, and 1182—86.

832, 833. Cf. Horace's tecum vivere amem, tecum obeam libens—Odes III. 9. 24.

837. sciential, conferring knowledge, i.e. on those who partake of it. There is a happy allusion to Milton in Lamb's essay Oxford in the Long Vacation, where he describes his visits to the libraries: "I seem to inhale learning...; and the odour of their [the books'] old moth-scented coverings is fragrant as the first bloom of those sciential apples which grew amid the happy orchard" (i.e. of Eden).

845. divine of, foreboding = Lat. divinus in the sense 'prophetic of,' as in Horace, Ars Poetica 218, 219, divina futuri...sententia.

846. the faltering measure, the tremulous, uneven 'beat' of his heart, excited by the foreboding of evil.

851. smiled; cf. Lat. ridere in the sense 'to look pleasant.'

852. The language is Vergilian—Georg. IV. 415.

853, 854. i.e. the pleading expression in her face, showing that she was conscious of guilt, served to introduce the apology she was about to make. The construction seems to be, 'excuse came as prologue and (came) to lead up to apology'—prompt being a verb. The alteration "too prompt" (adj.) is tempting, but has no authority.

864. tasted, if tasted.

872. to admiration; cf. Fr. à merveille.

875. opener mine eyes; cf. 706—708, 985.

877—85. A deceitful argument; contrast her reasoning in 817—25.

888. The strong medial pause marks Adam's horror.

890. astonied, astonished; cf. Job xvii. 8, "Upright men shall be astonied at this." horror chill; cf. Vergilian expressions like gelidus tremor and frigidus horror—Aeneid II. 120, 121, III. 29.

899. amiable, lovely, pleasing to the eye; of the five epithets in the line it is the one that carries on the notion in "fairest," 896, and "to sight," 898. For the use of amiable cf. IV. 250.

901. The alliteration seems to emphasise the certainty and hopelessness of her doom. to death devote; from Horace's line devota morti pectora libera—Odes IV. 14. 18. devote, doomed.

910. wild. The epithet well marks Adam's distress: even Paradise has suddenly lost its beauty in his eyes and become "wild" and dreary.

914, 915. Cf. VIII. 494—96.

922, 923. hast; so the First Ed.; the Second hath.

The original editions have a comma after dared, with the sense—'who hast been so daring, had it been only in gazing on the fruit covetously.' Some editors remove the comma after dared and make the construction dared to eye: a needless change, I think.

926, 927. Various classical renderings of this obvious sentiment have been cited; the closest being a fragment of the poet Agathon, which occurs in Aristotle, Nicom. Ethics VI. 2:

μόνον γὰρ αὐτοῦ καὶ θεὸς στερεσκοῦται, ἀγένητα ποιεῖν ἄσ' ἂν ἦ πεπραγμένα.

927. so, even so, i.e. though what is done cannot be undone.

928. perhaps. M. may have in mind the variation between the Authorised Version in Gen. iii. 3 ("lest ye die") and the Vulgate's "ne forte moriamini." Cf. Sir Thomas Browne, Vulgar Errors, I. 1.

fact; in the literal sense 'deed,' Lat. factum; cf. 980.

929. foretasted fruit, the fruit having been tasted already, i.e. "by the Serpent."

932—37. This was the Serpent's argument to Eve; cf. 710—12.

945. not well conceived of, i.e. it is not to be supposed that the Almighty would act thus. Cf. 938.

947, 948. lest the Adversary...say. Cf. Deuteronomy xxxii. 27. For "the Adversary" = Satan, according to the meaning of the name, cf. Job i. 6 (margin), 1 Peter v. 8.

953. certain to, resolved to. An imitation of Lat. certus, with infinitive or gerund, = 'determined to'; cf. certus eundi and certa mori—Aeneid IV. 554, 564.

965. I boast me sprung; cf. the Homeric εὐχομαι εἶναι.

967. Cf. VIII. 604.

974. by occasion, indirectly.

977—81. Contrast 826—33.

980. oblige; in the sense of Lat. obligare, 'to render liable to punishment, make guilty.'

989. Cf. the proverbial phrase 'to scatter to the winds.' Newton compares Horace, Odes I. 26. 1—3.

998. not deceived; as Eve was by the Serpent; Adam sinned wilfully. Cf. I Timothy ii. 14, "And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression."

999. Cf. x. 151—53.

1000—1004. Cf. 782—84, note.

1003, 1004. It has been remarked that this is the only passage in the poem where M. uses the phrase 'Original Sin'; the doctrine expressed by it he discusses in the treatise on The Christian Doctrine, I. 7 and II, attributing the first use of the expression (originale delictum) to St Augustine, though it is said to have been used by Cyprian in the third century A.D. (P. W. IV. 191—94, 259—61).

1009. swim, revel; cf. xi. 625. So in The Faerie Queene, I. 12. 41, "Yet swimming in that sea of blissful joy," and II. 3. 40.

1011. Cf. Horace's spernit humum fugiente penna—Odes III. 2. 24.

1018. elegant; in the sense of Lat. elegans, 'refined in taste, fastidious.' Cf. v. 335, "tastes...inelegant."

1019, 1020. "Since we use the word savour in both senses [physical and moral], and apply it to the understanding as well as to the palate" (Newton). In this rather far-fetched thought M. is really playing upon the two senses of Lat. sapere, 'to taste' and 'to have discernment, be wise'—both sapientia (1018) and savour (through the French) coming from sapere. Newton quotes the same quibble from Cicero's De Finibus II. 8, nec enim sequitur ut cui cor sapiat ei non sapiat palatum. "Taste," e.g. 'man of taste,' lends itself to the same sort of word-play.

1026. for, instead of.

1034. toy, caress.

1042. Cf. Proverbs vii. 18.

1046—52. Contrast the description of Adam's sleep (v. 3—5).

1050. unkindly, not natural. fumes, vapours, as of intoxication (cf. 793); cf. Dryden, Aurengzebe:

"Power like new wine does your weak brain surprise,
And its mad fumes in hot discourses rise."

1058. Shame; personified, as in 1097. In the original editions the sense was obscured by the omission of a stop after shame.

1058, 1059. he covered; cf. Psalms cix. 29, "Let mine adversaries be clothed with shame, and let them cover themselves with their own confusion, as with a mantle."

but his robe uncovered more, i.e. Shame, till then unknown to them (iv. 313—18), made them conscious of their nakedness. The thought is worked out in The Christian Doctrine, I. 12.

1059—62. Judges xvi. 4—20; cf. Samson Agonistes almost passim. There is a striking application of the story in the conclusion of The Reason of Church Government, II.—P. W. II. 506; cf. also the allusion in Eikonoklastes, 22.

the Danite; cf. the description of Samson's father Manoah in Judges xiii. 2, "a man of Zorah, of the family of the Danites," i.e. of the Tribe of Dan.

1061. Some editors have put forward the view that here and in the three lines of S. A. where the name occurs M. treated the second syllable of Dalilah as short or unaccented, e.g. Dalilah, a scansion which seems to me as unpleasant as it is needless. The correct accentuation is Dalilah (= Daleelah), and the last two syllables may form a trochee or "inversion of rhythm" such as M. admits into any foot of his blank verse. Thus the present line, I think, runs

"Of Philist<sup>é</sup>an Dà|lilah, | and wák'd,"

the third foot having a light stress or accent.

The lines in S. A. in which the name comes are:

"Was in the vale of Sorec, Da|lila," 229:

"Than, Da|lila| thy wife," 724 (a short verse):

"The sump|tuous Da|lila | floating this way," 1072.

In each verse the trochee is rhythmical and quite regular.

'Dalilah' follows the first syllable of the Greek form; the form in the Authorised Version, 'Dalilah,' is nearer to the Hebrew. As printed in S. A. the name has no h, perhaps an intentional difference, M. being extremely particular where sound was affected.

1064. strucken; cf. The Comedy of Errors, I. 2. 45, "The clock hath strucken twelve upon the bell." The forms of the preterite and past participle of strike vary greatly in Elizabethan English.

1068. worm, serpent (VII. 476); cf. Antony and Cleopatra, v. 2. 243, 244, where Cleopatra asks for the asp or serpent to kill herself:

"Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?"

1079. the last, the worst, greatest; cf. Lat. extremus, ultimus. of the first, i.e. lesser evils, which they may well expect, seeing that they have already experienced the greatest of evils, viz. shame.

1080—82. Cf. X. 722—25, XI. 315—17.

1083. this earthly, i.e. shape; or earthly might be a noun = 'mortal nature,' as in VIII. 453, "My earthly by his Heavenly overpowered."

1086—88. Cf. IV. 245, 246.

impenetrable to star. Newton quotes Statius, Thebais x. 85, 86, nulli penetrabilis astro | lucus iners, which perhaps suggested Spenser's description of the grove "Not perceable with power of any starr," The Faerie Queene, I. I. 7. Cf. Arcades, 88, 89:

"Under the shady roof
Of branching elm star-proof."

or sunlight. Cf. poetic descriptions such as "sun-proof" applied to shade, e.g. in Peele's play David and Bethsabe :

"This shade, sun-proof, is yet no shade to me."

So in Matthew Arnold's Church of Brou :

"The hills are clothed with pines sun-proof."

1088. brown, dark. cover me ; cf. Revelation vi. 16.

1090. them ; "those Heavenly shapes," 1082.

1091. as in, seeing that we are in ; Lat. ut ; cf. x. 978.

1101—11. The reference is to the banyan-tree or Indian fig (Ficus religiosa or Indica). Warton pointed out that M. has followed closely—cf. the numerous verbal similarities—the account of this tree in Gerard's Herball, 1597 (the standard Elizabethan work on botany), where it is called "the arched Indian Fig-tree." Gerard, who took his information on the subject from Pliny, Natural History XII. 5, says :

"The ends [of its branches] hang downe, and touch the ground, where they take roote and grow in such sort, that those twigs become great trees ; and these, being grown up unto the like greatnesse, do cast their branches or twiggy tendrels unto the earth, where they likewise take hold and roote ; by meanes whereof it cometh to passe, that of one tree is made a great wood or desart of trees, which the Indians do use for couerture against the extreme heate of the sun. Some likewise use them for pleasure, cutting downe by a direct line a long walke, or as it were a vault, through the thickest part, from which also they cut certain loopholes or windowes in some places, to the end to receiue thereby the fresh cool air that entreth thereat, as also for light that they may see their cattell that feed thereby....From which vault or close walke doth rebound such an admirable echo or answering voice....The first or mother of this wood is hard to be known from the children."

The description of the size of the leaves of this tree—"broad as Amazonian targe," 1111—is due to the same source, Gerard reproducing Pliny's mis-statement that foliorum latitudo pelta effigiem Amazonicæ habet. The description is inaccurate as the leaves of the banyan are small : it is the banana or plantain-tree that has large leaves which "are used, on the coast of Malabar, in the same manner as here by Adam and Eve" (Keightley). Pliny in describing the Ficus Indica evidently united the characteristics of the banyan and banana, and apparently writers even later than M. repeat the confusion. The banyan from its peculiar character is described in many early travels, e.g. in Sir Thomas Herbert's (1634) and Tavernier's (1684).

It furnishes Sir Thomas Browne with a characteristic simile : we must, he says, "bid early defiance unto mother-vices" (i.e. evil tendencies which lead to other evil) : "Where such plants grow and prosper, look for no champain or region void of thorns; but productions like the tree of Goa [Ficus Indica], and forests of abomination," Christian Morals, III. iv. Thomson (Summer) speaks of "the maze,

Embowering endless, of the Indian fig";

and it is, doubtless, one of his many Miltonic reminiscences.

1103. Decan; the name was often applied to the Indian peninsula in general, i.e. so as to include Malabar.

1111. Cf. Vergil's reference to the 'crescent-shaped shields' (lunatae peltae) of the Amazons, Æneid I. 490.

1113. Cf. the margin in Genesis iii. 7, "things to gird about."

1115. of late, i.e. as compared with the remote events of which the poem treats; not strictly "of late" in relation to Milton's own time, because the date of Columbus's discovery was 1492.

1117. with feathered cincture. Hence Gray's phrase, "feather-cinctur'd chiefs," spoken of the Indians of South America, The Progress of Poesy, 62.

1127—31. Cf. 351—56.

1140, 1141. Cf. Eve's words, 335. approve; cf. 367. owe, possess.

1144. Cf. Homer's ποῖδν σε ἔπος φύγεν ἕρκος ὀδόντων.

1155. the head. An allusion to I Corinthians xi. 3, "the head of the woman is the man." So in IV. 443.

1159. Alluding to 372—75.

1163, 1164. the love, i.e. that you have to offer me; "thy love" is a needless change.

1164, 1165. expressed immutable, shown to be unchangeable; the words refer to Adam's love for Eve, which he had "expressed," i.e. demonstrated, so strikingly; cf. 961, 962.

1182—86. No doubt, an expression of Milton's own opinion. One of his sneers at Charles I. is that he was influenced so by his wife: "Examples are not far to seek, how great mischief and dishonour hath befallen nations under the government of effeminate and uxorious magistrates; who being themselves governed and overswayed at home under a feminine usurpation, cannot but be far short of spirit and authority without doors, to govern a whole nation" (Eikonoklastes, 7). Professor Firth has recently noted a curious, hitherto unremarked illustration of Milton's prejudice against women, viz. his treatment of Boadicea in his History of Britain. "Previous historians had regarded the warrior-Queen as a national heroine; he represented her merely as a virago, 'a distracted woman with as mad a crew at her heels.'"

1183. women; he may have dictated woman.

1189. contest. For the accent cf. XI. 800.

BOOK X.

1. heinous; cf. IX. 929. despiteful; see IX. 175—78, note.
 5—7. Contrast IX. 811—16.
 9. with...free will armed. Cf. 46 and see IX. 351, 352, note.
 10. complete to, fully equipped so as to; qualifying mind or man. Some editors remove the comma of the original editions after armed, which they connect with complete. But the rhythm seems to me to favour a slight pause at the end of verse 9.
 12. they, i.e. "Man" (9), used collectively, as in Genesis i. 26.
 16. manifold in sin. "The Divines...reckon up several sins as included in this one act of eating the forbidden fruit, namely, pride, uxoriousness, wicked curiosity, infidelity, disobedience, etc." (Newton). Milton has a passage to this effect in The Christian Doctrine, I. 11 (P. W. IV. 254, 255).
 18. the Angelic guards, i.e. the Cherubim; cf. IX. 61, 62, 156, 157.
 19. by this; cf. Julius Cæsar, I. 3. 125, "And I do know, by this, they stay for me."
 20, 21. had stolen entrance; as is described in IX. 69—76.
 29. i.e. to make appear accountable = to explain, justify.
accountable; in the sense 'that can be accounted for'; not, as more often, 'liable to render account.'
 32. his secret cloud. The description is based on passages like Exodus xxxiii. 9, 10; 1 Kings viii. 10, 11; Ezekiel x. 4: to which (and others) M. refers in the chapter, I. 2, of The Christian Doctrine that treats "Of God." Cf. the fuller allusion in III. 378—81.
 33. "And out of the throne proceeded lightnings and thunderings and voices," Revelation iv. 5. Where he is describing Heaven M. draws largely on the book of Revelation, as we should expect.
 35. charge, duty, office, viz. of guarding Man; cf. IX. 157.
 38. foretold, having been warned. so lately; see III. 80 et seq.
 40. speed, be successful in.
 42. flattered; cf. IX. 532—48, 606—12.
lies; cf. IX. 703—709, 716—32.
 45. moment, force = Lat. momentum, the metaphor being taken from a balance; cf. "inclining" (46), "even scale" (47). So in VI. 239.
 48. rests, remains, Lat. restat; cf. 3 Henry VI. v. 7. 42, 43:
 "And now what rests but that we spend the time With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows?"

pass, should be pronounced.

50. presumes...vain; cf. Adam's words, IX. 927—37.

52. by some immediate stroke; see 210. Cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 12, "Under the head of death, in Scripture, all evils whatever, together with everything which in its consequences tends to death, must be understood as comprehended; for mere bodily death, as it is called, did not follow the sin of Adam on the selfsame day, as God had threatened."

53. The proverbial form of phrase seems hardly to fit the context. For the proverb "omittance is no quittance" (i.e. you may leave a thing undone, but not have done with it), cf. As You Like It, III. 5. 133.

54. as bounty, i.e. has been "scorned." Man had shown scorn of the gifts of the Almighty by seeking something more which was forbidden him.

55—57. Cf. John v. 22, "For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son."

59. mercy...justice. Cf. Psalm lxxxv. 10 and see the Nativity Ode, 141—44.

60. his Mediator. M. discusses "The Mediatorial office" of Christ in The Christian Doctrine, I. 15.

63—67. For similar passages see III. 138—42, 383—89, VI. 680—82, 719—21; and cf. Hebrews i. 3, "Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, ...sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high." Cf. 85, 86.

70, 71. Cf. III. 168.

74. when time shall be; cf. III. 284.

for so I undertook; as was related in III. 227—65.

77. derived, turned aside. Lat. derivare, 'to divert a stream from its channel,' hence figuratively, 'to turn aside, divert.'

77, 78 Todd compares The Merchant of Venice, IV. 1. 196, 197.

79. them; "Justice" and "Mercy."

84. conviction, proving guilty; this is not necessary because the Serpent has admitted his own guilt by flight. The line emphasises the words "convict by flight" (i.e. convicted).

86—88. Compare the description of the Son accompanied to the gate of Heaven by a host of Angelic beings as he goes forth to create the Universe, VII. 192—209.

88, 89. Cf. VII. 617—25. coast, region; more often plural.

90, 91. Cf. Raphael's account of his descent from Heaven to Paradise, VIII. 110—14.

92. The time is determined by Genesis iii. 8 ("in the cool of the day"), where for "cool" the margin has "wind"—cf. "gentle airs" (93).

95. more cool, i.e. than "the evening cool": not a very happy play on words.

96. Intercessor. Cf. III. 219, XI. 19. Milton deals with the subject of Christ's intercession for man, as one aspect of his office as 'Mediator,' in The Christian Doctrine, I. 15.

97—223. The whole scene follows Genesis iii. 8—21 closely, the words of the Scripture being worked into the text, just as in Shakespeare's Roman historical plays the language of North's Plutarch is constantly reproduced and in Tennyson's Idylls of the King the language of Malory's Morte Darthur. In many passages of the poem, especially where he represents the Deity as speaking, M. reproduces the Scripture thus, merely adapting it to the form of blank verse.

106. obvious; in the sense of Lat. obvius, 'coming to meet.'

112. apparent, clear, manifest.

120. still, ever, always.

121, 122. Cf. IX. 1051—59, 1070—98.

128. my other self. Cf. VIII. 450, note.

131, 132. The lines are suggestive of Lycidas, 6, 7.

145—56. See IX. 823, note.

149, 150. See IX. 265, 266 (note), and cf. IV. 440, 441.

154. i.e. such as were seemly while subject to her husband's government.

155, 156. part...person; terms drawn from the stage. 'It was for you to play the part (cf. IX. 667) and character (Lat. persona) of ruler.' So in P. R. II. 240.

157. in few; cf. Henry V. I. 2. 245. So "in plain," IX. 758.

161. bold; as when she plucked the forbidden fruit (IX. 780, 781).

loquacious; as in her argument with Adam (IX. 973 et seq.).

165. unable; qualifying Serpent.

169. more to know, i.e. that the Serpent was only the instrument of Satan.

173. mysterious, because they had an inner application, viz. to Satan, which, for the time, was to be hidden from Adam, who would suppose that they referred to the Serpent. Later (1032—35) Adam perceives the application.

judged as then best; an inversion of order; 'as was then thought best.'

175—81. Genesis iii. 14, 15.

181. her seed, i.e. in the person of the Son of Man (183).

182. then verified. The 'verification' described (183—190) is of the last and most significant words of the whole curse, viz. "Her seed shall bruise," etc.

"Here [182—90] is a manifest indication, that, when Milton wrote this passage, he thought Paradise was chiefly regained at our Saviour's resurrection. This would have been a copious and sublime subject for a second poem. The wonders, then to be described, would have erected even an ordinary poet's genius; and, in episodes, he might have introduced His conception, birth, miracles, and all the history of His administration, while on earth. And I much grieve, that, instead of this, he should choose for the argument ['subject'] of his 'Paradise Regained' the fourth chapter of Luke, the temptation in the wilderness; a dry, barren, and narrow ground, to build an epick poem on. In that work he has amplified his scanty materials to a surprising dignity; but yet, being cramped down by a wrong choice, without the expected applause" (Bentley).

The poet was an old man, and tired, when he set about the second epic, and wisely adapted his choice to his strength.

183. Mary, second Eve; repeated from v. 387. The thought is similar to that which makes Christ "the last Adam," 1 Corinthians xv. 45.

184. Cf. I. 45.

185. Cf. Ephesians ii. 2, "the prince of the power of the air," referring to Satan.

185—90. Based on the following texts: Colossians ii. 15; Psalms lxviii. 18; Romans xvi. 20 (marginal reading "tread"). Cf. III. 247—56.

191. his fatal bruise, i.e. Satan's.

213. suffer change; cf. 651, note.

214. Philippians ii. 7.

215. John xiii. 5.

217. slain; apparently for the purpose, as hitherto it has been implied that the beasts were not killed by each other (see 710, note) or by Adam.

218. repaid, i.e. for the loss of their old skin. "Pliny mentions some lesser creatures shedding their skins in the manner of snakes, but that is hardly authority sufficient for such a notion as this" (Newton).

219. thought not much; cf. The Tempest, I. 2. 250—53:

"Prospero.

Dost thou forget

From what a torment I did free thee?

Ariel.

No.

Pros. Thou dost, and think'st it much to tread the ooze
Of the salt deep" (i.e. a great grievance).

his enemies; because it was their sin that necessitated His sacrifice.

222. robe of righteousness; see Isaiah lxi. 10.

225. Cf. III. 169, 239, 279.

229. was sinned and judged; for the impersonal construction cf. VI. 335.

230. Sin and Death. See the notes on II. 648, 650, 666.

Addison observes that book X. has a "greater variety of characters" than any other. He compares it with the last act of a tragedy in which all the main dramatis personæ are introduced and the effect of the action upon them is made clear. Compare especially Adam and Eve in their abasement.

231. in counterview, i.e. opposite each other, one "on either side" (II. 649) of the entrance; vis-à-vis. Cf. 235.

231, 232. the gates...now...open wide. Cf. the description in II. 871—89 how Sin, "the Portress of Hell-gate," opened "the infernal doors" to let Satan pass out on his journey through Chaos to the new-created World and then could not shut them. now; emphatic.

235, 236. O Son. See II. 727—814. author, parent.

241. avengers; so the Second Ed.; the First Ed. has avenger; but cf. "their revenge," 242.

246. Cf. 263, 358, 359, and the "Argument" of the book, lines 6, 7 ("by wondrous sympathy").

249. secretest; cf. Macbeth, III. 4. 126, "the secret'st man of blood," thou, my shade, i.e. shadow; cf. IX. 12, note. Sin and Death are always introduced together in the poem: an obvious allegory.

256. found, build; Lat. fundare, 'to lay the foundation of.'

257. this main, the "sea" (286) of Chaos; "the foaming Deep" (301).

260, 261. "intercourse, passing frequently backward and forward; transmigration, quitting Hell once for all to inhabit the new creation; they were uncertain which their lot should be" (Richardson).

264. meagre; in the literal sense 'lean,' Fr. maigre; cf. the conventional representation of Death as a skeleton.

274. ravenous fowl. "Of vultures particularly it is said by Pliny, that they will fly three days beforehand to places where there are future carcasses—triduo antea volare eos ubi cadavera futura sunt [Nat. Hist. x. 7]. And (what probably gave occasion to this similitude in Milton) Lucan has described [VII. 831—37] the ravenous birds that followed the Roman camps, and scented the battle of Pharsalia" (Newton). Cf. Julius Cæsar, v. 1. 85—87, where on the morning of the battle Cassius says:

"ravens, crows, and kites

Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,

As we were sickly prey" (i.e. as if).

though; the reading through has no authority.

279. so; cf. IX. 516. Feature, shape, form; as commonly in Shakespeare, from the literal meaning 'make,' O. Fr. faiture, Lat. factura. M. purposely uses rather a vague word which leaves much to the imagination; cf. the description of Death in II. 666—70.

279, 280. Cf. Georgic I. 376, suspiciens patulis captavit naribus auras.

281. sagacious of, scenting (Lat. sagax).

282, 283. waste wide; one of Milton's favourite alliterative effects, here suggestive of desolation.

anarchy; cf. VI. 873. In II. 988 Chaos is personified as "the Anarch old."

284—302. Lines 284—88 describe how Sin and Death collected towards the mouth of Hell the materials for their causeway: lines 293—98 how Death made the materials coalesce into solid masses suitable for the purposes mentioned in the next verses: lines 299—320 how the materials were used partly to form the foundation of the whole structure, partly to construct the bridge raised on those foundations. "Aggregated soil" in 293 and "gathered beach" in 299 refer to the "solid" elements mentioned in 286, while "asphaltic slime" in 298 refers to the "slimy" elements, 286. By "the rest" in 296 he means, I think, all such "solid" elements as are not included under "soil" in 293: the "slime," i.e. pitch, helps to bind these elements together: the "soil" may be conceived as coalescing more easily under the petrifying stroke of Death's sceptre. In 296—98 the sense obviously is that Death bound the elements together by means of his look and by means of the slime; the manner of expression is rather strained, but, as it seems to me, quite Miltonic, the combination of an abstract word like "rigour" and a literal word like "slime" being somewhat similar to I. 502, "flown with insolence and wine."

288. shoaling; apparently transitive; 'driving it in a shoal or bank.'

290. the Cronian sea, the Arctic Ocean; from the Lat. name Cronium Mare (Pliny, Nat. Hist. IV. 30), less used than Mare Concretum.

291. the imagined way, i.e. the north-east passage, then thought to be practicable and made the object of many voyages of discovery to India and the East. Cf. a similar allusion in the Areopagitica, "a passage... far easier and shorter than an Indian voyage, though it could be sailed either by the north of Cataio eastward, or of Canada westward" (i.e. even though it could).—P. W. II. 69.

292. Petsora, the Gulf of Petchora in the Arctic Ocean, at the mouth of the river of that name. M. speaks of the river "Petchora or Petzora," and of the town of the same name in his History of Moscovia, quoting as his authority the narratives of certain merchants of Hull who had wintered in those parts in the year 1611.

292, 293. the...Cathaian coast; commonly explained 'the coast of China'—with doubtful correctness, however. Strictly 'Cathay' was identical with China, Cathay being a corruption of Kitai, the name by which China is still known in Russia and in many Asiatic countries. But formerly, till some time after 1600, the opinion prevailed that 'Cathay' was a great region distinct from China, lying north of it and stretching right up to the Arctic Ocean; comprehending, in fact, East Siberia. Cathay is marked so in many old maps, and its capital was supposed to be Cambalu—i.e. Cambalu was regarded as a different city from Peking, the capital of China, though properly they were the same. I believe that this was Milton's notion of Cathay, from the references to it in the History of Moscovia and from the fact that in P. L. xi. 388 and 390 he treats "Cambalu, seat of Cathaian Can" and "Paquin [Pekin] of Sinean kings" as two distinct cities.

rich. In the History of Moscovia he touches several times on the wealth and trade of the cities of Cathay—P. W. v. 407. Indeed the wealth of this mysterious land had become proverbial through the reports of travellers from the time of Marco Polo onwards. See chapter xx. in Mandeville's Voiage.

294. mace, sceptre; cf. Henry V. iv. 1. 278, "The sword, the mace, the crown imperial." Todd quotes from the play Dido, Queen of Carthage, by Marlowe and Nash, "like pale Death's stony mace" (ii. 1. 116, Bullen's ed., ii. 320). Burke has a telling allusion to this line in the Reflections on the Revolution in France, part II., section v.—"[he] will sooner thaw the eternal ice of his atlantic regions, than restore the central heat to Paris, whilst it remains 'smitten with the cold, dry petrifick mace' of a false and unfeeling philosophy" (Payne's ed., p. 288).

296. Delos; one of the Cyclades islands (v. 264, 265), in the Ægean Sea. "According to a legend, founded perhaps on some tradition of its late volcanic origin, it was called out of the deep by the trident [cf. 'as with a trident,' 295] of Poseidon [= Neptune], but was a floating island until Zeus fastened it by adamantine chains to the bottom of the sea, that it might be a secure resting-place to Leto, for the birth of Apollo and Artemis."—Classical Dictionary.

296, 297. his look, i.e. like the look of the Gorgons which turned men into stone.

Gorgonian, petrifying; cf. ii. 611, "Gorgonian terror."

298. asphaltic slime, i.e. asphalt or bitumen (cf. 562), such as that which floats on the surface of the Dead Sea—thence called ‘Lake Asphaltites,’ a name said to have been first given it by the historian Diodorus Siculus (2nd century A.D.). Probably Milton here had in mind Genesis xi. 3, where the Hebrew word used for this bituminous substance is rendered ‘slime.’ The substance is “petroleum hardened by evaporation and oxidation,” and the lumps of it appear in the water especially after earthquakes. See again 561, 562, note; also I. 411, XII. 41, 42, notes.

299, 300. deep to the roots...they fastened, i.e. laid the foundation of the structure. mole, causeway=Latin moles, used of any massive structure, e.g. a dam or pier.

Johnson considered that M. had here assigned to Sin and Death “a work too bulky for ideal architects,” i.e. too material for allegorical figures. Addison had doubted whether “persons of such a chimerical existence are proper actors in an epic poem,” but showed that the reason why M. introduced them lay in the subject of his poem, i.e. in the paucity of dramatis personæ which it afforded. And he praised greatly the allegory in book II., from the point of view of allegory.

305. inoffensive, free from obstacles (Lat. inoffensus); literally, ‘not causing one to offend, i.e. stumble against’ (Lat. offendere).

306. if great things... M. has this Vergilian allusion in II. 921, 922, VI. 310, 311, P. R. IV. 563, 564.

307—11. Alluding to the invasion of Greece by Xerxes B.C. 480.

308. Susa; a Persian city of the province of Susiana and winter residence of the kings of Persia; see P. R. III. 288. According to tradition, Susa was founded by Tithonus, the father of Memnon (see II Penseroso, 18), and Memnon built its acropolis, called after him the Memnonium. Susa is the Shushan of Esther i. 2 and Daniel viii. 2, passages of which perhaps we have an echo in “Memnonian palace.”

310. bridging; with the bridge of boats described by Herodotus VII. 36. See Mayor’s notes on Juvenal x. 173—76.

311. The reference is to the story told by Herodotus (VII. 35), that Xerxes in his anger at the destruction of his first bridge by a storm ordered the Hellespont to receive three hundred lashes from a “scourge”—τριηκοσίας ἐπικέσθαι μάστιγι πληγάς—and to have a pair of fetters thrown into it. Cf. Johnson’s Vanity of Human Wishes, 231, 232:

“Fresh praise is try’d till madness fires his mind—

The waves he lashes, and enchains the wind”

(said of Xerxes).

indignant; cf. Georg. II. 161, 162, Æneid VIII. 728 (pontem indignatus Araxes). See 417, 418.

313. pontifical; literally ‘bridge-making’ (Lat. pons + facere); cf.

pontifice, 348. It has been suggested that M. used the word with a sarcastic allusion to its other sense 'belonging to the Pontiff, i.e. the Pope.' Cf. I. 795, note.

314. vexed, storm-tost; cf. I. 306, and see VII. 211—15.

316. first lighted. See III. 418—22.

317. The original editions have no comma after "Chaos," and the construction intended might be "landed to the outside," i.e. on to; but it seems better to regard the words "to the outside" as a kind of explanation of "to the self-same place where": taken thus, they define the place.

323. interposed, i.e. between "the confines" of Heaven and those of the World. The bridge from Hell touched the outer surface of this World at the point where (1) the stair from Heaven also touched the surface, and where (2) the passage led down to the interior of the World. The bridge therefore resembles the middle one of three roads which form a junction.

327. in likeness, i.e. "disguised" (330), as in III. 634—44, 694.

328, 329. "Satan, to avoid being discovered (as he had been before, IV. 569 et seq.) by Uriel regent of the Sun [see IX. 60—62, note], takes care to keep at as great a distance as possible, and therefore, 'while the sun rose in Aries,' he steers his course directly upwards 'betwixt the Centaur and the Scorpion,' two constellations which lay in a quite different part of the heavens from Aries" (Newton).

steering, steering to. his zenith, i.e. straight upwards, towards that opening in the surface of the globe through which he had descended into the interior (III. 526 et seq.) and Sin and Death were about to descend.

332. after Eve seduced; for the Latinised turn of phrase see 577, 687, and cf. I. 573. unminded, unnoticed, i.e. by Eve.

335. unweeting, ignorant, i.e. of the results of her action, or of Satan's proximity. M. always (cf. 916) uses this form. seconded, repeated.

336, 337. Cf. IX. 1113, 1114.

344, 345. understood, i.e. being understood. The original editions have a full stop after time in 345, making understood a past tense, instead of participle, with the subject 'he' omitted. The correction (Tickell's) seems certain and is generally adopted now.

345, 346. joy and tidings; probably meant as a hendiadys = 'joyful tidings.'

347, 348. the foot; meaning, of course, the top of the bridge ("pontifice").

351. stupendous; in the original editions 'stupendious.'

358, 359. Cf. 246.

364. consequence, connection.

370. fortify, build.

372. virtue, courage (Lat. virtus); cf. I. 320.

374. odds, advantage.

378. doom, judgment, decree.

379. Cf. Satan's own words in IV. 110—12, where he means that he rules Hell already and hopes to rule the World, leaving Heaven to the Almighty.

380, 381. the empyreal bounds, the confines of the Empyrean or Heaven, which M. here treats as a square ("quadrature") in allusion to the description of the New Jerusalem in Revelation xxi. 16; previously he left its shape an undecided question (II. 1048).

orbicular; the World is always spoken of in the poem as a globe.

382. try, i.e. and find.

383. the Prince of Darkness; a stereotyped phrase; cf. King Lear, III. 4. 148, All's Well That Ends Well, IV. 5. 44, 45.

386, 387. Alluding to the meaning of Satan, viz. 'Adversary.'

389. empire = "Powers" in 395.

389—91. The sense is—'That have met my triumphal act, my work, viz. the discovery and conquest of the new World, with your triumphal act, your glorious work, viz. the construction of this bridge.'

397, 398. See the account in III. 561—742 of Satan's own descent to the Earth, "amongst innumerable stars" (III. 565) = "among these numerous orbs" (397).

399—402. Cf. Satan's promise to Sin in II. 838—44, where he tells her of the new World to which he is journeying.

409. no detriment. An allusion to the formula conferring supreme power on the Consuls at Rome in times of great crisis, namely, videant (or dent operam etc.) consules ne quid respublica detrimenti capiat.

413. "Strike" (= 'to blast') was the word applied to the evil "influence" which astrologists supposed the planets to exercise on the earth. Cf. Hamlet, I. 1. 162, "The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike." The belief survives in 'moon-struck.' M. says that the planets themselves were 'blasted' by bad "influence" as Sin and Death passed near them.

415. causey, causeway, road.

424. Pandemonium; cf. I. 756.

425, 426. Cf. VII. 131—34, notes.

426. paragoned, compared; cf. Antony and Cleopatra, I. 5.

"If thou with Cæsar paragon again
My man of men."

So Drummond in A Cypress Grove, in the passage on the bliss of the righteous after death: "all pleasure [i.e. on earth], paragoned with what is here, is pain, all mirth mourning, all beauty deformity" (Works, II. 279). The literal idea of the noun paragon is 'a model, pattern': hence the notions 'rival' and 'comparison.' Shakespeare uses the verb = 'to excel'—a natural extension of the sense 'rival'; cf. Othello, II. I. 61—63:

"a maid

That paragons description and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens."

427. the Grand, the great ones (Ital. i grandi), being "the great consulting peers" (456) who held the council in bk. II.

430. observed, obeyed; cf. I. 588.

431, 432. Cf. the first lines of Milton's History of Moscovia: "The Empire of Moscovia, or as others call it Russia, is bounded... on the east by the river Ob, or Oby [see IX. 78], and the Nagayan Tartars on the Volga as far as Astracan."

433. Bactrian, Persian, the ancient Bactria or Bactriana having been a province of the Persian empire; cf. P. R. III. 285.

Sophi, Shah.

from the horns, i.e. retreats before the Turkish armies. "During the sixteenth century there was continual warfare between the Persians and the Ottoman Turks, who were the masters of Asia Minor and Syria" (Keightley).

horns; alluding to the shape—a half-moon or "crescent" of the ensign of the Turks; cf. Sylvester's Du Bartas, "The moony Standards of proud Ottoman" (Grosart's ed., I. 31; see also II. 42).

435. Aladule; the Greater Armenia, so called by the Turks from Aladules, the last king of the country, slain by the emperor Selim I. (from Hume's note). A province of "Aliduli" is marked in the map of the "Turkish Empire" in Hexham's English edition (1636) of Mercator's Atlas. There is reason to believe that M. made use of this particular Atlas (which has full descriptions as well as maps), and took from it the names "Namancos" and "Bayona" in Lycidas, 162.

436. Tauris, the modern Tabriz, in the north of Persia; not far from the Armenian frontier.

Casbeen, Kazvin, north of Teheran, the capital of Persia.

438. reduced, led back; Lat. reducere, 'to lead back,' e.g. troops.

441—50. Editors compare Æneid I. 439, 440, 586—89.

445. his high throne; described in II. 1—4. state, canopy.

450—52. M. dwells more than once on the “faded splendour” (IV. 870) of Satan’s form.

451. permissive. Elizabethan writers treat the termination -ive as passive in various adjectives. Cf. As You Like It, III. 2. 10, “The fair, the chaste and unexpressive she,” i.e. ‘inexpressible.’ So “insuppressive,” not to be suppressed, Julius Cæsar, II. 1. 134; and “uncomprehensive,” Troilus and Cressida, III. 3. 198.

453. Cf. “the Stygian council” (II. 506), used similarly of Satan’s followers. Milton’s whole conception of “Hell” owes much to the classics; cf. especially II. 575—86 with Æneid VI. 295 et seq.

456. forth rushed; since they sat in council “far within” the palace, away from the inferior Angels who thronged “the hall” (I. 791).

457. “The Devils are frequently described by metaphors taken from the Turks. Satan is called the ‘Sultan,’ I. 348, as here the council is styled the ‘Divan’” (Newton).

divan, council; cf. Dryden’s State of Innocence:

“’tis not fit

Our dark Divan in public view should sit.”

The State of Innocence was based on Paradise Lost. See Introduction.

458, 459. Cf. the picture of a great orator in IX. 670—76. Editors compare Lucan, Pharsalia I. 297, 298.

461. They have, he says, a double claim to these titles implying lordship and power: (1) the claim of possession, since they are now to “possess a spacious World” (466, 467) and be lords thereof; (2) the claim of ancient right, since these titles belonged to them in Heaven. The form of the commencement of the speech resembles II. 11—14, v. 361, 362.

465. the house of woe; repeated from VI. 877.

469. long were to tell; like Lat. longum est; see I. 507.

470—80. Cf. the description of Satan’s journey through Chaos (= “the Deep,” 471, “the Abyss,” 476) in bk. II. 629 et seq.

471. unreal; “because...always changing.”

475. uncouth, unknown, strange. M. accents uncouth.

477. unoriginal, having no originator, being itself “eldest of things,” II. 962.

478—80. Chaos, far from “opposing” his journey, directed him on his course, II. 1004—1009. He magnifies his exploits to win “transcendent glory...above his fellows,” II. 427, 428.

protesting Fate, i.e. objecting that Fate did not mean the “secrets” of their realm to be explored thus.

481, 482. Cf. Beelzebub’s speech at the infernal council in II. 345—51. ✓

512. clung; probably a participle = 'pressed tight.'

513. supplanted; in the literal sense 'tripped up'; from Lat. supplantare, 'to trip up, to throw a man off his feet'—a wrestler's term.

514. "Milton...had no doubt in mind the transformation of Cadmus in the fourth book of the Metamorphoses, to which he had alluded before in IX. 506" (Newton); also Dante, Inferno, XXIV., XXV. (Todd). Dante's description (canto XXV.) of the transformation of the five criminals into reptiles is much more detailed than Milton's, and repulsive.

515. reluctant; used literally = 'struggling against'; Lat. reluctari. Cf. 1045.

517. his doom; as pronounced on the Serpent in 175—77. Cf. the "Argument" of the book.

521. riot, i.e. rebellion in Heaven; cf. Lat. tumultus.

521—28. This passage is perhaps the most striking example of alliteration and assonance in the poem, the effect being designed partly to suggest to the ear the actual sound described, partly to convey to the imagination a sense of the terror of the whole scene. Thus the repeated sibilant represents the hissing; cf. I. 768, IX. 613. On the other hand, the repetition of sound in "dreadful," "din," "dire," "drear" etc. seems to intensify the horror of the event. A similar, though less striking, instance of the same effect occurs in XI. 489—92.

523. complicated, twisted, twined together; Lat. complicare, 'to tie up.'

524. amphisbæna; a kind of serpent, supposed to have a head at either end of its body. Sir Thomas Browne has a chapter (xv.) "Of the amphisbæna" in his Vulgar Errors, III., his conclusion being that "we must crave leave to doubt of this double-headed serpent."

525. cerastes; Gk. κεράστῆς, 'a horned snake,' from κέρας, 'a horn.'

Dante describes the Furies as "girt with greenest hydras; for hair, they had little serpents and cerastes, wherewith their horrid temples were bound" (Inferno, IX. 40—42).

hydrus; a water-snake; cf. Gk. ὕδρω, 'water.'

ellops; Gk. ἔλλοψ, 'mute'; an epithet of fish; then used substantively for a certain sea-fish (probably the swordfish or sturgeon) and later = 'serpent.'

526. dipsas; a serpent whose bite caused great thirst (Gk. δίψος).

526, 527. the soil, i.e. Libya in Africa. An allusion to the legend that as Perseus was bringing back the head of Medusa, one of the Gorgons, who had hissing snakes instead of hair, drops of her blood fell on the soil and caused the country to abound with serpents. Ovid touches on the story, Metamorphoses IV. 613—19, while Lucan enumerates the kinds of serpents, and his account (Pharsalia IX. 700—33) was probably in Milton's thoughts.

528. Ophiussa; the island of serpents = Gk. ὄφιοῦσσα, i.e. ὄφιδεσσα, 'abounding in serpents'; a small island in the Mediterranean, to which the Romans gave the similar name 'Colubraria,' from coluber, 'a snake,' adder. Now Formentera, one of the Balearic group.

529. dragon; cf. "the dragon" = Satan in Revelation xii. Gk. δράκων, 'serpent.'

529—31. Ovid speaks of the monstrous serpent Python, born from the slime left on the earth by the flood of Deucalion—Metamorphoses I. 434 et seq.

535. in station...or just array; "either on guard or drawn up in military array to receive and do him honour" (Keightley). Lat. in statione, a military term = 'on guard'; cf. "stations" = 'sentinels, pickets,' II. 412. just, regular, due (Lat. justus); cf. 888.

536. sublime = Lat. sublimis in its figurative sense 'uplifted.' Cf. S. A. 1669, "While their hearts were jocund and sublime."

541. changing, i.e. changing into.

541—45. The partial repetition of the alliterative effect of 521—28, to recall and point the likeness to the previous scene of transformation, is surely a very happy device.

546. exploding, driving off the scene.

550. fair; accidentally omitted in the Second Ed.: hence a wrong reading "like to that," current in later editions till Newton restored the true text.

560. Megara; one of the Eumenides or Furies, who are described as having serpents twined in their hair.

561, 562. Alluding to the apples of the Dead Sea = "that bituminous lake." Cf. Eikonoklastes, 24: "Thus these pious flourishes and colours [i.e. excuses], examined thoroughly, are like the apples of Asphaltis [see 298, note], appearing goodly to the sudden eye; but look well upon them, or at least but touch them, and they turn into cinders."

lake; cf. the other common name for the Dead Sea, viz. 'Lake Asphaltites.'

565. with gusto; as we say, 'with gusto.'

567—70. The sound is meant to echo the sense.

568. drugged, nauseated as "with the hateful taste usually found in drugs" (Richardson).

572. triumphed, i.e. over. once; emphatic. Man was deceived (by the Serpent) but "once"; the serpents were duped "oft."

lapsed; a preterite, I think; 'fell into error.'

572, 573. The original editions read:

“Thus were they plagu’d

And worn with famin, long and ceaseless hiss.”

It seems to me simplest to suppose that the printer misplaced the comma after “famine”; if we put it after “long,” then “famine” and “hiss” (a noun) are balanced with their respective epithets, and the balance gives an admirable rhythm, while the turn of phrase “worn with famine, and hiss” is quite characteristic. Keightley printed:

“Thus were they plagued;

And, worn with famine, long and ceaseless hiss”;

taking “hiss” as a verb. Other editors have followed him (some placing a comma instead of a semicolon after “plagued”). This interpretation appears to me to be open to several objections. It rather implies that the “famine” was the cause of the hissing; involves a most awkward change from the past tense in 572 to the present in 573 and then back to the past in 574, and yields, surely, an unpleasant rhythm.

575—77. No doubt, M. had some authority for this tradition, but editors have failed to find it. The nearest approach to it known to Newton was the speech of the Fairy Manto in Ariosto’s Orlando Furioso, XLIII. 98:

“Each sev’nth day we constrained are to take

Upon ourselves the person of a snake” (Harrington’s trans.).

some say; a convenient phrase, under cover of which he can mention theories, yet avoid the responsibility of accepting them. Cf. 668, 671, IX. 638.

578. We must remember that according to the ordinary patristic and mediæval belief which M. accepted (see Appendix, pp. 672—74), the fallen Angels became the gods of classical mythology: hence there might well be among “the heathen” some tradition of the story of Eve and the Serpent. So M. identifies the Serpent (Satan) with Ophion (cf. Gk. ὄφις, ‘a serpent’), one of the Titans and the first ruler of Olympus; and suggests that Eurynome, the daughter of Oceanus and wife of Ophion, may have been the same as Eve. Newton showed that in the allusion to Ophion and Eurynome M. had in his thoughts a passage of the Argonautica (i. 503—509) of Apollonius Rhodius.

579. purchase, prey, i.e. mankind. In Comus, 607, “And force him to return his purchase back,” the first version (Cambridge MS.) has “And force him to release his new got prey.”

581, 582. wide-encroaching. “Some epithet should be added to Eve to shew the similitude between her and Eurynome, and why he takes the one for the other; and therefore in allusion to the name Eurynome [= ‘wide-ruling’] he styles Eve ‘the wide-encroaching,’ as extending her rule and dominion farther than she should over her husband, and affecting godhead" (Newton).

584. Ops, the wife of Saturn. Dictæan, Cretan, from Dictæ, a mountain of Crete in which island Jupiter was brought up. The legend that Zeus (Jupiter) expelled Cronos (Saturn) from Olympus (I. 516, VII. 3, 7), the 'heaven' of later classical mythology, and from sovereignty over gods and men, is touched on in Il Penseroso, 30.

586, 587. in power, potentially.

actual, the cause of an act, viz. Eve's act of disobedience. No doubt, M. is alluding to the theological term "actual sin," which he defines as "crime itself, or the act of sinning," and discusses in The Christian Doctrine, I. 11 (P. W. IV. 262). Compare the Prayer-Book, "Articles of Religion," xxxi.

588—90. Cf. Rev. vi. 8, "And I looked, and behold a pale horse : and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him."

591. second; Sin herself was first.

601. unhide-bound, with the skin hanging loose about it, hence capable of containing much.

606. scythe; the traditional attribute of Time and Death. Cf. Shakespeare, Sonnet 12, "And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence."

616—40. This speech is noticeable as not being so Biblical in character as most of those which M. assigns to the Almighty.

616, 617. M. seems to have had in his thoughts Julius Cæsar, III. I. 273, "Cry 'Havoc,' and let slip the dogs of war." The phrase 'cry "havoc,"' imitated from O. Fr. crier havot, was an old military term for 'giving no quarter,' i.e. it was the signal for indiscriminate slaughter; so that "to havoc yonder world" was an even stronger expression than it is now. dogs of Hell; cf. II. 653—59.

623. enter and possess; "terms of English law" (Keightley). For possess = 'take possession of' cf. Romeo and Juliet, III. 2. 27.

624. conniving, tolerating, permitting, them.

632. cramm'd; suitable to the context; but in Comus, 713, Milton's unerring taste substituted thronging for the first reading :

"Cramming the seas with spawn innumerable."

638. Heaven and Earth = the World, as often in Scripture.

made pure, i.e. by fire, according to 2 Peter iii. 7, 10—13. See III. 333—35. In The Christian Doctrine, I. 33, he treats of "the destruction of the present unclean and polluted world, namely, its final conflagration" (P. W. IV. 488).

640. precedes; "shall go before those ravagers Sin and Death, and shall direct and lead them on" (Newton). But might not the sense be 'has precedence=prevails,' the notion being that "the curse" has power for a time but will in the end be annulled? Bentley suggested proceeds, i.e. goes on, continues.

642. as the sound, resembling the sound, by reason of the multitude of voices; being even "as the voice of many waters," Revelation xix. 6. Cf. v. 872, 873.

643, 644. Cf. Revelation xv. 3, xvi. 7. To "justify the ways of God to men" (I. 26) was Milton's aim in composing Paradise Lost.

645. extenuate, weaken; properly 'make slight' (Lat. tenuis).

647, 648. "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth...And the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven"—Revelation xxi. 1, 2; see also verse 10 and note "descending."

to the ages, i.e. for the succeeding ages. rise, i.e. from the conflagration.

650. his mighty Angels; meaning, probably, "the seven Spirits" of God "which are before his throne" and execute his commands on Earth. See the description of them in III. 648—53. Of these Uriel was one.

651. In The Christian Doctrine, I. 13, he says, "All nature is subject to mortality and a curse on account of man"; and that thought is the basis of this long passage dealing with the deterioration in the physical Universe which followed the Fall of Man. The main Scriptural authority for this thought which M. quotes is Genesis iii. 17, "cursed is the ground for thy sake." The idea comes in Drummond's "Hymn of the Fairest Fair," 263—84 (Flowers of Zion). Cf. also the third draft of Milton's contemplated tragedy of Paradise Lost, in the outline of the action of Act v. Cf. IX. 132, 133.

656. blanc, 'pale' (Fr. blanc, 'white').

657. the other five, i.e. planets.

658—62. On the astrological terms in these lines, see pp. 691, 692. the fixed, i.e. stars; see III. 481, note.

663. which of them; e.g. Orion "with fierce winds...armed," I. 305.

665. their corners, their respective quarters. when, i.e. and also the times when. confound, mingle, make undistinguishable.

666. The winds are said to "roll the thunder" because they "roll" the clouds which cause the thunder.

668—78. Dr Masson explains: "It is poetically assumed here that, before the Fall, the ecliptic or Sun's path was in the same plane as the Earth's equator, and that the present obliquity of the two planes, or their intersection at an angle of  $23\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ , was a modification of the physical Universe for the worse, consequent upon the moral evil introduced by sin. But this physical alteration might be produced in either of two ways: either by pushing askance the axis of the Earth the required distance, leaving the Sun undisturbed; or by leaving the Earth undisturbed and compelling the Sun to deviate the required distance ('like distant breadth') from his former equatorial or equinoctial path. To indicate what 'the like distant breadth' would amount to, Milton follows the Sun in imagination after his deviation from the equatorial line: tracing him, first, in his ascent north of the equator, through the constellations Taurus (in whose neck are the Pleiades, called the Seven Atlantic Sisters, as being mythologically the daughters of Atlas) and Gemini (called 'the Spartan twins,' as representing Castor and Pollux, the twin-sons of Tyndarus, King of Sparta), up to his extreme distance from the equator at the Crab, in the Tropic of Cancer; then returning with him in his descending path by Leo and Virgo, till he again touches the equator at Libra; and, for the rest, simply suggesting his similar deviation from the equator to the south by naming the Tropic of Capricorn as the farthest point reached on that side....He [Milton] gives the larger space to the hypothesis of a change of the Sun's path."

671. the centric globe, the Earth, the centre of the Universe, according to the Ptolemaic system.

676. the Scales=Libra (III. 558).

678, 679. He has previously said that before the Fall only one season was known in Eden, viz. "eternal spring," iv. 268: a view held by some of the Church Fathers. See also v. 394, 395. When Dante reaches the Garden of Eden he is told (Purgatorio, XXVIII. 142, 143): "Here the root of man's race was innocent; here spring is everlasting, and every kind of fruit" (cf. v. 341). Classical mythology spoke similarly of the Golden Age; see The Advancement of Learning, II. 20. 9, where editors cite Ovid, Metamorphoses I. 107 (ver erat aeternum, etc.).

680—84. "If the Sun were to be always in the equator, there could never be night at the poles, the sun going round and round continually in the horizon" (Keightley).

685—87. i.e. the sun would have prevented the snow stretching so far southward from the North Pole as it does at present, and conversely an equal distance northward from the South Pole.

Estotiland; an old name, applied not very precisely, to the part of North America lying between Baffin's Bay and Hudson's Bay. The description (II. 436) of the chief provinces of North America in Hexham's Mercator (1636) mentions both "Estotilandia" and "Norumbega" (see 696).

Magellan, i.e. the Strait of, in South America; named after the Portuguese navigator Magelhaens.

688. An allusion to the story of the revenge taken by Atreus, king of Mycenæ, on his brother Thyestes, who had wronged him and been banished: how "Atreus, pretending to be reconciled to Thyestes, recalled him to Mycenæ, killed his two sons, and placed their flesh before their father at a banquet, who unwittingly partook of the horrid meal"—(Classical Dictionary). This spectacle is said to have caused the sun to turn aside, and M. suggests that the feasting on the forbidden fruit worked a like effect.

Thyestean; I think that M. intended us to scan 'Thyést(e)an,' eliding the e of the termination, instead of accentuating it according to the correct rendering 'Thyestéan.' Good critics, e.g. Mr Bridges, recognise a similar scansion in S. A. 133, "Chalý|b(e)an tém|per'd steel, and frock of mail"—instead of 'Chalýbéan.' Dr Abbot scans 'Epicúréan' in Antony and Cleopatra, II. I. 24, and says that "the Elizabethans generally did not accent the e in such words."

689—91. i.e. the sun's course before the Fall must have differed from its present course: otherwise the World would not have escaped extremes of heat and cold then any more than it does now.

693. sideral, of the stars (Lat. sidera). blast, i.e. blasting "influence."

696. Norumbega; an obsolete name for a great tract comprehending in modern nomenclature southern Canada and the northern states of America, e.g. New York and Maine. "Norumbega" is marked thus both in Hexham's general map of America and also in that of "New England." In Milton's time the application of names to these distant regions was rather vague.

the Samoed shore, i.e. the shore of north-eastern Siberia, near the Gulf of Obi in the Arctic Ocean. In Milton's History of Moscovia is a chapter on "Samoedia, Siberia, and other countries north-east, subject to the Muscovites," P. W. v. 403, 404; with references to Purchas's Pilgrimage.

697. their brazen dungeon; suggested perhaps by the prison of the winds guarded by Æolus; cf. Æneid I. 52 et seq.

698. flaw, a gust of wind. "Gust and flaw" seems to have been a common combination; cf. Venus and Adonis, 456.

699, 700. Boreas, the north wind; Cæcias, the north-east, Gk. καυκίας. Cf. Holland's translation (1603) of Plutarch's Morals, "like unto the north-east winde Cæcias, which evermore gathereth the clouds unto it" (p. 379, quoted in the Stanford Dictionary). Argestes, the north-west wind; Thrascias, the north-north-west; Gk. θρασκίας, also spelt θρακίας, i.e. the wind that blew from Thrace.

702. Notus, the south wind; Afer, the south-west; lit. 'the African' (Lat. afer), i.e. wind; cf. creber procellis Africanus—Æneid I. 85, 86.

703. Serraliona, i.e. Sierra Leone, off the west coast of Africa; literally the 'Lioness Mountain,' from Spanish sierra, 'a saw,' hence 'a jagged mountain ridge or chain of mountains,' and leona, 'a lioness.' It was evidently proverbial for storms; cf. Hexham's Mercator, II. 426: "Sierra Liona is...a very high Mount, the toppe whereof is continually hidde with snowe: from whence there comes fearefull noises, and great tempest."

703—706. To heighten the confusion of the contest between the winds from the north (699, 700) and those from the south (701, 702), there rush forth to the fray winds from either side, viz. Eurus, the east wind, and Sirocco, the south-east: Zephyrus, the west wind, and Libeccio, the south-west.

704. Levant and Ponent; the rising and setting winds, i.e. those which come from the quarters where the sun respectively rises and sets. From Fr. levant and ponent, used thus. Cf. levant = 'sunrise,' e.g. in Holland's Pliny (1601), XVIII. 33, "the Sunne rising or Levant of that day." A later word, with the same sense, is levanter.

705. with their lateral noise; qualifying, I think, "Eurus and Zephyr," as being "lateral" in relation to the north and south winds; but some editors connect the words with "Sirocco, and Libeccio" as describing their relation to "Eurus and Zephyr."

706. Sirocco...Libeccio; Italian names (whereas all the others in the passage are classical), the two winds being peculiar to the shores of the Mediterranean and the south of Europe. Ital. sirocco, from Arabic sharq, 'east.'

710—14. Previously (IV. 340—47) the beasts had known neither strife among themselves nor fear of man.

711. "It was [Milton's] notion that beast, fowl, and fish [all] grazed the herb before the Fall" (Newton). Cf. Gen. i. 30, and see P. L. VII. 403, 404.

714—17. Newton well remarks on the skill with which the transition to Adam again is effected. "We have seen great alterations produced in nature, and it is now time to see how Adam is affected with them, and whether the disorders within are not even worse than those without."

718. "The wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest," Isaiah lvii. 20. Todd quotes from one of Milton's minor pamphlets, Colasterion: "Tost and tempested in a most unquiet sea of afflictions and temptations" (P. W. III. 450); and remarks: "The sea of sorrow, or of evils, is a frequent expression in the Greek and Latin, as well as in our own, poets." Cf. κακῶν πέλαγος in Æschylus, Persæ 433, and the famous line in Hamlet (III. I. 59).

In The Reason of Church Government, II., M. speaks of himself giving up the quiet life of a student, "to embark in a troubled sea of noises and hoarse disputes" (i.e. politics and controversy)—P. W. II. 481.

719. disburden, himself. "A metaphor taken from a ship in a tempest, unlading, disburdening, to preserve itself from sinking by its weight" (Richardson). The metaphor follows naturally on line 718. Cf. Richard II. II. I. 228, 229:

"My heart is great; but it must break with silence, Ere't be disburden'd with a liberal tongue."

720. miserable of happy; on this idiom see IV. 153 (note); cf. 723.

723. the face. Cf. IX. 1080—82.

728, 729. "Meat and drink propagate it ['curse'] by prolonging life, and children by carrying it on to posterity" (Newton).

In his Essay on Milton (see I. 261—63, note), William Lauder translated these lines into quod comedo, poto, gigno, diris subjacet, and pretended that the Latin occurred in the tragedy of Adamus Exul (1601)—a very rare work—of the jurist Grotius. Two lines earlier in this book (616, 617) were derived by Lauder from an equally fictitious hexameter—infernique canes populantur cuncta creata—ascribed to a work published in 1654 by a certain Jacobus Masenius, professor in the Jesuits' College at Cologne.

729, 730. Genesis i. 28. See VII. 530, 531.

736. See v. 396, note.

737. the execration, i.e. "Ill fare our Ancestor impure!" 735. Cf. 821, 822.

738. mine own; the only noun to which these words can well refer is "curses" (732), but the sense is 'afflictions, evils.'

all from me, all the afflictions derived from me, i.e. those of his descendants.

739. redound; in the literal sense 'flow back' (Lat. redundare). The metaphor is changed in the next line ("light"). Some editions misprint rebound.

740, 741. "These curses, though lighting on him their centre, will weigh heavy, though according to the laws of physics they should not weigh anything there, the weight of bodies being only their tendency to the centre" (Keightley). Critics have censured the style as forced and colloquial (cf. 736).

743. Isaiah xlv. 9.

748. equal, fair (Lat. æquus). reduce; in the literal sense 'to bring back' (Lat. reducere), i.e. to the dust of which Adam was made.

758. thou didst; addressing himself, not his Maker, as in 743—55. The abrupt transitions show his emotion.

762. Isaiah xlv. 10.

773. this day; Adam should have said "that day"—cf. 49, 210. The time of the action of this book is the day after Adam's sin. Cf. the time references in 329 ("the sun rose") and 342 ("by night").

778. my mother's lap; a curious expression from Adam's lips; see XI. 536.

783. all; cf. Horace's non omnis moriar—Odes III. 30. 6 (said, however, in a different connection, viz. in reference to the immortality conferred by his poetry).

784, 785. Genesis ii 7. Horace calls the breath of life divinæ particulam auræ (Sat. II. 2. 79). inspired; in the literal sense 'breathed.'

788. a living death; a proverbial phrase; cf. S. A. 100, "To live a life half dead, a living death." So in Richard III. I. 2. 153; Lucrece, 726.

789—92. The spirit, Adam is made to argue, constitutes life (cf. "pure breath of life") and the spirit alone "sinned": the body is mere "dust," a "clod," and as such "properly hath neither" life nor sin: therefore "death," as the annihilation of life and punishment of sin, must mean the death of the spirit. So the "end" (797) will be not merely the dissolution of the mortal body into its dust but annihilation of the whole being—"all of me shall die."

The subject is discussed in The Christian Doctrine, I. 13.

798—801. Cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 2, where, treating of the "omnipotence" of the Almighty, he says, "It must be remembered that the power of God is not exerted in things which imply a contradiction"; he quotes 2 Timothy ii. 13, Hebrews vi. 18. It was a doctrine on which mediæval theologians dwelt.

806—808. all causes else... "All other agents act in proportion to the reception or capacity of the subject-matter, and not to the utmost extent of their own power ['sphere']". An allusion to the axiom: omne efficiens agit secundum vires recipientis, non suas (Newton). So, Adam argues, he cannot be punished after death because death is the utmost punishment that he has the capacity to suffer: with death that capacity ends.

810. bereaving sense; cf. "insensible," 777.

812. without, outside; cf. Macbeth, III. I. 47, "They are, my lord, without the palace gate."

816. am; attracted to the nearer and, in Adam's view, more important subject "I." incorporate; cf. Romans vii. 20.

832. me, me. Cf. 936 and Vergil's line me, me,—adsum, qui feci,—in me convertite ferrum—Æneid IX. 427.

840. past example, i.e. of the fallen Angels.

842. In each of Milton's drafts of a tragedy on the theme of "Paradise Lost," Conscience is one of the abstract dramatis personæ.

852—59. Cf. 923, note.

858. Death comes not at call. Cf. XI. 491—93.

858, 859. Newton compares Horace's pede Pœna claudo—Odes III. 2. 32.

860. Todd shows that this form of invocation is "after the manner of the Italian poets." Cf. too Tennyson's Ænone.

861, 862. other...other; a favourite form of emphasis with M. Cf. Comus, 612, 613:

"Far other arms and other weapons must Be those that quell the might of hellish charms";

and Lycidas, 174. Cf. the Inferno, III. 91, 92, where Charon refuses to convey Dante across the great river of hell: "By other ways, by other ferries, not here, shalt thou pass over" (per altra via, per altri porti). So Marvell in Upon the Hill at Billborow:

"'Much other groves,' say they, 'than these,

And other hills, him once did please";

and in his beautiful little poem The Garden; and Tennyson in Tithonus:

"Ay me! ay me! with what another heart

In days far-off, and with what other eyes

I used to watch!"

M. uses the artifice in his prose; cf. On Education, P. W. III. 474.

song; cf. "their vocal worship," IX. 198, 199 (note).

872, 873. pretended to; literally 'stretched before,' Lat. prætentus; hence 'serving as a screen to, masking.'

883. understood; the subject "I" is easily supplied from 880.

886. sinister; used quibblingly in its literal sense 'left'—a reference to the tradition that the rib out of which Eve was fashioned was taken from Adam's left side (VIII. 465, note)—and also in the figurative sense 'unlucky.'

Scan sinister, as in Henry V. II. 4. 85, "'Tis no sinister nor no awkward claim." This accentuation survived at least as late as Dryden; cf. The Hind and the Panther, III. 492:

"In which sinister destinies ordain

A dame should drown with all her feathered train."

In M., as in Shakespeare and Elizabethan writers generally, many words bear the original Latin (and French) accent which later has yielded to the Teutonic tendency to shift the accent on to an earlier syllable.

887, 888. It was an old belief that Adam as created had thirteen ribs on the left side and that Eve was formed out of the extra one.

888—98. Editors cite similar passages from other poets, in particular a close parallel from Milton's favourite writer Euripides, viz. Hippolytus 616 et seq. See the chorus 1010—60 in S. A.

898—906. The passage is like a commentary on the proverbial line, "The course of true love never did run smooth," A Midsummer-Night's Dream, I. I. 134. That M. when he wrote the lines was thinking of the circumstances of his own first marriage cannot be doubted.

904—906. A personal allusion appears to be intended. Edward Phillips, the poet's nephew and one of his biographers, states that after Milton's first wife refused to live with him he paid much attention to a Miss Davis (possibly the lady addressed in his Sonnet "To a Virtuous young Lady"); so that "too late" represented his own experience.

Probably "already linked, and wedlock-bound" refers to "he," and "fell adversary" to his wife, now a source of "hate or shame" to him; but the sense might be that the man meets "his happiest choice" after she is "linked" to his enemy, which state of things occasions him "hate or shame."

921. forlorn of; cf. Tennyson's Ænone :

"Hither came at noon
Mournful Ænone, wandering forlorn
Of Paris."

923. scarce one short hour; in her grief she, like Adam (852—59), forgets the words of their Judge which clearly showed that "the instant stroke of death" was "removed far off" (210, 211). Contrast 962, 963.

937—46. Probably Milton's reconciliation with his own wife was present to his thoughts; cf. S. A. 1003—1007 :

"Yet beauty, though injurious, hath strange power,
After offence returning, to regain
Love once possessed, nor can be easily
Repulsed, without much inward passion felt,
And secret sting of amorous remorse."

959. elsewhere, at "the place" (cf. 932, 953, 1098, 1099), where their Judge appeared to them and pronounced their sentence; or perhaps he means 'in Heaven.'

978. as in our evils, considering that we are in such evils; Lat. ut. Richardson aptly quotes from Cicero's letters Ad familiares XII. 2, non-nihil, ut in tantis malis, est profectum. Cf. IX. 1091.

979. descent; abstract for concrete; 'descendants.'

987. prevent, anticipate, forestall.

989. In the early editions the words "so Death" were placed at the beginning of 990; doubtless an error, since there is no other instance in the poem of a short line (as 989 would be without the two words), or of an Alexandrine.

996. the present object, the object of your love who is present.

1004—1006. and have. 'Though we have the power, through choosing the quickest of the many ways of dying, to destroy destruction (i.e. Death's future work of destroying mankind) by destroying ourselves.'

1032—1035. Contrast 169—73 (with notes).

1045. reluctance, struggling.

1046—48. Cf. 96, "the mild Judge"; and 1094—96.

1053, 1054. He means that the curse in 198—208 applied more to the ground than to himself; so he says quibblingly that it 'glanced' off him and 'fell to the ground,' e.g. like an arrow that just grazes the object aimed at.

1065. this mountain; see the note on IV. 134.

1066. shattering. Cf. Lycidas, 5, "Shatter your leaves before the mellowing year"; where shatter is one of Milton's many felicities of alteration, displacing the prosaic word crop.

locks. Cf. Lat. comæ with its two senses, 'hair' and 'foliage.' See Horace, Odes IV. 7. 2 (arboribusque comæ).

1068. shroud, shelter.

1069. this...star, the sun; 'the day-star' (cf. "diurnal"), as it was sometimes called in contrast to the other heavenly bodies. Cf. Lycidas, 168, and Sylvester's Du Bartas, "While the bright day-star rides his glorious round," Grosart's ed., I. 143. (But commonly "day-star" meant the morning-star, Lucifer.)

1070. how, i.e. to see how; understood from seek in 1067.

1071. foment, keep warm. M. uses the word in allusion to its (ultimate) derivation from Lat. fovere, 'to warm'; cf. Lat. fomes, 'tinder, touchwood.' Editors cite Æneid I. 174—76.

They are to try to reflect the sun's rays in some mirror-like substance so as to kindle dry leaves and grasses, etc.

1072, 1073. "He seems to suppose that in the collision of two bodies, as two flints or a flint and steel, it is the air that yields the fire" (Keightley). attrite, worn by friction; Lat. attritus. The idea is Lucretian.

as late; referring to the changes in the elements (651 et seq.).

1075. tine, kindle. thwart, flashing across the sky. Probably he alludes to one of the theories as to the origin of fire on earth which Lucretius gives, V. 1091—94, viz. that it came through the thunderbolt and lightning.

1081. praying; conditional. of grace, for mercy, pardon.

1085. native home; cf. 206—208.

1091. frequenting, filling (Lat. frequentare). Cf. frequent = 'crowded' (frequens), I. 797.

1098—1104. For a similar instance of repetition (a figure imitated from the classics) cf. IV. 641—56, VII. 26 (note), Comus, 221—24.

prostrate fell. It is curious that the next book begins

"Thus they, in lowliest plight, repentant stood Praying."

BOOK XI.

1, 2. stood praying. Either this means 'continued praying,' or M. has forgotten X. 1099. In The Christian Doctrine, II. 4, he cites 2 Chronicles xx. 5, and Luke xviii. 13, as illustrations of standing to pray (P. W. v. 34, 35). See IV. 720.

the mercy-seat above. Cf. a beautiful passage in the treatise Of Reformation in England, II.: "had God been so minded, he could have sent a spirit of mutiny amongst us [the English and Scots]...but he, when we least deserved, sent out a gentle gale and message of peace from the wings of those his cherubims that fan his mercy-seat" (P. W. II. 406). See XII. 252—54.

3. prevenient grace. Cf. the Collect, "We pray thee that thy grace may always prevent and follow us."

3—5. An allusion to Ezekiel xi. 19, "and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh" (see also xxxvi. 26). the stony; an example of the frequent substantival use of adjectives in M.

5—8. An allusion to Romans viii. 26, "the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered." M. had used the same reference many years before; cf. Eikonoklastes, 16: "Though we know not what to pray as we ought, yet he with sighs unutterable by any words, much less by a stinted liturgy, dwelling in us makes intercession for us."

8. yet; referring back to line 1—"though they were in lowly plight, yet was their demeanour not mean." port, bearing; as in IV. 869.

10—14. The Greek story of Deucalion and Pyrrha, his wife, corresponds to the Scriptural account of the Flood (cf. Coriolanus, II. 1. 102, The Winter's Tale, IV. 4. 441). They were the only survivors from the Deluge, and they consulted the sanctuary of Themis, goddess of custom and equity, how the race of man should be restored. Ovid tells the tale, Metamorphoses I. 260 et seq., and M. is thinking of his version.

Bishop Hall has the quaint couplet (Satires, v. 3):

“O happy dayes of old Deucalion,

When one was landlord of the world alone.”

11. fables. Cf. I. 197, note, II. 627, S. A. 500.

14. stood. In Ovid's account (375, 376), procumbit uterque Pronus humi.

14—16. M. is glancing at his own description of the Limbo or Paradise of Fools, the region into which foolish men who think to reach Heaven by wrong means are, just “at foot of Heaven's ascent,” blown clean away by a violent gust. See III. 485—89.

flew up; cf. Hamlet, III. 3. 97, 98. So in Eikonoklastes, 16, speaking of the disadvantage (as he thought) of using a set form of prayers in worship, M. says: “The prayer having less intercourse and sympathy with a heart wherein it was not conceived, saves itself the labour of so long a journey downward [i.e. into the heart], and flying up in haste on the specious wings of formality, if it fall not back again headlong, instead of a prayer which was expected, presents God with a set of stale and empty words.”

17. dimensionless, i.e. as being spiritual, not material.

17—20. M. has followed Revelation viii. 3, 4 very closely; cf. also ix. 13, and Ps. cxli. 2.

28. manuring, tending, cultivating; cf. IV. 628.

31. sighs...mute. It has been noted that the expression mula suspiria occurs in Statius, Thebais XI. 604.

33. “And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous: and he is the propitiation for our sins,” I John ii. 1, 2.

40, 41. Cf. X. 76, 77.

44. Alluding to John xvii.; cf. especially verses 11 and 21—23.

50—53. Everything in Eden being pure would reject the pollution in Adam. There may be a reference to Leviticus xviii. 25, “the land is defiled...and itself vomiteth out her inhabitants.”

56. of incorrupt, from the state of being incorrupt; for the idiom, see IV. 153, X. 720, XII. 167.

60. eternize, make everlasting; in VI. 374, the word has its commoner Elizabethan sense ‘to immortalize,’ especially with poetry.

64. Cf. XII. 427.

67. Synod, meeting; see VI. 156. The word has retained its ecclesiastical associations.

73—76. Cf. VI. 60 (where the “ethereal trumpet from on high” sounds the signal of march to the hosts of Heaven against Satan and his followers), XII. 227—30, and the third Elegy, 60 (Pura triumphali personat æthra tuba).

The Biblical references are to the giving of the ten commandments to Moses on Sinai, Exod. xix. 16—19, and to "the last trump," mentioned in the New Testament, e.g. in 1 Cor. xv. 52. M. qualifies ("perhaps") his suggestion that the trumpet may be the same. The whole passage is anticipated in the Nativity Ode, 155—64.

74. in Oreb. Contrast 1. 6, 7, where, as regards the form Oreb, not Horeb, Mr Beeching compares the similar case, Ebrew instead of Hebrew, in S. A. 1308.

77. regions, realms of air; cf. "the airy region thrilling," Nativity Ode, 103; see VII. 425.

78. Pope (Cecilia's Day, v.) recollected Milton.

The amaranth is a type of immortality, because ἀμάρωντος ('unwithering'), and therefore placed by M. in Heaven. See the fine passage in III. 353—59, where he tells us that this flower once flourished in Eden "by the tree of life," and then, after man's offence, "to Heaven removed." Cf. Tennyson, Romney's Remorse :

"Ah, my white heather only grows in heaven,
With Milton's amaranth."

79. Cf. III. 357, 358, note.

80. Cf. the "sweet societies" of "the saints above" in Lycidas, 178, 179.

86. defended, forbidden.

90. contrite, as always in M.; cf. "Be penitent, and for thy fault contrite," S. A. 502. The accent shows the influence of the Latin.

91—93. Keightley thought that there was a break in the sense, or that some word had been omitted. But the meaning seems to be, 'I know man's variableness after my influences cease to work in him.'

93—98. Genesis iii. 22, 23.

99. Michael had not yet been chosen for the discharge of any duty in the action of the poem, as had Gabriel (bk. iv.) and Raphael (bk. v.). But he had been mentioned in bk. vi. as playing a great part in the battle in Heaven, and it was natural therefore that some share in the actual conduct of the story should be assigned to him (Newton).

Michael's name occurs in both Milton's first lists of dramatis personæ (see the Introduction), whereas neither list has Gabriel or Raphael.

105. remorse, pity; in Shakespeare the usual sense is 'pity, tenderness of heart.' Cf. The Merchant of Venice, IV. 1. 20, "show thy mercy and remorse." So in 1. 605, IV. 109.

106. denounce, announce, proclaim, with the notion of hostility or menace. Cf. 815, and II. 106.

111. excess, transgression; cf. III. 696.

118—22. Genesis iii. 24; cf. XII. 590—93, 626—36.

128, 129. The description of the Cherubim accords with the account in the vision of Ezekiel (see chaps. i. and x.). For their office as the sentinels of Paradise Lost, see p. 681.

double, because the Latin divinity Janus was commonly represented with two faces; cf. Vergil, Æn. VII. 180, Janique bifrontis imago. In the Areopagitica M. speaks of "the temple of Janus, with his two controversial faces," P. W. II. 96. Janus sometimes appears as quadri-frons, i.e. with four faces.

130—33. Argus, the hundred-eyed monster who was set by Hera (Juno) to watch over Io; some of his eyes watched while the others rested. Hermes (Mercury) soothed him to sleep with music, and killed him. Cf. the fine passage describing the approach of Dulness, at the end of The Dunciad:

"As one by one, at dread Medea's strain,
The sick'ning stars fade off th' ethereal plain;
As Argus' eyes by Hermes' wand opprest,
Closed one by one to everlasting rest;
Thus at her felt approach, and secret might,
Art after art goes out, and all is night."

Dante describes the eyes of Argus as the pitiless eyes which could keep awake longer than others (Purgatorio, XXXII. 64—66). Milton applies the story of Io watched by Argus in his treatise Of Reformation in England, II. (P. W. II. 391).

more wakeful than to; an imitation of the Greek use of a comparative followed by ἢ ὥστε with the infinitive—in which idiom ὥστε is sometimes omitted.

to drowse charmed, to drowse under the charm of the pipe, as had Argus. Cf. the end of the preface to The Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce: "the Jews...thought it too much license to follow freely the charming pipe of him who sounded and proclaimed liberty and relief to all distresses"—i.e. Christ; and P. R. II. 363.

Arcadian, because "famous Arcady" (Arcades, 28) was the ideal poets' land of "pastoral" life; cf. the title of Milton's poem, not to mention Sidney's Arcadia.

pastoral reed; the shepherd's pipe or syrinx which Hermes was said to have invented, after he invented the lyre. The Dauphin in Henry V. III. 7. 16—19, in his extravagant praise of his horse, says: "the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes."

opiate rod; his wand or caduceus, made of olive-wood and entwined with two serpents (cf. Troilus and Cressida, II. 3. 13, 14), which conferred sleep on whomsoever he wished; described in The Faerie Queene, II. 12. 41. Cf. Jonson, Love's Triumph:

"The rod and serpents of Cyllenius (i.e. Hermes)

Bring not more peace than these";

and Sir Thomas Browne, Christian Morals, II. xiii.: "The Egyptians were merciful contrivers, who destroyed their malefactors by asps, charming their senses into an invincible sleep, and killing as it were with Hermes's rod."

Keightley notes that opiate is probably a reminiscence of Ovid, Metamorphoses I. 716, where the rod is medicata, i.e. steeped in drugs. The word does not come elsewhere in M., except in the MS. of Comus, 696, where "the Lady" calls the magic draught of Comus his hel brewd [i.e. Hell-brewed] opiate, for which M. substituted brewd enchauntments.

133—36. meanwhile. This is the last day of the action of P. L., which Newton makes to cover eleven days.

135. The Greek Leucothea, the white or bright (λευκός) goddess, was identified by the Romans with their deity Matuta or Mater Matuta, the goddess of the dawn. Lucretius, v. 655, speaks of Matuta ushering in the dawn; this office M. transfers to Leucothea (for whom see also Comus, 875).

140. i.e. which feeling (viz. of joy) made him address Eve again. But Keightley takes it quite differently—"which feelings of hope and joy his words renewed in, brought back to, the mind of Eve."

155. Genesis iii. 15; see X. 179—81, XII. 148—51, 233—35.

157. "And Agag said, Surely the bitterness of death is past," I Samuel xv. 32.

159, 160. Alluding to Gen. iii. 20, "And Adam called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother of all living." Cf. IV. 475, 492. The name is said to mean 'life.'

162. sad demeanour meek; Milton's favourite word-order; see I. 733 (note).

172. now, i.e. since the time when the judgment was pronounced upon Adam, Genesis iii. 17—19.

174, 175. Newton compares I Henry IV. III. 1. 221, 222:

"The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team Begins his golden progress in the east."

182. subscribed, agreed, assented; the metaphor of signing a document. Cf. S. A. 1535.

182—90. Illustrations of the deterioration in the Universe; see x. 651, note, and cf. x. 706—12.

182—207. In ix. 782—84 (see note) Milton makes Nature “give signs of woe” when Eve plucks the forbidden fruit; and when Adam eats thereof similar portents ensue, 1000—1004. Here the omens are symbolical: the two birds and two beasts represent the human pair; and the direction of their flight—“to the eastern gate”—foreshadows the banishment from Eden. Keightley notes that in Æneid I. 393 Vergil makes the number of swans twelve to denote the twelve vessels that had escaped from the storm. Wordsworth refers to this passage of Milton in his poem The Redbreast and Butterfly.

183. eclipsed. An eclipse was traditionally of evil omen; cf. i. 597. In his History of Britain M. says, “The same year was seen an eclipse of the sun in May, followed by a sore pestilence,” P. W. v. 287. The vessel in Lycidas was “built in the eclipse,” 101.

184—86. Cf. Æneid XII. 247—56, where the eagle, fulvus Jovis ales, carries aloft the swan, and lets it fall again—the incident being regarded as an omen by the armies.

185. the bird of Jove; cf. Cymbeline, iv. 2. 348, “I saw Jove’s bird, the Roman eagle”; and the same play, v. 4. 113, “Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline” (the speaker being Jupiter).

stooped, i.e. having swooped down to strike at his prey; cf. Cymbeline, v. 4. 115, “the holy eagle stoop’d,” and v. 3. 42. It was a technical term in falconry; cf. The Taming of the Shrew, iv. 1. 194. So in the Essay on Man, III. 53, 54:

“Say, will the falcon, stooping from above,
Smit with her varying plumage, spare the dove?”

tour; so spelt in the First Ed., and some editors have thought that it means ‘wheeling motion,’ from tour, ‘a circuit.’ But it seems to me more probable that M. meant tower; it would be an effective description, by metaphor, of the proverbially lofty flight of the eagle. Cf. L’Allegro, 43, where the lark sings “From his watch-tower in the skies.” That the spelling of tower is irregular in M. appears from comparison of II. 635, where the First Ed. has touring high (said of Satan’s flight), with P. R. II. 280, where the First Ed. has high tousing (said of the lark).

190. eastern gate. Cf. XII. 638, 639, the words of which echo this verse. M. describes the gate in iv. 543—48.

196. too secure, i.e. feeling too certain of.

203—207. The brilliance is that of the Heavenly host led by Michael, which is descending on the western region of Paradise.

205, 206. “It is not improbable that Milton had in mind the frequent scenery of this kind exhibited in the masks of his time" (Todd), i.e. to counterfeit the appearance of clouds and similar phenomena. See the notes on I. 710—17, IV. 768.

213—15. See Gen. xxxii. 1, 2. pavilioned, encamped; cf. Milton's paraphrase of Psalms iii.:

"encamping round about,

They pitch against me their pavilions."

216—20. See 2 Kings vi. 13—17. flaming, i.e. with "the chariots of fire round about Elisha," the "one man" of line 219.

219. levied war; see II. 501, note.

220. war unproclaim'd. "The severe censure on this makes me fancy that Milton hinted at the war with Holland, which broke out in 1664, when we surprised and took the Dutch Bourdeaux fleet, before war was proclaim'd; which the Whigs much exclaimed against" (Warburton).

Hierarch; the title is applied to Raphael in v. 468.

227. of us...determine, i.e. make an end of us.

234, 235. Raphael is called "the sociable Spirit" in v. 221. "Among the angels, the virtue of Raphael is mild and placid, of easy condescension and free communication; that of Michael is regal and lofty, and, as may seem, attentive to the dignity of his own nature" (Johnson).

242—44. Cf. the description in v. 280—85 of the wings of the angel Raphael.

242. i.e. more vivid ("livelier") than any purple from Melibœa (a town on the coast of Thessaly in Magnesia). Vergil mentions the purpura Melibœa in Æneid v. 251; cf. also Lucretius II. 500.

grain of Sarra=Tyrian purple. Sarra was the old name of Tyre, famous for its dyes procured from a shell-fish; cf. Vergil, Georg. II. 506, Ut gemma bibat et Sarrano indormiat ostro.

243. worn by kings; cf. "regal ornament," v. 280 (note).

244. Iris had dipt the woof. Iris was the classical goddess of the rainbow, and the verse is a poetical way of saying that the vest was brilliant as with the hues of a rainbow. M. had used the same fancy in Comus, 83, where the Attendant Spirit speaks of his "sky-ropes spun out of Iris' woof." See, too, the first reading (1645 edition) in the Nativity Ode, 143, 144.

Pope could blend Miltonic passages with great skill; cf. his account of the sylphs or air-spirits in The Rape of the Lock, II. 63—68:

"Loose to the wing their airy garments flew,
Thin glittering textures of the filmy dew,

Dipt in the richest tincture of the skies,
 Where light disports in ever-mingling dyes,
 While ev'ry beam new transient colours flings,
 Colours that change whene'er they wave their wings."

With this description cf. P. L. v. 283, 285, 592. See also The Rape of the Lock, II. 84.

247, 248. i.e. the sword ("with huge two-handed sway," VI. 251) with which, in the fight against the rebellious angels, Michael encountered and wounded Satan; see VI. 250—53, note.

as in a...zodiac, as though it were one of the constellations contained in the zodiac—an allusion to the flashing of the sword. This seems to me to be the meaning; cf. the use of zodiac in XII. 255, but for which we might, perhaps, interpret it here in the sense 'girdle' (to which the sword would be attached).

249. state, stately bearing.

250. inclined. Editors show that this literal use is common in the Italian writers and occurs in Spenser, e.g. in The Faerie Queene, V. 9, 34.

254. i.e. disappointed of his prey for many days (seizure being passive). Keightley noted that the language of the lines is mainly legal; cf. the phrase 'to defeat the law,' Henry V. IV. I. 175, 176, and Hen. VIII. II. I. 14.

259—62. Repeated, almost, from 48, 49, 96—98.

"It is a decree pronounced solemnly by the Almighty, and certainly it would not have become the Angel who was sent to put it in execution, to deliver it in any other words than those of the Almighty. And let me add, that it was the more proper and necessary to repeat the words in this place, as the catastrophe of the poem depends so much upon them, and by them the fate of Man is determined, and Paradise is lost" (Newton). He shows that the repetition of the words of messages and the like is common in Homer. "Jupiter delivers a commission to a Dream, the Dream delivers it exactly in the same words to Agamemnon, and Agamemnon repeats it a third time to the Council, though it be a tautology of five or six verses together."

264. gripe, seizure, spasm; cf. IV. 408, VI. 543.

267. discovered, revealed.

retire; the Cambridge MS. shows that in Comus, 376, M. first wrote "solitarie sweet retire" (noun), and substituted "sweet retired solitude."

268—85. Parallels have been noted in Sophocles, Philoctetes 1453 et seq., and Euripides, Alcestis 244. But speeches of farewell are apt to have a family likeness.

270. native, "for she had commenced her existence in Paradise"

(Keightley); whereas Adam, created elsewhere, was placed in Eden. Cf. VIII. 300 et seq., and Gen. ii. 7, 8.

272. i.e. to spend the time granted as a respite from that day.

275. visitation; properly 'a visit,' here 'the thing visited,' i.e. the flowers. Another example of Milton's use of the abstract for the concrete, whether actively or passively (as here).

278. rank, set in order: the metaphor, perhaps, of a general inspecting troops. Cf. Arcades, 59, where the Genius of the Wood visits his plants—"I...Number my ranks, and visit every sprout."

290—92. Cf. XII. 615—18. The line bears some resemblance to the passage in Lyly's Euphues which editors quote in illustration of Richard II. I. 3. 275—80, viz. "that every place was a country to a wise man, and all parts a palace to a quiet mind" (Plato). There is probably a reference in XII. 646 to this scene in Richard II.

293. damp, depression of spirits. We find the adjective in the sense 'depressed'; cf. I. 523. So the verb in the Areopagitica, "this [i.e. the censorship of books] was it which had damped the glory of Italian wits," P. W. II. 82.

298—300. Cf. S. A. 1565—68, where the Messenger shrinks from telling Manoa (the father) the news of Samson's death.

307. The jingle of sounds, knowing...known, suggests IV. 830, and S. A. 1081, 1082.

309. who all things can. The verb can, 'to know how to,' i.e. 'to be able,' was not then, as now, a mere auxiliary. In Shakespeare it governs, but rarely, an accusative; cf. The Two Gentlemen of Verona, II. 4. 165, "all I can is nothing," and The Phoenix, "the priest...That defunctive music can." Perhaps these are accusatives of respect: e.g. here the idiom may be 'who is powerful in respect of all things.'

310. weary. Cf. Horace's use of fatigare = 'to importune,' Odes I. 2. 26.

316, 317. Cf. passages like Psalms civ. 29, lxvii. See XII. 106—109, and S. A. 1749.

325, 326. For Adam the altars would serve as actual reminders (in memory), for his descendants as memorials: it is the distinction between personal experience and historical tradition. But it seems to me possible that the true reading is "in memory and monument," a single phase qualified by "to ages." Todd shows that the two words are often combined, much in this way, and there are other places in M. where or appears to have taken the place of and through some error. Cf. S. A. 182, "To visit or bewail"; and again in 545 ("gods or men," 2nd ed.) and 1653. Here the mistake might have been caused by the fact that the two preceding lines, and the following one, begin with the same letter. Milton's blindness introduces an element of uncertainty in questions of text.

"We find from various parts of the book of Genesis, that the patriarchs raised altars, where God had appeared to them. See xi. 7, xii. 25. To this custom of the primitive and patriarchal ages Milton seems to have alluded" (note in Todd).

332, 333. Cf. Exodus xxxiii. 23. Newton thought that 333 might be an echo of Statius, Thebais xii. 817, Sed longe sequere et vestigia semper adora.

336—38. Psalms cxxxix.; Jeremiah xxiii. 24; Acts xvii. 28, 29.

339. gave...to...rule. Cf. I. 736, III. 243.

347—50. M. always speaks of Eden as set on a hill; cf. 282, 283, IV. 134 (note).

356—58. Cf. Daniel x. 14, where the angel says to the prophet, "Now I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter days: for yet the vision is for many days." The whole idea of the vision was probably suggested to Milton by the vision of his descendants vouchsafed to Æneas in the last book of the Æneid.

Johnson says: "Of episodes, I think there are only two [in Paradise Lost]*—*contained in Raphael's relation [v., vi.] of the war in Heaven, and Michael's prophetic account of the changes to happen in this world. Both are closely connected with a great action; one was necessary to Adam as a warning, the other as a consolation." Addison had noted that the "vision" in bks. xi., xii. is designed to modify the feeling of Adam's failure which the close of the poem leaves; for though Adam himself has fallen, yet "he sees his offspring triumphing over his great enemy, and himself restored to a happier Paradise."

The "Mount of Vision" in The Dunciad, III., whence "Bays" (Colley Cibber) surveys in a dream the realms of Dulness and her triumphs, is one of the most elaborate of the Miltonic parodies in Pope.

366. mortal passage, passage from mortality; cf. Comus, 10, "after this mortal change," i.e. after death.

367, 368. Similarly M. "made Eve retire upon Raphael's beginning his conference with Adam" in bk. VIII. 40—44 (Thyer).

369. Cf. VIII. 452—77.

374. obvious, i.e. turned to meet the evil.

376, 377. Cf. Ezekiel viii. 3, and xl. 2, "In the visions of God brought he me into the land of Israel, and set me upon a very high mountain." The phrase means 'visions sent by God'; see XII. 121, 611. One of Milton's subjects for a tragedy based on British history was: "Edwin by vision promis'd the kingdom of Northumberland on promise of his conversion..." (Cambridge MSS.).

380. the amplest; the First Ed. omits the.

381—84. that hill. Its name is not mentioned in Scripture. In P. R. III. 251 et seq. (the scene of the Temptation), Milton is thought to mean Mt Niphates (III. 742) in Armenia. That passage should be compared with the list of names here, where the geographical sweep, however, is much vaster.

388—411. Many poets have delighted in the enumeration of proper names—Milton not least. Cf. I. 396—411, 582—87. Editors note that “Tasso, whose Godfrey is no very imperfect model of a regular epick poem, has in his fifteenth canto employed thirty or forty stanzas together, in a description of this sort; which had no necessary connection with his general plan” (Newton). Collins borrowed the trick of Oriental names; cf. his Persian Eclogues, III. and IV.

388. Strictly Cathay was identical with China, and Cambaluc, its capital, was the same as Peking (390). See x. 292, 293, note. In the Areopagitica M. writes Cataio, P. W. II. 69.

Cambaluc, built by Kublai Khan, was the capital of the Mongol Emperors of China, from about 1264 to 1368. The name is a corruption of the Mongolian Kaan-Bahgh, ‘the city of the Khan,’ and Peking is still called ‘the city of the Khan’ by many Asiatic races. The name should be written and accented Cāmbālu: Cāmbālu, as M. and Longfellow have it, was a popular form, where the wrong accent was due to the Italian version of Marco Polo’s Travels (through which mediæval Europe first heard of Cathay and Cambaluc); the French (i.e. the original) MSS. of the Travels give the correct accent Cāmbālu.

389. Samarchand, in Central Russian Asia; once the capital of Timur (i.e. Temir) whose grave is there. Its earlier name was Marachanda. It lies about 100 miles from the river Oxus.

Temir, the great Oriental conqueror, Timur, the subject of Marlowe’s two tragedies of Tamburlaine; he lived 1336—1405. Commonly called Tamerlane (a corruption of Timur i Leng, ‘the lame Timur’).

390. Paquin, i.e. Peking, the capital of China. Paquin is the form in Hexham’s Mercator; Heylyn writes it “Pequin or Pagnia.” Sinæan; the geographer Ptolemy calls the ancient inhabitants of China Sinæ. The word appears to be a corruption of Tsin, the title of the great dynasty from which the country got its name Tsina (or China).

391. These names represent India, Lahore being in the Punjab, while Agra is the capital of the N.W. provinces. Mogul = Arabic Mughal = Mongol. The real founder of the Mughal empire in India, Akbar the Great (died 1603), made Agra his capital; later the seat of government was transferred to Lahore. The juggler in Jonson’s

Masque of Augurs says, in his affected English, that he can show the audience "de Tartar cham," and "de groat king of Mogull."

392. Here the survey has passed to the East Indies, "the golden Chersonese" being the peninsula of Malacca, "thought by some," says Heylyn, "to be Solomon's Ophir"; but see 400, note.

393. Ecbatana (as M. writes in P. R. III. 286), in ancient Media, was the summer capital of the kings of Persia down to the Greek conquest (i.e. about 330 B.C.), as Susa was their winter residence.

394. Ispahán, or Isfahan, became the capital of Persia in the reign of the Shah Abbás the Great, who ruled 1586—1628. It was very celebrated in the 17th cent.; many European merchants and artificers settled there. Heylyn (who writes Hispaan) says that the circuit of the city-walls was nine miles.

394, 395. Moscow (then the capital of Russia) is mentioned among the Asiatic names because it was "considered as belonging to Asia in the early part of the seventeenth century, and so included in the maps of Asia of that period" (Masson). One of Milton's last works was a Brief History of Moscovia; the name of the city is there spelt Mosco. Ksar is a corruption of Lat. Cæsar; hence identical with Germ. Kaiser.

Sullan, i.e. of Turkey. Bizance = Byzantium, Constantinople.

396. Turchestan-born. The Turkish tribe, which founded the Ottoman empire, came from Central Asia (i.e. Turchestan), whence they were driven by the Mongols early in the 13th century.

nor could his eye not ken. The vision is directed now to Africa—first on its eastern coast.

397, 398. The empire meant is Upper Ethiopia (see IV. 282, note) or Abyssinia; Negus, 'king,' was the hereditary title of the monarch of the country. Ercoco, now generally spelt Arkeeko, is a port on the Red Sea, at the northernmost (i.e. "utmost") point of Abyssinia.

398. less, i.e. lesser than, inferior to, Abyssinia.

399. Mombaza (or Mombas) and Melinda are on the east coast of Africa, a little north of Zanzibar, Quiloa or Keelwa being a little south of it, on a small island. All three were then noted centres of trade, chiefly Portuguese. Heylyn speaks of the "commodius haven" of Melinda.

It may have been in Milton's thoughts that this part of the world was not without poetical, indeed epic, associations, perhaps better known then than now. For Camoens had described the voyage of Vasco da Gama up the east coast of Africa, and some of Milton's readers would know the Lusiads through the translation by Milton's

Cambridge contemporary and successor in the post of Latin Secretary, Sir Richard Fanshawe.

400. Sofala; on the same coast, but further south; won by the Portuguese in 1505, the district of Sofala still forms part of their colonial province of Mozambique. M. is alluding to the town of Sofala (lying on the island of Chiloane in the estuary of the river Sofala) which in the 17th century was famous as a mercantile port. Strictly, the name should be accented Sofála, though M. makes it Sofalá.

Ophir; whence Solomon's fleet brought gold and precious stones, 1 Kings ix. 28, x. 11. According to Genesis x. 29, 30, Ophir was in southern Arabia, and not on the east side of Africa. One modern theory connects it with Abyssinia. Speaking of Sofala, Heylyn says, "This Country for its abundance of Gold and Ivory, is by some thought to be that Land of Ophir to which Solomon sent"; he rejects the view, adding, "of this opinion Ortelius in his Thesaurus was the first Author." Another incorrect theory identified Ophir with the peninsula of Malacca; cf. Josephus, Antiquities, VIII. vi. 4, "Solomon gave this command, that they should go...to the land that was of old called Ophir, but now the Aurea Chersonesus, which belongs to India, to fetch him gold." In Of Reformation M. alludes to the "mines of Ophir" as proverbial sources of wealth, P. W. II. 418. Cowley has the line, "Though Ophir's starry stones met everywhere her eye" (The Garden). The name came to be used as a synonym for pure gold; cf. Sir Thomas Browne, Christian Morals, I. xxviii.: "There is dross, alloy, and embasement in all human tempers; and he flieth without wings, who thinks to find ophir or pure metal in any." He was among those who identified Ophir with Malacca (Vulgar Errors, II. 2).

401. A glance at the map will show that the states of Congo and Angola (Portuguese since the 17th century) are on the west coast of Africa, practically on a level with Quiloa.

402. thence, i.e. still keeping to the west coast.

The Atlas Mountains are a range in northern Africa, between the Great Desert and the Mediterranean, their chief heights being in Morocco and Algiers.

403, 404. The five territories here mentioned formed part of the country vaguely called Barbary, the seaboard of which lay along the Mediterranean, and westwards was bounded by the Atlantic. There is still a small town of Fez in Morocco; its name, says Heylyn, is an Arabic word for gold. Sus, or Susa, is now Tunis.

Marocco; spelt so in the First Ed., both here and in I. 584. Heylyn mentions a town of Tremisen (with a province of the same name) lying inland to the south of Algiers.

403. Almansor, 'the victorious,' calif of Bagdad; he reigned from 754 to 775; his conquests extended over the whole of North Africa.

405. He just glances at Europe "as concentrated all in all in Rome" (Masson)—of which, and of her empire, there is an elaborate description in P. R. IV. 31—85.

406. in spirit, i.e. not with his eyes, because America was on the opposite side of the globe (Newton).

407. Montezume; spelt Motezume in the First Ed. The ordinary form Montezuma is the Spanish form of the Aztec name Moteuczoma. M. is referring to the Emperor Montezuma, subdued by the Spanish general Cortes, 1519—20.

408. Cusco, i.e. Cuzco, in the centre of Peru (the word Cuzco meaning 'centre'); it was formerly the capital of the empire of the Incas, whose last native sovereign, Atahualpa—in the Spanish form, Atabalipa—was conquered by the Spaniard, Pizarro, 1532—33.

richer; in the lines Ad Patrem M. glances (94) at the Perüana regna as proverbial for wealth.

409—11. In the 16th and 17th centuries a popular belief obtained that in the north-east of South America there existed a region of fabulous wealth, termed by the Spanish El Dorado, 'the Golden.' A Spaniard named Martinez said that he had been cast adrift on the coast of Guiana, and had made his way to a city Manoa, the roofs and walls whereof were made of precious metals. It was to discover this region that Sir Walter Raleigh ascended the Orinoco in 1585. The belief may have originated in the stories brought home by Spanish travellers of the riches of their conquests in South America.

409. unspoiled, i.e. "not yet reached and plundered, like Mexico and Peru, by Europeans" (Keightley).

410. Guiana, between the rivers Amazon and Orinoco; the greater portion is now divided between Venezuela and Brazil.

great city, i.e. Manoa. Geryon's sons, the Spanish; Geryon being the Spanish king whose oxen Hercules carried off (Æneid VIII. 202, 203).

411, 412. Newton pointed out that Tasso had made the same archangel, Michael, perform the same service for Godfrey in Jerusalem Delivered, XVIII. 93. Other parallels might be cited from Homer and Vergil, e.g. Æn. II. 664—66, where Venus clears the mist away for Æneas.

413. promised clearer sight. Cf. Satan's words to Eve, IX. 705—709.

414—19. Probably M. is thinking of his own blindness. According to his nephew Edward Phillips, he damaged his sight by constant use of specifics.

414. euphrasy, the plant 'eye-bright'; from εὐφραίνεω, 'to cheer.' According to the old doctrine of the Signatures (see the Preface to S. A. and cf. Sir Thomas Browne, Vulgar Errors, II. 6), the efficacy of a plant or mineral was indicated by its similarity in colour or shape to the part of the body diseased: euphrasy has a flower with an eye-like mark: hence its use as a remedy for dim sight, which it was thought to clear. Cf. Hood's Midsummer Fairies, 114:

"With fairy euphrasy they purged my eyes
To let me see their cities in the skies."

purged; cf. a couplet in Pope's Messiah, 39, 40:

"He from thick films shall purge the visual ray,
And on the sightless eyeball pour the day."

rue, a herb that was supposed to have many valuable qualities, e.g. as a specific against venomous bites. Keightley quotes from Gerard's Herball (1598) to the effect that rue "if boiled and kept in pickle, like samphire, when eaten 'quickeneth the sight,' and also that 'applied with honey and the juice of fennell, it is a remedy against dim eyes.'" The popular name of rue, viz. "herb of grace" (cf. Hamlet, IV. 5. 181, 182), may have been due to the esteem in which the plant was held on account of these medicinal properties; but perhaps it was so called as symbolising the grace of repentance (i.e. from rue, 'to repent').

Metaphors drawn from the eyesight come naturally to Milton—e.g. "if we will but purge with sovereign eyesalve that intellectual ray which God hath planted in us" (Of Reformation, I.); and "some eye-brightening electuary of knowledge and foresight" (The Reason of Church Government, II.).

416. Psalm xxxvi. 9.

418. mental sight; cf. III. 51—55, where M. contrasts the light of the eyes with that of the soul. The blind Samson was "with inward eyes illuminated," S. A. 1689. See the Appendix, pp. 682, 683, on Milton's blindness.

419—22. Daniel x. 8; Revelation i. 17.

427. sinn'd thy sin; the expression is Scriptural; cf. Exodus xxxii. 30; 1 John v. 16 (Newton).

429—47. The story of Cain and Abel, Genesis iv.

430, 431. Genesis iv. 2. tillth, tilled land; commonly tillth is active in sense = 'husbandry, cultivation.' Cf. Cotgrave's definition, "labouring, ploughing, or breaking up of the ground."

433. sord; a dialect form of sward, A.S. swæard, 'a skin or surface.' In The Winter's Tale, iv. 4. 157, the First Folio prints greene-sord. Newton restored the proper reading, sord, for which sod had been substituted in some texts (Todd).

436. unculled, not carefully picked out; contrast 438.

439. inwards, the inward parts; used so in Othello, II. I. 306.

441, 442. Gen. iv. 4 only says, "And the Lord had respect unto Abel and to his offering"; but the verse is usually explained as M. has interpreted it. Cf. Gideon's offering, Judges vi. 21; Elijah's, I Kings xviii. 38; Solomon's, 2 Chron. vii. 1: each was "consumed" with fire from heaven, in sign of acceptance.

448, 449. "This is very properly made the first vision, and is so much enlarged upon, as it is of Adam's immediate descendants" (Newton).

457. fact, deed; cf. ix. 928.

458, 459. Alluding to Hebrews xi. 4.

477—93. This notion of the "cave" of Death, crowded with personified shapes of evil and disease, is purely conventional: many such pictures have been painted by poets. See II. 959—67.

We may remember that the fourth draft (see Introduction) of Paradise Lost contained "a mask of all the evils of this world"; some of the diseases here mentioned might have been among them. Gray's sombre spirit inclined towards these gloomy abstractions, and the Miltonic influence is strongly felt in the last stanzas of his Eton Ode; cf. especially lines 61—70 and 81—90; also The Progress of Poesy, 42—45.

479. a lazar-house; a hospital for lepers, lazar coming from the name of the beggar in Luke xvi. 20. The traveller Hentzner, who visited England in Elizabeth's reign, noted that the English suffered much from leprosy, and that there were many 'lazar-houses.'

485—87. Three lines not in the First Ed.; inserted in the Second, "to swell the horror of the description.... Pope says they are three admirable lines" (Newton).

485. phrenzy; commonly spelt so in M.

486—88. moon-struck madness, i.e. lunacy, so called from the supposed effect of the moon (Lat. luna) in causing or increasing madness. Cf. Othello, v. 2. 109. atrophy, Gk. ἀτροφία, a disease in which the body wastes away through not being nourished by the food taken (Gk. ἀ-, 'not,' and τρέφειν, 'to nourish'). pinning=causing to pine, i.e. active in sense, as in XII. 77. marasmus, the disease of consumption; Gk. μαρασμὸς, 'a wasting, withering.'

491. The "dreadful dart" of Death is mentioned in II. 672, 786.

492. oft invoked; cf. Sophocles, Philoctetes 797, 798:

ὦ θάνατε, θάνατε, πῶς αἰεὶ καλούμενος
οὔτω κατ' ἡμᾶρ οὐ δύνα μολεῖν ποτέ;

and Horace, Odes II. 18. 38—40.

shook; following its object dart. "I hate inversions, but this line is strong" (Tennyson). He remarked on the fine effect of the monosyllable shook and the pause after it.

494. deform = Lat. deformis, 'hideous, unsightly'; cf. II. 706. The Century Dictionary quotes Wyclif, Gen. xli. 19, "other seuen oxen... defourme and leene." In S. A. 699 we find deformed = 'deforming,' 'that which makes unsightly.'

496, 497. The couplet, as editors note, is made up of reminiscences of Shakespeare. Cf. Macbeth, v. 8. 30—32:

"Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou opposed, being of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last,"

and the same scene, 17, 18:

"Accursed be that tongue that tells me so,
For it hath cow'd my better part of man!"

So in Henry V. IV. 6. 28—32:

"The pretty and sweet manner of it forced
Those waters from me which I would have stopp'd;
But I had not so much of man in me,
And all my mother came into mine eyes
And gave me up to tears."

Cf. too the words of Laertes over Ophelia's dead body (Hamlet, IV. 7. 186—90).

504—506. M. has in mind Seneca's Vitam nemo acciperet, si daretur scientibus. Cf. Sir Thomas Browne, Christian Morals, III. xxv.: "When the Stoic said that life would not be accepted, if it were offered unto such as knew it, he spoke too meanly of that state of being which placeth us in the form of men."

So Drummond in A Cypress Grove: "O! who, if before he had a being he could have knowledge of the manifold miseries of it, would enter this woeful hospital of the world, and accept of life upon such hard conditions?" (Works, II. 252).

508, 509. Genesis i. 26, "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." erect; see VII. 506—10, note.

518, 519. his image, i.e. Appetite's. Eve's main inducement (he says) to eat of the fruit was appetite; this agrees with the account in IX. 740, 741.

531. Alluding to the maxim of the ancients, μηδὲν ἄγαν—ne quid nimis. The praises of a temperate life are often on Milton's lips. The theme inspires a fine passage in Comus, 762—79. In Il Penseroso, 46, he invokes "Spare Fast, that oft with gods doth diet"; and in the sixth Elegy (59, 60), tells Diodati that the poet who would handle grave matters and rival Homer must be ascetic in his life (ille quidem parce... vivat). No doubt, in the present passage, as in S. A. 553—57, M. is thinking of his own habits. A "temperate man," says Aubrey; and again: "very healthy and free from all diseases...till towards his latter end" (Life of M.).

535—37. Perhaps a reminiscence, as Newton thought, of Cicero, De Senectute 19, quasi poma ex arboribus, cruda si sunt, vix evelluntur, si matura et cocta, decidunt, sic vitam adulescentibus vis aufert, senibus maturitas.

542—46. M. is probably glancing at his own ill-health in later life. There is a similar allusion in VI. 462—64, and S. A. 698—700. "He died of the gowt struck in" (Aubrey). Cf. Johnson's Life of M. Aubrey says that he bore his suffering very cheerfully.

544. Todd quotes a passage in which Burton in the Anatomy of Melancholy reckons the chief cause of melancholy to be "old age, which, being cold and dry, and of the same quality as Melancholy is, must needs cause it, by diminution of spirits and substance." M. often refers to the old physiology of the four "humours," of which melancholy (the black bile) was one; see Comus, 809, 810, S. A. 600.

551, 552. The First Ed. had, somewhat abruptly, "Of rendering up Michael to him repli'd." There is an allusion here to Job xiv. 14.

553, 554. "My father often quoted these lines, 'He that loveth his life...'" (Life of Tennyson).

pernit to Heaven; cf. Horace's Permitte divi cetera—Odes I. 9. 9.

556—73. Referring to the descendants of Cain; see Gen. iv. 20—22. In 560 "who moved" means Jubal, "the father of all such as handle the harp and organ," Gen. iv. 21. See Dryden's Song for St Cecilia's Day, 16—24, and Marvell's Music's Empire, the last stanza of which contains, I cannot help thinking, an allusion to Milton.

560. The organ was Milton's favourite instrument; he had been taught to play it by his father. See the accurate account of its mechanism in I. 707, 708.

561. volant touch. Todd aptly compared Dryden's lines in Alexander's Feast:

"Timotheus, plac'd on high
Amid the tuneful quire,
With flying fingers touch'd the lyre;
The trembling notes ascend the sky,
And heavenly joys inspire."

We may add Thomson's lines in The Castle of Indolence, I. 40, on an Æolian harp :

“From which, with airy flying fingers light,
Beyond each mortal touch the most refined,
The god of winds drew sounds of deep delight,
Whence, with just cause, the harp of Æolus it hight.”

Cf. too Dryden. Æneid, VI. 879, 880, and Collins, The Passions, 88, 89.

562. instinct, instinctively.

563. transverse, across, i.e. across the keys of the instrument.

fugue. In the tractate On Education a “skilful organist plies his grave and fancied descant [cf. IV. 603] in lofty fuges,” P. W. III. 476. A fugue (Ital. fuga, ‘a flight’) is a form of musical composition. The whole passage has often been cited as a striking instance of Milton's accuracy in the use of technical terms of music. Indeed, the MSS. of his early poems show that he was conscious of a tendency to carry this use too far. Thus an earlier draft of the Ode At a Solemn Music had, in place of the existing lines 19, 20, the curiously technical couplet :

“by leaving out those harsh chromatick Jarres
of sin that all our musick marres.”

Again, in Comus, 243, comparison of the MSS. shows that he first wrote “And hold a counterpoint to all heavns harmonies”—afterwards changed to “And give resounding grace etc.”

564. one who, i.e. Tubal-Cain, “an instructor of every artificer in brass and iron,” Gen. iv. 22.

573. i.e. cast in moulds (“fusil”), or carved.

573—92. Referring to the descendants of Seth. According to Jewish tradition they dwelt in the mountains near to Paradise (i.e. “on the hither side”), whereas Cain went out to “the east of Eden,” Gen. iv. 16. They are said by Josephus and other writers to have been addicted to the study of physics and astronomy; cf. the Antiquities, I. ii. 3, “They (i.e. the Sethites) were the inventors of that peculiar sort of wisdom which is concerned with the heavenly bodies, and their order.” This tradition M. glances at in 578.

581, 582. Genesis vi. 1, 2.

582—97. This passage may be compared with P. R. II. 153—71, and 362—65. “Milton seems to have taken [these particulars] from the Oriental writers” (Newton).

584. In I. 449 the Syrian women lament for Adonis “in amorous ditties.”

586, 587. M. repeats himself in P. R. II. 161, 162 :

“Skill'd to retire, and, in retiring, draw Hearts after them tangled in amorous nets.”

In his first Elegy, 60, he had spoken of the Aurea quæ fallax retia tendit Amor. Bowle notes that Ariosto has the phrase amorosa rete (Orlando Furioso, I. 12); probably M. remembered it; he knew Ariosto's work well. There may be a reminiscence of Milton in Tennyson's Madeline:

"all my heart entanglest
In a golden-netted smile."

Milton's influence is almost as conspicuous in Tennyson's early poems as in Keats.

587. fast; misprinted first in a number of the early 18th century editions (Todd).

588, 589. The star Hesperus is called stella Veneris. Cf. IV. 605, VIII. 519, 520.

591. Hymen, the classical god of marriage; cf. the invocation in L'Allegro, 125, 126:

"There let Hymen oft appear In saffron robe, with taper clear,"

i.e. the "nuptial torch" (590), which, strictly, had to be pine-wood. Cf. the Masque of Hymen, "entered Hymen...in his right hand a torch of pine-tree," where, in the note, Ben Jonson cites Ovid—Expectet puros pinea tæda dies. See also Milton's Epitaph on the Marchioness of Winchester, 17—20. The colouring here (590—92) is classical; editors quote various parallels from the classics.

595. symphonies, harmonious sounds. The word, which now signifies a special form of musical composition, in M. means no more than 'harmony' (Gk. συμφωνία). Cf. Cotgrave, "Symphonie: Harmony, tunable singing," and Bullokar (1616), "Symphonie, consent in Musick."

607, 608. the tents of wickedness. Psalm lxxxiv. 10.

612. i.e. acknowledged none of his gifts; for the position of none, cf. v. 538. So sometimes in Shakespeare. Cf. Twelfth Night, III. 4. 262, "satisfaction can be none but by pangs of death."

614. Michael has just said that Cain's descendants would beget a beauteous race: here he appeals to the testimony of Adam's own eyes; the "female troop" are that race.

620. troll; properly 'to roll'; cf. the phrase 'to troll the bowl,' i.e. to circulate it (in the game of bowls). Keightley quotes from Golding's translation of Ovid's Metamorphoses x. 664, "Neptune's imp...trolled down at one side of the way an apple." But commonly troll was used in phrases like 'troll a catch' (in music); cf. The Tempest, III. 2. 126, "Let us be jocund: will you troll the catch?" and Jonson, Every Man in his Humour, I. 2, "I'll troll ballads." The notion there is 'to run over glibly, fluently.' Probably, therefore, M. means that these "goddesses" are void of speech.

621—25. "The sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair," Gen. vi. 2. "It is now generally agreed, that this passage is to be understood of the sons of Seth" (Newton). See v. 447, note.

624. trains, snares, wiles.

625—27. In Milton, as in Shakespeare, the quibbling use of words often expresses grim sarcasm: these lines contain two instances in point—"swim" and "world." See also 756, 757. Todd noted that the figurative sense of swim = 'revel' was not uncommon; cf. ix. 1009, note.

627. Cf. ix. 11, "That brought into this world a world of woe." Phrases like "a world of care" (Richard III. III. 7. 223), "world of wealth" (Henry VIII. III. 2. 211), meaning 'much of,' are frequent in Shakespeare.

631. paths indirect; cf. 2 Henry IV. IV. 5. 184—86:

"God knows, my son,

By what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways

I met this crown."

indirect; then a strong word—'wrong, unfair.'

632, 633. An expression of Milton's own opinion. Unhappy in his first marriage, which led to the composition of his bitter pamphlets on Divorce, and in the ill-behaviour of his daughters, he seldom let pass an opportunity for invective against women. See ix. 377, 823, notes, and S. A. passim (especially 1010—60).

There is probably a quibble here, an old derivation of woman being woe to man!

635, 636. Again M. himself is the speaker. His conception of the relative position of man and woman is summed up in a sentence that occurs more than once in his prose-works—"woman was made for man." Cf. iv. 295—99, note.

638—73. Obviously modelled on the description of the shield of Achilles, Iliad XVIII. 478 et seq. Cf. the use that Vergil makes of the same passage in Aeneid VIII. 608—731, describing the shield which Venus brings to Aeneas, figured with representations of the greatest scenes in the history of Rome.

642. bold emprise. Todd notes that the phrase occurs in Comus, 610, and often in Spenser; an echo, perhaps, of the first line of Ariosto, Orlando Furioso: "Le cortesie, l'audaci imprese, io canto."

643. Repeated from II. 531, "Part curb their fiery steeds," where M. is describing (cf. Iliad II. 773, Aeneid VI. 642) the "heroic games" of the rebellious angels after the Council at Pandemonium.

646—55. Editors compare Iliad XVIII. 527 et seq.

651. makes. The First Ed. has tacks; perhaps a misprint. M. never uses the word; it would scarce give any sense here.

660, 661. Clearly from Iliad XVIII. 503—506. haralds, i.e. heralds. For councils (in Scripture) held "in the city-gates," see Genesis xxxiv. 20.

665. one rising, i.e. Enoch. of middle age; Enoch was 365 years old when translated to Heaven—"i.e. not half the full age attributed to the oldest patriarchs" (Masson).

669. exploded, hissed.

672. sword-law. "This was probably intended by the poet as a reflection on the dangerous doctrine of his antagonist, Hobbes; who wished to establish the false notion, that right is founded on might" (Todd). He compares Richard III. v. 3. 311, "Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our law."

684. Milton's own "ill-mated" first marriage had strongly influenced his life and opinions; see x. 898—906, notes.

687, 688. prodigious; cf. II. 624, 625. The reference is to Gen. vi. 4, "There were giants in the earth in those days."

690. valour...virtue; a glance at the fact that primarily virtue meant 'valour,' Lat. virtus.

694, 695. Keeping the punctuation of the original, I think that the sense is—'and to be styled great conquerors shall be held the highest pitch of triumph for glorious deeds accomplished.' This makes of triumph depend on highest pitch understood from 693, and for glory done depend on of triumph: triumph signifying the honour which a man gets in return for glorious achievements. To "do glory" is a curious phrase in this sense—Shakespeare uses it differently in Sonnet 132—and Bentley proposed 'for glory won.'

Newton interprets the passage: 'To overcome.....shall be held the highest pitch of glory, and shall be done for glory of triumph, to be (i.e. so as to be) styled great conquerors.' But the ellipse shall be is awkward.

698, 699. Cf. the distinction suggested in Lycidas, 70—84, between earthly fame and true Heavenly fame.

700—709. Genesis v.; Jude 14, 15.

706. A variation on III. 522. He assumes that Enoch's translation to Heaven resembled that of Elijah (2 Kings ii. 11). Cf. P. R. II. 16, 17, and his first Epigram, Qualiter ille.....Liquit Iordanios turbine raptus agros.

708. climes, regions; a common use in M. Cf. I. 242.

715. luxury; a much stronger word then than now. In Shakespeare it always means 'lust, lasciviousness'; so luxurious = 'lustful'; cf. Of Reformation, II., "the luxurious and ribald feasts of Baal-peor." Luxuria and luxoriosus were used thus in the Latin of the Church Fathers, and lussuria by Dante; cf. the Inferno, v. 55. He speaks of Cleopatra lussuriosa (63).

717. fair; cf. IX. 606, note.

719. reverend sire; Lycidas, 103.

723. triumphs, public shows or festivities.

723—25. See I Peter iii. 19, 20. Dunster observed that in several details of the account of Noah in these lines M. has followed the Antiquities of Josephus, bk. I. chap. iii.

728—53. Genesis vi., vii. There are occasional echoes in the passage of Ovid's description of the Deluge (Metamorphoses I.); e.g. "sea without shore" in 750 suggests Ovid's deerant quoque litora ponto, I. 292. Thomson followed Milton; cf. Spring (describing the Deluge):

"A shoreless ocean tumbled round the globe."

738. the south-wind; the precursor of rain.

743. "Cieling may be thought too mean a word in poetry; but Milton had a view to its derivation from calum, cielo (Italian), 'heaven'" (Richardson). The same consideration probably had determined its use by other poets.

752. stabled, had their lairs; cf. Comus, 534, "stabled wolves," i.e. wolves in their haunts. From Lat. stabulum = 'lair,' as in stabula alta ferarum, Aeneid VI. 179.

753. bottom, vessel; cf. Twelfth Night, v. I. 60, "With the most noble bottom of our fleet"; and The Merchant of Venice, I. I. 42, "My ventures are not in one bottom trusted."

763, 764. A common sentiment. Cf. Comus, 362, "What need a man forestall his date of grief?"; or Landor, Gebir, VI.:

"Oh! seek not destined evils to divine,

Found out at last too soon."

765, 766. Matthew vi. 34, "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." dispensed, i.e. distributed so as to be the burden.

772. evil...sure. For the omission of the preposition of, cf. S. A. 1408.

773, 774. neither...and. Rightly explained by Newton as an imitation of the Latin idiom neque...et ('not only not...but also'). He quoted from Cicero, De Oratore—homo neque meo judicio stultus, et suo valde sapiens. Exactly parallel is the sentence cited by Todd from The Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce, "the Jews, who were neither won with the austerity of John the Baptist, and thought it too etc."

779. For wander as a transitive verb cf. P. R. II. 246. So roam in I. 521, and rove in Comus, 60.

798, 799. Milton's favourite idea (for which he might have quoted the authority of Aristotle), that in the history of every nation moral corruption and loss of political liberty go hand in hand: that a people which is corrupt ceases to care for freedom. Cf. S. A. 268—70:

"But what more oft in nations grown corrupt,
And by their vices brought to servitude,
Than to love bondage more than liberty!"

The thought is often insisted upon in his prose-works. See II. 255—57, note, and XII. 90 et seq.

800. For the accent, contést, cf. IV. 872, S. A. 461, 865.

801—805. Interpreted by most editors as a political reference: many Puritans, as M. knew, had silently acquiesced in the Restoration. Cf. his covert attack in S. A. 1464—66 on the Presbyterians. "Hypocrisy Milton, in various parts of his poem, has branded as the most abominable of crimes" (Dunster).

804, 805. The point whereon Comus and "the Lady" dispute (710—80).

808—18. A picture of Milton himself in the lonely last years of his life; perhaps he meant it as such. The "dark age" (from his point of view) represented that in which the Restoration had been brought about; the "wicked ways" were those of the courtiers of Charles II.; the "wrath to come" stood for the second Revolution which he foretold more plainly in S. A. See v. 899, VII. 26, 27 (notes).

821. devote; cf. III. 208. An entry in the Cambridge MSS. shows that M. contemplated writing a "tragedy" on "The flood."

823. select, set aside.

824. cataracts. In Gen. vii. 11, the Heb. word rendered by windows in the A. V. (or flood-gates, margin) is translated καταράκται in the Septuagint, cataractæ in the Vulgate. The word is appropriate of tropical rain and water-spouts (Newton).

829—35. It was a generally held opinion that Paradise was obliterated by the Flood; but the particular explanation here given of its removal appears to be of Milton's own invention.

831. horned, branching into horns, i.e. channels, as a river does when it meets some obstacle. Probably we get the same notion in the Lat. tauriformis as applied to rivers; cf. Horace's tauriformis Aufidus, Odes IV. 14. 25, and Vergil, Georg. IV. 371, 372. Todd noted that the same phrase horned flood, in the same sense, occurs in Ben Jonson, Fox, III. 7, and Browne, Britannia's Pastorals, II. 5 (of which work Milton's own annotated copy survives. See II. 583, note).

833. Probably the Euphrates is meant—"the great river, the river Euphrates," Gen. xv. 18. The Tigris is less likely. the...Gulf, i.e. the Persian Gulf; called "the Persian bay," P. R. III. 273.

835. orcs, a kind of whale; Ben Jonson speaks of "Proteus' herds, and Neptune's orcs" in the Masque of Neptune's Triumph.

clang; used, like Lat. clangor, of the cries of birds in VII. 422.

840. 'To hull' is 'to toss or drive on the water, like the hull of a ship without sails.' Cf. Gervase Markham's Sir Richard Grinville, "Then casts he Anchor hulling on the maine"; and Twelfth Night, I. 5. 217, "Will you hoist sail, sir?...No, I am to hull here a little longer." Sir Thomas Browne may have remembered Milton when he wrote: "In this virtuous voyage of thy life hull not about like the ark, without the use of rudder, mast, or sail, and bound for no port" (Christian Morals, I. i.).

842—49. Cf. the account in VII. 285—306 of the subsidence of the waters after the Creation of the earth.

"The circumstances [here] are few, but selected with great judgment. In this respect, Milton greatly excels the Italians, who are generally too prolix in their descriptions, and think they have never said enough whilst any thing remains unsaid" (Thyer).

842. "And God made a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters asswaged," Gen. viii. 1. M. would naturally select the north as the parching, drying wind; see II. 489, 594, 595, notes; cf. Proverbs xxv. 23. He may, too, have recollected Ovid's account of the re-appearance of the earth, nimbis Aquilone remotis (Newton).

The north-east is typically the sky-clearing wind of poetry; cf. Dante, Paradiso, xxviii. 79—84.

846. their; referring to wave. M. may have dictated waves, or treated wave as a collective noun (and so avoided writing its).

848—67. There are continual references to Genesis viii.

851. "And the ark rested...upon the mountains of Ararat," Genesis viii. 4. Cf. Josephus, "After this the ark rested on the top of a certain mountain in Armenia," Antiquities, I. iii. 5.

858. his. "In Gen. viii. 9 the dove is feminine" (Keightley).

866. three, red, yellow and blue (according to the belief then held); cf. 879. Now the rainbow is resolved into seven colours.

listed, striped, streaked; from list, a strip (of cloth, etc.). Cf. Tennyson, Vivien, "Trees that shone white-listed through the gloom."

867. covenant; Genesis ix. 11—17. "The compact that God made with Noah, that the world never shall be drowned again," Paradiso, XII. 17, 18.

870. thou, who. In the First Ed. thou that.

880, 881. Some editors place a note of interrogation at the end of 879, and explain 880, 881 thus—"are they (i.e. the streaks) distended...or do they serve?" The advantage of this is that it supplies a direct alternative to "or serve"; on the other hand the ellipse in 880 is awkward, and the line sounds, I think, more natural if taken as a statement, not as a question, from Adam. 'What (he asks) mean those streaks spread over the heaven? is it that they serve to bind? etc.' The second question is a kind of after-thought, introduced by or, though no regular alternative has preceded.

as the brow. The notion is that of a knitted brow relaxing its wrinkled lines, i.e. the frown, expressive of anger or thought. M. uses the same idea to suggest the influence of music; cf. Il Pen. 55—58:

"And the mute Silence hist along,
'Less Philomel will deign a song,
In her saddest sweetest plight,
Smoothing the rugged brow of Night";

and P. R. II. 163, 164:

"Such object hath the power to soften and tame Severest temper, smoothe the rugged'st brow"

(rugged in either case meaning 'wrinkled').

886—901. A combination of Scriptural passages. Cf. Gen. vi. 6, 9, 11, 12; viii. 22; ix. 11—17; 2 Peter iii. 12, 13. late, lately.

889. Cf. VII. 453, "each in their kind."

895. The Scriptural phrase man and beast (Psalms xxxvi. 6, Jeremiah xxi. 6) includes the birds (Pearce).

BOOK XII.

1—5. These five lines were added in the Second Ed., as a "transition," when bk. x. (of the First Ed.) was divided into the present XI.—XII.; just as, at the same time, the first three verses of VIII. were inserted, when VII. (of the First Ed.) was divided into what are now VII.—VIII. In the First Ed. the line in Michael's speech, "Both Heaven and Earth etc.," which forms the close of the present XI., was followed, without any break, by "Thus thou hast seen" (6).

1. bates; printed so in the First Ed., and the sense must be 'slackens,' i.e. abates, his course. Some editors read baits, which is used in S. A. 1538; there, however, the word is spelt baits in the First Ed.—an argument against altering the text here.

The word bait, 'to stop on a journey for refreshment' (cognate with bite), is not very dignified now, but it may not have been open to this objection in Milton's time. Thus Sidney calls sleep "The baiting-place of wit, the balm of woe"; and Donne, in his Progress of the Soul, describing the progress of a soul to Heaven, says: "She stays not in the Air...she baits not at the Moon," i.e. does not stop there. Here it suits the metaphor of the whole line.

8—10. Till then all that Adam saw appeared in visions (XI. 377).

13—24. A picture of the world in the 'Silver Age,' when the government was patriarchal ("under paternal rule"); that of iron soon (24) begins (Richardson).

18. labouring, cultivating. Used actively in S. A. 1298, with the sense 'causing to labour.' As a transitive verb in Shakespeare it means 'to effect by labour'; cf. "he would labour my delivery," Richard III. I. 4. 253.

24. one, i.e. Nimrod. In what follows M. is giving expression to his own republican feelings, and his dislike of a monarchy. Nimrod, he says, was the first to claim sovereign power over his fellow-men: and then Nimrod is depicted in the most unfavourable light, so that we may infer that the institution (i.e. monarchy) which had such an evil originator must be itself evil.

Milton's Common-place Book (see IX. 200), among some remarks on the origin of monarchy, has the entries:

"The Lordly Monarchy first among men.—In Assyria under the power of Nimrod called a great Hunter, an Hebraisme for a Great Theife.—Before his time was no sovereign." (Camden Society's 2nd ed., p. 42.)

25. of proud, ambitious heart. In the Purgatorio, XII. 34—36, Nimrod is classed with Satan as a type of pride.

28. dispossess. These compounds with dis- as a negative prefix, implying 'to deprive of,' are very common in M.; cf. dispeople, dis-exercise, disenthroned (II. 229).

30—35. The description of Nimrod in Gen. x. 9, "He was a mighty hunter before the LORD," has been explained in two ways: literally, according to the obvious sense of the English rendering; figuratively, as meaning that he was a great conqueror; this is implied by the preceding verse, which speaks of his beginning to found an empire, while the Hebrew translated "hunter" would appear, from other passages, to have been applicable to a warrior making raids on his enemies. It is under the second aspect that M. regards Nimrod—as a tyrannous ruler extending his empire and persecuting all who resisted: men, not beasts, were his prey. See the entries quoted above and Eikonoklastes, II: "the bishops could have told him [Charles I.] that Nimrod, the first that hunted after faction, is reputed by ancient tradition the first that founded monarchy" (P. W. I. 405). Compare the picture of him that Josephus draws: "a bold man, and of great strength of hand....He changed the government into a tyranny, seeing no other way of turning men from the fear of God, but to bring them into a constant dependence upon his own power," Antiquities, i. iv. 2. I think that in the whole of this passage concerning Nimrod and the Tower of Babel Milton had Josephus' narrative in his mind. Dryden makes Nimrod the first of great persecutors; cf. The Hind and the Panther, i. 282, 283:

"Thus persecution rose, and farther space Produced the mighty hunter of his race."

Similarly Pope (Windsor Forest, 61, 62):

"Proud Nimrod first the bloody chase began,
A mighty hunter, and his prey was man."

One of the chieftains of Diabolus in The Holy War (end) is "Captain Nimrod," leader of "the Tyrannical" band.

34. M. glances at the two interpretations which have been given of the phrase "before the Lord": (1) 'in defiance of God,' which is certainly in accordance with Josephus' account; (2) 'under God,' i.e. "as usurping all authority to himself next under God, and claiming it jure divino" (Newton), just as in Milton's own day "the divine right of kings" had been put forward so strongly. The second view seems very improbable.

36. Alluding to the incorrect notion that Nimrod is connected with the Heb. root mârad, 'to rebel.' More probably, the name is Assyrian. Of course, it suits Milton's sarcastic purpose to imply that the first king in history was himself but a rebel. It is as though he were flinging back the charge so often brought against his own political party, that they were rebellious in their resistance to Charles I.

38—62. Cf. the account of the building of the Tower of Babel in Gen. xi. 2—9. M. follows the original very closely. The Bible does not directly associate Nimrod with the building of the Tower of Babel; it only states (Gen. x. 10) that Babel was one of his capitals. The view which M. has followed here (as in the last chapter of Eikonoklastes) is a later belief, given by Josephus (Antiquities, i. iv. 2); Dante has it in the Inferno, xxxi., Purgatorio, xii., and Paradiso, xxvi. The tradition of Nimrod's connection with Babel or Babylon survives in the name of the great temple-tower Birs-Nimrud, remains of which still exist.

41, 42. Cf. Josephus (speaking of the Tower), "it was built of burnt brick, cemented together with mortar, made of bitumen, that it might not be liable to admit water," Antiquities, i. iv. 3.

the plain, i.e. in Mesopotamia, bordered by the Euphrates.

bituminous. The mineral pitch called bitumen (or asphalt) abounded in Babylonia, and was employed, it is thought, in the buildings of the city of Babylon. See the note on "asphaltic slime," x. 298.

42. the mouth of Hell. "This 'bituminous gurge' the poet calls

'the mouth of hell,' not strictly speaking, but by the same sort of figure by which the ancient poets called Tænarus or Avernus the jaws and gate of Hell. Vergil, Georg. IV. 467, Tænarias etiam fauces, alta ostia Ditis"—Newton. Cf., too, fauces graveolentis Averni (in the passage describing the descent of Æneas to Hades), Æn. VI. 201.

52, 53. Cf. 2 Chronicles xviii. 22. See II. 190, 191, note.

55. Sylvester (Du Bartas) describes the confusion of Tongues as "a jangling noise." Dante puts unintelligible words in Nimrod's mouth, in allusion to the Confusion of Tongues; see the Inferno, xxxi. 67—81.

62. Cf. Gen. xi. 9, "Therefore is the name of it called Babel," where the margin has, "That is, Confusion." Cf. also Josephus, Antiquities, I. iv. 3, "The place wherein they built the tower is now called Babylon; because of the confusion of that language which they readily understood before; for the Hebrews mean by the word Babel, Confusion." It appears, however, that "the native etymology (of Babylon) is Bab-il, 'the gate of the god Il,' or perhaps more simply 'the gate of God'" (Smith's Bible Dict.).

73, 74. "This being not asserted in Scripture, but only supposed by some writers, is better put into the mouth of Adam, than of the Angel" (Newton).

Compare the reasons for the building of the Tower that Josephus gives: "He (Nimrod) said he would be avenged on God, if he should have a mind to drown the world again; for that he would build a tower too high for the waters to be able to reach! and that he would avenge himself on God for destroying their forefathers," Antiquities, I. iv. 2.

76—78. The knowledge of physics which the lines reveal is not very appropriate in the mouth of Adam (Keightley).

77. pine; a transitive verb; cf. XI. 486, and Richard II. v. 1. 77.

78. breath...bread. For Milton's use of these verbal quibbles and jingling sounds, see I. 642, XI. 625—27, notes.

81. affecting to subdue, aiming at subduing; commonly used, like Lat. affectare, with a direct accusative of the thing aimed at. Cf. III. 206, "affecting Godhead."

83—90. For the association of freedom with reason cf. III. 108—10 and IX. 351, 352.

84. right reason; cf. VI. 42, note.

85. twinned, i.e. closely united, as if they were twins; reason is the very counterpart of liberty. Shakespeare several times uses the verb twain in much the same way—to express close connection, as in Coriolanus, IV. 4. 15, or close resemblance, as in Cymbeline, I. 6. 35, "the twinned stones upon the beach" (i.e. exactly alike). Editors compare Timon of Athens, IV. 3. 3—5.

95, 96. The form in which the thought is conveyed seems a reminiscence of Matthew xviii. 7, "it must needs be that offences come." In IV. 393 M. calls necessity "the tyrant's plea."

97. decline; used of deterioration. Cf. Hamlet, I. 5. 50.

100, 101. See the note on XI. 798, 799.

101—104. irreverent son, i.e. Ham, the father of Canaan. Cf. Gen. ix. 21—25, especially verse 25, "And he [Noah] said, Cursed be Canaan; a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren."

111. one peculiar nation. Cf. passages like Deut. xiv. 2, Ps. cxxxv. 4. M. discusses this point in The Christian Doctrine, I. 17.

113. The allusion is to Abraham. faithful; see 152.

114. on this side, i.e. eastward of; cf. Joshua xxiv. 2, 3. The word 'ibri, whence Hebrew, which was first used of Abraham (Gen. xiv. 13), signifies 'living across,' i.e. across, or east of, the Euphrates. It was the term applied by the Canaanites to the Jewish immigrants into Canaan.

115. bred up. M. infers this from Joshua xxiv. 2, where we are told that "Terah, the father of Abraham...served other gods." Cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 17, "He called Abraham from his father's house...who was even an idolater at the time" (P. W. IV. 321).

117. i.e. during the life-time of Noah. According to the chronology given in Gen. ix. and xi., Noah lived many years after the birth of Terah; and we have just seen, from Josh. xxiv. 2, that Terah worshipped false gods.

118. Cf. S. A. 1140, "My trust is in the Living God"; the phrase is frequent in the Bible; cf. Heb. iii. 12, 1 Tim. iv. 10.

120, 121. Genesis xii.; Acts vii. In visions (see XI. 377) the highest type of revelation was thought to be made; we often find the word contrasted with dream. Cf. Comus, 453—58; so in Cowley's Essays (p. 21, Pitt Press ed.), "I fell at last into this vision; or if you please to call it but a dream, I shall not take it ill, because the father of poets tells us, even dreams, too, are from God" (where the Homeric reference is the same as in 611). See Numbers xii. 6.

127, 128. "By faith Abraham.....went out, not knowing whither he went," Heb. xi. 8.

128. I see him, but thou canst not. A variation on the method of narration adopted in book XI. (423). The wording is like Oberon's "That very time I saw, but thou [Puck] couldst not," A Midsummer-Night's Dream, II. I. 155.

129. Haran was the place where Abraham received the command from God to journey to Canaan (Gen. xii. 1—4). But M. is thinking of Acts vii. 2—4, where it is said that "The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham" before he came "out of the land of the Chaldeans."

130. Ur; the capital of southern Chaldea, and a great commercial mart; it then lay close to the mouth of the Euphrates, as at that time the waters of the Persian Gulf extended much further inland than now. But from the reference to Haran we may conjecture that M. supposed Ur to be in Upper Mesopotamia, i.e. at least 400 miles north of its real site. In this he followed a view formerly held by many scholars, and suggested by Acts vii. 2—4, the Scriptural passage, as we have said, on which, mainly, this couplet is based. An old theory identified Ur with Orfah=the Greek Edessa, in northern Mesopotamia.

130, 131. M. speaks as though Abraham's journey were continuous, and his stay at Haran a mere episode, whereas the Scripture implies that he dwelt there some time (Gen. xi. 31, Acts vii. 4).

passing...the ford; this must refer to the crossing of the Euphrates; but Haran, or Charran (the Carræ of the famous Parthian victory), was on the western bank of the Euphrates. We must remember that in the 17th century scholars had to depend on very imperfect maps, travellers' narratives and such-like doubtful evidence.

132. servitude, servants: abstract for concrete.

135—51. In these lines M. first traces the journey of Abraham to the Promised Land (cf. Gen. xii. 5, 6); then sketches in outline the geographical position and extent of the Land, glancing at the number of Scriptural texts which suit his purpose; and finally shows what was the scope of the promise made to Abraham.

139—41. The four boundaries are: (1) the town (or district) of Hamath, in Upper Syria, lying in the valley of the Orontes; afterwards called Epiphaneia by Antiochus Epiphanes, and now again known as Hamah; expressly mentioned as the northern limit of Canaan in Numb. xxxiv. 7, 8. (2) The Desert of Zin, forming part of the southern frontier of the Holy Land (Numb. xxxiv. 3). (3) Mt Hermon, 'the lofty peak'; the most conspicuous mountain in Palestine, and the great landmark of the Israelites. In Scripture Hermon is associated with, not the eastern but, the northern boundary; cf. Ps. lxxxix. 12, "The north and the south thou hast created them: Tabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy name." Perhaps this was why M. afterwards added that the Jordan was the "true limit eastward." (4) The "western sea," i.e. the Mediterranean; cf. Numb. xxxiv. 6, "And as for the western border, ye shall even have the great sea for a border: this shall be your west border."

143, 144. Mt Carmel is one of the most striking geographical features of Palestine, being the only headland which breaks the coast-line.

double-founted; probably an allusion to the old belief that the Jordan, in its upper course, was formed by the union of two streams thought to give the river its name; these were the Dan and the Jor, and their supposed place of confluence lay near Cæsarea Philippi. In reality, Jordan is from a Heb. root 'to flow down, descend,' and the sources of the river must be looked for in the water-shed of Libanus on the one hand, and of Mt Hermon on the other. Sylvester, however, had mentioned its "double source," and, as Todd pointed out, the traveller George Sandys speaks of it as "seeming to arise from Jor and Dan, two not far distant fountaines."

Probably Sandys was Milton's main authority for the topography of Palestine. His Travels, first published in 1615, were very popular, often reprinted, and often quoted. They contain a vivid and detailed account of the Holy Land. Milton mentions Sandys in Of Reformation in England, P. W. II. 380, and borrowed from him (almost certainly) the account of the rites of Moloch in the Nativity Ode, 204—10, and P. L. I. 392—96; and there is reason for thinking that in Samson Agonistes the description of the amphitheatre in which the catastrophe of the play occurs was inspired by a passage of the same writer. It is quite likely therefore that Sandys was responsible for double-founted here.

145, 146. true limit. The Jordan is mentioned as the eastern boundary of Canaan in Numb. xxxiv. 12. Nine tribes and a half of the Israelites dwelt west of it, only two tribes and a half (Manasseh) on the eastern bank. The river is constantly spoken of as a boundary; cf. such phrases as 'over Jordan,' 'beyond Jordan.'

his sons; the allusion is to 1 Chronicles v. 23. Senir is the Amorite name for Mt Hermon; cf. Deut. iii. 9. But in the verse of Chronicles just referred to, Senir and Hermon are distinguished, so that Senir may also have been applied to some range of hills running off from the great mountain in an eastern direction; and this, apparently, was Milton's idea; cf. "long ridge," which would be a very inappropriate description of Hermon. We know that Manasseh spread eastward far beyond their original territory—even over the deserts between Palestine and the Euphrates.

151—63. Cf. Gen. xvii. 5; also Gal. iii. 9, "So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham." The historical allusion in the lines is, of course, to Jacob's going down to Egypt at the bidding of Joseph—Gen. xlv., xlvi.

158. Cf. Vergil's septemgemini trepida ostia Nili (Æn. vi. 801). The allusion to its seven mouths is frequent.

167. of guests he makes them slaves; on this classical idiom see the notes on IV. 153, VIII. 433.

172. "And they spoiled the Egyptians," Exod. xii. 36.
- 173—190. Exodus vii.—xii.
173. denies, refuses; cf. King Lear, II. 4. 89, "Deny to speak with me?"
180. emboss, cover with swellings; cf. As You Like It, II. 7. 67, "embossed sores," and King Lear, II. 4. 227, "A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle." Cf. Fr. bosse, 'a lump.'
182. rend. Cf. Hamlet, II. 2. 508, 509,
 "the dreadful thunder
 Doth rend the region" (i.e. air).
- 185—88. An echo of I. 338—43. Cf. also Sylvester, Du Bartas (Grosart's ed., I. 189):
 "Then the Thrice-Sacred with a sable Cloud
 Of horned Locusts doth the Sun becloud."
188. palpable; see the note on II. 406.
191. the river-dragon, i.e. Pharaoh. The First Ed. has this instead of the. Compare Ezekiel xxix. 3, "Behold, I am against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt, the great dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers." Dragon (= draco in the Vulgate, and δράκων in the Septuagint) is the translation in several places of the Heb. word tannin, applied to any monster; cf. Job vii. 12 ("whale") and Ps. xci. 13, where the R.V. substitutes "serpent" for "dragon."
197. Cf. VII. 293, and Milton's paraphrase on Ps. cxiv., "Why turned Jordan toward his crystal fountains?"; also that on Ps. cxxvii., "The floods stood still, like walls of glass."
200. Saint. M. is very fond of this word, perhaps because Saints was the name by which many of the Republican Independents called themselves, in allusion to the sense 'holy man' in the Epistles of St Paul.
- 201—14. Exod. xiii. 21, 22, xiv.
207. defends, forbids; cf. XI. 86. "This is the common sense of defend in our ancient laws and statutes" (Todd).
210. craze, break, smash; only here and in S. A. 571.
211. A reminiscence of I. 338.
- 214—19. Exod. xiii. 17, 18. The march of the Israelites was—first, from Rameses to Succoth; thence to Etham; and then southwards, through the wilderness east of the Red Sea. Their readiest way from Succoth would have been by the north-east route, along the coast of the Mediterranean; but this would have brought them into the country of the warlike Philistines. In 215 from the shore refers, obviously, to the Red Sea. In 216 the wild Desert seems to be a general term comprehending all the desert parts through which they advanced to Canaan, such as the wilderness of Shur and Sin and Sinai.

220. See XI. 798, 799 (note), and cf. the passage quoted there from S. A. 268—71. We have the opposite sentiment in II. 255—57.

220—22. more sweet, i.e. than liberty; the sense, I think, is—‘noble men and ignoble alike—if untrained in arms—prefer life to freedom, except in cases where mere rashness transports them from their usual characters.’

224—26. Alluding to the “seventy of the elders of Israel,” whom Moses was directed to associate with himself in the government of the Israelites (Exod. xxiv., Numb. xi. 16—24), in which Council some scholars have seen the beginnings of the Jewish Sanhedrin. There may also be a glance at Exod. xviii., where, on the advice of Jethro, Moses delegates his judicial authority in minor cases to the tribal heads, who “judged the people at all seasons.”

227—38. Exod. xix., xx. See XI. 73—76, note, and cf. Milton’s Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce, 3: “Did God for this come down and cover the mount of Sinai with his glory, uttering in thunder those his sacred ordinances out of the bottomless treasures of his wisdom and infinite goodness?” P. W. III. 220.

grey, i.e. with smoke and clouds (Exod. xix. 16, 18), says Newton; but perhaps it is only an ‘epithet of adornment,’ like ‘hoary’ (i.e. with age).

228. he descending. Needlessly changed to him by Bentley. M., however, varies the idiom; see VII. 142 (note).

229. trumpet’s; in the First Ed. trumpets; the passage in Exodus shows that the singular is required (Bradshaw). See I. 59, note.

233. i.e. of the Seed destined to bruise. For the inversion of order see I. 206, note.

238. what they besought. So the Second Ed.; the First reads “he grants them their desire.”

239—41. Cf. 310, 311, note.

241, 242. “For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me,” Acts iii. 22, where the reference is to Deut. xviii. 15—19.

249. prescript, command; cf. “the prescript of this roll,” Antony and Cleopatra, III. 8. 5. So in S. A. 308.

250. cedar. Some suppose that M. was thinking of the Temple and had forgotten that shittim-wood was employed in the construction of the Tabernacle. But may not M. have thought that the wood called shittim was some kind of cedar (though scholars now identify it with the acacia)?

253, 254. Referring to the two images of Cherubim, overlaid with gold, which were placed, with expanded wings, over the mercy-seat (cf. xi. 2) that covered the ark (1 Kings vi.). The figures symbolised the guardian powers that drove off evil spirits.

254—56. "That the seven lamps signified the seven planets, and that therefore the lamps stood slope-wise, as it were to express the obliquity of the zodiac, is the gloss [i.e. interpretation] of Josephus, from whom probably Milton borrowed it" (Newton). See xi. 247.

256—58. Exod. xl. 34—38; cf. 333. This is the allusion in S. A. 1674, "In Silo, his bright sanctuary," and the Animadversions, 4, "the redoubled brightness of thy descending cloud, that now covers thy tabernacle," P. W. III. 71.

258—60. Exod. xxiii. 23.

263—67. Joshua x. 12, 13. This is one of the subjects mentioned in the Cambridge MSS., in the list of schemes of Milton's great poem, thus: "Josuah in Gibeon. Josu. 10."

267. Israel; the title ('prince or soldier of God') was first applied to Jacob, Gen. xxxii. 28.

270. "These interpositions of Adam have a very good effect; for otherwise the continued narrative of the Angel would appear too long and tedious" (Newton). See vi. 114, note.

274. Alluding to the Serpent's false promise, "your eyes shall be opened," Gen. iii. 5.

283. argue so many sins, prove so many sins to exist. The sentiment of the whole line is that expressed by Tacitus—corruptissima reipublicæ plurimæ leges (Peck). Cf. Milton's Second Defence of the People of England: "since there are often in a republic men who have the same itch for making a multiplicity of laws, as some poetasters have for making many verses, and since laws are usually worse in proportion as they are more numerous..." (P. W. I. 293).

287—306. This is one of those theological passages into which Milton distils the doctrines of a number of texts (as interpreted by himself); such as Rom. iii. 20, iv. 22—25, v. 1, 17, 21, vii. 7, 8, viii. 15, x. 5; Heb. vii. 19, ix. 13, 14, x. 1, 4, 5; and Galatians iii., iv.

pravity, tendency to evil, moral perversity. M. does not use the word elsewhere. Johnson has it in his Life of Milton: "Ariosto's pravity is generally known."

287. evince, demonstrate. Cf. Burton, Anatomy, "Arion made fishes follow him, which, as common experience evinceth, are much affected with music." Milton has the word once elsewhere; cf. P. R. iv. 235, "Error by his own arms is best evinced." For the noun in the same sense, cf. the first lines of Sir Thomas Browne's Vulgar Errors, speaking of "the common infirmity of human nature; of whose deceptible condition...there should not need any other eviction than the frequent errors we shall ourselves commit, even in the express declaration thereof."

297—99. The sense is—"the law cannot appease the conscience, nor can man perform "the moral part" of the law."

307—309. Deuteronomy xxxiv. The passage is well illustrated by The Christian Doctrine, I. 26: "The imperfection of the law was manifested in the person of Moses himself; for Moses, who was a type of the law, could not bring the children of Israel into the land of Canaan, that is, into eternal rest; but an entrance was given to them under Joshua, or Jesus."

310, 311. Joshua, 'the Saviour,' is the same word as Jesus; in the Septuagint Joshua is called 'Ἰησοῦς. Other forms are Jehoshua, Hoshea and Oshea; and Hosanna (a cry for help) is from the same stem meaning 'to save.' Joshua is treated as a type of Christ (cf. Hebrews iv. 8), the points of resemblance being many; and perhaps that which M. specially refers to in the words "His name and office bearing" is, that as Joshua led the Jews through the wilderness and brought them to the Land of Promise, so Christ brings men, after their journey through the world, into the presence of God, as being their Mediator (XI. 32—44) and Advocate. (Smith's Bible Dictionary.)

quell, crush utterly; a stronger word than.

322. shall receive, i.e. by the mouth of the prophet, Nathan—2 Sam. vii. 16.

324, 325. i.e. 'all the prophets (cf. 243) shall sing, or foretell, the same, viz. that there shall rise etc.'; Prophecy being the abstract for concrete. M. is thinking of passages like Isaiah xi. 10, Psalms lxxxix.

36, 37.

332. his next son, i.e. Solomon, who built the Temple; 1 Kings vi., vii., 2 Chron. iii., iv.

337, 338. heaped to the popular sum, i.e. the faults of the kings added to the sum total of their people's sins.

342. saw'st; not literally; the angel had only related the event.

344—47. The seventy years of Captivity, foretold by Jeremiah (xxv. 12), dated from B.C. 606 to B.C. 536.

348—50. The "kings" are Cyrus, who first proclaimed the decree for the rebuilding of the Temple, and his successors Artaxerxes and Darius. The time occupied in the work was from B.C. 536 to B.C. 515. This period of Jewish history is dealt with in the book of Ezra.

353—56. An allusion to the struggle for the high-priesthood, in the 2nd cent. B.C., between Jason and Menelaus (i.e. Joshua and Onias—each had adopted a Greek name at a time when Greek influence was affecting the Jews very strongly). Jason obtained the office from the Syrian king Antiochus Epiphanes, circa 175 B.C.; afterwards it was transferred to Menelaus, 172 B.C. The conflicts that arose between the rival high-priests gave Antiochus an excuse for assaulting Jerusalem and plundering the Temple, 170 B.C. Two years later, 168 B.C., his troops again occupied the city; the Temple was desecrated; "an idol altar" was set up, and the Jews were forbidden the observance of their own religion. These events are related in 1, 2 Maccabees, and by Josephus.

Indirectly, lines 353—55 are an attack, like 507—37, on the clergy.

356, 357. they=the Asmonean family, in whose line the office of high-priest descended, B.C. 153—B.C. 35. The first of the race to assume the title of king was Aristobulus I., B.C. 107. Their sovereignty ended with the capture of Jerusalem by Pompey, 63 B.C.

David's sons. The last ruler of Israel who could claim direct descent from David was Zerubbabel, under whose leadership the Jews returned from the Babylonish Captivity in 536 B.C. The names of his descendants we are told in the genealogies of Christ (given from somewhat different points of view) by Matthew and Luke. That of Matthew "exhibits the successive heirs of the kingdom (of David) ending with Christ," i.e. it shows us to whom Milton refers when he speaks of "David's sons," the rightful heirs, though not "regarded."

358. a stranger, i.e. Antipater an Idumean (the Greek form of Edomite), who was made governor of Jerusalem by Pompey in 61 B.C., and afterwards procurator of Judæa by Julius Cæsar, 47 B.C. His second son was Herod the Great, who was appointed king of Judæa by the Roman Senate in 38 B.C. During his reign Christ was born.

360. barred; he purposely uses a legal term.

360—67. This passage should be compared with the Nativity Ode, and the similar account of Christ's birth in P. R. I. 242—54. The verbal resemblances are numerous. Matthew ii.; Luke ii.

364. solemn; "sent in solemnity.... This single word solemn expresses the importance of the message" (Richardson).

366, 367. thither, i.e. to Bethlehem; and M. speaks as though the song of the angels was heard there—not merely "in the field."

squadroned, in troops; cf. the Nativity Ode, 21.

369—71. The literary form of the passage is primarily from Vergil, Æneid I. 287, Imperium oceano, famam qui terminet astris. The theological idea is that of the "glorious reign of Christ on earth with his Saints, so often promised in Scripture, even until all his enemies shall be subdued" (The Christian Doctrine, I. 33). In this theological work Milton states his belief at length, quoting the passages of Scripture on which it rests, such as Isai. ix. 7, Dan. vii. 13, 14, 22, Luke i. 32, 33, Mat. xix. 28, Rev. ii. 25—27.

The editor of The Christian Doctrine in Bohn's edition of Milton's prose-works says:

"The Millenarians or Fifth Monarchy men of the 17th century were sufficiently numerous to occupy a place in the history of Milton's times. It appears from this treatise that he himself was far from holding the extravagant and fanatical opinions which characterised the greater part of this sect." He held, in common with certain of the Fathers and later theologians, the belief expressed in the sentence quoted above. It is glanced at in VII. 157—61, and inspires, as the editor of the Doctrine points out, one of the finest passages of his prose, viz. the close of the treatise Of Reformation in England.

373. Cf. the picture of Dalila in S. A. 728, "Like a fair flower surcharged with dew, she weeps."

379, 380. Luke i. 28.

383. capital, deadly, fatal; cf. "my capital secret," S. A. 394. Some editors think that in each passage there is a quibble on this and the other sense—"pertaining to the head," Lat. caput. The word is always a dissyllable, cap'tal, in M.

386—88. Cf. P. R. i. 173—75, where the song is raised in Heaven:

"Victory and triumph to the Son of God,
Now entering his great duel, not of arms,
But to vanquish by wisdom hellish wiles!"

392. i.e. 'whose fall did not disable him from giving thee, etc.'

393. recure, heal; not elsewhere in M., but common in Elizabethan E. Cf. Venus and Adonis, 465, "A smile recures the wounding of a frown." So unrecuring = 'incurable,' Titus Andronicus, III. i. 90.

401. appaid, satisfied, paid; often in Spenser; cf. The Faerie Queene, II. 12. 28, "For she is inly nothing ill apayd." Shakespeare has it once—Lucrece, 914.

403, 404. "Love is the fulfilling of the law," Rom. xiii. 10; and verse 8.

406. "It is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree," Gal. iii. 13, the reference being to Deut. xxi. 23; that passage, however, seems to imply crucifixion after death, i.e. as a mark of disgrace. It was not only among the Jews that crucifixion was held in the utmost horror; many passages show that the Romans regarded it as the greatest of degradations—a servile supplicium from which citizens and even freedmen were exempt. See Juvenal VI. 219.

410. to save; probably dependent on believe: 'who shall believe his merits—not their own works, though done in conformity with the law—to save them.' The passage is commonly explained so, but it is obviously very awkward, as the verb believe has already taken two different constructions.

415—17. "The enemies of Adam were the law that was against him, and the sins of all mankind as springing originally from him, and therefore in some sense chargeable upon him. The author, in this passage, alludes to Col. ii. 14" (Newton).

420, 421. Romans vi. 9.

424. thy ransom; so the First and Second Eds.; "Adam is here spoken of, not as a single person, ...[but] as one who was representative of the whole human race" (Pearce). Cf. again 428. Many later texts change thy to the.

427. faith...works. Cf. XI. 64.

434. a death like sleep; the "temporal death" of the redeemed is not an everlasting state, but a "sleep" from which there shall be an awakening (1 Cor. xv. 51). Milton discusses the question in The Christian Doctrine, I. 13, from which it is clear that by "temporal death" he signified the death of the body.

The reading death-like sleep is a mere tampering with the text.

435. wafting, passage; cf. II. 1042.

442. in the profuent stream. "It was the poet's opinion that baptism should take place in running water" (Keightley). The passage in which M. expressed this view occurs in his treatise on The Christian Doctrine, I. 28, in which he speaks of baptism as a sacrament "wherein the bodies of believers who engage themselves to pureness of life, are immersed in running water [in profuentem aquam], to signify their regeneration by the Holy Spirit, and their union with Christ."

446—65. Cf. Gal. iii. 7, 16; Rom. iv. 16; Colos. ii. 15; Ephes. iv. 8—10, i. 20, 21; Luke xxi. 27, xxiv. 26; John v. 28, 29; Rev. xi. 18, xx. 2.

452. Scan triumphing, as in I. 123; so sometimes in Shakespeare.

454. Prince of air. This title of Satan is illustrated by P. R. I. 39—47, where he summons an assembly of his followers "in mid air," and addresses them thus:

"O ancient Powers of Air, and this wide World;
(For much more willingly I mention Air,
This our old conquest, than remember Hell,
Our hated habitation) well ye know," etc.

See Appendix, p. 676.

458—63. Cf. III. 323 et seq.

460. "To judge the quick and the dead," Apostles' Creed.

467. period, end, conclusion. "The period of thy tyranny approacheth," 1 Henry VI. IV. 2. 17.

477—93. Many texts are alluded to: e.g. Rom. v. 20; 2 Cor. iv. 15; Luke xxiv. 49; Gal. v. 6 ("faith which worketh by love"); John xiv. 18, 23, xv. 26, xvi. 3; Ephes. vi. 11 ("put on the whole armour of God"), 13 and 16 ("to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked"); and Ps. lvi. 11.

495. Cf. S. A. 663, 664.

497—502. Acts ii.

505. Cf. S. A. 597, "My race of glory run, and race of shame." It is St Paul's favourite metaphor of athletes competing on the stadium (Heb. xii. 1; 1 Cor. ix. 24).

507—11. "For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock," Acts xx. 29. There is the same allusion in IV. 193 (see note); and in the Sonnet on Cromwell he speaks of the "hireling wolves, whose Gospel is their maw."

This passage (507—37), though it nominally traces (from Milton's point of view) the history of the Church from Apostolic times, is perhaps primarily directed against the Church of England; similar charges are scattered passim through Milton's prose-works. A close parallel is the long piece (1113—31) of invective, thinly disguised under pastoral allegory, in Lycidas. Time had intensified Milton's opinions.

We have seen in many places Milton's anti-ecclesiastical bias; a fresh and characteristic illustration has been noted recently by Professor Firth. He shows that in his History of Britain Milton deliberately "avoided the ecclesiastical side of British and Saxon history," and refused to supplement the meagre political records at his disposal by "drawing upon the fund of information which his authorities supplied about the religious life of the times. The development of a scientific interest in the monuments and institutions of the past was one of the characteristics of 17th century England, but so far as it showed itself in researches into ecclesiastical antiquities Milton took no interest in the movement."

511. M. often taunts the clergy with avarice and desire of preferment. Cf. An Apology for Smectymnuus, "they, for lucre, use to creep into the Church undiscernibly," P. W. III. 164.

511—14. In his prose-works M. frequently depreciates the writings of the Fathers: the "traditions" of the Church as to doctrine and forms, are in his eyes "a broken reed" (Areopagitica).

superstitions; see III. 451—54, note.

516, 517. to join secular power. "On this subject he had been particularly copious in his tract Of Reformation in England" (Todd).

Compare Dante's condemnation of the usurpation of temporal power by the Papacy; see the Purgatorio, xvi.

519, 520. In The Likeliest Means to Remove Hirelings out of the Church M. says, "the Scriptures (are) translated into every vulgar tongue, as being held, in main matters of belief and salvation, plain and easy to the poorest: and such no less than their teachers have the Spirit to guide them in all truth" (P. W. III. 24).

522—24. laws which; laws which are neither laid down in the Scripture, nor dictated by the natural instincts of good men towards piety. In The Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce (preface) Milton speaks of "a law not only written by Moses, but characterized in us by nature," P. W. III. 182. See Jeremiah xxxi. 33.

525, 526. "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty," 2 Cor. iii. 17. Cf. The Christian Doctrine, I. 27, "liberty must be considered as belonging in an especial manner to the Gospel, and as consorting therewith" (P. W. IV. 398).

527. "The temple of God is holy, which temple ye are," 1 Cor. iii. 17. Cf. the fine allusion in Macbeth, II. 3. 73. So in Comus, 460, 461.

532, 533. John iv. 23.

534, 535. Showing Milton's dislike of ceremonies in worship.

539. Romans viii. 22.

539—41. There is an underlying political reference: M. never hesitates to foreshadow the ultimate overthrow of the Royalists against whom he and his party had struggled. We have a similar, but clearer, attack on his enemies in P. R. II. 42—48. See also XI. 808—18, note.

540. Newton noted that in Acts iii. 19, "when the times of refreshing shall come," the Gk. word ἀνάψυξις, translated by "refreshing," is rendered by respiratio in one of the Latin Versions of the Bible (though the Vulgate has refrigerium), and has the sense respiratio in the Septuagint in Exodus viii. 15.

545—47. Matt. xxiv. 30; 2 Thess. i. 7, 8. See the Nativity Ode, 163, 164, and the end of the treatise Of Reformation in England, in which M. looks forward to "that day, when thou, the eternal and shortly-expected King, shalt open the clouds to judge the several kingdoms of the world," P. W. II. 419; also The Christian Doctrine, I. 33.

547—51. Cf. III. 333—35, XI. 900, 901. "This notion of the Heavens and Earth being renewed after the conflagration, and made the habitation of Angels and just men made perfect, was very pleasing to Milton" (Newton).

554, 555. The time measured by the Archangel is that during which this world lasts.

565—68. Ps. cxlv. 9; Rom. xii. 21, "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good"; and 1 Cor. i. 27. "There is the sense of Scripture, if not the very words" (Newton).

569, 570. Cf. IX. 31, 32 and S. A. 654.

571. Mors janua vitæ.

581—84. Alluding to 2 Pet. i. 5—7, 1 Cor. xiii.

582. answerable, corresponding with; cf. IX. 20, S. A. 615, and the Areopagitica, "a virtue answerable to your highest actions."

583—85. love...charity. Cf. the Tetrachordon, "Christ having... interpreted the fulfilling of all through charity, hath in that respect set us over law, in the free custody of his love," P. W. III. 323.

587. The thought is anticipated in IV. 75, where Satan says of himself, "Which way I fly is hell: myself am hell." Cf. too IV. 20—23. It is one of those world-thoughts which occur independently to many minds. This for instance is a close parallel from Fitzgerald's Omar Khayyám:

"I sent my soul through the Invisible,
Some letter of that After-life to spell:
And by-and-by my soul returned to me,
And answered, 'I myself am Heav'n and Hell.'"

Cf. also the famous lines, I. 254, 255.

588, 589. this top of speculation, this hill whence we have looked as from a watch-tower (Lat. specula). Cf. the description of it in XI. 377—80, and P. R. IV. 236, "Look once more, ere we leave this specular mount." Shakespeare uses speculation = 'the act of watching,' Henry V. IV. 2. 31.

592, 593. See XI. 120—22.

602. "And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years: and he died," Gen. v. 5.

608. Contrast the Argument of the book where Adam "wakens Eve."

611. Cf. Iliad I. 63, καὶ γάρ τ' ὄναρ ἐκ Διὸς ἔσται; "the application is very elegant in this place, as Adam's was a vision, and Eve's a dream; and God was in the one, as well as in the other" (Newton). See the passage from Cowley cited ante (120, 121, note).

615. Newton pointed out the allusion to Vergil, Ecl. III. 52, in mora non erit ulla. Eve has laid to heart the words of Michael, XI. 290—92.

627. station, post of watching; Lat statio, a military term = 'a picket, guard.'

629, 630. M. used the simile in IX. 179, 180, comparing Satan's stealthy course through the garden to "a black mist low-creeping."

marsh, marsh ; an old word, said to be used often in the translations of Ariosto and Tasso, and by Spenser and Drayton.

632. advanced, raised aloft, like a flag ; cf. v. 588. Shakespeare often applies it to a sword, perhaps by metaphor ; cf. Coriolanus, I. 6. 61, "Filling the air with swords advanced and darts."

633. The allusion (Genesis iii. 24) occurs in The Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce, 13, where he is arguing against those who condemn divorce because it did not belong to the earliest times of Jewish history : "But still they fly back to the primitive institution, and would have us re-enter paradise against the sword that guards it" (P. W. III. 243). Cf. too Marvell's lines (with their happy reminiscences of Richard II. II. 1. 40 et seq.) in his beautiful country-poem, Upon Appleton House, written not long after the Civil War :

"Oh thou, that dear and happy isle,
The garden of the world erewhile,
Thou Paradise of the four seas,
Which Heaven planted us to please,
But, to exclude the world, did guard
With watery, if not flaming sword—
What luckless apple did we taste,
To make us mortal, and thee waste?"

634. fierce as a comet. Dunster observed that the simile may be an echo of Sylvester's Du Bartas, which speaks of the entrance to Eden as guarded by

"A waving sword, whose body shined bright,
Like flaming comet in the midst of night."

In II. 708—11 M. compares the figure of Satan, at his meeting with Death, to a comet. which ; referring to the sword.

635. vapour, heat ; cf. Horace's siderum vapor, Epodes III. 15. Libya is typical of a hot clime ; for the position of air between the two qualifying words, see XI. 162. adust, scorched, Lat. adustus. Bowle noted that Tasso (VII. 52) describes a comet shining per l'aria adusta. M. often mentions Tasso in his prose.

636. parch ; M. uses it of the drying, withering effect of either cold (cf. II. 594, 595, Lycidas, 13) or heat—as here.

637, 638. A reminiscence of Gen. xix. 16, "And while he (Lot) lingered, the men laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife...and they brought him forth." The destruction of the cities of the plain was one of the themes on which Milton thought of founding a poem.

638—40. the eastern gate. See XI. 118—20, and cf. the account of the gate, IV. 542—48.

640. subjected, lying below, Lat. subjectus; so the adjective subject in Spenser; cf. The Faerie Queene, I. II. 19, and III. 7. 4.

643. Most editors explain brand to mean 'sword,' a sense it often bore in O. E., from the flashing of a sword-blade. Cf. Spenser, The Faerie Queene, v. I. 8, "When so he list in wrath lift up his steely brand." The old use of brand = 'sword' is revived in Tennyson; cf. the Morte d'Arthur, where the word is used several times of King Arthur's sword Excalibur, e.g. "So flash'd and fell the brand Excalibur." Curiously, brand = 'fire-brand' does not occur anywhere in Milton's poetry, except in the MS. of Comus, 384, where "the noontyde brand" is a synonym for "the mid-day sun," afterwards substituted.

646. Editors compare Richard II. I. 3. 206, 207 (Mowbray's parting words):

"Farewell, my liege. Now no way can I stray;
Save back to England, all the world's my way."

648, 649. One of the subjects entered in the Cambridge MSS., under the heading "tragedies," is "Adam in Banishment."

This couplet has been much discussed since Addison proposed to omit it on the inadequate grounds that the lines strike a note of sadness, whereas an epic is supposed to require a cheerful ending, and that they are less impressive than the preceding couplet. Peck proposed to transpose 646, 647 and 648, 649, making the poem conclude with "and Providence their guide." Bentley, by way of crown to his emendatory toils, composed a distich, "as close as may be to the author's words, and entirely agreeable to his scheme." But the lines stand in the First and Second Eds., and are therefore as authentic as any other part of the poem; and, apart from their entirely Miltonic style, their calm beauty is appropriate to the feeling of mingled resignation and reluctance with which we may suppose that the exiles left their Paradise. Pearce justly notes that this feeling, indeed, corresponds precisely with the injunction (XI. 117) laid on Michael. Shakespearian tragedy usually ends on a quiet note.

APPENDIX.

A.

THE COSMOLOGY OF PARADISE LOST.

PARTS of Paradise Lost are not easily understood without some knowledge of Milton's conception of the Universe. I shall attempt therefore to set forth some of the main aspects of his cosmology: to explain, in fact, what he means by constantly recurrent terms such as 'Empyrean,' 'Chaos,' 'Spheres,' and the like.

It is in book v. that he carries us back farthest in respect of time. The events described by Raphael (from line 563, onwards) precede not only the Creation of the World, but also the expulsion of the rebels from Heaven. And at this era, when the seeds of discord are being sown, we hear of two divisions of Space—Heaven and Chaos: Heaven lying above Chaos.

In book vi. the contest foreshadowed in book v. has begun. Now a third region is mentioned—Hell (vi. 53—55): a gloomy region carved out of the nethermost depths of Chaos. Its remoteness from Heaven may be inferred from i. 73, 74. Milton's working hypothesis, then—his general conception of space and its partitionment prior to the Creation—may be expressed roughly thus: above<sup>1</sup>, Heaven; beneath, Hell; between, a great gulf, Chaos.

Let us see what he has to say concerning each.

Heaven, or the Empyrean<sup>2</sup>, is the abode of the Deity and His angelic subjects. It is a vast region, but not infinite. In x. 380 Milton speaks of its "empyrean bounds"; in ii. 1049 of its "battlements"<sup>3</sup>; in vi. 860 of its "crystal wall." These fence Heaven in <sup>1</sup> i.e. from the point of view of this World, the position of which we shall see.

<sup>2</sup> The terms are synonymous. Empyrean = Lat. empyreus, from Gk. ἐμπυρος. The notion was that the Empyrean was formed of the element of fire (πῦρ). Compare Batman vpon Bartholome (1582), a work which is a sort of encyclopædia of the beliefs and "science" (so to speak) current in the Elizabethan time:

"Cælum Empyreum is the first and highest heaven, the place of Angells, the Country and habitation of blessed men. And hath that name Empyreum from Pir, that is fire...not for burning, but for light and shining...and is the highest dwelling-place of God" (p. 122).

<sup>3</sup> Cf. Lucretius' flammantia mœnia mundi (l. 74) and Gray's "flaming bounds of Space" (Progress of Poesy).

from Chaos. When Satan voyages through space, in quest of the new-created World, he kens far off the crystal line of light that radiates from the empyreal bulwarks, marking where runs the severance betwixt Heaven and Chaos (II. 1034—37). In the wall of Heaven are the “everlasting gates” (VII. 565) opening on to Chaos (v. 253—56, VII. 205—209). The shape of Heaven Milton does not determine (II. 1048); perhaps it is a square (x. 381). Its internal configuration and appearance he describes in language which reminds us of some lines (574—76) in book v. May not the Earth, says Raphael,

“Be but the shadow of Heaven, and things therein

Each to other like, more than on Earth is thought”?

Milton expands this idea, and developing to the utmost the symbolical, objective presentment of the New Jerusalem in the Revelation, depicts a Heaven scarce distinguishable from an ideal Earth<sup>1</sup>. In fact, his Heaven and his Garden of Eden have much in common; so that Satan exclaims, “O Earth, how like to Heaven!” (ix. 99). Thus the Heavenly landscape (if I may describe it in Miltonic language) has its vales, wood-covered heights and plains (vi. 70, 639—46); it is watered by living streams (v. 652); and fair with trees and flowers<sup>2</sup>—immortal amaranth and celestial roses (III. 353—64), and vines (v. 635). Daylight and twilight and “dim Night” are known there (v. 627—29, 645, 685, vi. 1—15). And soft winds fan the angels as they sleep (v. 654, 655).

These angelic beings, divided according to tradition into nine Orders, each with particular duties, perform their ministries and solemn rites (VII. 149) in the courts of God (v. 650) and at the high temple of Heaven (VII. 148). Their worship is offered under forms which recall, now the ritual of the Temple-services of Israel, now the inspired visions of St John. They celebrate the Deity who dwells invisible, throned inaccessible (III. 377) on the holy mount (vi. 5), howbeit omnipresent, as omnipotent, throughout Heaven and all space: round whose throne there rests a radiance of excessive brightness, at which even Seraphim, highest of Hierarchies, veil their eyes (III. 375—82).

It has been objected that Milton’s picture is too material. But he himself takes special pains to remind us that the external imagery under which he represents his concepts is symbolical, not literal—adopted merely as a means of conveying some impression of that which is intrinsically indescribable. The truth, I believe, is that he has applied to Heaven the descriptions of ‘Paradise’ in the apocalyptic literature of the first centuries of Christianity. The Revelation of Peter (dating perhaps from early in the second century A.D.) affords an illustration of these descriptions. St Peter is represented as asking our Lord where are the souls of the righteous dead—"of what sort is the world wherein they are and possess glory? And the Lord showed him [me] a very great space outside this world shining excessively with light, and the air that was there illuminated with the rays of the sun, and the earth itself blooming with unfading flowers, and full of spices and fair-flowering plants, incorruptible and bearing a blessed fruit: and so strong was the perfume that it was borne even to us<sup>1</sup> from thence. And the dwellers in that place were clad in the raiment of angels of light, and their raiment was like their land: and angels encircled them<sup>2</sup>."

<sup>1</sup> The Earth deteriorates after the fall of man (x. 651 et seq.).

<sup>2</sup> This is a descriptive detail most conspicuous in early Christian apocalyptic works.

The second region, for which Chaos seems the simplest title, is also variously called "the wasteful Deep" (II. 961, VI. 862), "the utter Deep" (VI. 716), "the Abyss," "the vast (or "main") Abyss" (I. 21, III. 83, VII. 211, 234). Here rules the God of Chaos with his consort Night (II. 959-63). According to the long description in book II. 890 et seq., this region is an illimitable ocean, composed of the embryon atoms (semina rerum) whereof all substances may be formed—whereof Hell and the World are afterwards formed. It is a vast agglomeration of matter in its primal state, "neither sea, nor shore, nor air, nor fire<sup>3</sup>." Here prevails eternal anarchy of storm and wind and wave and stunning sounds. In VII. 210, 211, the Messiah and His host stand at the open gate of Heaven and look forth on to Chaos; and what they behold is an Abyss "Outrageous as a sea, dark, wasteful, wild."

The creation of Hell, we may perhaps assume, just precedes the fall of the angels<sup>4</sup>. It has been prepared for their punishment when,

<sup>1</sup> i.e. St Peter and the other disciples who are with our Lord on the Mount of Olives. See The Gospel according to Peter, and the Revelation of Peter (Cambridge University Press ed., 1892), pp. 48, 49.

<sup>2</sup> Dr James (whose version I have just quoted) gives a similar passage from a rather later work, the History of Barlaam and Josephat, wherein the Paradise of the just is revealed in a vision as "a plain of vast extent, flourishing with fair and very sweet-smelling flowers, where he saw plants of all manner of kinds, loaded with strange and wondrous fruits, most pleasant to the eye and desirable to touch. And the leaves of the trees made clear music to a soft breeze and sent forth a delicate fragrance, whereof none could tire...And through this wondrous and vast plain [he passed] to a city which gleamed with an unspeakable brightness and had its walls of translucent gold, and its battlements of stones the like of which none has ever seen. And a light from above...filled all the streets thereof: and certain winged hosts, each to itself a light, abode there singing in melodies never heard by mortal ears."

<sup>3</sup> Cf. the description of Chaos in Spenser's Hymne in Honour of Love, 57-24.

<sup>4</sup> Cf. the English Faust-book (1592) where Faustus asks when Hell was made and Mephistophiles replies—"Faustus, thou shalt know, that before the fall of my lord Lucifer was no hell, but even then was hell ordained" (Thoms' English Prose Romances, III. 185).

after the proclamation in v. 600—15, they have revealed their rebellious spirit. To form Hell a part of the abyss has been taken. In II. 1002, 1003, Chaos complains that his realm has been encroached upon by Hell—"stretching far and wide beneath." Round Hell runs a wall of fire (I. 61, 62); overhead spreads a fiery vault or cope (I. 298, 345, 346). At the descent of the angels Hell lies open to receive them (VI. 50—55); then the roof closes (VI. 874, 875), and they are prisoners. Henceforth the only outlet from Hell into Chaos is through certain gates, the charge whereof is assigned to Sin (II. 643 et seq.). At her side, as protector, stands Death, ready with his dart to meet all comers (II. 853—55). To please Satan (her sire), Sin opens the gates. Afterwards she cannot shut them; and all who will may pass to and fro between Hell and Chaos. Later on (when the bridge from Hell has been made) this change becomes terribly significant. As to the inside of Hell, we hear of a pool of fire (I. 52, 221); dry land that burns like fire (I. 227—29); and drear regions of excessive cold and heat, intersected by rivers (II. 574 et seq.). Here again the picture is largely traditional, owing, no doubt, much to Dante, who in turn owed much to the apocalyptic descriptions before mentioned.

Immediately after the expulsion of Satan the World is created (VII. 131 et seq.). By "the World" is meant the whole Universe of Earth, seas, stellar bodies and the framework wherein they are set. The Son of God goes forth into the abyss (VII. 218 et seq.), and with golden compass marks out the limits of this World; so that Chaos is again despoiled of part of his realm (as he laments, II. 1001—1006). The new World is a globe or hollow sphere, suspended in the abyss, and at its topmost point fastened by a golden chain (see II. 1051, note) to Heaven. In II. 1004—1006 Chaos tells Satan of this Universe:

"another world,

Hung o'er my realm, linked in a golden chain

To that side Heaven from whence your legions fell."

The length of this chain, i.e. the distance of the World from the Emyrean, is not stated, I believe; but the distance was not—comparatively—very great (II. 1051—53, VII. 618).

Also, between the globe (again, on its upper side, i.e. that nearest to the Emyrean) and the gate of Heaven there stretches a golden stair; used by good angels for descent and ascent when they are despatched to Earth on any duty such as that which Raphael discharges in books v.—VIII. This stair (suggested by Jacob's dream?) is not always let down (III. 501—18). And hard by the point where the golden stair touches the surface of the globe there is—in later times, after the fall of man—another stair (or rather bridge), which leads, not upward to the Empyrean, but downward to Hell: i.e. it extends over the portion of Chaos that intervenes between Hell and the World (II. 1024—33, x. 282 et seq.). This bridge<sup>1</sup>, the work of Sin and Death, is used by evil angels when they would come from Hell (its gates being open) to Earth—"to tempt or punish mortals" (II. 1032).

Hence a good angel and an evil, visiting mankind simultaneously, the one descending the golden stair, the other ascending the bridge, will meet at this point of the surface of the globe. And to enter the globe, i.e. to get through its outer surface to the inside, each must pass through the same aperture in the surface, and descend by the same passage into the interior: as Milton explains in book III. There he describes how Satan journeys through Chaos, till he reaches and walks<sup>2</sup> on the outer surface of the World (III. 418—30). But how to pass to the interior? The surface is impenetrable, and there seems to be no inlet. Then suddenly the reflection of the golden stair which chances to be let down directs his steps to the point where the stair and the bridge come into contact with the globe, and here he finds what he seeks—an aperture in the surface by which he can look down into the interior. Further, there is at this aperture a broad passage plunging right down into the World—being, really, a continuation of the golden stair. Thus Satan, standing on the bottom step of the stair, and looking straight up, sees overhead the gate of Heaven; and looking straight down, sees the interior of the globe, leagues beneath (III. 526 et seq.).

Similarly on the seventh day of the Creation the angels, gazing from Heaven's gate down the stair and down the broad passage which continues the stair, see, as Satan did, into the new-made World (VII. 617—19):

"not far, founded in view

On the clear hyaline, the glassy sea<sup>3</sup>."

In short, at the point in the surface of the globe nearest to the Empyrean, there is a choice of ways: the stair leading to Heaven; the bridge to Hell; and the broad passage to the interior of the World:

<sup>1</sup> In the English Faust-book, 1592 (Thoms' English Prose Romances, III. 194), Mephistophiles says: "We have also with us in hell a ladder, reaching of exceeding highth, as though the top of the same would touch the heaven, to which the damned ascend to seek the blessing of God, but through their infidelity, when they are at very highest degree, they fall down again into their former miseries." With the last part of this extract cf. P. L. III. 111. 484 et seq. It seems to me highly probable that Milton studied the Faust-book (which was immensely popular), as well as Marlowe's dramatic adaptation of it; see II. 596—603, v. 671, notes.

<sup>2</sup> i.e. like a fly moving up a lamp-globe (Masson).

<sup>3</sup> i.e. the Crystalline Sphere.

"in little space
 The confines met of empyrean Heaven
 And of this World, and on the left hand Hell
 With long reach interposed; three several ways,
 In sight, to each of these three places led<sup>1</sup>."

And descending the broad passage what would an angel find in the interior of the globe? What is this globe as Milton, following the astronomy of his<sup>2</sup> time, has described it?

The globe as then conceived may best be likened (in Plato's comparison<sup>3</sup>) to one of those puzzles or boxes in which are contained a number of boxes of gradually lessening size: remove the first, and you shall find another inside, rather smaller: remove the second, and you shall come on a third, still smaller: and so on, till you reach the centre—the kernel, as it were, round which the different boxes were but successive shells. Now, of the globe of the World the Earth (they said) is the kernel (is it not often called 'the centre<sup>4</sup>?'); and—a stationary body itself—it is encased by numerous shells or Spheres: the number of the Spheres being a subject of dispute and varying in the different astronomical systems. Milton, accepting<sup>5</sup> for the purposes of his epic the Ptolemaic system as expanded by the astronomer Alphonsus X. of Castille, recognises ten Spheres. A Sphere, it should be noted, is merely a circular region of space—not necessarily of solid matter. Indeed, of the ten Spheres only one, the Primum Mobile, appears in Milton's description to consist of some material substance. Seven of them are the Spheres of the planets, i.e. the orbits in which the planets severally move.

<sup>1</sup> X. 320—24.

<sup>2</sup> I do not mean to imply that the Ptolemaic system was still generally believed in at the time when P. L. was published, but that it satisfied Elizabethan writers, of whom Milton was the last.

<sup>3</sup> "On the slowness with which the Copernican theory was diffused, and especially Bacon's opposition to it, see Whewell's History of the Inductive Sciences, I. 404—12, ed. 1847. Copernicus died in 1543, and his opinions were introduced into England mainly through Giordano Bruno, who came over about 1583" (note in Clarendon Press ed. of The Advancement of Learning, p. 294).

<sup>4</sup> See the Myth of Er in the Republic 617, 618; and the note on Arcades, 64, where the passage is translated.

<sup>5</sup> Cf. perhaps I. 686; and certainly The Winter's Tale, II. I. 102, Troilus and Cressida, I. 3. 85.

<sup>6</sup> He was evidently familiar with the Copernican system (cf. IV. 592—97, VIII. 130—40, notes); and the question has been asked why he did not follow it in the poem. The Copernican theory was new, without a scrap of literary association and with no poetic terminology: whereas the Ptolemaic view and its delightful fictions as to the Spheres, their harmonies, and the like, had become a tradition of literature, expressed in terms that recalled Marlowe and Shakespeare and Jonson and the sacri vates of English verse. To surrender this poetic heritage merely out of deference to science had been impossible pedantry—a perverse concession to the cold philosophy that "empties the haunted air and unweaves the rainbow" (Lamia).

The order of the Spheres, which fit one within the other<sup>1</sup>, is, if we start from the Earth as the stationary centre<sup>2</sup> of the Universe, as follows: first, the Spheres of the planets successively—the Moon, Mercury, Venus, the Sun, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn; then, outside the last of these (i.e. Saturn), the Firmament or Cælum Stellatum, in which are set the 'fixed stars'; then, outside the Firmament, the Crystalline Sphere; and last, the Primum Mobile enclosing all the others. Compare the famous lines (481—83) in book III. describing the passage of the souls of the departed from Earth to Heaven:

"They pass the planets seven, and pass the fixed,
And that crystalline sphere whose balance weighs
The trepidation talked, and that first moved."

It remains to note three or four points in these lines. Milton treats the Sun and Moon as planets (v. 171—77, x. 651—58). Compare Troilus and Cressida, I. 3. 89, "the glorious planet Sol," and Antony and Cleopatra, v. 2. 240, 241:

"now the fleeting moon
No planet is of mine."

The 'fixed stars' are referred to four times in the poem—but only once (v. 176) with the word 'star' added: in the other places (III. 481, x. 661) they are called simply "the fixed" or "fixed" (v. 621). Though they are unmoved their Sphere revolves round the Earth, moving from East to West, completing a revolution in twenty-four hours, and carrying with it the seven inner Spheres<sup>3</sup>. The rapid motion of this Sphere is glanced at in v. 176 ("their orb<sup>4</sup> that flies"). The Crystalline Sphere and the Primum Mobile were not included in the original Ptolemaic system. They were added later, to explain certain phenomena which the earlier astronomers had not observed, and for which their theories offered no explanation. Thus the supposed swaying or "trepidation" of the Crystalline Sphere was held to be the cause of the precession of the equinoxes. This Sphere is described as a vast expanse of waters (see the note on VII. 261—74). It encircles the eight inner Spheres. The original notion may perhaps be traced to the waters "above the firmament" in Genesis i. 7. Compare the picture in VII. 270, 271 of the World

"Built on circumfluous waters calm, in wide Crystalline ocean."

<sup>1</sup> Cf. Marlowe's Faustus, vi. 38, 39:

"As are the elements, such are the spheres, Mutually folded in each other's orb."

<sup>2</sup> Cf. VIII. 32, "the sedentary Earth"; it is "self-balanced" (VII. 242) = "upon her centre poised" (v. 579).

<sup>3</sup> These have separate motions of their own.

<sup>4</sup> 'Orb' and 'Sphere' are interchangeable terms—when it suits Milton.

The main purpose that this "ocean" serves is to protect the Earth from the evil "influences" of Chaos; those "fierce extremes" of temperature which might penetrate through the outside shell (the Primum Mobile) and "distemper" the whole fabric of the Universe, did not this wall of waters interpose (VII. 269—73). The whole idea is well illustrated by the following passage from a curious old work entitled The Treasure of Auncient and Moderne Times (1613):

"Aboue the Firmament, is the Heauen Christaline, or watry, which learned men are of the minde, that it was created by God aboue the other Heauens: to the ende that it might mitigate the great heat which the other Heauens acquired by their motions, and by the Stars being in them."

Keightley says that this Sphere was also known as the "Glacial."

Last comes the Primum Mobile<sup>1</sup>, the "first<sup>2</sup> convex" of the World, i.e. the outside case of our box or puzzle. It is made, as we saw, of hard matter; but for its crust of substance Chaos would break in on the World, and Darkness make inroads (III. 419—21). The first moved itself, it communicates motion to the nine inner Spheres. In Elizabethan literature allusions to it are not infrequent: we will conclude by giving three. Compare Spenser, Hymne of Heavenly Beautie:

"these heavens still by degrees arize,
Until they come to their first Movers bound,
That in his mightie compasse doth comprize,
And carry all the rest with him around";

and Marlowe, Faustus<sup>3</sup>:

"He views the clouds, and planets, and the stars,
The tropic zones, and quarters of the sky,
From the bright circle of the horned moon
Even to the height of Primum Mobile";

and Bacon, Of Seditions and Troubles: "for the motions of the greatest persons in a government ought to be as the motions of the planets under Primum Mobile."

<sup>1</sup> Dante's primo giro (Purgatorio, l. 15); see also the Paradiso, l. 123 and XIII. 24, where he makes the Primum Mobile represent the swiftest motion, and xxx. 107. He uses the expression "the First Mover" (lo Motor primo) in a different sense, viz. as a synonym of "The Almighty" (Purgatorio, xxv. 70).

<sup>2</sup> III. 419. To Satan coming from Chaos it is the first; in our calculation, as we started from the Earth, it is the last.

<sup>3</sup> Scene vi. chorus, 5—18, in the third Quarto, 1616; the passage is not in the two earlier editions of 1604 and 1609 (Ward).

B.

ON THE CHARACTER OF MILTON'S SATAN.

I have reserved for this Appendix notice of some points in Milton's delineation of the character of Satan. First, as to the rank which Milton assigns to him before his revolt, and the cause of that revolt. Milton speaks of Satan as an archangel<sup>1</sup>—"if not the first Archangel" (v. 660): that is, he is inclined to give Satan pre-eminence over all angelic beings. But this pre-eminence is not emphasised so much as we might have expected.

The immediate cause of the rebellion in Heaven is the proclamation that all should worship the Messiah as their Head (v. 600—15). Satan resents the command, conceiving himself "impaired" (v. 665) thereby; and he makes its pretended injustice a means of drawing away a third part of the angels from their allegiance. They are equal, he says, to the Messiah: self-begotten, not created: not liable to pay worship; and so, playing on their pride, he wins them (v. 772—802, 853—69). Meantime, in his own heart an even stronger motive is at work; to wit, ambition to be himself equal to the Deity—nay, superior. He not only disclaims submission to the Son: he strives "against the throne and monarchy" (l. 42) of the Almighty Himself; and it is as the foe rather of the Father than of the Son that the great archangel is set before us in Paradise Lost.

Touching both matters there was much tradition, whereof it may be interesting to cite two or three illustrations from popular works<sup>2</sup> with which Milton is likely to have been familiar. To take, for example, the English Faust-book: Faustus asks: "But how came lord and master Lucifer<sup>3</sup> to have so great a fall from Heaven? Mephistophiles answered, My lord Lucifer was a fair angel, created of God as immortal, and being placed in the Seraphims<sup>4</sup>, which are above the Cherubims, he would have presumed upon the Throne of God...upon this presumption the Lord cast him down headlong, and where (i.e. whereas) before he was an angel of light, now dwells in darkness<sup>5</sup>."

<sup>1</sup> Contrast the first extract from the Faust-book, later on.

<sup>2</sup> I choose three works each of which may, I think, be regarded as a résumé of many of the current traditions of demonology. Two of the books—the Faust-book, 1592, and Scot's Discourse on Devils, 1584—were extremely popular, and personally I believe that Milton had studied both. Scot devotes several chapters to "Lucifer and his fall." The third work—Heywood's Hierarchie, 1635—is very serviceable to an editor of Paradise Lost.

<sup>3</sup> A common name of Satan.

<sup>4</sup> The highest of the Hierarchies. We may note the forms 'Seraphims,' 'Cherubims.'

<sup>5</sup> Thoms' English Prose Romances, III, 184.

Later on Faustus returns to the subject, enquiring "in what estimation his lord Lucifer was, when he was in favour with God": also touching his form and shape: to which Mephistophiles replies, "My lord Lucifer...was at the first an angel of God, yea he was so of God ordained for shape, pomp, authority, worthiness, and dwelling, that he far exceeded all the other creatures of God, and so illuminated that he far surpassed the brightness of the sun, and all the stars...but when he began to be high minded, proud and so presumptuous, that he would usurp the seat of God's Majesty, then was he banished<sup>1</sup>."

The Faust-book, it will be seen, agrees with Milton on both points; while, as regards one of them—Satan's rank—it is more explicit than Paradise Lost. Equally explicit is Heywood's Hierarchie of the Blessed Angels (1635). There (p. 336) we read that of the angels Lucifer was first-created and chief:

"As he might challenge a priority
In his Creation, so aboue the rest
A supereminence, as first and best."

Heywood mentions Michael, Raphael, and Gabriel, and adds (p. 337) that great as they were,

"Yet aboue these was Lucifer instated, Honor'd, exalted, and much celebrated."

Reginald Scot goes even further, remarking<sup>2</sup> that according to the teaching of some divines Satan even after his fall exceeded in power any of the angelic host. It seems to me therefore something strange that Milton did not unequivocally invest Satan with superiority over all the angels.

As to Satan's motive Heywood<sup>3</sup> differs from Milton, making jealousy of mankind the cause; while Scot writes<sup>4</sup>: "Our schoolemen differ much in the cause of Lucifer's fall [some alleging one thing, some another, while] others saie, that his condemnation grew hereupon, for that he challenged the place of the Messias." This accords more with Paradise Lost, v. 661—65.

For Milton Satan is the type of pride. The type was already fixed. As an epithet of Lucifer 'proud' had passed into a proverb. Thus Gower said<sup>5</sup>:

"For Lucifer with him that felle
Bar pride with him into helle.
There was pride of to grete cost
Whan he for pride hath heven lost";

and Marlowe<sup>6</sup>:

<sup>1</sup> Thomas, III. 187.

<sup>2</sup> Nicholson's ed., p. 425.

<sup>3</sup> p. 339. <sup>4</sup> p. 423.

<sup>5</sup> Confessio Amantis, book 1.

<sup>6</sup> Faustus, III. 67—69.

"Faust. How comes it, then, that he is prince of devils?

Meph. O, by aspiring pride and insolence;

For which God threw him from the face of heaven";

and Greene<sup>1</sup>:

"proud Lucifer fell from the heavens,

. . . . .

Lucifer and his proud-hearted friends

Were thrown into the centre of the earth."

Dante had made him il primo superbo—that is, the archetype of all pride (Paradiso, XIX. 46; see also XXIX. 55—57).

Milton therefore did not wholly conceive or create the character of the arch-rebel. Tradition, literary no less than theological, prescribed the dominant idea in that nature: enough if Milton developed the idea in harmony with the design of his poem. This he did. He depicts Satan as an embodiment of the spirit of pride and ambition<sup>2</sup>: not the ambition which is an honourable desire of praise—that last infirmity of noble minds—but the fevered lust for power which springs from overmastering self-esteem. In Satan this spirit of egotism is the poison that permeates his whole being, vanquishing and vitiating all that is good in him.

For at the outset of the action of Paradise Lost Satan has much that is noble and attractive in his nature. To have made him wholly evil had repelled, and lessened the interest of the poem, which turns, in no slight degree, on the struggle between the good and evil elements in him. Indeed, this very pride is not without its good aspect. Herein lies the motive power that nerves him at every crisis to face insuperable difficulties; to cherish immortal hope—though hope of revenge; and to adventure "high attempts."

On the other hand, it is this same spirit that drives him onward to his final fall. If at any moment he is minded to repent and submit—through pity for the friends whom he has ruined, or mankind whom he schemes to ruin, or himself—through sense of his ingratitude (IV. 42—45) towards the Almighty—whatever the motive—relentless, resistless egotism sweeps aside compunction, and denies him retreat. To sue for grace were to humble himself in the eyes of his followers and in his own: which must not be (IV. 79—86).

Steadily does Milton keep this idea before us. There is no possibility of missing or mistaking his intention. The very word 'pride' recurs<sup>3</sup> like some persistent refrain, ringing clearest at the great crises, the fateful moments when the action of the epic enters on a fresh stage. There are moments of relenting: as when in the fourth book (27 et seq.)

<sup>1</sup> Friar Bacon, IX. 59, 65, 66.

<sup>2</sup> Cf. Satan's own words in IV. 40.

<sup>3</sup> Cf. I. 36, 53, 527, 572, 603—with many other examples.

Satan looks down upon Eden from his resting-place on Mount Niphates, and a brief while is inclined to give up his attempt and seek re-admission into Heaven; or as when in the ninth book (455—72) he sees Eve in the Garden and is touched by her beauty and innocence, and disarmed of his ill thoughts. Always, however, the end is the same: "the hot hell" of pride in his heart breaks anew into flame; and he goes forward to his work<sup>1</sup>. Had not pride led him to undertake it?

Satan's resolve to compass the fall of man is prompted by several feelings—each a phase of self-esteem. There is jealousy. Man has usurped his place—dispossessed him and his followers. At sight of Adam and Eve he exclaims (iv. 358—60):

"O Hell! what do mine eyes with grief behold?
Into our room of bliss thus high advanced
Creatures of other mould, Earth-born perhaps!"

The same feeling finds expression in almost the same words later on (ix. 148, 149). That others should receive favour from the Almighty—and, as he thinks, at his expense—wounds his pride.

Again, there is desire to assert his supremacy by undertaking an office from which the mightiest of his followers recoil in fear. Nowhere does Satan stand forth so eminent and sublime "with monarchical pride" as in the scene in the second book where he proffers himself for the great enterprise. The counsel of Beelzebub has been applauded by all (386—89): but who will carry it out? None dare: and then Satan, proclaiming his readiness, once more confirms his sovereignty. Here too pride has ruled.

But the strongest motive remains: desire

"To wreak on innocent frail Man his loss
Of that first battle, and his flight to Hell<sup>2</sup>."

"To spite the great Creator" (ii. 384, 385) he will bring ruin on the earth and its inhabitants: which, if not victory, were revenge. The notion flatters his self-conceit. It is born of the old pride. And Milton dwells on it with fitting insistence<sup>3</sup>.

Is Satan the 'hero' of Paradise Lost? We might think so did we not read beyond the first four books. But to trace his history in the poem to its inglorious close is to dispel the impression. Milton can scarcely intend that we should regard as 'hero'—as worthy of sustained admiration—one who passes from the splendour of archangelic being to the state of a loathsome reptile<sup>4</sup>. The hideous metamorphosis in x. 504—32 is the necessary contrast to those scenes at the beginning of the epic in which the great rebel does appear in heroic grandeur: and we must look on both pictures. If Paradise Lost narrates the fall of man, it

<sup>1</sup> Cf. Mr Stopford Brooke's admirable Study of Milton, p. 148.

<sup>2</sup> iv. 11, 12.

<sup>3</sup> Cf. vi. 905, 906.

<sup>4</sup> Cf. Satan's words in ix. 163—71.

narrates too—and no less clearly—the fall of man's tempter. The self-degradation of Satan is complete: outward and inward: of the form and of the spirit: a change—ever for the worse—of shape and mind and emotion.

There is the outward sign. Before his expulsion he is pre-eminently a lustrous being, clothed with ethereal radiance and glory—so much does his name "Lucifer" argue<sup>1</sup>. And afterwards he retains something of this "original brightness," though much has passed from him (I. 97, 591—94). But gradually what was left decreases in proportion as the evil in him prevails: so that Uriel perceives the foul passions that dim his face (IV. 124—30), while Gabriel marks his "faded splendour wan" (IV. 870), and the Cherub Zephon taunts him therewith (IV. 835—40). Equal is his loss of physical force. On the fields of Heaven he does not fear to meet Michael in combat (VI. 246 et seq.): in the Garden of Eden he doubts himself a match for Adam:

"Foe not formidable! exempt from wound,
I not; so much hath Hell debased, and pain<sup>2</sup>
Enfeebled me, to what I was in Heaven."

In fact, he is glad that he has to deal with the woman—not the man (IX. 479—88).

Nor this because of lost strength alone. He shuns the "higher intellectual" of Adam (IX. 483), who would be better able than Eve to see through his arguments and so resist temptation. He is conscious of his own decline in intellect. The strong intelligence which inspires his speeches in the first two books has degenerated, by perverse use, into mere sophistical slyness, a base cunning—even as wine may lose its savour and turn to vinegar. He is no more the mighty-minded archangel: he is naught but the serpent—"subtlest beast of all the field." Lastly, every impulse in him towards good has died out. The element of nobility that redeemed his character at the outset from absolute baseness has been killed. In evil he moves and has his being, so that himself confesses "all good to me becomes bane"; and in destroying lies his sole delight (IX. 114—30).

Hardly therefore shall we believe that Milton meant us to see in the fallen and ever-falling archangel the hero of Paradise Lost. One feels, rather, that there is a break at the end of the fourth book and that thenceforth the continuity of Satan's characterisation is truer to theology than poetry. The hero, if there be one, is Adam, in whom suffering works a purification that promises nobler things to come; or Messiah.

<sup>1</sup> Cf. VII. 131, note, and the second extract from the Faust-book, and Marlowe, Faustus, v. 155:

"beautiful

As was bright Lucifer before his fall."

<sup>2</sup> See I. 55, VI. 327, notes.

C.

PARADISE LOST, I. 361—75; II. 274, 275, 397—402.

These<sup>1</sup> passages (with several in Paradise Regained) are illustrated by the following in Hooker's Ecclesiastical Polity, I. iv. 3: "The fall of the angels was pride. Since their fall, their practices have been the clean contrary unto those before mentioned. For being dispersed, some in the air, some on the earth, some in the water, some<sup>2</sup> among the minerals, dens, and caves, that are under the earth; they have by all means laboured to effect a universal rebellion against the laws, and as far as in them lieth utter destruction of the works of God. These wicked spirits the heathens honoured instead of gods, both generally under the name of dii inferi, 'gods infernal'; and particularly, some in oracles<sup>3</sup>, some in idols<sup>4</sup>, some as household gods, some as nymphs: in a word, no foul and wicked spirit which was not one way or other honoured of men as God, till such time as light appeared in the world and dissolved the works of the Devil." The interest of this passage is that Hooker identifies the fallen angels (1) with the heathen—more especially classical—deities, (2) with the dæmons supposed to inhabit the four<sup>5</sup> 'elements.' This twofold identification accords with the apparently universal belief of mediæval writers. The precise steps whereby it was reached cannot perhaps be determined; but the process may have been on this wise.

The belief in the existence of dæmons is as old as Hesiod's time; cf. the Works and Days 121—26. It is found passim in Greek philosophy. The character attributed to these dæmons varies in the different authorities. In a rough generalisation we may say that they were regarded as semi-divine powers intermediate between gods and men. Their dwelling-place also varies: Æschylus (Persæ 628) describes them as χθόνιοι; Plato<sup>6</sup> (Cratylus 398 A) as ὑποχθόνιοι. The theory which assigns the air as their special abode, and which is brought forward very prominently in Paradise Regained, dates from Neo-

<sup>1</sup> I have to thank Mr R. D. Hicks for many of the references used in this sketch; in fact, all the classical material in sections C and D is derived from him.

<sup>2</sup> Cf. Plato's δαίμονες ὑποχθόνιοι.

<sup>3</sup> Cf. the second passage quoted later on from Zeller.

<sup>4</sup> Alluding perhaps to Ps. xcvi. 5—see later.

<sup>5</sup> Hooker omits the dæmons of fire (= Philo's τὰ πυρίγωνα?).

<sup>6</sup> He is quoting Hesiod, l. c. (where, however, our texts have ἐπιχθόνιοι).

Pythagorean writers<sup>1</sup>. Now the tendency of Greek popular superstition and of later philosophy was to merge these dæmons in the gods: a tendency traceable as far back as Democritus<sup>2</sup>. He (says Zeller<sup>3</sup>) "may be regarded as the first who, mediating between philosophers and the popular religion, entered upon the course so often pursued in after times, viz. that of degrading the gods of polytheism into dæmons." This course is carried further by the Neo-Pythagoreans—for whom, "as for the other philosophers of that time, dæmons take the place of the popular gods in all cases where what is attributed to the gods was found irreconcilable with a purer conception of the divinity, and yet was not altogether to be denied. Divination<sup>4</sup> proceeded from them, expiations were made to them: Timæus Locrus even affirms that the gods committed to them the government of the world" (Zeller<sup>5</sup>). And this identification of gods and dæmons is completed in Philo Judæus<sup>6</sup> and Rabbinical writers. Not to multiply proofs, we may take a single illustration which will readily occur to most readers, viz. 1 Cor. x. 20, where St Paul (influenced, I presume, by Rabbinical teaching and Greek philosophy) expressly, and appropriately since he is writing to Greeks, calls the divinities of the Gentiles δαιμόνια<sup>7</sup>. The notion may be traced in many patristic works.

The next step is the identification of the dæmons with the fallen angels. This is made by Philo, who treats the dæmons as intermediaries or messengers (ἄγγελοι) between God and the world, and says that they are the beings whom Moses calls angels—οὗς ἄλλοι φιλόσοφοι δαίμονας, ἀγγέλους Μωϋσῆς εἰωθεν ὀνομάζειν, ψυχὰι δ' εἰσὶν κατὰ τὸν ἀέρα πετόμεναι<sup>8</sup>. This identification is also a Rabbinical doctrine. It suffices for our purpose again to recall St Paul's words in Ephes. ii. 2, where Satan, chief of the fallen angels, is termed "the prince of the power of the air," i.e. lord of the dæmons of the air.

The dæmons, then, having been identified on the one hand with the heathen gods, and on the other with the fallen angels, the identification of the fallen angels with the heathen gods naturally followed. Hence

<sup>1</sup> i.e. from the first century B.C. onwards. "They imagine the dæmons to be souls dwelling in the space between the earth and the moon, and occupying, alike in virtue of their nature and their abode, a place intermediate between gods and men"—Zeller (Philosophie der Griechen, III. 2, p. 138); he cites various Neo-Pythagoreans, summarising their views thus.

<sup>2</sup> Circa 420 B.C.

<sup>3</sup> Pre-Socratics, English trans., II. p. 289.

<sup>4</sup> Cf. Hooker, ante; Nat. Ode, 175 (note); P. R. I. 430, 431, where the Saviour says to Satan (prince of the dæmons), "all oracles by thee are given."

<sup>5</sup> Philosophie der Griechen, III. 2, p. 139.

<sup>6</sup> B.C. 30—A.D. 40 (circa).

<sup>7</sup> The same word is used in the Septuagint in Psalms xcvi. 5, where the A.V. has "idols." Cf. Hooker, ante, and P. L. I. 375.

<sup>8</sup> De Gigant. 285 A (263, 7).

it is common to find all three treated as the same in patristic and mediæval works. This is Hooker's view; it is also Milton's. The identity of the fallen angels and the heathen gods is stated so explicitly in P. L. i. 361—75 that it were superfluous to dwell on the point. The identity of the fallen angels and the dæmons<sup>1</sup> is less emphasised in P. L. (but see II. 274, 275, 397—402, notes). In P. R. it is conspicuous. As a signal illustration P. R. II. 121—26 may be instanced.

D.

PARADISE LOST, I. 515—17.

What are we to understand by the expressions "the middle air" (P. L. i. 516) and "the middle region of air" (P. R. II. 117), the meaning of which would appear to be the same? Most editors are silent on the subject; some interpret "middle" = 'between heaven and earth.' This view, though possible, does not appear to me wholly satisfactory, and I venture to offer another—that Milton alludes in both places to a theory, evidently current at that time, of the division of the air into three regions, and that "middle region" is really a quasi-scientific term (media regio) which would be perfectly intelligible to all scholars of the 17th century. As to the history of this threefold division: the first hints of it that fell in my way were the passage in the Adamus Exul of C. otius and one in Jonson's Masque of Hymen (ad fn.). The combined evidence of these led to the conclusion that the threefold partition must have been a conception then recognised: not indeed a classical conception, but experience had often shown that in such matters Milton's views are post-classical, what one may vaguely call 'mediæval.' The kindness of Mr R. D. Hicks enables me to throw some light on a doctrine which, in my opinion, fits the two Miltonic passages with extreme appositeness. Of the references with which Mr Hicks has supplied me space will admit but two or three.

First, then, the following extracts from the works of Bartholomæus Keckermann<sup>2</sup>, the German savant, are important as coming from what may be considered a compendium of contemporary science. Keckermann is speaking of the divisions of the air; and he remarks that there are two main theories as to its partition—the older and less correct which postulates two regions, the modern and more accurate which recognises three. He says: Aristoteles atque aded veteres Physicis locum aeris dividunt in πρῶτον & δεύτερον, id est, primum & secundum, sive superiorem & inferiorem...Recentiores autem accuratius paulò totum illud spacium (sic) aereum partiti sunt in tres partes sive regiones...Perfectior sive accuratior distinctio aeris est in tres regiones, nempe in Supremam, Mediam & Infimam. The genesis of this doctrine he traces thus: Distinctio ista...ab interpretibus Aristotelis primum tradita fuit, nempe ab Averro<sup>1</sup>, a Themistio<sup>2</sup> & Simplicio<sup>3</sup>, & deinde latius explicata ab Alberto<sup>4</sup> M. & aliis Scholasticis, idque potissimum eo fine, ut doctrina meteorum clarior atque illustrior fieret (as for sundry other reasons<sup>5</sup>). He discusses at some length the characteristics of each region; and though we are most concerned with what he has to say of the middle region (media)—his remarks being founded on what Albertus had written—we may just note that he represents the upper region (suprema) as the driest and hottest, and the lowest region (infima) as hot, through radiation from the surface of the earth heated by the sun's rays, but also moist. Now as to the media regio he writes (1) that it is peculiarly cold—(a) because vapours collect there from land and sea, (b) because of its reaction (ἀντιπερίστροφος) against the heat of the upper and lower regions; (2) that, beginning where the sun's rays lose their power—its lowest point earthwards—it reaches to the tops of the loftiest mountains—its highest point heavenwards. The diameter of this belt of air is computed by some at seven English miles.

<sup>1</sup> i.e. the dæmons of all four 'elements,' not of air alone.

<sup>2</sup> D. Bartholomæi Keckermanni Dantiscani operum omnium quæ exstant Tomus Primus. Geneva. Apud Petrum Aubertum. MDCXIV.

Keckermann has referred above to his authorities; let us glance at Albertus Magnus. In his Commentary on the Meteora Albertus has a chapter<sup>6</sup> headed, Quare non sunt nubes in superiori regione aeris, sed in media tantum. Here, after discussing the upper and lower regions, he adds, est autem in medio duarum regionum, scilicet superioris æstuosa, & inferioris calida & humida, tertia aeris zona sive regio...que est valde frigida et excellentis frigiditatis. And then he goes on to explain how vapour gathers there—infra altissimos montes—and condenses and forms clouds, so that this middle region is the gathering place for rain<sup>7</sup>. Later<sup>8</sup> he writes to the same effect—tria sunt aeris interstitia, infimum

<sup>1</sup> A. D. 1120—98.

<sup>2</sup> Circa A. D. 536.

<sup>3</sup> Cf. op. cit. col. 1446.

<sup>4</sup> Liber 1., Tractatus 1., Caput VIII.

<sup>5</sup> Cf. the passage in Jonson; it is a description of some scenery used in the Masque of Hymen, which represented "the three regions of air": the middle region "all of dark and condensed clouds, as being the proper place where rain, hail, and other watery meteors are made"; or as Averroes puts it—in quo fiunt pluvia et nix et grando (Meteorologicorum Lib. 1., Cap. IV.).

<sup>6</sup> Liber II., Tract. 1., Cap. III.

<sup>2</sup> A. D. 330—90.

<sup>4</sup> A. D. 1193—1280.

& medium & suprenum...medium frigidum excellenter & humidum. Now let us summarise the results of these descriptions of the media regio, and see how they apply to the Miltonic "middle region."

(1) The media regio is the place of clouds and heavy vapours; cf. P. R. i. 39—41, where Satan

"in mid air

To council summons all his mighty peers,

Within thick clouds and dark tenfold involved," and P. R. ii. 117, where Satan ascends "Up to the middle region of thick air." Cf. also the piece In Quintum Novembris, 12, where M. makes this region the gathering-place of storms: Hic tempestates medio ciet aëre diras (the subject of the verb being Satan); and his Latin academic "prolusion" De Spherarum Concentu, where he mentions media aëris regio.

(2) It is peculiarly cold; and 'cold' is the precise epithet used in P. L. i. 516. Cf. The Death of a Fair Infant, 16, "Through middle empire of the freezing air."

(3) It extends to the top of high mountains; and Mount Olympus is the dwelling-place of the deities who "rule the middle air," P. L. i. 515, 516. Cf. the Vacation Exercise, 41, 42.

(4) It is capped by another, perhaps broader, belt of air; and in P. L. i. 517 Milton expressly sneers at the "highest heaven" of the classical deities as not being so very high after all—which, according to the whole system of this theory, is true enough.

It appears to me therefore that the explanation suggested fits the passages at every turn. I imagine that to many of Milton's readers, as to many of the spectators of Jonson's Masque, the notion of the three regions was perfectly familiar<sup>1</sup>. From the frequency of Milton's own references to it we may infer that it appealed to his imagination.

E.

PARADISE LOST, i. 582—87.

The enumeration of proper names is a favourite device with M., as with many other poets, notably Vergil. Cf. the Nativity Ode, one of his earliest poems (1629), P. L. xi. 388—411, P. R. iii. 270 et seq. The charm of such passages lies in the musical sound of the names, in their historical or literary associations, and in the impression of vague remoteness and mystery that they convey. Bentley, however, with something more than his usual infelicity as a critic of M., omitted lines 579—87 (from “what resounds” to “Fontarabbia”) as being “Romantic Trash—a heap of barbarous Words.” Even Keightley opined that the names are chosen “somewhat at random”: whereas, in truth, each has been carefully selected by M. for its associations.

<sup>1</sup> It has been pointed out to me that this conception of the media regio is expounded in Sylvester's Du Bartas, a work so familiar to Milton; see Grosart's ed., i. 31. For another illustrative passage, cf. Burton's Anatomy, ninth ed., i. 380.

In “all who since” Milton is thinking—mainly—of the great Italian poems of chivalry with their accounts of contests between the Christians (“baptized”) and Saracens (“infidel”—see 763—66, note): e.g. Pulci’s Morgante Maggiore, 1481—see the Areopagitica, P. W. II. 64; Boiardo’s Orlando Innamorato, 1495, recast by Berni, 1541—see P. R. III. 338—43; Ariosto’s Orlando Furioso, 1516, of which there was a famous English version by Sir John Harrington, 1591—see the extract from Ariosto in Of Reformation, P. W. II. 383; and Tasso’s Gerusalemme Liberata. In a letter from Florence (1638), and elsewhere, M. manifests his delight in Italian literature.

Aspramont (583) is situate 6 miles north of Nice. In Hexham’s Mercator (1636) I find it marked in the map of Provence, and again in that of Italy. The castle belonging to the great family of the Counts of Aspramont may still be seen. Probably the literary allusion is to the Orlando Furioso, XII. 43, where Aspramont is mentioned as the scene of a feat of arms performed by Orlando; and M. may have known an Italian poem, entitled L’Aspramonte and published at Venice in 1532—itself, possibly, based on the French ‘Chanson de Geste’ Aspremont, which deals with Charlemagne’s conquest of Apulia. In any case, it is pretty clear that ‘Aspramont’ was a name familiar to readers of mediæval romances of chivalry: and does not Scott tell us of jousts at the castle of Aspramont for the hand of the ‘Lady of Aspramonte’ (Count Robert of Paris)? Also, as M. in his journey to Italy, rejecting the route by Marseilles to Genoa which Sir Henry Wotton recommended (see Comus), passed through Nice (so he says in the Defensio Secunda), he may conceivably have visited the famous castle, and viewed the scene of the exploits of Orlando and other knights. The notion that Asprement in the Netherlands is meant need only be mentioned to be dismissed.

Montalban, or Montauban, is another famous name. It was the castle, in Languedoc, of the Knight Renaud, the Rinaldo of Pulci’s Morgante Maggiore and Boiardo’s Orlando Innamorato. In the English romance “The Foure Sonnes of Aymon” (published by Caxton, about 1489), Montalban is constantly mentioned as the scene of conflicts between Charlemagne's troops and Renaud who is besieged there (see the Early English Text Society's ed., pp. 395—422). Rodd in his Spanish Ballads (1812) gives one "The Ancient Ballad of Count Claros of Montalban" (and another "The Ancient Ballad of the Battle of Roncesvalles").

In "Damasco" the literary allusion is probably to the Orlando Furioso. In Harington's version the 'Argument' to book xvii. says, "Martano at Damasco tilts"; stanzas 12—20 of that book describe the city, with the meeting of the champions there, and stanzas 58—73 their tournaments and jousts. No doubt, too, M. was thinking of Damascus as the scene of battles in times of the Crusades; cf. Greene, Friar Bacon, iv. 27, "The virtuous fame discoursed of his deeds...Done at the Holy Land 'fore Damas' walls," and viii. 113, "that famous Prince...Who at Damasco beat the Saracens." Note that M. uses the form 'Damasco' here, but 'Damascus' at 468: the one suggests the mediæval, the other the Scriptural, city.

In "Marocco" the wars between the Spaniards and the Moors are meant. The form Marocco, given in the original editions here and in xi. 404, is closer to the Arabic form Marrâkush.

Trebizond, Gk. Trapezus, in Cappadocia, was the seat of the empire of the family of the Grand-Komnenos from A.D. 1204 to 1461, when the city was captured by Mohammed. Writers of the Middle Age and later historians (Gibbon has only a brief allusion, vii. 327) celebrate the extraordinary splendour of the court and magnificence of the city. "Never," says the historian of Trebizond, Professor Fallmerayer, "was there a land more fitted to provide material for romances of chivalry (Rittergeschichten):" Trebizond "became in popular romance and in the imagination of the Italians and Provençals one of the most famous empires of the east, and the rallying point of the youth and flower of Asia" (Geschichte des Kaiserthums von Trapezunt). Now the great exemplar of this romance associated with Trebizond (whose splendours would naturally be reflected on Western Europe through an Italian medium) was a heroic novel, Il Caloandro, or Il Caloandro Fedele, written by Giovanni Ambrosio Marini of Genoa, published at Bologna in 1641 (but I am not sure that this was the 1st ed.), and often reprinted. This work, which had some historical basis, was one of the most famous romances of the 17th cent. Twice translated into French (by Monsieur de Scudéry, brother of the novelist, and by the Comte de Caylus), it may have been Englished—as was another novel by Marini, The Desperadoes; and it seems to me quite likely that M. was thinking of it here, or at any rate that many of his readers would think of it. Those who knew the novel would recall the numerous jousts and tournaments which take place at the court of Trebizond, e.g. the great combat in book XXI. (it is a vast story) between the three champions of the princess Tigrinde and the three representatives of the Persian and Tartar armies—with many similar scenes. It is worth while to add that the author (Cardinal Bessarion) of the curious Laus Trapezuntis dwells on its tournaments and games as a special feature of the court; and to remember how Scott makes the Templar say to Rebecca, "I won him (his horse, Zamor) in single fight from the Soldan of Trebizond" (Ivanhoe, chap. xlv.).

In line 585 the historical reference is to the Moorish invaders of Spain, the literary to book II. of the Orlando Innamorato, where we read how Agramant, 'King of Africa,' assembled his troops at Biserta (the ancient Utica) for invasion of Christendom, landed in Spain, and came up with the army of Charlemagne, when "a bloody battle ensued."

The event to which M. refers in lines 586, 587, was this: Charlemagne, who had entered Spain to attack the Saracens, was retreating into France, A.D. 778; his army had to pass through the defile of Roncesvalles (or Roncesvaux) in N.W. Spain; Charlemagne himself, with main body, had got through the pass, when the rear-guard, through Ganelon's treachery, was attacked in the pass by the Gascons (or Basques), and cut to pieces, among those who perished being the famous Roland, whose death became the subject of numberless 'Chansons de Gestes,' such as the great Song of Roland (see Eginhardus, Vita Caroli Magni, cap. 9).

Fontarabbia is 40 miles from Roncesvalles: why does M. place the disaster at the former? Some will have it that he chose Fontarabbia because the name has a very pretty sound, and that "by Fontarabbia" was quite accurate enough, in poetry. Some again say that M. followed the historian Mariana and 'other Spanish writers.' Mariana, however, does not mention Fontarabbia at all, but gives the ordinary version, that the battle was at Roncesvalles. There may be some literary allusion not yet traced. Scott happily combines the two names, Marmion, VI. 33:

"O, for a blast of that dread horn,
On Fontarabian echoes borne,
That to king Charles did come,
When Rowland brave, and Olivier,
And every paladin and peer,
On Roncesvalles died."

It was at Fontarabbia that Wellington forced his way into France against Soult, over the ford of the river Bidassoa.

M. represents Charlemagne as having fallen in the fight, whereas he lived till 814. Here again Milton's authority is not known; though Mariana does speak of Charlemagne dying through chagrin at his defeat soon after. But perhaps "fell" means 'was overthrown'; as Dante says, "lost the holy emprise" (Inferno, XXXI. 16—18).

Montaigne introduces the name Fontarabie in a short historical anecdote in his Essay (I. xv.) entitled "Of the punishment of Cowardise" in Florio's translation (1603).

It may just be added that "peer"—cf. "peerage"—is the word regularly used of Charlemagne's nobles in the old poems and prose-romances translated from the French; such as Caxton's Lyfe of Charles the grete of France (1485) and the Foure Sonnes of Aymon (1489, Caxton), both reprinted by the Early English Text Society. Cf. Huon of Burdeux, where it is said that at the battle of Roncesvalles "al y<sup>e</sup> xii peres of france were slayne, except one" (p. 2).

F.

PARADISE LOST, I. 737.

According to a mediæval belief the Heavenly beings were divided into three Hierarchies, and each Hierarchy was subdivided into three Orders or Choirs. These Orders comprised the Seraphim, Cherubim and Thrones (θρόνοι), forming the first Hierarchy; Dominations (κυριότητες), Virtues (δυνάμεις) and Powers (ἐξουσίαι), forming the second; Principalities (ἀρχαί), Archangels and Angels, forming the third. This system was deduced, in the main, from St Paul's words in Ephes. i. 21 and Colos. i. 16. First formulated in the treatise περὶ τῆς οὐρανίας ιεραρχίας, which was long attributed, though falsely, to Dionysius the Areopagite, the notion had great influence in the Middle Ages; cf. Dante, Paradiso, X. 115—17, XXVIII. 98—126. Allusions to it are frequent in Elizabethan writers. Works from which many illustrations of the system might be quoted are:—Batman vppon Bartholome (1582), Reginald Scot's Discoverie of Witchcraft (1584), Thomas Watson's Eglogue (1590), the Faust-book (1587), Spenser's Fowre Hymnes (Heavenly Love and Heavenly Beautie), Bacon, Advancement of Learning, I. vi. 3, Drummond, Flowers of Sion (Works, II. 42, 51), Sir Thomas Browne, Religio Medici, I. lviii., and Heywood's Hierarchy of the Blessed Angels (1635), which deals with the subject at great length.

Milton accepted<sup>1</sup> the tradition and made it the basis of the whole angelical system of Paradise Lost.

Each of the Orders possessed some special quality. The Seraphim were the "burning" lustrous beings; cf. Spenser, An Hymne of Heavenly Beautie, 95, 96 :

"And those eternall burning Seraphins,
Which from their faces dart out fierie light."

This conception, due probably to the false derivation of Seraphim from a root signifying 'to burn,' determines Milton's choice of epithets for this Order of Hierarchies. It is a common allusion in the poets; cf. the Essay on Man, l. 109, 110 (of the "poor Indian") :

"To be, contents his natural desire,

He asks no angel's wings, no Seraph's fire";

and again 277, 278. So the Seraphim "are represented in medieval art with the colour of flame or crimson."

The Cherubim had a wondrous power of vision : hence their main duty in Paradise Lost is to keep watch. See IV. 778—80. And through this power of vision they enjoyed in a peculiar degree the Visio Beatifica or faculty of "contemplating" the Deity. In the words of the treatise περὶ τῆς λεραρχίας they were distinguished διὰ τὸ θεοπτικὸν αὐτῶν καὶ θεωρητικὸν. And this notion is the key to that difficult line (54) in Il Penseroso, "The Cherub Contemplation."

The archangels were, as their name implied, the "chief messengers" of the Almighty and the intermediaries between him and Man. Cf. Reginald Scot, "As for archangels, they are sent onlie about great and secret matters"; and Heywood, "The Archangels are Embassadors, great matters to declare." Hence Milton makes Raphael in book v. and Michael in books XI., XII., each one of the seven archangels referred to in III. 648—53, the bearers of messages and charges from the Almighty to Adam.

One other point in which Milton follows mediæval tradition with regard to the Heavenly beings may be noticed. Descriptions like those in book III. 625—28 and 636—42 are purely traditional. We must compare them with the presentment of angels in works of early Christian art. Poets and painters alike drew upon religious tradition and expressed it by certain conventional details. And this presentment of angelic beings contained a considerable element of symbolism. In Batman vppon Bartholome, II. iii., iv., there is a long discourse on the attributes which painters assign to angels and on their symbolical significance. The following brief extracts from it illustrate Milton's pictures of Uriel and the "stripling Cherub": "When Angells are paynted with long lockes and criske haire, thereby is understoode their cleane affections and ordinate thoughts. For the hayre of the head be-tokeneth thoughts and affections that doe spring out of the roote of thought and minde...And they be painted beardles: for to take consideration and heede, that they passe never the state of youth, neyther waxe feeble in vertues, neither faile for age...Truely they be paynted feathered and winged...[as a sign that] they be lifted up in effect and knowledge, and rauished to the uttermost contemplation of the loue of God."

<sup>1</sup> Thus in The Reason of Church Government, I. 2, he says, "the angels themselves...are distinguished and quaternioned into their celestial principdoms and satrapies," P. W. II. 442. He several times uses the special terms "Orders" and "Hierarchies"—cf. P. L. I. 737, v. 591, VII. 192; while the titles "Seraphim," "Thrones," "Dominations," "Virtues" etc. occur constantly.

G.

PARADISE LOST, III. 22—26.

"Drop serene" is a literal rendering of gutta serena, the technical Latin term for "complete amaurosis," i.e. amaurosis or disease of the optic nerve in its worst form. It involves total blindness. "Suffusion" (Greek ὀπθχυμα, Latin suffusio) was also a technical term, employed then by medical writers to denote imperfection or loss of sight in general, whether caused by cataract or by affection of the nervous structure. Blindness of the latter type is sometimes called suffusio nigra.

Milton's blindness was probably due to amaurosis, since that disease commonly makes no external change in the eye. Thus he says in the Second Defence, "so little do they [his eyes] betray any external appearance of injury, that they are as unclouded and bright as the eyes of those who most distinctly see" (P. W. I. 235).

Cf. also his second Sonnet to Cyriack Skinner:

"Cyriack, this three years' day these eyes, though clear,
To outward view, of blemish or of spot,
Bereft of light, their seeing have forgot."

His weakness of sight was evidently inherited from his mother. Aubrey in his Life of Milton says: "His father read without spectacles at 84. His mother had very weake sight."

Milton undoubtedly believed that his loss of physical eyesight was compensated by increased spiritual illumination:

"So much the rather thou, celestial Light,
Shine inward, and the mind through all her powers
Irradiate" (III. 51—53).

With these lines we may compare a sentence in one of his letters:

“why should I not submit with complacency to this loss of sight, which seems only withdrawn from the body without, to increase the sight of the mind within?” (P. W. III. 513). He writes to the same effect in the Second Defence: “Let me then be the most feeble creature alive, as long as that feebleness serves to invigorate the energies of my rational and immortal spirit; as long as in that obscurity, in which I am enveloped, the light of the divine presence more clearly shines, then, in proportion as I am weak, I shall be invincibly strong; and in proportion as I am blind, I shall see more clearly. O! that I may thus be perfected by feebleness, and irradiated by obscurity. And, indeed, in my blindness, I enjoy in no inconsiderable degree the favour of the Deity, who regards me with more tenderness and compassion in proportion as I am able to behold nothing but himself” (P. W. I. 239). Cf. Samson Agonistes, 162, 163 and 1687—89; and Wordsworth, The Excursion, I. 95.

One of the finest allusions in literature to Milton's affliction is in Gray's lines on him in The Progress of Poesy; as the third couplet of them contains a reference to Paradise Lost, III. 380—82, they may not inappropriately be cited here:

“Nor second He, that rode sublime
 Upon the seraph-wings of Extasy,
 The secrets of th' Abyss to spy.
 He pass'd the flaming bounds of Place and Time:
 The living Throne, the sapphire blaze,
 Where Angels tremble, while they gaze,
 He saw; but, blasted with excess of light,
 Clos'd his eyes in endless night.”

Dryden seems to have anticipated Gray in the reference; cf. The Hind and the Panther, I. 64—69:

“But gracious God, how well dost Thou provide
 For erring judgments an unerring guide!
 Thy throne is darkness in the abyss of light,
 A blaze of glory that forbids the sight.
 O teach me to believe Thee thus concealed,
 And search no farther than Thy self revealed.”

H.

PARADISE LOST, III. 431—39.

The geography of this passage has been criticised adversely on the assumption that “Imaus” must mean the Himálayas. A bird flying from the Himálayas to the sources of the Ganges would not pass over any part of 'Sericana,' by which, probably, the north-west angle of the Chinese Empire was signified. Masson, to meet the supposed difficulty, argues that the vulture is not said to start from Imaus: it is only "bred" there. But I think that Milton does mean us to regard Imaus as the starting-point of the bird's flight.

"Imaus," however, need not mean the Himálayas in this passage. True, the earlier classical geographers applied "Imaus" to the Himálayas (the names being cognate); but in Ptolemy and later writers the name is transferred to the great chain of mountains, the Bolor range, which runs through Central Asia from North to South, dividing the Chinese Empire from Turkestan. And this later use<sup>1</sup> of "Imaus" appears to have been that recognised by geographers of the 17th century. Perhaps the best known collection of maps issued in England between 1600 and 1650 was the English edition<sup>2</sup> of Mercator's Atlas, doubtless known to Milton.

Now, in Mercator's map of Tartaria there is marked a chain of mountains called Imaus Mons. It extends, roughly speaking, from the north-eastern corner of the modern Afghanistan to the "Frozen Ocean," i.e. Arctic Ocean. Its course is due North and South. When Milton speaks of "Imaus" which bounds the "roving Tartars," he means, I doubt not, this Imaus Mons which is so conspicuous in Mercator's Tartaria. And any one who could consult this rare Atlas would perceive at once the accuracy of Milton's description. For the northern part of Imaus Mons does "bound" the Tartar, separating his country from Russia; and a vulture starting from this northern part and flying southward to the Ganges would pass over the north-west plains of the Chinese Empire. Judged therefore from the 17th century standpoint the geography of the passage is quite correct. Of course, very little was known then about Central Asia. Mercator frankly calls it "that vast and unknown region."

Allusions to the passage occur in the Dunciad, III. 76, "He [the Emperor of China] whose long wall the wandering Tartar bounds," and in Thomson's Autumn:

"From Asian Taurus, from Imaus stretch'd Athwart the roving Tartar's sullen bounds."

<sup>1</sup> Cf. Pliny's Natural History: "Above those, are other Scythians called Anthropophagi...within a certain vale of the mountaine Imaus," Philemon Holland's translation, 1601, p. 154.

<sup>2</sup> Hexham's, 1636.

I.

PARADISE LOST, IV. 275—79.

The key to this passage, as Bishop Newton pointed out, is in Diodorus Siculus III. 67—70. Diodorus relates various legends as to the birth of Dionysus or Bacchus; amongst them is the following.

There was a King of Libya named Ammon. He married Rhea, daughter of the god Uranus. By a maiden called Amaltheia he had a son. To save the mother and child from the jealousy of Rhea, Ammon hid them in a place called Nysa, on an island off the Mediterranean coast of Libya, not far from the modern Tunis. It was "girt with the river Triton" (περιεχομένη ὑπὸ τοῦ Τρίτωνος ποταμοῦ), and a spot of most singular beauty and fertility. Here the infant was brought up in a cave; and Ammon appointed the goddess Athene to guard him "against the plots of his step-mother Rhea" (πρὸς τὰς ἀπὸ τῆς μητρύας 'Ρέας ἐπιβουλὰς). The child grew up, showed wonderful wisdom, and having invented wine, became the god of wine. He was named "Dionysus" from Nysa his place of nurture.

This monarch Ammon is evidently a kind of deity, and Milton identifies him with the god whom the Greeks called Zeus Ammon and the Romans Jupiter Ammon, and who is commonly associated with the Egyptian sun-god Amon Ra. As in several other passages, Milton has followed Diodorus very closely, merely translating one or two sentences; cf. the references to "the river Triton" and "his step-dame Rhea."

Cham, of course, is identical with Ham, the name of Noah's son; cf. the Septuagint form of Ham, viz. Χάμ, and the Vulgate form, Cham. Probably Milton had some patristic authority for the identification of the Scriptural Cham or Ham with the "Gentile"<sup>1</sup> deity Ammon, also called Hammon<sup>2</sup>: an identification obviously due to the similarity of the names, and strengthened by the traditional account that Egypt<sup>3</sup> was colonised by the descendants of Ham. Tennyson speaks of "the Chamian oracle divine," i.e. the shrine of Cham, meaning the famous temple of Jupiter

<sup>1</sup> Note "Whom Gentiles Ammon call" (iv. 277), i.e. the Greeks and Romans; the implied antithesis between "Gentile" and Biblical shows that "Cham" in 276 refers to a Scriptural character, i.e. Noah's son.

<sup>2</sup> Cf. M. in the Nativity Ode, 203, "The Libyc Hammon shrinks his horn."

<sup>3</sup> Cf. Psalms cv. 23, where Egypt is called "the land of Ham."

Ammon in the heart of the Libyan desert. And this is the allusion in Thomson's lines (Liberty, 111) :

"the Libyan sands
Where Ammon lifts amid the torrid waste
A verdant isle, with shade and fountain fresh."

It may be added that romantic, more or less mythical, island-retreats like "that Nyseian isle" were an indispensable feature of the literary geography of the epic and quasi-epic world. There was, e.g. the "Nilotic isle," Meroe (Paradise Regained, IV. 71); "the fairest and most famous" of the islands in the Nile, says Sandys, Relation, p. 93. Tasso's isle of Armida belonged to much the same category; and the enchantress Acrasia was similarly secluded, The Faerie Queene, II. 12. See also Comus, 517.

J.

PARADISE LOST, VII. 1—12.

Milton's invocation is addressed to the Muse of sacred song and inspiration—the Heavenly power which "taught" Moses on Sinai (I. 6—10), and inspired David on Sion (III. 29—32) and the other prophets and singers of Israel. It is to her that he appeals at the beginning of the poem "Sing, Heavenly Muse," and there is a special appropriateness in lines 6—10. Cf. Addison's remark: "His invocation to a work which turns in a great measure upon the creation of the World, is very properly made to the muse who inspired Moses in those books from whence our author drew his subject, and to the Holy Spirit who is therein represented as operating after a particular manner in the first production of nature."

As to the character of this divine power whose existence he postulates, he does not, naturally, speak with definiteness: in I. 17—26 he expressly distinguishes her from the Holy Spirit; in P. R. I. 8—17 he seems to identify them.

The important point is that for Milton this "Heavenly Muse" is a truly divine power, in whom he believes with a conviction which gives intense reality to his invocations.

With the classical poets (Homer perhaps excepted) the invocation of the Muse was, I suppose, merely a literary convention—a piece of the traditional 'machinery' of poetry: one does not credit Horace with much faith in the Calliope whom he begged to "descend from Heaven."

Milton has faith, and when he asks Urania to aid him he means every word of his petition.

It is in virtue too of his assistance by this higher and holier power than the classical poets knew of that he speaks of his poetry as soaring "above" theirs. Compare VII. 3, 4 and I. 12—15, where, addressing the "Heavenly Muse," he says:

"I

Invoke thy aid to my adventurous song,
That with no middle flight intends to soar
Above the Aonian mount" (i.e. Mt Helicon).

He does not, I think, intend to suggest that he will surpass, say, Vergil as an artist—as a master of style and imagery and other qualities which constitute the art of poetry; but only that he is filled with a higher inspiration to treat of higher things. In fact, his claim is to moral, not artistic, superiority; it resolves itself almost into the difference between Christianity and Paganism. We should remember that in Milton's eyes the poet is a teacher in the first place, a singer in the second: he must write "to God's glory, by the honour and instruction of his country," and be "an interpreter and relater of the best and sagest things among his own citizens." See the preface to book II. of The Reason of Church Government, and cf. the Introduction to this volume.

The name "Urania" which he assigns to his Muse means, of course, 'the Heavenly One,' Gk. οὐρανα<sup>1</sup>. In classical mythology Urania was commonly regarded as the Muse of astronomy; compare a poem on "The Muses" by Nicholas Grimald:

"Uranie, her globes to view all bent,
The ninefolde heauen observes with fixed face<sup>2</sup>."

In these lines Urania evidently typifies astronomy according to the ordinary classical conception of her attributes; and a similar illustration might be cited from Sylvester's Du Bartas (Grosart's ed., II. 3). In treating Urania otherwise than as the Muse of astronomy Milton had been anticipated by other poets. Perhaps the earliest was Dante; cf. the Purgatorio, XXIX. 40—42: "Now 'tis meet that Helicon for me stream forth and Urania aid me with her choir to set in verse things<sup>3</sup> hard to conceive." Dante had been followed by English poets. Spenser, for example, in The Tears of the Muses makes her represent the highest knowledge—"the heavenlie light of knowledge"; while for Drummond of Hawthornden she meant, it would seem, the power of spiritual wisdom, one section of his poems being entitled "Urania, or Spiritual Poems."

<sup>1</sup> See Hesiod, Theogony 78.

<sup>2</sup> Tottel's Miscellany, 1557, ed. Arber, p. 100.

<sup>3</sup> Cf. Milton's Dantesque use of "things," P. L. I. 16.

Influenced, no doubt, by Paradise Lost, VII. 1 et seq., Shelley in Adonais, II.—IV., and Tennyson in In Memoriam regard Urania as the Muse of lofty verse: a conception very similar to Milton's though less distinctively religious. And Wordsworth has two directly Miltonic allusions to Urania; cf. the invocation in The Recluse:

“Urania, I shall need

Thy guidance, or a greater Muse, if such Descend to earth or dwell in highest heaven!”

and the end of his poem on Ossian:

“such was blind

Mæonides of ample mind,

Such Milton, to the fountain-head

Of glory by Urania led!”

The “Urania” of Matthew Arnold's poem is less easily defined.

K.

PARADISE LOST, VIII. 80—84.

In his note on this passage Professor Masson says: “The fundamental notion of the ancient astronomers was that all the motions of the heavenly bodies were in circles, the strictly circular motion being the most perfect kind.... From very remote antiquity, however, it had been perceived that the simple circular motions of eight or even ten spheres round the Earth, with whatever variety of rates and times among themselves, would not account for all the observed phenomena of the heavens,—would not account, for example, for the fact that the motion of the Sun is faster or slower according to the season (acceleration and retardation), or for the fact that the motions of the planets are sometimes direct, or in the order of the signs of the Zodiac, and sometimes retrograde (progression and regression). To remedy this defect, ‘to save these appearances,’ two devices had been introduced, that of the Eccentric and that of the Epicycle.”

“Let it be supposed that, while the Earth is the centre of the Primum Mobile [i.e. the outermost of the spheres] and consequently of the whole mundane system, the inclosed planetary spheres, or at all events that of the Sun, need not be strictly concentric, i.e. need not strictly have this centre, but may be eccentric, i.e. may revolve round a point somewhat to the side of the Earth; then, as the Earth would sometimes be nearer to the moving body, and sometimes farther off, the acceleration or retardation of the motion would be sufficiently accounted for.

“Again, let it be supposed that the body of a planet is not fixed strictly in its cycle, or the circumference of its wheeling sphere, but moves flylike in an epicycle, or small circle revolving round a fixed point in that wheeling circumference; then, according as the planet was in that part of its epicycle which is beyond, or in that part which is within, its cycle, its motion would for the time be progressive, i.e. with its cycle, or retrograde, i.e. against its cycle. Actually, by a complicated use of these two devices,...the Ptolemaic astronomers had contrived, with a tolerable approach to completeness, to account for all the phenomena of the solar and planetary motions, but only by such a dizzying intricacy of conceived wheels within wheels (‘centric and eccentric’) and wheels upon wheels (‘cycle and epicycle’) as Milton describes.”

There is a great deal about these theories of the Eccentric and Epicycle in Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy, II. 2. 111, the chapter entitled “a Digression of the Ayre”; see especially pp. 381, 382, 384 in the ninth edition (1800). Like Milton, he ridicules the too-ingenious speculations of astronomers, who, “to solve all appearances and objections, have invented new hypotheses, and fabricated new systems of the World...The World is tossed in a blanket amongst them, they hoise the Earth up and down like a ball, make it stand and go at their pleasures” (pp. 388, 389).

Compare also Bacon's Essay Of Superstition :

“It was gravely said of the prelates in the Council of Trent, where the doctrine of the Schoolmen bare great sway, that the Schoolmen were like astronomers, which did feign eccentrics and epicycles, and such engines of orbs, to save the phenomena<sup>1</sup>, though they knew there were no such things; and, in like manner, that the Schoolmen had framed a number of subtle and intricate axioms and theorems to save the practice of the Church.” See also his Essay Of Wisdom for a Man's Self.

So in The Advancement of Learning, II. 8. 5 :

“As the same phenomena in astronomy are satisfied by the received astronomy of the diurnal motion, and the proper motions of the planets, with their eccentrics and epicycles, and likewise by the theory of Copernicus, who supposed the earth to move, and the calculations are indifferently agreeable to both, so the ordinary face and view of experience is many times satisfied by several theories and philosophies; whereas to find the real truth requireth another manner of severity and attention” (Clarendon ed., p. 127).

Sir Thomas Browne uses this astronomical metaphor in characteristic fashion :

<sup>1</sup> Echoed, perhaps, in Milton's phrase (VIII. 82).

“In philosophy, where truth seems double-faced, there is no man more paradoxical than myself: but in divinity I love to keep the road; and, though not in an implicit, yet an humble faith, follow the great wheel of the Church, by which I move; not reserving any proper poles, or motion from the epicycle of my own brain” (Religio Medici, I. vi.).

Compare too his Christian Morals, I. xix.: “Hang early plummets upon the heels of pride, and let ambition have but an epicycle and narrow circuit in thee.”

For eccentric, see the note on v. 623, and compare one of Milton’s favourite astronomical metaphors in The Reason of Church Government, I. 1:

“Yet is it to be conceived that...our happiness [“of the blessed in paradise”] may orb itself into a thousand vagancies of glory and delight, and with a kind of eccentric equation be, as it were, an invariable planet of joy and felicity” (P. W. II. 442).

L.

PARADISE LOST, IX. 25—41.

It was a subject of discussion among Milton’s early critics whether Paradise Lost should be called “heroic.” The question was first raised by Dryden in the Discourse on Satire (1693) prefixed to his translation of Juvenal, thus:

“As for Mr Milton, whom we all admire with so much justice, his subject is not that of an heroic poem, properly so called. His design is the losing of our happiness; his event [i.e. end, termination] is not prosperous, like that of all other epic works; his heavenly machines are many, and his human persons are but two.” And, “besides questioning whether ‘Paradise Lost’ was an heroic poem, Dryden had argued [in the preface to Vergil] that the devil was the hero and not Adam<sup>1</sup>.”

Addison said: “I shall waive the discussion of that point, which was started some years since, whether Milton’s ‘Paradise Lost’ may be called an heroic poem. Those who will not give it that title may call it (if they please) a divine poem.” Addison held that an heroic poem should not end unhappily and that therefore Paradise Lost, to this extent, forfeits the title “heroic”; but he argued that the defect was inherent in the subject, and that Milton showed exquisite judgment and invention in remedying it (see the note on XI. 356—58).

<sup>1</sup> C. H. Firth, Johnson’s Life of Milton, p. 135. Several of the passages in this section are taken from his full note.

Johnson dealt with the objection more summarily :

“The questions, whether the action of the poem be strictly one, whether the poem can be properly termed heroic, and who is the hero, are raised by such readers as draw their principles of judgment rather from books than from reason. Milton, though he entitled ‘Paradise Lost’ only a ‘poem,’ yet calls it himself ‘heroic song.’ Dryden petulantly and indecently denies the heroism of Adam, because he was overcome; but there is no reason why the hero should not be unfortunate, except established practice, since success and virtue do not go necessarily together. Cato is the hero of Lucan; but Lucan’s authority will not be suffered by Quintilian to decide. However, if success be necessary, Adam’s deceiver was at last crushed; Adam was restored to his Maker’s favour, and therefore may securely resume his human rank.”

The ordinary conception of an “heroical” poem would have been fulfilled more obviously, at least, if Milton had carried out his design of a poem on King Arthur<sup>1</sup> or King Alfred<sup>2</sup>.

M.

PARADISE LOST, x. 658—62.

Dr Masson illustrates the astrological terms in these lines by a passage translated from “an old Latin catechism or text-book of Astronomy (Bebelius, De Sphæra, 1582)”; it runs as follows:

“What are the aspects of planets? They are such arrangements and distances of the planets as allow them to intercommunicate their influence. How many species of aspects are there? Five—Conjunction, Sextile, Square, Trine, and Diametral or Opposition. What is the first? The first kind of aspects, called Conjunction, is when two stars or planets are conjoined and as it were connected in one line; by the Greeks it is called Synod. What is the Sextile aspect? When two planets or stars are distant from each other a sixth part of the Zodiac, viz. two signs or 60°. What is the Square aspect (quadratus aspectus)? When two stars look at each other at an interval of three signs, making a quadrant or 90°. What is Trine (Trigonus) aspect? When the distance of the stars measures a third of the circle,—that is 120° or four signs. What is the Diametral aspect? It is the opposite configuration of two luminaries, which are distant from each other  $180^\circ$  or half a circle....

<sup>1</sup> See Introduction.

<sup>2</sup> Cf. the Cambridge MSS.: “A Heroicall Poem may be founded somewhere in Alfreds reigne.” Curiously enough, of all the subjects enumerated in the MSS., this is the only one to which he applies the word “heroical.”

"How are the aspects divided? Into happy and unhappy. Which are the happy and prosperous aspects? The prosperous and benign are the Trine<sup>1</sup> and Sextile. Why are they called happy? Because the rays of the planets, falling obliquely and mutually yielding, infuse and communicate to inferior bodies gentler and less violent influences. What are the unhappy aspects? The unhappy or malignant are Conjunction<sup>2</sup>, Square, and Opposition<sup>3</sup>. Why are they called malignant? Because the planets, meeting each other with their rays, mutually collide, and neither can yield to the other on account of the directness of their onset. Therefore they exercise greater force in stimulating and varying seasons, and in mixing the temperaments of animals and the qualities of the air. Whence is this variety of effects known? The effect and variety of configuration were first observed in the case of the Moon, and afterwards transferred to the other planets by artists (artifices) who, by great sharpness of intelligence, and more attentive observation, endeavoured to find out and display the causes of events from the very nature of the heavenly motions and the species of the aspects." Dr Masson adds, "Milton, it will be noted, names all the aspects, giving Conjunction its Greek name of Synod." Milton had used very similar astrological language in one of his pamphlets on divorce (Tetrachordon):

"For nature hath her zodiac also, keeps her great annual circuit over human things, as truly as the sun and planets in the firmament; hath her anomalies, hath her obliquities in ascensions and declinations, accesses and recesses, as blamelessly as they in heaven. And sitting in her planetary orb with two reins in each hand, one strait, the other loose, tempers the course of minds as well as bodies to several conjunctions and oppositions, friendly or unfriendly aspects, consenting ofttest with reason, but never contrary" (P. W. III. 403).

<sup>1</sup> Cf. Dryden, Annus Mirabilis, st. 292:

"Now frequent trines the happier lights among,
And high-raised Jove from his dark prison freed,
Those weights took off that on his planet hung,
Will gloriously the new-laid work succeed" (i. e. make to succeed)

In his note (Clarendon ed., p. 259) Mr Christie gives other illustrations from Dryden (who "was learned in astrology and a firm believer"), e.g. his Ode to the Memory of Mrs Ann Killebrew:

"For sure the milder planets did combine
On thy auspicious horoscope to shine
And even the most malicious were in trine."

<sup>2</sup> Cf. Henry IV. II. 4. 286, 287. Selden in his Table-Talk has a section (xxvi.) on the "Great Conjunction" (of Saturn and Jupiter).

<sup>3</sup> Cf. Richard III. IV. 4. 215, "Lo, at their births good stars were opposite," and 402, "Be opposite all planets of good luck."

GLOSSARY.

Milton's diction is essentially Elizabethan: the diction of the Authorised Version (1611) of the Bible and of Shakespeare. Paradise Lost, therefore, though published in 1667, is best illustrated from the works of the generation contemporary with Shakespeare. Hence many of the illustrations in the Glossary and Notes are taken from the writers who may collectively and conveniently be described as Elizabethan.

A marked feature of Milton's diction, as of his style, is his classical bias. He employs many words in their classical sense, just as he employs many classical idioms and figures of speech. This classicism of diction is still more conspicuous in his prose, in which he introduces numbers of long, sonorous words derived from the Latin. Sometimes he invents such words. Paradise Lost contains innumerable examples of his classical diction.

Another interesting feature is his partiality for Italianised forms. This is more conspicuous in his verse, perhaps because he felt so strongly, and wished his readers to be reminded of, the spell and fascination of the great Italian epics. By his own statement, he had studied Italian much before he went to Italy. His letters and prose-works reveal his love of it (I do not remember any interesting reference in his works to French literature); and several short poems testify to his very considerable mastery of the language. Instances of his leaning towards Italian are—ammiral, harald, Soldan, sovrán; sdein (IV. 50), serenale (IV. 769); azurn, Ital. azzurino (Comus, 893).

Abassin, IV. 280, 'Abyssinian.' Abyssinia is from Arabic Habesch, 'mixture, confusion,' a name given to the country by the Arabs on account of the mixed character of its inhabitants. This Arabic word was Latinised by the Portuguese as Abassia and Abassinos, whence the present form.

abide, IV. 87; cf. Julius Cæsar, III. 2. 119, "If it be found so, some will dear abide it," i.e. suffer for it. This sense is given in the old Dictionaries, such as Cotgrave's (1611), and Minshew's Guide into the Tongues (1625). The metaphor is 'to await the consequences of a deed and so, in the end, to pay for it.' Probably abide in this sense has been influenced by, though etymologically quite distinct from, aby, 'to expiate, pay for' = A.S. intensive prefix á + bycgan, 'to buy.'

abject, I. 312, 'cast down,' the literal sense of Lat. abjectus, the past participle of abjicere, 'to cast away or down.' In Tindale's New Testament (1534), 2 Cor. vii. 6 is rendered "He that comfortith the abjecte" = "those that are cast down" in the Authorised Version. For the ordinary figurative use cf. IX. 572.

abuse, I. 479, 'to deceive, delude'; cf. Fr. abuser (Lat. abuti, 'to misuse'). This is a common Elizabethan use; cf. Cymbeline, III. 4. 123, King Lear, IV. 1. 24.

abyss, I. 21, 658; Lat. abyssus, from Gk. ἄβυσσος, 'bottomless'—á-, 'not' + βυσσός, 'bottom, depth.' Shakespeare always uses the older form abysm, from Fr. abisme; cf. The Tempest, I. 2. 50, "In the dark backward and abysm of time."

admire, I. 690, II. 677, 'to wonder,' the literal sense of Lat. admirari. Cf. admiration = 'wonder,' III. 271, and in Hamlet, III. 2. 339, "your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration"; and admirable = 'to be wondered at,' in A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v. 27.

adust, XI. 635, 'dried, scorched'; the p.p. of the verb adure, Lat. adurere; cf. VI. 514. We also find a noun, adustion. "It was a tall figure, of a philosophic, serious, adust look," A Sentimental Journey ("The Mystery").

advise, II. 376, 'to consider'; often used reflexively in this sense, like Fr. s'aviser, 'to consider.' Cf. I Chronicles xxi. 12, "advise thyself what word I shall bring again to him that sent me" (Revised Version "consider").

alarmed, IV. 985; Fr. alarme = Ital. all' arme, 'to arms!' (Lat. ad illa arma); so that properly an alarm was a summons to take up arms, i.e. prepare for battle. Here alarmed means that Satan was prepared for the fight—not that he was afraid. Dryden (Æn. III. 313, 314) has the phrase take alarm (VI. 549):

"Misenus sounds a charge: we take th' alarm,

And our strong hands with swords and bucklers arm."

alchemy, II. 517, 'metal'; properly alchemy, from Arabic alkīmīa: al = 'the' (Arabic article), + kīmīā, a corruption of χημία, used in late Gk. for the chemical transmutation of metals. Probably χημία was the Gk. form of the native name of Egypt (= 'the land of Khem'), and meant 'the Egyptian art.' Later, through confusion with χεῖν, 'to pour' (cf. χυμός, 'sap, juice'), there arose a form χυμεία: whence in E. the old spellings 'alchymy,' 'alchumie,' and 'chymist' (short for 'alchymist'). From meaning the art of amalgamating metals 'alchemy' came to be used of the amalgam or metallic composition produced by the process. A certain amalgam, like gold, was called 'alchemy gold' or 'alchymy'; cf. Fletcher, Purple Island, VII. 39, "Such were his arms, false gold, true alchymie." This mixed metal, in which brass was the chief constituent, was much employed for trumpets (II. 517).

alley, IV. 626, 'a garden-walk,' especially one "with branches overgrown" (IV. 627). Cf. Much Ado About Nothing, I. 2. 10, "a thick-pleached alley," i.e. thickly interwoven overhead; and Tennyson, Ode to Memory, 5:

"Or a garden bower'd close
With plaited alleys of the trailing rose."

O. Fr. alee, Fr. allée.

Alp, II. 620; formerly used, like Alpes in late Latin poets, of any high (especially snow-capped) mountain. Cf. S. A. 628, "Nor breath of vernal air from snowy Alp"; and Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 112, "Certaine Alpes or Mountaines directly Southward." So the Italians use alpestro = 'steep, alpine'; cf. the Inferno, XII. 2. A Celtic word; cf. Gaelic alp, 'a high mountain.'

amarant, III. 352; Gk. ἀμάραντος, 'unfading'—the word used in I Peter v. 4 of the "crown of glory that fadeth not away." The flower typifies immortality. M. writes the correct form; the more usual 'amaranth' is due to confusion with Gk. ἀνθος, 'a flower.'

amañ; an intensive word, emphasising the sense of the verb. O. E. magn = 'power'; from the root whence μέγας, magnus.

ambrosial; used by M. of that which delights the sense of smell (III. 135, IX. 852) or taste. Strictly, ἀμβροσία, from ἀμβρόσιος (a lengthened form of ἀμβροτος, 'immortal'), meant the food of the gods.

amerce, I. 609, literally 'to punish'; cf. Romeo and Juliet, III. 1. 195, "But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine." Fr. amercier, 'to fine,' which was derived from the O. Fr. phrase estre à merci = 'to be in the mercy of any one as to the amount of a fine (Lat. merx) which he could impose.' Legally an Amerciament differed from a fine thus: "Fines...are punishments certain, which grow expressly from some Statute; and Amerciaments are arbitrarily imposed by Assessors" (Blount, Glossographia, 1656). Fr. merci, whence E. mercy, is connected with merx (= 'a fine' in Late Latin), and not with miseriordia.

amiable, IV. 250, VIII. 484, IX. 899, 'lovely, pleasing'; cf. Psalm lxxxiv. 1, "How amiable are thy dwellings" (Prayer-Book). Lat. amicabilis, 'friendly.'

ammiral, I. 294. The chief vessel of a fleet was called the 'admiral' because it carried the admiral or chief officer. Cf. Hakluyt, I. 401, "the sayd William met with sixe ships.....and tooke of them the Admirall." The word was indeed quite common in the 16th century works of travel; cf. Webb's Travels, 1590: "her Majesties shippe called the Willoughby was our Admirall, and the Harry appertayning to the company of the Merchants, was our Vice-admirall, Maister William Burrow then being our Captaine and maister" (Arber's ed., p. 19). In the form ammiral M. imitates Ital. ammiraglia, which Florio (1598) renders by "an admirall or chief ship." Properly admiral means 'ruler, commander,' being derived from Arabic Amir, 'ruler' (cf. Ameer of Afghanistan and Emir); and formerly the full phrase "admiral of the sea" was used. The d in admiral (older form amyrel) arose through confusion with Lat. admirabilis and admirable.

amphisbæna, X. 524; Gk. ἀμφίβασινα, 'a kind of serpent that can go either forwards or backwards' (Gk. ἀμφί, 'on both sides' + βαλεῖν, 'to go'). See the Agamemnon 1233. It was supposed to have a head at either end of its body: hence the allusion in Tennyson's Queen Mary, III. 4:

"For heretic and traitor are all one;
Two vipers of one breed—an amphisbæna,
Each end a sting."

Dante has the word in the Serpent-passage in the Inferno, XXIV. 87.

annoy; derived through O. Fr. anoi, 'vexation,' from Lat. in odio, used in the phrase in odio est mihi, 'it is odious, to me.' In VI. 369 it has the old Shakespearian sense 'to hurt, harm.' Cognate with 'noisome' = 'unpleasant,' especially of smell, which practically is short for 'anoisome'; cf. IX. 946.

apparent, IV. 608, X. 112 = 'visible, manifest' (Lat. apparens); as in P. R. II. 397. Cf. Richard III. III. 5. 30, "apparent open guilt," and King John, IV. 2. 93, "apparent foul play."

apply, IV. 264; commonly explained 'to practise, engage in' (cf. the abbreviated form ply); for this use, formerly not uncommon, cf. Fuller's Worthies, "That he might the more effectually apply his private devotions," Works (ed. 1840), III. 402. I believe, however, that the sense intended by M. is 'add,' and that the word was so interpreted by Collins and Thomson. Cf. The Passions, 49, 50:

"Dejected Pity at his side
Her soul-subduing voice applied";

and The Seasons (Spring):

"the woodlands round Applied their quire."

'To add' may come from the general sense of apply = 'to bring to bear upon'; or M. may simply have imitated the rare use of Latin applicare = 'to add.'

approve, IX. 367, II. 40, 'to show' by bringing a thing to the test (Lat. ad, 'to' + proba, 'a test'). Cf. 2 Corinthians vii. 11, "In all things ye have approved yourselves to be clear in this matter."

areed, or aread, IV. 962, 'to advise'; A.S. á-rédan = a-, intensive prefix, + rédan, 'to advise.' Cf. rede (or read), 'counsel,' as in Hamlet, I. 3. 51, "recks not his own rede." But the commoner meanings of areed were 'to divine, conjecture' (cf. the cognate Germ. errathen, 'to guess'); and 'to declare, tell,' as often in Spenser; cf. The Faerie Queene, I. 9. 28, II. 3. 14.

asphodel, IX. 1040; Gk. ἀσφόδελος, a kind of lily, supposed to flourish especially in the Elysian fields; cf. Comus, 838. Daffodil is a curious corruption of ἀσφόδελος through Low Lat. affodillus.

assay, I. 6. III. 90, X. 567, 865, 'to try, attempt'; M. always uses this form, from O. Fr. assai, a variant of O. Fr. essai, whence comes our commoner form essay. Lat. exagium, Gk. ἐξάγιον, 'a weighing, trial of weight.' Now assay is commonly used of the testing of metals.

astonish, I. 266, VI. 838; formed from the older verb astony = O. Fr. estonner, modern Fr. étonner, from Lat. extonare, 'to thunder.' The original notion of astony (see IX. 890), astonish, and astound (I. 281) was 'to stupefy, strike senseless, as with a thunderbolt.' Cf. the Argument to bk. I., line 12, and Milton's History of Britain, "astonished and struck with superstition as with a planet." See The Faerie Queene, IV. 8. 43.

ay me, IV. 86, 'alas'; cf. Lycidas, 56, "Ay me! I fondly dream!" It is frequent in Shakespeare. Cotgrave (1611) has, "Oh: aye me; an interjection expressing sense of paine, or of smart." O. Fr. aymi, 'alas, for me' cf. Ital. ahimé, Gk. οἴμοι.

baleful, I. 36, II. 576, 'full of sorrow, unhappy'; commonly 'full of harm.' cf. Comus, 255, "baleful drugs." A.S. bealu = 'evil, sorrow.'

barricado, VIII. 241, 'to fortify.' The noun barricado is from Spanish barricada, literally 'a rampart formed by barrels' (Span. barrica = 'barrel'), and so 'any rampart, fortification.' Cf. All's Well that Ends Well, I. I. 124; and Milton's treatise Of Reformation in England, I. : "the table of communion, now become a table of separation, stands like an exalted platform upon the brow of the quire, fortified with bulwark and barricado, to keep off the profane touch of the laics" (P. W. II. 378).

bases, IX. 36. Cf. The Faerie Queene, V. 5. 20:

"she made him to be dight

In womans weedes, that is to manhood shame,
And put before his lap a napron white,
Instead of Curiets [i.e. cuirasses] and bases fit for fight."

Peele in his Polyhymnia, 1590 (a description of a tournament), speaks of a knight clad "In armour gilt and bases full of cost."

beest, I. 84. The verb be, from A.S. béon (the infinitive), was conjugated in the pres. tense indicative as late as Milton's time, especially in the 2nd pers. sing. with if. M. indeed does not use "if thou beest" elsewhere, but the idiom is frequent in Shakespeare; cf. The Tempest, III. 2. 137, "if thou beest a man," and v. 134, "if thou be'st Prospero."

Behemoth, VII. 471. "This word is the Heb. plural of behmâh, and signifies 'beasts,' but in Job xl. 15—24 some large animal, e.g. the hippopotamus, is evidently intended"—(Cambridge Companion to the Bible). M. meant the elephant.

bicker, VI. 766; used of gleaming, darting light. Cf. Tennyson, Geraint and Enid:

"turning round she saw Dust and the points of lances bicker in it"; and The Princess, v. The word is also used of rippling water or a quick-flowing brook, as in the first stanza of Tennyson's The Brook. Thomson in The Castle of Indolence, I. 3, speaks of glittering streamlets that "bickered through the sunny glade."

blanc, X. 656, 'pale,' from the literal sense 'white,' Fr. blanc. For the form blanc (i.e. blank), obsolete as an adjective, cf. the noun blanc, 'white paint.'

bland, v. 5; used poetically of that which is "soft, mild, pleasing to the senses; gentle, genial, balmy, soothing."

blow, v. 22, 'to bloom, flower'; cf. Lycidas, 48, "When first the white-thorn blows." Minsheu has, "To blow as a flower, or to open as a bud...bluhen, fleurir." Blow, bloom, blossom are cognate, and akin to Lat. flos and its derivatives, flower, flourish, etc.

boon, IV. 242, 'gracious, bounteous'; a poetical use. Cf. Thomson, Liberty, II., "All that boon Nature could luxuriant pour"; and The Castle of Indolence, I. 57:

"Of the fine stores he nothing would impart,

Which or boon Nature gave, or nature-painting art."

So in Collins's Ode The Manners (end):

"O Nature boon, from whom proceed

Each forceful thought, each prompted deed."

Now only in the phrase "boon companion." Fr. bon (Lat. bonus).

brinded, VII. 466, 'striped, streaked'; cf. Comus, 443, "the brinded lioness." An older form than brindled, it means literally 'marked as with a brand,' and generally indicates stripes of dark colour on the tawny coat of an animal. See Macbeth, IV. I. I, "Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd."

brown, IX. 1088, 'dark'; in poetry a constant epithet of shade and twilight. Cf. Il Penseroso, 134, "shadows brown"; P. R. II. 293, "alleys brown," i.e. shady paths; and imbrown in IV. 246. Imitated from the similar use of bruno and imbrunire by Italian poets. Thus in his 2nd Ital. Sonnet M. has "al imbrunir di sera," with which editors compare Petrarch, Canzoni, IV. 3, and Tasso, Gerusalemme Liberata, v. 76. So in the Inferno, II. I, where l'aer bruno refers to twilight.

bull, III. 492; a papal edict, of an important character: "so named from the bulla (or round leaden seal), which is attached to the document...and gives authenticity to it" (Addis and Arnold, Catholic Dict.).

bullion, I. 704; Fr. bouillon, Lat. bullio, 'a mass of metal,' from bullire, 'to boil.' Bullion is connected with Lat. bulla, 'a seal,' in so far as bulla itself is from bullire.

buxom, II. 842, v. 270, 'yielding'; from A.S. biġan, 'to bend'; cf. Germ. beugsam, 'easily bent, pliant.' Originally buxom meant 'obedient'; cf. the Glosse to Spenser's The Shepherds Calender, September, "Buxome and bent, meeke and obedient." Then came the sense 'yielding, pliant'; cf. Fairfax, Tasso, xv. 12, "with strong oars...brush the buxom wave."

Kan, XI. 388. Kaan, or Khan, was the title of the supreme ruler of China during the reigns of the Mongol Emperors descended from Chinghiz, or Genghis, Khan (the name corrupted into Cambuscan—see note on Il Pen. 110). In Elizabethan writers Kaan often appears as Cham; cf. Much Ado About Nothing, II. I. 274—77, "will...fetch you a hair off the great Cham's beard." Frequently the Cham is spoken of as the ruler of the district of Central Asia vaguely called Tartary. Cf. Giles Fletcher's Of the Russe Common Wealth, 1591, "The greatest and mightiest of them (the Tartars) is the Chrim Tartar (whom some call the Great Cham) that lieth South, and Southeastward from Russia." Hexham's edition, too, of Mercator's Atlas (1636) describes Tartary as "the Empire of the Grand Cham." Very little was then known about Central Asia.

caravan, VII. 428. Properly (1) a company of merchants or pilgrims travelling together, as a protection against robbers, in the East. Hence (2) any 'company, troop'; as here and in P. R. I. 323. Then (3) 'a covered waggon'; cf. the abbreviation van. Persian kārūān, 'escort.'

career, I. 766; a word specially associated with tournaments, signifying 'a short gallop at high speed.' Cf. the Animadversions, "all this careering with spear in rest" (P. W. III. 90). Fr. carrière, Lat. carraria (i.e. via), 'a road for carriages.'

causey, X. 415, 'a raised way'; now obsolete except in dialects. Cf., however, Proverbs xv. 19, "the way of the righteous is made plain," where the margin has "raised up as a causey." In I Chronicles xxvi. 16 the Bible of 1611 had "by the causey of the going up," afterwards changed to causeway; the latter is a compound of the old world causey+way. A causey implies a paved road, such as a paved track across a moor or boggy land, or the Roman paved roads in Northumberland; hence sometimes used colloquially of the pavement or side-walk contrasted with the road proper. From Late Lat. calciata (i.e. calciata via), literally 'a way made firm by treading with the heel' (calx).

champain, IV. 134, 'open, flat'; applied to unenclosed land, downs, large fields; cf. Lucrece, 1247, "a goodly champaign plain." Minsheu's Dictionary entitled The Guide into the Tongues (1625) has: "champion, or plaine ground." The Dialect Dict. aptly quotes the title of Tusser's Husbandry (1580): "Five hundred pointes of good Husbandrie, as well for the Champion, or open cuntry, as also for the woodland." Commonly a noun (VI. 2); cf. Deut. xi. 30, "the Canaanites, which dwell in the champaign over against Gilgal." O. Fr. champaigne, modern Fr. campagne, Ital. campagna, Lat. campania—from campus.

charity, III. 216, IV. 756, XII. 584; then often used = 'love, benevolence.' Cf. I Cor. xiii., where the Revised Version of the Bible substitutes love for charity throughout, the Greek being ἀγάπη (Vulgate caritas). In the three places where M. uses the word the meaning is 'love.' Cf. Wordsworth, The Excursion, IX. 238, "The charities that soothe, and heal, and bless"; and Tennyson, The Princess, VII., "fair charities." Lat. carus, 'dear.'

charm, IV. 642, 651, 'song.' M. may have supposed it to be derived from Lat. carmen, 'song,' but really charm as used of the song of birds is of Anglo-Saxon origin. It is a variant form of Middle E. cherme or chirm = A.S. cirm. This old word (allied to chirp and the Germ. jammern) meant a blended singing or noise of many children, birds or bees; cf. Palsgrave (1530), "what a cherme these byrdes [birds] make, comme ces oyseaux jargonent." A Shropshire rustic might still say, "what charm them childern bin makin i' the school" (i.e. what a confused noise). Cf. also the dialect-expression 'to charm or cherm bees,' i.e. to follow a swarm of bees, beating a tea-tray, or anything similar, to make them settle. The noisy chatter of a flock of starlings is exactly a charm or cherm. Tennyson uses charm accurately; cf. The Progress of Spring, IV., "I hear a charm of song thro' all the land." Probably cherme or chirm would never have got this variant form charm but for the influence of Lat. carmen.

Cherubim; the correct form=Heb. Kherūbhīm, the plural of Kherūbh; adopted in the Revised Version of the Bible. The oldest forms in English, as still in French, were Cherubin, sing., and Cherubins, plural. Cf. Coverdale, "Thou God of Israel, which dwellest upon Cherubin," Isaiah xxxvii. 16; and Wyclif, "Two Goldun Cherubyns," Exodus xxv. 18. Later, as in the Bible of 1611, Cherub, sing., and Cherubims, plural, were used, as being closer to the Hebrew. M. wrote Cherube for singular (a still nearer approach in sound than 'Cherub' to the ū of the Heb. Kherūbh), and the true plural Cherubim in his poetry; but Cherubims occurs in Of Reformation in England, II. (P. W. II. 406). Kherūbh is said to come from the Babylonian word for the figure of the winged bull which stood at the door of a house to keep off evil spirits. The Jews probably owed it to the Phœnicians.

combustion, I. 46; properly 'conflagration,' from Lat. comburare, 'to burn up'; cf. Selden's Table-Talk: "After Luther had made a combustion in Germany about religion" (Reynold's ed., p. 34). Hence metaphorically 'utter confusion,' or 'destruction,' as here. Cf. VI. 225, and Macbeth, II. 3. 63. In M. always a very strong word; cf. Of Reformation in England, II., "to threaten uproar and combustion, and shake the brand of civil discord," P. W. II. 417.

concoct, V. 412; Lat. concoquere, 'to boil together, reduce by heat': especially, 'to reduce into a state of nourishment,' i.e. digest. Cf. M. in On Education, "The like also would not be inexpedient after meat, to assist and cherish nature in her first concoction," P. W. III. 476.

conjured, II. 693, 'banded (literally 'sworn') together in a conspiracy'; Lat. conjuratus. Cf. Surrey's translation (1557) of Æneid II., "They bind themselves with the conjured bands," and The Faerie Queene, V. 10. 26.

connive, X. 624; Lat. connivere, 'to close the eyes, wink,' hence figuratively 'to shut one's eyes to a fault.' Now it always has the bad sense of 'winking at something wrong'; but in Elizabethan E. it also had the good sense 'to tolerate, be long-suffering.' Cf. S. A. 465—67:

"He [the Almighty]

Will not connive, or linger, thus provoked,

But will arise and his great name assert."

In Of Reformation in England, II., M. praises "the constancy of our nobility and commons of England, ... whose calm and temperate connivance could sit still and smile out the stormy bluster..." P. W. II. 406.

couch, II. 536, 'to fix the spear in the rest' (Fr. coucher). The 'rest' was "a strong part of the armour at the breast, against which they placed the butt of the spear to give more force to the charge" (Keightley). Cf. I Henry VI. III. 2. 134, "A braver soldier never couched lance."

cresset, I. 728; a vessel of iron to hold some burning substance (e.g. grease, oil, tarred rope) and serve as a lantern or beacon; usually mounted on the top of a pole, or hung from a roof; cf. Scott, Marmion, "A cresset in an iron chain." It was an archaic word even in Milton's time; cf. Minsheu (1625): "a Cresset, an old word used for a Lanterne, or burning Beacon." Cotgrave's Dictionary (ed. 1652) adds a curious little detail: "Falot. A Cresset light (such as they use in Play-houses)." Fr. cresset or crasset, 'a cup for holding grease.'

cry, II. 654, 'a pack'; cf. Coriolanus, III. 3. 120, "You common cry of curs!" The sense comes from the hounds' cry or notes.

damasked, IV. 334. The noun damask meant properly a rich kind of silk ornamented with raised figures, originally manufactured at Damascus. By metaphor, the word came to imply 'variegation'—as here. Cf. As You Like It, III. 5. 123, and Shakespeare, Sonnet 130, "I have seen roses damask'd, red and white."

darkling, III. 39, 'in the dark'; cf. A Midsummer-Night's Dream, II. 2. 86, "O, wilt thou darkling leave me? do not so," and King Lear, I. 4. 237. It is a substantival adverb, in which -ling or -long is a relic of a dative case-ending; cf. headlong, sidelong (Middle E. hedling, sideling). In Scotch the form is lins; cf. hafflins = 'half,' e.g. in Burns, Cotter's Saturday Night, 62, "While Jenny hafflins is afraid to speak."

decent, III. 644, 'comely'; used by M. only here and in Il Penseroso, 36, in each place = Lat. decens, 'comely, graceful.' Cf. Pope, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, 51, 52:

"By foreign hands thy dying eyes were closed,

By foreign hands thy decent limbs composed."

Cf. decencies = 'graceful acts or words' in VIII. 601.

descant, IV. 603; strictly, a musical term for variations added to a "plain song," i.e. a melody in its simplest form. Cf. Jeremy Taylor, "after the angel had told his message in plain song, the whole chorus joined in descant." M., whose use of musical terms is very accurate, employs descant here to signify the varied notes of the nightingale. Cf. Isaac Walton's description—"the clear airs, the sweet descants, the natural rising and falling, the doubling and redoubling of her voice" (i.e. the nightingale's), Complete Angler, I. 1. So Spenser says of the thrush, "the Mavis descant playes," Epithalamium, 81. Contrast "the plain-song cuckoo" in A Midsummer-Night's Dream, III. 1. 134, said in allusion to the bird's simple, monotonous note. In S. A. 1228 descant has a figurative sense.

determine. The senses 'to put an end to, bring to an end,' and 'to come to an end, cease to exist to be in force,' are common in Elizabethan writers, but now chiefly confined to legal documents. Cf. 2 Henry IV. IV. 5. 82, Coriolanus, III. 3. 43. The idea of 'end' (Lat. terminus) is conspicuous in II. 330, VI. 318, XI. 227.

dint, II. 813, 'a blow,' its original sense; also used of the dent (another form of dint) or impression left by a blow; cf. Shakespeare, Antony and Cleopatra, II. 6. 39, "targes undinted," i.e. shields not marked by blows. Dint is still a north-country word for 'a blow, shock.'

disastrous, I. 597, 'boding misfortune.' Disaster (Lat. dis + astrum, 'a star') is one of the words belonging to astrology. Cf. Minsheu: "disastre, misfortune...proprie incommodum aliquod ex influentijs Astrorum." Cf. 'ill-starred.'

divan, X. 457, 'a council,' properly the council of the Sultan or some Oriental sovereign or governor; Arabic dīwān, 'a council, tribunal.' Fr. douane, 'a custom-house,' comes from dīwān.

dole, IV. 894, 'sorrow, pain'; O. Fr. doel, Fr. deuil = Late Lat. dolium, from the stem of dolere, 'to grieve.' Cf. Hamlet, I. 2. 13, "In equal scale weighing delight and dole."

draff, X. 630, 'refuse food,' especially food given to swine. Cf. Cotgrave's French Dictionary (1611), "Mangeaille pour les porceaux: Swillings, washings, draffe." Samson was given "the draff of servile food," S. A. 574. Used figuratively; cf. Milton's Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce, "the brood of Belial, the draff of men," P. W. III. 173. 'As bad as draff' = 'utterly worthless' is a common Yorkshire phrase. Cognate with drab, 'an untidy woman.'

element, II. 490, 'sky,' a common Elizabethan use; cf. Henry V. IV. 1. 105, 107, "the king is but a man, as I am: the element shows to him as it doth to me." So in King Lear, III. 1. 4.

elixir, III. 607 = Arabic el iksir, the philosopher's stone; see note on III. 601, and cf. Chaucer, Canterbury Tales, 16331: "the philosophers ston | Elixir cleped." That was the strict sense of elixir; but it was also variously used by alchemists of (1) a liquid by which metals might be transmuted into gold, (2) a tincture of gold (aurum potable), which would prolong life; hence (3) a life-giving cordial, or substance, or force. Arabic el iksir is really a Greek word (ξηρόν or ξηρῖον), and means 'the dry-principle.'

emblem, IV. 703, 'inlaid or mosaic work,' i.e. ornamentation inserted into the surface of an object, e.g. a floor (as here) or a table. Gk. ἐμ- βλημα, 'a thing put in, an ornament.' Now commonly = 'an allegorical representation of, a symbol.'

empyrean; literally 'fiery, formed of fire,' I. 117, II. 430. But M. uses it generally in the sense 'heavenly,' i.e. as the adj. from empyrean = 'heaven.' Lat. empyreus, Gk. ἐμπύρειος, 'in the fire (πῦρ), fiery hot, burning.' M. always accents the adj. empyrean, but the noun empyrean (II. 771).

engine, I. 750; in its original sense 'contrivance,' i.e. something made with ingenuity (Lat. ingenium). Later, 'an implement, instrument,' especially of war; so in II. 923, where it may mean 'cannon,' as in VI. 484, 518. Cf. Othello, III. 3. 355, "you mortal engines" (i.e. cannon).

enormous, I. 511, V. 297, 'monstrous, out of all measure,' rule—the literal sense of Lat. enormis. Cf. Of Reformation in England, I., "misshapen and enormous prelatism," P. W. II. 373. Blount, Glossographia, has, "Enormity, want of measure, or rule, unevenness, hugeness."

essence; properly 'being, existence' (Lat. essentia, from esse; cf. Gk. ousia); hence 'something that is—an existence, entity—especially something spiritual, a heavenly, immaterial being,' like the angels (I. 138). Cf. Sir Thomas Browne, "those noble essences in heaven bear a friendly regard unto their fellow-natures on earth" (Religio Medici, I. xxxi.). In the singular M. always uses essence to mean 'constituent substance' (I. 425, II. 215, IX. 166).

exercise, II. 89; in the sense of Lat. exercere, 'to harass, torment'; cf. Vergil, Æneid v. 725, nate...Iliacis exercite fatis. So in Ecclesiastes i. 13, "this sore travail hath God given to the sons of man to be exercised therewith" = "to afflict them," as the margin reads. See P. R. I. 156.

exorbitant, III. 177; strictly, 'going out of its circuit or track' (Lat. orbita); e.g. like a star leaving its orbit. Cf. M. in The Reason of Church Government, II. 3, "the proper sphere wherein the magistrate cannot but confine his motion without a hideous exorbitancy from law," P. W. II. 497. Here the general notion 'excessive,' e.g. of price, demands. Minsheu has: "exorbitant, things properly out of circle, square or rule, things irregular, enormous."

explode, X. 546, XI. 669; used = Lat. explodere, 'to drive off the stage,' i.e. by clapping (ex, 'off, away' + plaudere, 'to clap'). So in the Animadversions upon the Remonstrant's Defence, "ceremonies, liturgies and tyrannies, which God and man are now ready to explode and hiss out of the land," P. W. III. 43. Blount's Glossographia has, "explode, publickly to disgrace, or drive out by hissing, or clapping of hands."

fame, I. 651, II. 346; for the literal sense 'rumour, report' (= Lat.

fama), cf. Bacon, Of Seditious: "as if fames were the reliques of seditious past," and again: "seditious tumults and seditious fames differ no more but as brother and sister, masculine and feminine" (Pitt Press ed., p. 39).

fare, II. 940, IV. 131, 'to journey, travel'; the literal sense of A.S. faran; cf. Germ. fahren, 'to travel.' So often in Spenser; cf. The Faerie Queene, II. I. 2, II. 2. 12.

flaw, X. 698, 'a gust of wind'; a poetic word. Cf. Hamlet, v. 1. 239, "the winter's flaw"; and Tennyson, Marriage of Geraint, "Like flaws in summer laying lusty corn." In Scotland it is used of a storm of snow, in Norfolk of a sharp shower. The same as flaw, 'a crack' = Swedish flaga, 'a crack,' also 'a blast of wind'; the radical notion being 'a sudden burst.'

fledge, VII. 420; cf. III. 627. Minsheu has, "fledge, or feathered." Cf. Holland's Pliny (1601), x. 9, "The young cuckoo being once fledged and readie to flie abroad." This adj. fledge (whence fledge-ling) is really older than the p. p. fledged which we use. Akin to flee, fly, flight.

foil, X. 375, 'a defeat'; cf. the Paraphrase on Psalm cxiv. made by M. in his boyhood, "As a faint host that hath received the foil." O. Fr. fouler, 'to trample under foot'; cf. foule, 'a crowd.' The original notion is seen in The Faerie Queene, v. 11. 33:

"Whom he did all to peeces breake, and foyle

In filthy durt, and left so in the loathely soyle."

fond, III. 449, VIII. 195, 209, 'foolish'; its old meaning. Cf. King Lear, IV. 7. 60, "I am a very foolish fond old man." Hence fondly = 'foolishly,' III. 470, VII. 152; cf. Lycidas, 56, "Ay me! I fondly dream." It is still quite common as a dialect-word equivalent to 'daft,' especially in north-country phrases like 'as fond as a besom' (or 'gate'). Originally fond was the p. p. of a Middle E. verb fonnen, 'to act like a fool,' from the noun fon, 'a fool.' The root is Scandinavian.

founder, I. 204, II. 940; properly 'to sink to the bottom' (Lat. fundus, Fr. fond, 'bottom'); cf. night-foundered, I. 204, Comus, 483.

frame, II. 924, 'fabric'; a favourite word with M. and with writers like Dryden and Thomson who were influenced by his diction (see II. 898, v. 154, notes). Similar is the Lucretian phrase moles et machina mundi (v. 96); cf. Spenser, An Hymne of Heavenly Love, 22, "this worlds great frame," and his Hymne of Heavenly Beautie, 30, 31.

frequent, I. 797, VII. 504; in the sense of Lat. frequens, 'crowded.' Cf. Ben Jonson, Sejanus, "'Tis Cæsar's will to have a frequent senate." M. twice uses "in full frequence" = 'in full assembly' (Lat. frequentia); cf. P. R. I. 128, II. 130. Cf. Tennyson, The Princess, IV., "Not in this frequence can I lend full tongue."

fretted, I. 717; from the verb fret = 'to work or design with frets.' A fret was a small band; the word comes from O. Fr. frete, 'an iron band' = Ital. ferrata, 'an iron grating' (cf. Lat. ferrum, 'iron'). "Fret-work" was specially used of a kind of gilding for the roofs of halls; being a pattern formed by small gilt bands or frets intersecting each other at right angles. Cf. Bacon, Advancement of Learning, II. 14. 9, "beautiful works and orders, like the frets in the roofs of houses"; where Mr Aldis Wright says, "the Egyptian key pattern is a familiar example." So Milton uses the word here, and Shakespeare in Hamlet, II. 2. 313, "this majestical roof fretted with golden fire." Quite distinct is the other verb, fret, 'to adorn,' from A.S. frætwan.

frore, II. 595, 'frosty'; from A.S. froren, 'frozen,' the p. p. of fréosan, 'to freeze.' Spenser has the adj. frovy, 'frozen,' in The Faerie Queene, III. 8. 35, and frore, 'frozen,' in The Shepheards Calender, February.

galaxy, VII. 579; Gk. γαλαξίας (i.e. κύκλος), 'Milky Way' (literally 'circle'); from γάλα, 'milk.' Cf. Tennyson, The Lady of Shalott:

"Like to some branch of stars we see Hung in the golden Galaxy."

glozing, III. 93, 'flattering.' Middle E. glosen meant 'to make glosses, explain,' from O. Fr. glose = Late Lat. glossa, Gk. γλῶσσα, which signified 'the tongue, a language, a word, a word needing explanation, an explanation.' But since many explanations are false, the verb glosen got the idea 'to interpret falsely,' whence 'to deceive.' So glozing = 'deceptive'; cf. George Herbert, The Dotage, "False glozing pleasures." Especially used of flattering, false speech (IX. 549); cf. Comus, 161, "And well-placed words of glozing courtesy."

goblin, II. 688. Derived through the French from Late Lat. gobelinus, a diminutive of Lat. cobalus, 'a mountain-sprite, demon' = Gk. κόβαλος, 'a rogue,' or 'a goblin supposed to befriend rogues.'

gonfalon, v. 589, a "banner, or square standard born on the top of a lance" (Cotgrave, 1611). The earlier form was gonfanon; cf. The Romaunt of the Rose, "I bare of loue the gonfenoun." O. Fr. gonfanon = Middle High Germ. gundfano, 'battle-flag.'

Gordian, IV. 348 = Lat. Gordius, 'pertaining to Gordius' (Gk. Γόρδιος). According to the legend, Gordius, the first king of Phrygia, tied an inextricable knot, the undoer of which was promised by an oracle the sovereignty of Asia. Alexander the Great cut the knot with his sword and fulfilled the oracle by conquering Asia. Cf. the old play Lingua (1607):

"The Gordian knot which Alexander Great Did whilom cut with his all-conquering sword."

Hence Gordian = 'inextricable.' Cf. George Herbert, Divinitie, "Who can these Gordian knots untie?"

grain, v. 285, XI. 242; derived from O. Fr. graine, Lat. granum, the Low Latin equivalent for the classical word coccum. Properly coccum meant a 'berry'; but it was specially used of the cochineal insect found upon the scarlet oak in Spain and other Mediterranean countries; this insect being, from its shape, supposed to be a berry. From the cochineal insect a certain dye was made, called coccum; whence coccinus = 'red.' In Low Latin granum took the place of coccum. Strictly, therefore, grain signified a scarlet dye such as could be extracted from this cochineal insect. Cf. Cotgrave: "Graine: the seed of herbs, also grain wherewith cloth is dyed in grain, scarlet die." But Cotgrave also has "Migraine: Scarlet, or Purple in graine," and it seems as though the word had lost something of its original sense, and could be applied to shades of blue or purple. Cf. Lycidas, 142 (the first draft of the lines).

grunsel, I. 460 = ground-sill. Minsheu (1625) has, "a Groundsell of a doore; vide Threshold," and the old Latin Dictionary called Manipulus Vocabulorum (1570) has, "A grunsel hypotheron" (Early English Text Society's ed., p. 164). The second part of the word, sill, is akin to Germ. schwelle, 'threshold.'

gryphon, II. 943; Lat. gryphus, from Gk. γρύψ; also in Late Lat. griffus, whence the other form griffin. A third form in Elizabethan E. was gripe; cf. Shakespeare, Lucrece, 543.

harald, I. 752, II. 518, 'herald'; always spelt harald—cf. Ital. araldo—in the original editions of Paradise Lost. It illustrates Milton's liking for Italian forms.

harbinger, IX. 13, XI. 589, 'a forerunner'; in P. R. I. 71, 277, John the Baptist is called the "harbinger" of Christ. Originally it meant an officer who went in advance of an army or prince to make provision for the night's shelter. Cf. Florio's Dictionary (1598), "Foriere, a harbinger for a camp or a prince," and Bullokar's Expositor (1616): "Harbinger, one that taketh up lodging for others." From Icelandic herbergi, 'an army shelter'; cf. the cognate German words heer, 'army' + bergen, 'to shelter.'

heinous, IX. 929, X. 1; spelt hainous in the original editions, as often in old writers. Fr. haineux, 'hateful.'

highth, I. 24, II. 95; always written thus by M. The form is common in Hakluyt's Voyages, and is said to survive in parts of America. High-th is curious in that it retains the th of the A.S. word hēhþu, represented now by t—cf. heigh-t.

hosanna, III. 348, VI. 205, 'save, I pray' (or 'we pray'); na being a particle expressing entreaty, while the first part of the word is from the stem 'to save,' whence the name Jesus = 'Saviour,' and Joshua. Commonly hosanna is a cry for deliverance; but sometimes of praise, as in Matt. xxi. 9, "Hosanna to the son of David...Hosanna in the highest." From the use of hosanna in that passage Palm-Sunday was called 'Hosanna-Sunday' in the mediæval Western Church.

hosting, VI. 93, 'an encounter.' The more usual sense was 'the raising or assembling of an army or host'; especially in the feudal phrase 'hosting and hunting.'

hubbub, II. 951, XII. 60, 'confused din'; put for hoop-hoop, a reduplication of hoop, 'a cry of surprise'—cf. O. Fr. houper, 'to shout.' Also written whoobub, as in The Winter's Tale, IV. 4. 628. Cf. 'whooping (or 'hooping')-cough.'

hyaline, VII. 619, 'the glassy sea'; Gk. ύάλινος, 'made of crystal or glass,' from ύαλος, 'glass'; cf. Lat. hyalinus, 'glassy' (borrowed from Greek). No doubt, M. was thinking of Revelation iv. 6, where the Greek is θάλασσα ύάλινη όμοια κρυστάλλω = "a sea of glass like unto crystal." Cf. Tennyson's Juvenilia, "Twin peaks shadow'd with pine slope to the dark hyaline."

impair. The usual sense in Milton is 'to harm, damage,' which agrees with the etymology, impejorare, 'to make worse'; cf. IX. 144, P. R. IV. 592, where, in each case, it is the opposite of repair. But sometimes, e.g. in v. 665 and VI. 690, 691, there lurks the idea of 'equality,' as if M. connected it with Lat. impar, 'unequal.'

impress, IX. 35, 'a device, generally with motto, on a coat of arms, scutcheon, shield.' Also spelt imprese = Ital. impresa, 'a device, emblem'; literally 'something impressed,' i.e. stamped. Cf. Richard II. III. I. 24, 25:

"From my own windows torn my household coat,

Razed out my imprese, leaving me no sign";

i.e. the family coat of arms blazoned on the stained glass.

influence, II. 1034, Late Lat. influentia, literally 'a flowing in upon.' It was an astrological term applied to the power over the earth, men's characters, fortunes etc., which was supposed to descend from the celestial bodies. Cf. "planetary influence," King Lear, I. 2. 136, "skye influences," Measure for Measure, III. I. 9. M. generally uses influence with reference to this astrological notion; cf. IV. 669, VII. 374, 375 (from Job xxxviii. 31), VIII. 513. See also Bacon's Essays Of Envy and Of Vicissitude (Pitt Press ed., pp. 21, 172). Other terms due to astrology are 'disastrous' (I. 597), 'saturnine,' 'jovial.'

innumerosus, VII. 455 = Lat. innumerosus, 'numberless'; a poetic use. Cf. Tennyson, The Princess, v., "A lisping of the innumerosus leaf." Thomson has it twice in Spring.

intend, II. 457, 'attend to, consider.' A clergyman, says Selden, "must seriously intend his calling" (Table-Talk, p. 116). Cf. Lat. intendere animum.

inure, II. 216, VIII. 239, 'to accustom,' literally 'to bring into practice' (= ure). For the obsolete noun ure (O. Fr. euve, Lat. opera, 'work'), cf. Bacon, Of Simulation, "it maketh him practise simulation in other things, lest his hand should be out of ure." Cf. 'manure.'

its. In Elizabethan English the regular neuter possessive pronoun was his; cf. Genesis iii. 15, "it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." About 1600 its came into use, but slowly. Bacon has its rarely; the Bible of 1611 never; the nine instances in the 1st Folio (1623) of Shakespeare may be corrupt, since in every extant work published during his lifetime the old idiom his is invariable—cf. Julius Cæsar, I. 2. 123, 124, "that same eye...did lose his lustre." Milton, as an Elizabethan in his diction, avoids its: either (1) by personifying the noun: thus in his prose abstract words like 'virtue,' 'truth,' are always followed by her; or (2) by retaining the old neuter use of his.

The only places in Milton's verse where its occurs are I. 254, IV. 813: and Nativity Ode, 106. I know but two instances of its in his prose—Areopagitica and The Reason of Church Government, P. W. II. 94, 471.

justle, II. 1018 = jostle; connected with joust (often spelt just), from Lat. juxta, 'close to.' For the form (then common) cf. The Tempest, v. 158.

knot, IV. 242, 'a flower-bed.' M. recollected Love's Labour's Lost, I. I. 249, "thy curious-knotted garden," i.e. laid out in nicely-arranged beds. The Elizabethan physician Dr Dee says in his Diary, "I hired Walter Hooper, to kepe my hedges and knots in good order" (Camden Society's ed., p. 3). Cf. Richard II. III. 4. 43—46. It survives as a west-country word, though generally in the compound flower-knot.

landskip, II. 491; here and in the three other places where it occurs—IV. 153, v. 142, L'Allegro, 70—spelt lantskip in the original editions. It was a term borrowed from Dutch artists (cf. Dutch landschap), and its forms in E. have been various—e.g. landschaft, lundschape, landshape, landscip. For landskip (apparently the oldest form in E.) cf. Cotgrave (1611), "Païsage: Landskip, countrey worke"; and The Spectator, 94, "a beautiful and spacious landskip." Tennyson uses landscip in Merlin and Vivien and Romney's Remorse. The suffix -skip (or -scape), generally softened to -ship, is closely connected with the noun shape.

lawn, IV. 252; properly 'an open, grass-covered space in a forest, a glade clear of trees'; hence any 'pasture' or 'green.' A favourite poetic word; cf. Comus, 568, 965, Lycidas, 25.

leviathan, I. 201, VII. 412; then commonly identified with the whale, though the Hebrew liydyáthán "denotes any great sea or land monster, as the crocodile.....or some large serpent." Cf. Psalm lxxiv. 14, "Thou brakest the heads of leviathan in pieces," i.e. the crocodile, symbolising Egypt; and Isaiah xxvii. 1, "even leviathan that crooked serpent." In Psalm civ. 26, "There go the ships: there is that leviathan," leviathan stands for any large sea-monster.

libbard, VII. 467; an Elizabethan form of leopard, so called because thought to be a cross-breed between a lion (leo) and a pard, i.e. panther (pardus). Cf. Spenser, The Ruines of Time, "Who of the Grecian Libbard now ought heares?" So in Love's Labour's Lost, v. 2. 551.

limbec, III. 607; short for alembic, 'a vessel for distilling.' It is one of those hybrid words of Arabic + Greek origin which came into Spain through the Moors and then passed into European languages. Arabic al, 'the' + ambik, 'a still,' from Gk. ἀμβίξ, 'a cup.' See Macbeth, I. 7. 67, and Dryden's Annus Mirabilis, stanzas 13 and 166.

limber, VII. 476, 'flexible'; correctly written limper, and akin to limp. Cf. The Winter's Tale, I. 2. 47 (where the use is figurative), and Giles Fletcher, Christ's Victorie in Heaven, 57, "And oft the Sun would cleave the limber mould" (i.e. friable).

limbo, III. 495; strictly a term of Roman Catholic theology. "The Latin word Limbus (or 'fringe') was used in the middle ages for that place on the fringe or outskirts of hell in which the just who died before Christ were detained till our Lord's resurrection from the dead. It likewise signifies a place (also supposed to be beneath the earth and on the outskirts of hell) inhabited by infants who die in original sin" (Addis and Arnold, Catholic Dict.). The first of these was the Limbus Patrum, the second the Limbus Infantium. Later arose the popular belief in a third region, the Limbus Fatuorum—the "Paradise of Fools" (IV. 496) after death and receptacle of all vain and foolish things. See Henry VIII. v. 4. 67. Dante places Vergil in Limbo (the First Circle of his Inferno) and makes him explain who are there and why (Inferno, IV. 31—63), viz. the just that "were before Christianity." See also the Purgatorio, VII. 28—36, XXII. 97—114.

list, 'wish, please'; commonly a present (II. 798), but also used as a preterite by M. (II. 656, IV. 803). Shakespeare, who uses the present tense often, once has listed; cf. Richard III. III. 5. 84. Akin to lust, which often meant 'pleasure' (Germ. lust); cf. Psalm xcii. 10, "Mine eye also shall see his lust of mine enemies" (Prayer-Book).

livery, IV. 599, VII. 478; used by Elizabethan writers = any kind of dress, garb; cf. L'Allegro, 62, "The clouds in thousand liveries dight." Originally livery meant whatever was given (i.e. delivered) by a lord to his household, whether food, money, or garments. Fr. livrer = Low Lat. liberare, 'to abandon.'

malignant, x. 662, 'injurious, hostile'; often used by Elizabethans with reference to astrology, as here. Cf. 1 Henry VI. iv. 5. 6.

manuring, iv. 628, xi. 28. The verb manure = 'to cultivate, till' (properly with the hand) was not uncommon in Elizabethan E. Minsheu (1625) has: "to manure, or till the ground, to worke and labour the earth with the hand." Cf. Bacon, Advancement of Learning, II. (ed. Aldis Wright, p. 84), "It is one thing to set forth what ground lieth unmanured, and another thing to correct ill husbandry in that which is manured"; and Othello, I. 3. 328. M. has it often in his prose-works (P. W. II. 463, III. 78). And good- (or well-) mannered is still quite a common agricultural term for land with a good crop on it. From Fr. manœuvre = Low Lat. manuopera, 'a working with the hand' (manus).

marble, III. 564, 'bright as marble' (from root mar-, 'to gleam'). Cf. Gk. μαρμαίρειν, 'to glisten,' μαρμαίρεος, 'glistening,' used of the stars or sky. In Cymbeline, v. 4. 120, 121 Shakespeare applies "marble" and "radiant" to the sky in the same sentence.

marsh, XII. 630; cognate with marsh; cf. also mere (as in Windermere) and Germ. meer, 'the sea.' Though common in earlier writers (see The Faerie Queene, v. 10. 23), marsh was becoming obsolete when M. wrote; it only occurs once in the A.V., Ezekiel xlvii. 11, "the miry places thereof and the marishes thereof shall not be healed," where the Genevan Bible (1562) had the same rendering. Baret's Alvearie (1580) gives, "A fenne or marise, a moore often drowned with water." It is one of Tennyson's archaic words; cf. Mariana, "The cluster'd marsh-mosses crept," and The Dying Swan, 2 and 3.

maw, II. 847, x. 601, 991, 'stomach'; cf. Germ. magen. A vulgar word applied rather to animals than men. Cf. Milton's Sonnet to Cromwell:

"Help us to save free conscience from the paw

Of hireling wolves, whose Gospel is their maw."

meath, v. 345, a sweet wine, especially one made with honey; 'mead.' Chaucer writes meth, the dialect-form still current in Cheshire; cf. the Welsh metheglin (a sweet beverage, mentioned in The Merry Wives of Windsor, v. 5. 167), from Welsh meddyglyn, 'mead-liquor.' A.S. meodu, Gk. μέθυ, Sanskrit madhu, 'honey,' are cognate.

minim, VII. 482, 'a tiny creature'; from Lat. minimus, 'very small.' The use is said to survive in Cornwall, e.g. "come in, you minum!" Cf. A Midsummer-Night's Dream, III. 2. 328, 329, "you dwarf, you minimus."

mood, I. 550, or mode, 'key,' 'measure,' a musical term; cf. S. A. 662. Lat. modus; distinct from mood, 'disposition' (Germ. mut).

mysterious, VIII. 599, 'full of awe' such as befits a mystery (cf. IV. 743, 750) like marriage; cf. Ephesians v. 32, "This is a great mystery"—said in allusion to marriage. So in Comus, 785, "The sublime notion and high mystery." Mystery (Gk. μυστήριον, 'a secret rite,' from μύειν, 'to close the eyes or mouth') used in a religious sense means a truth specially revealed to men, or a spiritual rite of deep significance. Thus in the Prayer-Book it is applied to the Holy Communion.

nice, IV. 241, V. 433, VIII. 399; derived from Lat. nescius, 'ignorant,' nice meant 'foolish,' then 'fastidious, dainty,' i.e. foolish in a particular way. So here and in P. R. IV. 157, "Nothing will please the difficult and nice," i.e. people hard to satisfy (difficiles). Few words improve in sense as nice has.

oblivious, I. 266, 'causing to forget, producing forgetfulness'; cf. Macbeth, V. 3. 43, "some sweet oblivious antidote." So Horace uses obliviosus of wine (Odes II. 7. 21); and M. speaks of obliviosa...Lethes aquæ in De Idea Platonica, 20. Pope borrowed Milton's phrase; cf. The Dunciad, III. 43, 44:

"Oh! born to see what none can see awake!

Behold the wonders of th' oblivious lake."

obnoxious; always used by M. in its Latin sense 'liable to' (obnoxius). Cf. The Tenure of Kings, "made obnoxious to the doom of law," and The Reason of Church Government, I. 6, "from that time his creature, and obnoxious to comply with his ends in state" (P. W. II. 32, 461). So in IX. 170, 1094, and S. A. 106. Cf. Bacon, Of Ambition, "as for the having of them obnoxious to ruin, if they be of fearful natures, it may do well."

obvious; always used by M. in one of the senses of Latin obvius—e.g. 'coming to meet' (VIII. 504, X. 106), or 'lying in the way' (VI. 69).

officious, VIII. 99; used = Lat. officiosus, 'obliging, ready to serve by doing officia, i.e. kind acts.' Cf. P. R. II. 302, where Satan, coming back after his first repulse, says, "With granted leave officious I return," i.e. eager to serve Christ.

opacous, III. 418, VIII. 23; from Lat. opacus, 'dark,' but more commonly opaque as in III. 619; cf. Fr. opaque. Minshew has, "Opacuous, shadowie, darke and blacke."

orient, I. 546, II. 399, III. 507, 'bright, lustrous.' In Elizabethan poetry it is a constant epithet of gems, especially pearls. Perhaps, used thus, it first meant 'eastern,' gems coming from the Orient or East;

then as these were bright it got the notion 'lustrous,' which suits, I believe, every passage where M. uses it, though in one or two places (e.g. in IV. 644) 'rising'=Lat. oriens is possible. Commonly he applies it to jewels or liquids; cf. V. 2, Comus, 65.

owe, IX. 1141; in its original sense 'to have, possess.' Cf. Macbeth, I. 4. 10, "To throw away the dearest thing he owed," and The Tempest, III. 1. 45. Closely akin to own.

panim, I. 765; another form of pagan, from Late Lat. paganus, 'heathen.' Strictly O.E. paynyme meant 'heathendom,' 'the country of the heathen,' and a 'heathen man' was payen or payn. Tennyson uses paynim often in the Idylls of the King.

paramount, II. 508, 'lord, chief'; originally a legal term for the lord of an estate under whom land was rented. Cf. Blount's Glossographia, "Paramount is in our Law the highest Lord of the Fee." O. Fr. paramont, 'at the top, above'=Lat. per + ad montem.

pavilion, II. 960, 'palace.' M. refers to Psalms xviii. 11, "He made darkness his secret place; his pavilion round about him were dark waters and thick clouds of the skies"—where, however, the sense is less 'palace' than 'tent,' as sometimes in M. Cf. V. 653, XI. 215. Through Fr. pavillon from Lat. papilio, 'a butterfly,' used by Late Latin writers to mean 'a tent' because a tent is spread out like the wings of a butterfly.

pioneer, I. 676; O. Fr. peonier, 'foot-soldier,' Ital. pedone. For -er = -eer as a suffix in Elizabethan E. cf. "charioteer," VI. 390; "mutiner," Coriolanus, I. 1. 254; "engineer" and "pioneer," Hamlet, I. 5. 163 and III. 4. 206.

pitch, VIII. 198. A term in falconry for the height to which a hawk soars. Cf. Richard II. I. 1. 109, "How high a pitch his resolution soars!" M. perhaps refers to this use; cf. "lower flight," 199.

plat, IX. 456; another form of plot, 'a small piece of ground.' Cf. 2 Kings ix. 26, "and I will requite thee in this plat...Now therefore take and cast him into the plat of ground." So in Il Penseroso, 73: "Oft, on a plat of rising ground, I hear the far-off curfew sound."

plumb-down, II. 933, 'straight down, in a vertical line.' Plumb meant (1) a mass of lead (Lat. plumbum), attached to a cord and used in determining whether a wall is perpendicular; (2) the vertical or perpendicular position so determined. In modern E. b has softened into p=plump, 'straight downward.'

pomp; apart from its ordinary meanings (I. 372, II. 257) it is used like Gk. πομπή, Lat. pompa, in the two kindred senses 'solemn procession' (VII. 564), and 'train, retinue' (VIII. 61). Cf. King John,

III. I. 304. Bullokar's Expositor, an old (1616) English dictionary, has, "Pompe...a solemn traine." ponder, IV. 1001; in the literal sense of Lat. ponderare, 'to weigh'; a rare use, but cf. Surrey's Poems:

"Hot gleams of burning fire, and easy sparks of flame,

In balance of unequal weight he pondereth by aim."

The old English-Lat. Dictionary called Manipulus Vocabulorum (1570) has, "to ponder, ponderare, librare."

portcullis, II. 874, a kind of grating, made of timber or iron, sliding up and down in vertical grooves, and forming part of a gateway. Here the portcullis came down over and protected the lock of the gate: Sin had to raise it before she could get at the keyhole. Lat. porta colatica, 'a sliding door'; cf. Fr. couler, 'to flow,' coulisse, 'a slide, groove.'

prevent, II. 467, 739, X. 987, 'to anticipate, forestall'; cf. Psalm cxix. 148, "Mine eyes prevent the night watches," and I Thessalonians iv. 15, "we which are alive...shall not prevent them which are asleep," i.e. 'rise before.' Literally 'to come before,' Lat. prævenire.

prick, II. 536, 'to ride hard,' literally 'to spur a horse on'; cf. Tennyson, Gareth and Lynette, "And Gareth crying prick'd against the cry." See The Faerie Queene, I. I. I, v. 10. 31. In Piers the Plowman "prykere" = a rider.

puny, II. 367; perhaps in the literal sense 'born later, younger,' mankind having been created after the angels; cf. the Areopagitica, "like a puny with his guardian," i.e. a young man not yet of age (P.W. II. 79). But 'weak, inferior' would also suit. The term "Puisne Judge" shows the etymology (Fr. puis né).

purchase, X. 579, 'prey.' The verb purchase meant first 'to hunt after' (O. Fr. purchacer = Fr. pour + chasser); "then to take in hunting; then to acquire; and then, as the commonest way of acquiring is by giving money in exchange, to buy" (Trench). 'To acquire, gain' was a common Elizabethan sense; cf. I Timothy iii. 13, "they that have used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree" (Revised Version "gain").

purlieu, II. 833, 'an outskirt'; strictly of a forest, as in IV. 404. Sometimes land which had been taken from its owner and made part of a forest was restored to him or his successor. The process whereby this was done was called perambulatio = 'a walking over the land to settle its boundaries'; then the land itself came in legal Latin to be called perambulatio, rendered in French by pouralle. The form purlieu, from pourallee, was influenced by a wrong derivation from Fr. pur lieu = purus locus, 'a space clear of trees.'

purple, IV. 764. Lat. purpureus, like Gk. πορφύρεος, was not limited to what we call 'purple,' but denoted almost any rich colour, e.g. red, rosy, crimson, and in poets any dazzling, bright hue (as where Horace applies it to white swans, Odes IV. I. 10). We find the same wide use in English (especially the Elizabethan) poets. Thus in Shakespeare it is used of blood several times; cf. Romeo and Juliet, I. I. 92. Often it is only a picturesque, literary epithet, as in Gray's "The bloom of young Desire, and purple light of Love" (Progress of Poesy, 41); cf. IV. 763, 764, and Vergil's lumen juvenetæ purpureum (Æn. I. 590, 591).

purpose, IV. 337, VIII. 337; in sense and origin = Fr. propos, 'conversation.' So the verb propose = 'talk' in Shakespeare, e.g. in Much Ado About Nothing, III. I. 2, 3:

"There shalt thou find my cousin Beatrice Proposing with the prince and Claudio."

Spenser often has purpose = 'discourse'; cf. The Faerie Queene, I. 12, 13.

quarry, X. 281, 'prey'; a hunting-term. O. Fr. cuiree, the intestines of a slain animal, the part given to the hounds; so called because wrapped in the skin—Fr. cuir, 'a skin, hide,' from Lat. corium, 'hide.'

quire, III. 217, 666, VII. 254; the older form of choir; each from Lat. chorus. Cf. the Prayer-Book, "In quires and places where they sing." Quire was one of the Latin words introduced through Christianity.

ramp, IV. 343, VII. 466; a word used in several allied senses, e.g. 'to rage'—cf. "a ramping and a roaring lion," Psalm xxii. 13, Prayer-Book; 'to tear, snatch'; 'to rear up on the hind legs'—cf. the heraldic term "lion rampant"; 'to spring.' Cf. S. A. 139, "his lion ramp" = lion-like spring. Fr. ramper, 'to climb.'

rapt, III. 522, VII. 23, 'caught up.' It should be written rapped, being the p. p. of an old verb rap, 'to seize'; cf. Cymbeline, I. 6. 51, "what...raps you?" i.e. excites you? The form rapt comes through confusion (of sound and sense) with Lat. raptus, the p. p. of rapere, 'to seize.'

ravin, X. 599, 'prey'; cf. The Faerie Queene, I. 11. 12 (the description of the 'Old Dragon'):

"his deepe devouring jawes
Wyde gaped, like the griesly mouth of hell,
Through which into his darke abysses all ravin fell."

O. Fr. ravine, Lat. rapina, 'plunder.'

reck, 'to care'; A.S. reccan. M. uses the word both personally (II. 50, IX. 173) and impersonally; cf. Lycidas, 122, "What recks it them? What need they? They are sped," and Comus, 404. In Shake-spare it is always personal, as in Hamlet, I. 3. 51 ("recks not his own rede"). M. uses reckoning with the strict etymological notion of 'caring, troubling,' in the phrase to 'make little reckoning of'; cf. Comus, 642, Lycidas, 116. The old word wretchless means 'careless,' the w having been prefixed wrongly; cf. the Articles of Religion, xvii.

recorder, I. 551, a kind of flute or flageolet; cf. the title of a musical work published in 1686, "The Delightful Companion, or Choice New Lessons for the Recorder or Flute." So called from the old verb record='to sing'; cf. Fairfax, Tasso, II. 97, "to hear the lark record her hymns." Selden says in his Table-Talk: "a bird, by often whistling to, learns a tune, and a month after records to herself" (p. 149, Reynolds' ed.). By "soft" M. implies not effeminate strains but the sweet, subdued notes of the instrument; cf. Fletcher's Piscatorie Eclogues, VII. 3, "the sad recorder sweetly plains."

rhyme; spelt (in the First Ed.) rhime in I. 16 but rime (the proper spelling, A.S. rim) in the Preface. Possibly M. used rhime (i.e. rhyme)=poetry opposed to prose, and rime=rhymed metre opposed to blank verse. The spelling rhyme is due to confusion with rhythm, Gk. ῥυθμός.

Sabæan, IV. 162, 'belonging to Saba.' Saba is the classical form, used in the Septuagint and Vulgate, of Sheba, which "embraced the greater part of Arabia Felix" (Smith's Bible Dict.). The Elizabethans constantly write Saba; cf. Marlowe's Faustus, v. 154, "As wise as Saba" (i.e. the Queen of Sheba), and XII. 22, "India, Saba, and farther countries in the east." In Comus, 996 ("Elysian dew"), the Cambridge MS. shows that the earlier reading was Sabæan.

sad, v. 94, VI. 541, 'serious'; the original sense was 'sated,' A.S. sæd being akin to Lat. satis; then came the notion 'serious, sober, grave,' as often in Shakespeare. Cf. An Apology for Smectymnuus, "to be severe and ever of a sad gravity," and the History of Britain, "this story, though seeming otherwise too light in the midst of a sad narration" (P. W. III. 129, v. 387). Cf. Comus, 189, Il Penseroso, 43.

satiat, I. 179. Elizabethan English often makes the past participles of verbs of Latin origin conform with the Latin. This is the case especially with verbs of which the Latin originals belong to the 1st and 3rd conjugations. Cf. elevate (II. 558)=Lat. elevatus and suspense (II. 418)=suspensus. Further, participles not from the Latin are abbreviated by analogy; e.g. Milton (I. 193) has uplift='uplifted,' though lift is of Scandinavian origin.

scathe, I. 613, 'to injure'; rare as verb, but cf. Romeo and Juliet, I. 5. 86, "This trick may chance to scathe you." For the noun cf. King John, II. 75, "To do offence and scath in Christendom." The

Manipulus Vocabulorum (1570) has, "to scathe, nocere," and Minsheu (1617), "to scathe, or hurt."

sciential, IX. 837, 'yielding knowledge.' Ben Jonson in a compliment to James I. says (Masque of Blackness):

"His light sciential is, and, past mere nature,
Can salve the rude defects of every creature."

scull, VII. 402; the same word as shoal and school; cf. the nautical expression 'a school of fish.' Scull is used specially of fish; cf. Shakespeare, Troilus and Cressida, v. 5. 22. On some coasts (e.g. the south-eastern) of England herring-shoals are still called sculls. In the New Forest dialect scull is used contemptuously for 'a set of low people.'

sdein, IV. 50; cf. Spenser, The Faerie Queene, III. I. 55:

"For great rebuke it is love to despise,
Or rudely sdeigne a gentle hart's [heart's] request."

This form is modelled on Ital. sdegnare, while the common form disdain comes through O. Fr. desdegnier. Lat. dis-, a negative prefix, + dignari, 'to think worthy (dignus).'

secure, IV. 186, v. 238, IX. 371, X. 779. Elizabethan writers often use secure in the sense of Lat. securus, 'free from anxiety, unconcerned'; i.e. to indicate a false feeling rather than actual state of safety. Cf. Fletcher's quibbling lines:

"To secure yourselves from these,
Be not too secure in ease";

and M. in Eikonoklastes, 18, "with a bloody surprise [he] falls on our secure forces which lay quartering at Brentford, in the thoughts and expectation of a treaty," P. W. I. 442. So security = 'over-confidence, carelessness,' in Macbeth, III. 5. 32. "Captain Secure" is slain alongside of "Captain Boasting" in The Holy War.

seneshal, IX. 38, 'steward'; literally 'old servant,' whence the idea 'senior in standing, chief.' Through O. Fr. from Gothic sins, 'old' + shalks, 'servant'; cf. marshal, literally 'horse-servant.'

Seraphim; then supposed to come from a Hebrew root 'to burn'; cf. Blount, "Seraphim, i.e. fulgentes aut comburentes; so called, for their burning with divine love and charity." Hence "fiery Seraphim," II. 512; "brightest Seraphim," III. 381, and in At a Solemn Musick, 10. Really Seraphim is from a root 'to exalt,' and means 'the exalted ones.'

The plural of Seraph (III. 667) has much the same history as Cherub; Seraphins in some old writers—cf. Thomas Watson's Eglogue (1590), "where Seraphins | doe Praise the highest in their glorious flames" (Arber, p. 169); Seraphims in the Bible, Isaiah vi. 2, 6; Seraphim in

M. Crashaw uses Seraphim several times as a singular in his beautiful poem The Flaming Heart, on Saint Teresa, e.g.,

"This is a Seraphim, they say,
And this the great Teresa."

sere, x. 1071, 'dry'; also spelt sear, A.S. seár, 'dry.' Commonly said of flowers or leaves, with the sense 'faded,' 'withered,' as in Lycidas, 2, "ivy never sere."

sewer, ix. 38; a servant who set the dishes on the table at a feast and removed them. In Eikonoklastes, 24, M. refers contemptuously to the chaplains of Charles I. as "the sewers, or the yeomen-ushers of devotion," P. W. I. 459. Connected with A.S. seaw, 'pottage.'

shroud, x. 1068. Properly shroud, A.S. scrúð, meant 'a garment': hence any 'shelter, covering,' as often in Elizabethan writers. Cf. Comus, 147, "Run to your shrouds within these brakes and trees." Outside Old St Paul's Cathedral in London there was a covered place called "the Shrouds," where sermons were preached in wet weather, instead of at St Paul's Cross, which was in the open.

Soldan, I. 764, 'Sultan'; cf. Minshew (1625), "the great Soldane, or Sultan among the Turks or Persians." It is a thoroughly mediæval word—cf. the Inferno, v. 60—used often in reference to the Crusades; cf. The Talisman. From Arabic Sultán, 'victorious,' Latinised as Soldanus, whence Ital. soldano.

Sophi, x. 433; a corruption of Arabic safī, 'elect, chosen,' which was a title, like the 'Cæsar' of the Roman emperors, borne by each Shah or sovereign of the dynasty that ruled Persia from 1505 to 1725. In Elizabethan writers the expression 'the Sophy' (or 'Sophi') is exactly equivalent to 'the Shah' in modern English. Cf. The Merchant of Venice, II. I. 25, "That slew the Sophy and a Persian prince"; and Ben Jonson's Volpone, III. 5, "the Persian Sophi's wife." Persia is called "the Sophian Empire" in Hexham's English edition (1636) of Mercator's Atlas, II. 411.

sound, II. 604, VII. 399, 'a strait, narrow strip of water.' Cf. Comus, 115, "The sounds and seas, with all their finny drove" (i.e. shoals of fish). A.S. sund meant literally 'a strait of the sea that could be swum across.'

sovrán, I. 246, II. 244; spelt thus always in P. L.; cf. Ital. souvrano. The common form sovereign=O. Fr. soverain, later souverain. Lat. superanus, 'chief.'

spangle, VII. 384, XI. 130, 'to ornament as with spangles.' Spangle was used of small flashing ornaments like the little circles of silver in 'tinsel.' Elizabethan writers often apply it to the stars; cf. The Taming of the Shrew, IV. 5. 31, "What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty?" So in Comus, 1003 (an echo of A Midsummer-Night's Dream, II. I. 29), and Lycidas, 170.

state, X. 445, 'canopy'; more often 'chair of state, canopied throne,' as in Macbeth, III. 4. 5, "Our hostess keeps her state." Cotgrave, French Dictionary, 1611, explains dais by: "A cloth of Estate, Canopie or Heauen, that stands ouer the heads of Princes thrones, also, the whole State or seat of Estate."

store, III. 444, V. 322, 'abundance'; common in Elizabethan E. One of Heywood's Proverbs runs, "store is no sore." Cf. L'Allegro, 121. O. Fr. estoire, 'store, provisions,' Low Lat. instaurum.

sublimed, I. 235. In chemistry to 'sublime' or 'sublimate' is "to raise a solid substance into vapour by heat." M. means that the material substance catching fire is raised to a state of pure flame.

success, II. 9, 123; its usual sense in Elizabethan E. is 'result, fortune'—how a person fares in a matter, or a thing turns out, whether well or ill. Cf. Shakespeare, Troilus and Cressida, II. 2. 117, "Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause." So P. R. IV. 1.

succinct, III. 643; Lat. succinctus, the past participle of succingere, 'to gird, tuck up.' Cf. The Rape of the Lock, III. 41, 42:

"Four Knaves in garbs succinct, a trusty band, Caps on their heads, and halberds in their hands."

suggestion, IX. 90, 'temptation'; cf. Macbeth, I. 3. 134, "why do I yield to that suggestion?" So the verb; cf. Richard II. III. 4. 75, 76:

"What Eve, what serpent, hath suggested thee
To make a second fall of cursed man?"

summed, VII. 421; a term in falconry, applied to a hawk that has the feathers full-grown and in full number. Cf. P. R. I. 14, "with prosperous wing full summed"; and Drayton's Polyolbion, Song 11, "The muse from Cambria comes with pinions summed and sound."

sung. In Elizabethan E. this incorrect form for the past tense is much used. Shakespeare has sang only once (Sonnet 73), and then for the rhyme. In M. sang occurs only three times, III. 383, VII. 192, Lycidas, 186, and in each case he probably used the form for a special consideration of sound (e.g. in III. 383, VII. 192 to avoid the jingle sung...son). Similarly he has rung (II. 655, 723, IX. 737) as the past tense of ring, except in the Nativity Ode, 158, where the rhyme requires rang. Cf. too sprung (VII. 58, VIII. 46).

surcease, VI. 258, 'to cease, stop'; cf. S. A. 404, and Shakespeare, Lucrece, 1766, "If they surcease to be that should survive." Originally a surcease, O. Fr. sursis (for the noun, cf. Macbeth, I. 7. 4), was the arrest or stoppage of a legal suit. O. Fr. surseizor, 'to pause.'

Syrtis, II. 939, Gk. Σύρτις, the name of certain quicksands and sandbanks off the coast of N. Africa; the word came to mean any quicksand or sandbank—as here.

take; a common Elizabethan sense was 'to enchant, captivate,' especially by supernatural influence; cf. Hamlet, I. I. 163. Hence the general meaning 'to charm' (II. 554); cf. Bacon, Of Masques, "things...such as do naturally take the sense." So in Tennyson's Dying Swan, III:

"The wild swan's death-hymn took the soul Of that waste place with joy."

targe, IX. 1111, 'a shield'; cf. Antony and Cleopatra, II. 6. 39, "targes undinted," i.e. not battered by blows. Of course, target is a diminutive of targe and formerly was used = 'shield'; cf. Coriolanus, IV. 5. 126; Hamlet, II. 2. 334. A mark to fire at is called 'a target' from its resemblance to a round shield.

ted, IX. 450, 'to spread mown grass'; a Scandinavian word. Cf. Euphuus: "When wealth cometh into the hands of youth before they can use it, then fall they to all disorder that may be, tedding that with a fork in one year which was not gathered together with a rake in twenty" (Bond's Lyly, II. pp. 15, 16). So in Lyly's (?) prose-piece Pap with a Hatchet: "What fool more covetous than he that seeks to ted abroad the Church's goods with a fork, or scratch it to himself with a rake?" (Bond, III. 412).

thrall, I. 149, X. 402; enthrall, II. 551; from Icelandic þrall, 'a serf,' Danish træl; no doubt, thrall came into England through the Danes. Strictly it meant 'a runner,' i.e. on messages, the original root being that seen in Gk. τρέχω, 'to run.'

thwart, IV. 557, 'to cross'; as a verb now only figurative = 'to hinder,' but then used also in the literal sense 'to pass across'—as here; cf. Pericles, IV. 4. 10. Minsheu has, "Traverser. To thwart, or goe overthwart, crosse or passe over." The etymological sense is seen in Milton's use of the adjective (X. 1075).

tiar, III. 625, 'a crown'; strictly 'a wreathed ornament for the head' (such as the Persians wore). Gk. τιάρα (or τιάρας) is a Persian word, perhaps from Persian tájwar, 'crowned'; hence Lat. tiara, Fr. tiare. Tennyson speaks of flowers "studded white with disks and tiars" (Arabian Nights).

tine, X. 1075, 'to kindle'; cf. The Faerie Queene, III. 10. 13, "To quench the flames which she had tyn'd before," and Fletcher's Apollyonists:

"Oh! why should earthly lights then scorn to tine
Their lamps alone at that first sunne divine."

An obsolete verb, also spelt tind; cf. tinder. The Dialect Dict. shows that the word survives in several forms, e.g. tindle, 'a bonfire' (Derbyshire), teening-time, 'lighting-up time' (Cornwall), andle-teening (or tinig), 'dusk.'

tinsel, IX. 36; a shining, silver-like cloth. M. renders the Homeric epithet for the goddess Thetis, ἀργυροπόδα, 'silver-footed,' by 'tinsel-slippeder,' Comus, 877. Fr. étincelle, Lat. scintilla, 'a spark.'

tire, VI. 605; the old form of tier; cf. The Faerie Queene, I. 4. 35. It seems to have been specially used of a line of cannon; Skeat quotes Florio (1598), "a tyre of ordinance." From Fr. tirer, 'to draw.'

touch, IV. 686; often applied thus to the action of the hand on a musical instrument. Cf. The Passionate Pilgrim, 107, 108:

"whose heavenly touch

Upon the lute doth ravish human sense."

trains, XI. 624; cf. S. A. 533, "venereal trains" = snares of love, and Comus, 151. Shakespeare has the noun once (Macbeth, IV. 3. 118), the verb several times, e.g. in I Henry IV. v. 2. 21. From Fr. traîner = trahere, which in Late Lat. = 'to betray': the metaphor (says Du Cange) of alluring birds into snares. Cf. the Animadversions, "he...trains on the easy Christian insensibly within the close ambushment of worst errors," P. W. III. 43.

trepidation, III. 483; Lat. trepidatio, 'a trembling,' from trepidare, 'to tremble.' For the literal use of the word, cf. Bacon, The Advancement of Learning, bk. II. 2. 8: "As it cometh to pass in massive bodies, that they have certain trepidations and waverings before they fix and settle, so it seemeth that by the providence of God this monarchy, before it was to settle in your majesty and your generations (in which I hope it is now established for ever), it had these prelusive changes and varieties."

triumph, XI. 723, "a public festivity or exhibition of any kind," Schmidt, Lexicon; cf. A Midsummer-Night's Dream, I. I. 19, "With pomp, with triumph and with revelling." So often in Bacon, e.g. in his History of Henry VII. p. 98 ("he kept great triumphs of jousting and tourney"), p. 187, and p. 219, Pitt Press ed. See L'Allegro, 120. In this sense the word is usually plural. Lat. triumphus = Gk. θρίαμβος, a hymn to Bacchus.

troll, XI. 620, 'to roll'; still used in its literal sense in many counties, e.g. to troll a ball or hoop or wheel. In Yorkshire 'Troll-egg-day' was an old name for Easter-Monday and Shrove-Tuesday, because on those days children played with hard-boiled, dyed eggs, rolling them on the grass.

uncouth, II. 407, 827; A.S. uncuð, 'unknown'—from un, 'not' + cuð, the p.p. of cunnan, 'to know.' In M. it means 'strange, unfamiliar,' perhaps with the implied notion 'unpleasant'; cf. v. 98, vi. 362. So in Titus Andronicus, II. 3. 211, "I am surprised with an uncouth fear," and As You Like It, II. 6. 6.

unenvied, II. 23. Elizabethan writers constantly treat the termination -ed, which belongs to the passive participle, as equal to the adjectival ending -able; especially with words which have the negative prefix un-, and the sense 'that may not be.' Cf. II. 337, 903. So "unvalued" = 'invaluable,' "unavoided" = 'inevitable,' Richard III. I. 4. 27, IV. 4. 217. The use of the participial and adjectival endings was less regular then than now.

unweeting, x. 335, 916. M. always uses this form, never unwitting; the ee represents the sound of the long i in A.S. witan, 'to know,' which comes from the same root as Gk. oîda and idēiv and Lat. videre.

utter, I. 72, III. 16, v. 614; the comparative of A.S. ut, 'out,' and an older form of outer. Lawyers still speak of "the utter bar" in contrast with "the inner bar." Cf. Blount's Glossographia (1656): "The outward or Utter Barristers...these always plead without [i.e. outside] the Bar." In Ezekiel x. 5 the Bible used to read "utter court."

vans, II. 927, 'wings'; Ital. vanni, from Lat. vannus, 'a winnowing-fan.' Cf. P. R. IV. 583, "plumy vans" (said of angels' wings), and Tennyson's Love and Death, "Love wept and spread his sheeny vans for flight." For van=fan cf. vat=fat as in 'wine-fat.' The Manipulus Vocabulorum (1570) gives an old verb "to vanne, vannare," i.e. 'to winnow.'

virtue; often (VII. 236, VIII. 95, IX. 110, 145, 616, 649) used by M. in the sense 'efficacy, might'; cf. Luke viii. 46, "virtue is gone out of me": hence virtuous = 'full of efficacy' (IX. 795, 1033). Also = 'courage' (I. 320, x. 372), i.e. what a man (vir) should specially be, viz. 'brave'; Lat. virtus, 'worth, manly excellence, valour' (Lat. vir, 'man'). This etymological use is well illustrated in the Life of Coriolanus in North's Plutarch: "Now in those days valiantness was honoured in Rome above all other virtues: which they call virtus, by the name of virtue itself, as including in that general name all other special virtues besides. So that virtus in the Latin was as much as valiantness."

vouchsafe, II. 332, VII. 80, VIII. 8. Spelt voutsafe in the original editions, and perhaps we ought to keep the form, as some editors do. M. may have wished to avoid the awkward sound ch before s, just as in proper names he avoids sh.

waft, II. 1042; often used (as here) by Elizabethan writers with the sense 'to journey, or carry, over water.' Cf. 2 Henry VI. IV. I. 114, "I charge thee waft me safely cross the Channel"; and P. R. I. 104.

wanton. The word means literally 'unrestrained'; hence 'luxuriant,' as used of growth, IX. 211. Cf. A Midsummer-Night's Dream, II. I. 99, 100:

"And the quaint mazes in the wanton green
For lack of tread are undistinguishable."

Of motion it implies 'tossing about,' e.g. like the 'undulating' coils of a serpent (IX. 517).

warp, I. 341; a nautical term (Scandinavian) = "to move into some desired place or position by hauling on a rope or warp which has been fastened to something fixed, as a buoy, anchor, or other ship at or near that place or position: as, to warp a ship into harbor or to her berth" (Century Dict.). M. uses it to describe 'undulatory forward motion,' and Thomson imitates him; cf. Spring:

"Myriads on myriads, insect armies warp Keen in the poisoned breeze."

In either case comparison with a sailing ship is implied.

weed, 'a garment'; A.S. wād, 'a garment, dress.' Quite a Miltonic word; cf. L'Allegro, 119, 120:

"Where throngs of knights and barons bold,
In weeds of peace, high triumphs hold";

which is an echo of Troilus and Cressida, III. 3. 239, "To see great Hector in his weeds of peace." So in Comus, 16, 84, and 390 ("For who would rob a hermit of his weeds?"). The singular is rare, but cf. A Midsummer-Night's Dream, II. I. 255, 256:

"And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin, Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in."

Now a poetical or dialect (e.g. Scottish) usage, apart from the phrase "widow's weeds"; cf. Tennyson, In Memoriam, v.:

"In words like weeds, I'll wrap me o'er."

welkin, 'sky'; properly a plural word = 'clouds'; cf. Germ. wolke, 'a cloud.' The termination -in (for -en) is the plural ending which we get in brethren, children, oxen. M. uses welkin only twice (II. 538, Comus, 1015), and it was perhaps an affected word (Twelfth Night, III. I. 65).

wight, II. 613, 'person, being'; A.S. wiht, 'a creature.' It was rather an old-fashioned word of ballad-poetry; Shakespeare seems to ridicule it, putting it in the mouth of the bombastic Pistol; cf. The Merry Wives of Windsor, I. 3. 23, Henry V. II. I. 64.

won, VII. 457, 'dwell'; cf. The Faerie Queene, II. 7. 49, "The fairest wight that wonneth under skie." From A.S. wunian, which meant (1) 'to dwell,' (2) 'to be accustomed'; now obsolete except in the second sense and in the past participle wont or wonted. Similarly the cognate Germ. wohnen = (1) 'to dwell,' (2) 'to be wont.' M. uses wont, in the second sense 'to be accustomed,' as a present tense and a preterite; though I. 764 and the Nativity Ode, 10, seem the only undoubted cases of the latter.

wreak, IV. 11, 'to avenge.' This was the original sense of wreak (cognate with Germ. rächen, 'to avenge'). The Manipulus Vocabulorum (1570) has "to wreake, vlcisci, vindicare." Cf. Tennyson, Gareth and Lynette, "Kill the foul thief, and wreak me for my son." The first two editions of P. L. have wreck, which is practically another form of wreak.

yeanling, III. 434, 'just born.' "The difference between ean and yean is easily explained; in the latter, the prefixed y- represents the very common A.S. prefix ge-, readily added to any verb without affecting the sense" (Skeat). Hence ean = A.S. édnian: yean = A.S. ge-édnian—both meaning 'to bring forth young,' i.e. of any kind; but now ean or yean is commonly used of sheep. Shakespeare uses eanling = 'young lamb,' in The Merchant of Venice, I. 3. 80.

- amber stream 438 ambient light 520 ambiguous words 503
 ambrosia 478
 ambrosial 406, 434, 500
 amerced of 394
 amiable 459, 584
 ammiral (ship) 379
 amorous bird of night 559
 amphisbæna 602
 Amram's son (Moses) 381
 amused 522
 an host 504
 Anarch 427
 anarchy 595
 Angelic guards 590
 Angelic name 570
 Angels' food 492, 500
 Angola 627 annoy 576
 anointed 437, 500
 answerable 564, 656
 antarctic 569
 Anubis 388
 Aonian mount 369
 apathy 413
 Apocalypse 452
 apostasy 533
 appaid 652
 apparent 466, 592 appearances 551
 apply 459
 apprehension 557
 approve 573, 589
 Araby the Blest 456
 arbitress 399
 arborous roof 479
 Arcadian pipe 618
 architrave 396
 Ardours 484
 areed 473
 Argestes 608
 Argo 427
 Argob 383
 argue 406, 471, 649 argument 370, 511, 563
 Argus 618
 Ariel 518
 Arimaspi 425
 Arioeh 518
 armoury 465, 515, 536
 Arnon 383
 Aroer 384 arrive 409
 as (=that) 488
 as in 588, 613
 as the sound of waters 507, 606
 as whom 375
 Ascalon 387 ascending scale 463
 ask 466
 Asmadai 517
 Asmodeus 456 aspect 407, 436, 542
 Asphaltic pool 385
 asphaltic 385, 595
 asphaltus 396
 assay 394, 434
 assert 370
 assessor 524
 Assyrian mount (Niphates) 454
 astonished 584
 astonished 410, 527
 Astoreth 386
 Astræa 474
 at large 440
 at once 522, 545
 at worst 403
 Atabalipa 628
 Atlantean 407
 Atlas 474
 Atlas Mountains 627
 atrophy 630
 attend 436, 450, 543 attractive virtue 552 attributed 550, 572
 attrite 614
 Auran (Hauran) 457
 Aurora's fan 476
 Ausonian land 397
 authentic 450, 468
 author 466, 583, 594
 auxiliar gods 392
 awful 411
 Azazel 390
 Azores 465
 Azotus 387
 Baalim 385
 Babel 395

I. INDEX OF WORDS, PHRASES AND PROPER NAMES IN THE NOTES.

Some of the words will also be found in the Glossary.

- a (=one) 545
a chance but 464
a world of 563
Abassin 461
Abbana 388
Abdiel 506
abhorred 419
abide 454 abject 381
abominations 383
abortive 410, 442
abrupt (n.) 409
absolute 558, 560
absolved 534
abstract (=abstracted) 558 abused 388
Abyss 537
Accaron 387 accomplished 467 accord (vb) 411 accountable 590
Acheron 414 act of grace 454
actual (sin) 605
Adam 488
adamantine chains 371
add 541
Ades 426 adhere 559 admiration 437, 533, 584 admire 395, 420, 550 admit 562
Adonis 574
adorn (p. p.) 560
Adramelech 517
adust 520, 657
advance 390, 454, 483, 499, 657
Adversary (Satan) 514, 585 advise 409 advised 524
aery gait 465
aery tour 620
Ætna flames 442
Afer 608
affable 533
affect 435, 504, 519, 643 afflict 375, 404, 472
affront 383
after his charge received 484 after summons read 400 against 471, 536
Agra 625
Aladule 600
alarmed 473
Alcairo 396
alchemy 412
Alcides 412
Alcinous 489, 575
Aleian 530
all but less than 377
all-bearing mother (Earth) 489
Almansor 628
aloof (=aloof from) 446
Alp 416
alternate (vb) 501
amain 404
Amara 461
amarant (amaranth) 438, 617 amazed 378
Amazonian targe 588

- Bactrian 600
 baleful 371, 414
 balm 459, 580
 balmy reed 477
 bane 395
 barbaric gold 401
 barbed with fire 521
 Barca 424
 barricadoed 555
 Basan 383 bases 565
 bate 640
 battles (armies) 513
 beads 444
 beam (of a spear) 510
 beam (of scales) 475
 Beelzebub 372, 407
 Beersaba 445
 before the Lord 642
 begirt with 393
 Behemoth 545
 Belial 388, 389, 403
 belike 404
 Bellona 424
 Belus 396
 beneath (south of) 382
 Bengala 417
 beryl 525
 beseeching or besieging 506 better part 394
 bickering 526
 bind Hermes 447
 bird of Jove 620
 bird (of Paradise) 366
 birth 580
 bituminous 642
 Bizance 626
 black (friars) 443
 blanc 606
 bland 476
 blasphemed 435
 blasphemous 506, 517
 blasted heath 394 blessed vision 500
 bloom (trans. vb) 458
 blow (vb) 476
 blowing 580
 bold emprise 635
 boon 459, 583
 Boreas 608
 Bosphorus 427
 bossy sculptures 396
 both 468
 bottom (=valley) 540 bottom (=vessel) 637 bottomless pit 527
 bound...bound 457 bowing...bowed 386
 braided train 402
 brand 658
 brazen 546
 brazen dungeon (of the winds) 608 breadth 446
 breathe elixir 448
 Briareos 375
 bridging 597
 brigad 394, 412
 bright (n.) 552
 brinded 545
 broad herds 545
 broils 422, 514
 brown 588
 bulls (Papal) 444
 bullion-dross 395
 bushing 574
 Busiris 381
 but (=that not) 402
 buxom air 422, 485
 by occasion 585
 by this 590
 Cæcias 608
 Calabria 419
 calved 545
 Cambaluc 625 can 623
 canopy of Night 445
 cany waggons (of the Chinese) 440, 441
 Cape (of Good Hope) 418 capital 652
 caravan 544 career 398
 careering 525
 careful 473
 Carmel 645
 Casbeen 600
 Casius (Mt) 415
 Caspian 421
 cassia 488

- cataract 404, 638
 Cathaian coast 596
 Cathay 625
 causey 599
 cedar-top 543
 celestial patroness 564 cell of fancy 558
 Celtic 390
 centre 395, 446, 513 centric 551, 607
 cerastes 602
 Cerberean 419
 Ceres 473, 574
 certain to 585
 champain head 454, 508
 champion 398 change for 377
 change with 472
 Chaos 369, 423 charge (n.) 449, 590
 charioteer 518
 charity 436, 469
 charm (= song) 466
 charmed 618 charming 549
 Charybdis 427 cheer 520
 Chemos 384
 Chersonese 626
 Cherubic fires 519
 Cherubim 511, 618
 Chimæra 417
 Chinese 441
 chivalry 381
 choice 410
 choice regard 445
 choice to choose 488
 chrysolite 447 cieling 637
 Circe 578 circling 445, 541
 circumscribe 537
 cited 437
 clang 543, 639
 clarion 390
 Cleombrotus 442
 climate 566
 clime 376, 414, 476, 531, 636 close (adj.) 411
 cloud (of soldiers) 521
 cloudy van 511
 clung 602
 coast (n.) 452, 568, 591 coast (vb) 470
 Cocytus 414
 combustion 371, 513
 comet 657
 communion 500 compact of 580
 compare (n.) 494, 571
 compasses 537
 complacence 437
 complete to 590
 compliant 462 complicated 602
 compose 407
 composure 522
 compute days 447
 concave 391, 417
 conclave 399
 concoct 492, 520 confer 398 confine with 426
 confound 409, 606
 Confusion 643
 conglobed 538
 Congo 627 conjured 421
 conniving 605 conscience 559
 conscious Night 521
 consequence 599 considerate 394
 consist 505
 consistence 425
 consorted 533
 conspicuous 533
 consult (n.) 400
 contést (n.) 472, 511, 589, 638 contracted brow 560
 contrite 617
 convérse (n.) 572
 converse (vb) 405, 530, 557
 convex 410, 440, 540 conviction 591
 cope 382, 474, 513
 cormorant 457 corner 606 cornice 396
 corny reed 541

- correspond with 547
 couched with 454
 counterview 594
 court-amours 469 covered field 398
 coy 462
 craze 647
 cresset 396
 crew 388
 crisped brooks 458
 Cronian sea 595 crowned (with wine) 493 crude 520
 cry (=pack) 419
 crystal sluice 479
 crystal wall 540
 crystalline 443, 526, 540 cubic 518
 curious knots 459
 Cusco 628
 Cyclades 485
 Cyrene 424
- Dagon 387
 Dalilah 587
 Damascus 388
 damasked 462
 Damiata 415 damp 390, 623
 Danaw (Donau) 382
 dance (n. and vb) 419, 482, 491, 569
 Danite 587
 dank (n.) 544
 Darien 569
 dark (n.) 432
 dark with excessive bright 439 darkness (of Hell or Chaos) 430, 467, 537
 darkness (Milton's blindness) 531 darkness visible 372
 dart (of Death) 420, 630
 dash (vb) 403
 daughter of his voice 581
 dawning hills 521
 day without night 480
 day-spring 479
 dead in sins 436
 dearest 436
 Death, see Sin and Death death like sleep 653
- Decan 589
 deceive 410
 decencies 561 decent 449 decline 644
 deep (n.) 402, 447, 520 defend 617, 647
 deform 421, 631
 deformed 518
 degree of reason 579 degrees (steps) 444
 Delia 573
 Delos 485, 596
 Delphian cliff 390
 Demogorgon 426 denounce 618
 dense, or rare 425 deny 647
 deprave 512 derived 591
 descant 466 descent (=descendants) 613 despaired (passive) 394, 520 determine 408, 514, 621
 Deucalion and Pyrrha 615, 616 devious 444
 devote (devoted) 435, 585, 638 devoted 507
 dews (of sleep) 501 diamond 517
 Dictæan 605
 dilated 386, 473
 dim suffusion 430
 dimensionless 616
 dipsas 602
 dire hail 414
 disastrous 393
 disburden 610
 disclosed 543
 discontinuous wound 515 discourse (reason) 495 discover 396, 445, 622
 dishonest 462
 dismal 372
 dismal hiss of...darts 513
 disparted 538
 dispenses (n.) 444
 displayed 543
 displode 523
 dispossess 641

- dissipation 522
 distemper 540
 divan 601
 divide the night 467
 dividual 543
 divine of 584
 divinely 559
 Dodona 390
 dogs of Hell 605 doing or suffering 374, 405
 dole 472
 dolphin 543
 Dominations 439
 doom 437 599, 602
 Dorian mood 391
 Doric land 390
 double-founded stream (the Jordan) 646 doubt 569 dove-like 370
 down (adv. used as vb) 571
 Dragon 452, 603
 draw air 530, 556
 dread 384
 drench 402
 drop serene 430
 dropt with gold 543
 drossiest 493
 drouth 533
 drugged 603
 Dryad 573
 dulcimer 548
 durance 472
- each...their 479, 545, 640
 Earth's green Cape 562
 Earth-born 375 earthly 587
 earthly notion 536
 earthy 570
 eastern gate of Paradise 620, 657 eat (=ate) 583
 Ecbatana 626
 eccentric 446, 500, 551
 eclipse (n. and vb) 393, 620
 ecliptic 452
 Eden, 368, 453, 454, 455, 458, 533, 568, 573, 624 edge of battle 378, 511
 edict 505
- effectual might 435
 El Dorado 628
 Eleale 385
 elect Angels 434, 518
 elegant 586
 element (=sky) 411 elements (the four) 407, 483 elixir 448
 ellops 602
 Elysian flowers 438
 embalmed 422
 embattled 541
 emblazed 391, 499
 emblazonry 411
 emblem 467 embodied 391
 embosomed 499
 emboss 647
 embowelled 522
 embower 380
 embryo, embryon 424, 442, 540
 emmet 545
 Empedocles 442
 empiric 493
 emprise 635
 empyreal 450, 599
 Empyrean 433
 enamelled 578
 end (=object, purpose) 463, 533, 546, 572 engines 397, 424, 520 enlarged 385 enormous 390, 488
 enter and possess 605 entertain 412
 entire 572
 enviest 559
 envy 464, 572
 epicycle 551
 equal 610
 equal to God 437
 equal with gods 464
 equinoctial winds 417
 Ercoco 626 erect 461, 631 erected 394
 eremites 442
 err not that 514 erroneous 531
 error 459, 541

- essence 374, 386, 405, 410, 570 essential 402
 esteem of wise 472
 Estotiland 607
 eternal Wisdom 530
 eternalize 518, 616
 ethereal 371, 539
 Ethiop line 461
 Ethiopian (sea) 417, 418
 Euboic sea 413
 euphrasy 629
 Eurus 609
 Eurynome 604
 Eve 464, 619
 even (n.) 465
 event 394, 402, 468, 504, 572 ever-during 537
 every...each 382
 evil tongues 531
 evince 649
 exact 545
 excess 618 exercise 402
 exhale 500, 539
 exile 394
 exorbitant 435
 expatiate 398 experience 584
 explode 603, 636
 express 547
 expressed immutable 589
 extenuate 606
 extinct 374 eye (of plumage) 545 eye (=the sun) 481
 eury 543

 fable 375, 392, 616
 face of things 549
 facile gates 473
 fact 403, 585, 630
 fair (n.) 579, 637
 fairest of stars 481
 faltering measure 584 fame 394, 409, 472
 famine 422
 fan (=wing) 485
 fancy 479, 556
 fast by 369
 fatal 403
 fatal bruise 593 fatal course 506
 fate 374 fathom 424, 425 fealty 557
 feared (=to be feared) 582 feathered cincture 589
 Feature 595
 feigned 467, 565
 fellow-servant 555
 fellows of 394
 female light (of the moon) 554 fennel 579
 fervid wheels 537
 Fesole 379
 fetch day 553
 Fez 627
 field 373, 398, 407
 fierce as a comet 657 fiercest (used as noun) 472
 fig-tree 588
 files 391, 470, 516
 Filial Godhead 536
 fire and horror 402
 firmament 404, 539, 540
 first convex 440
 first of things (light) 539
 five (planets) 481
 fixed (stars) 443, 481, 606 fixed mind 373
 flaming Cherubim 511, 570
 flaming mount 499
 flat 404
 flatly 506
 flaw (=gust of wind) 608
 fledge (fledged) 449, 543
 fleecy star 445
 flight 369, 530 float 544
 flood 417, 451
 Flora 476
 florid son 460
 flowing cups 493 flown with insolence 389 fluctuate 581
 fluid air 516
 foiled 561
 foment 614
 fond 442, 555
 Fontarabbia 393

- for (=because of, instead of) 463, 576, 586
 forfeit 435
 forgetful lake 402
 forlorn 463
 forlorn of 613
 fortify 599
 foughten field 519
 found (=build) 538, 594
 found (=melt) 395 fount 458 fragrance 556
 frame (n.) 424, 439, 480, 550 frame (vb) 479, 494 fraud 384, 535, 567, 581
 free will 590
 freedom (=free men) 512 frequent 400, 546 frequenting 615
 fret 548
 fretted gold 396 friars 442 frieze 396
 frith 424
 from (=after) 555, 558
 from thence 546
 from what...into what 496 front 407, 461, 546, 572
 frore 415
 fruitless...fruit 581
 fugue 633
 full of pomp 382
 fume 555, 586
 fuming 476
 furniture 565
 fusil 633

 Gabriel 464, 509
 Galaxy 547
 gales 455, 559
 Galileo 378, 484, 549
 gan blow 510
 Ganges 440
 garden of bliss 556
 gave to rule 397, 624
 gay 473
 Gaza 387
 gaze (trans. vb) 448, 486
 Gehenna 384
 gemmed 541

 general ancestor 466 generation 534
 genial 467, 540, 561
 Geryon's sons 628
 Giant-angels 548
 girt 536
 give us only good 483 given me to possess 436 giving to 437
 glimmering 428, 440
 glistening 445, 552
 globe 411, 607
 gloss 493
 gloze 434, 578
 glut 522
 Goblin 421
 god 374, 438, 478
 golden chain 428
 golden compasses 537 golden scales of the Eternal 474
 gonfalon 499
 good 562
 goodly frame 550
 Gordian twine 462
 gorgeous East 400
 Gorgon 416
 Gorgonian 596
 gourd 488
 grace (=pardon) 454
 graces (=favours) 450
 Graces 460
 grain of Sarra 621
 grand (=first) 371
 grand (=great) 374
 Grand (=great ones) 600
 great (n.) 552
 great river 638
 great things by small 514 great year (Plato's) 498
 grey 648
 grey (friars) 443
 griding 515
 gripe 463, 521, 622
 growth 569
 grunsel 387
 gryphon 425
 Guiana 628
 gulf 433
 Gulf (Persian) 638 gum 459

- gust 603
 habit 449
 habitable 554
 had in remembrance 450
 hair 541
 haled 416
 half-rounding guards 471
 halleluiah 549
 happy isle 410
 happy isles 446
 harald 397, 412, 636
 Haran 644, 645
 harbour 572
 harp (of Orpheus) 533
 harpy-footed 416
 havoc 605
 head 464, 526, 589
 head (=source) 461
 healing words 572
 hear'st thou rather 430
 heaved 376
 Heaven, Heavens (=sky) 369,
   427, 451, 497, 533, 550
 Heaven (=the Empyrean) 427
 Heaven and Earth (=the classical deities, Uranus and Ge) 390
 Heaven and Earth (=the World) 605 heavenly love 561
 Heavenly Muse 368, 430
 heinous 590
 Hell's concave 391
 Hell-born 420 helm 391 hemisphere 539
 her (=its) 491
 Hermes 447, 448, 487
 Hermione 577
 heroic race 392
 Hesebon 384
 Hesperian 459
 Hesperus 481, 534, 559
 hierarch 494, 499, 621
 high disdain 373
 high mount of God 500
 high throne 600
 highth or depth 408
 him destroyed 570
 Hinnom 384
 his (=its) 375, 552
 hold 428 hollow (used quibblingly) 522 holy mount 548
 homicide 385
 honour dishonourable 462 hope (=hope for) 406, 534 hopeful 473
 horned 638
 horns (=the "crescent" of the Turks) 600
 horrent 411
 horrid 391
 horrid hair (of a comet) 421 horror chill 584
 hosting 511
 Hours 460
 house of woe (Hell) 528, 601
 however 472
 hull (vb) 639
 human face divine 432
 humane 582, 583 humble 541
 humid bow 455
 hyacinthine 461
 hyaline 548
 Hydaspes 440
 Hydra 416
 hydrus 602
 Hymen 634
 hymenæan 467
 Ida 390, 491
 idol 511
 if chance 411
 ignoble ease 405
 ignominy (scanned ignomy) 374, 405
 Ilium 392 illustrate 503 illustrious 449
 Imaus 440
 imblazoned 565
 imbordered 574
 imbrowned 459
 imbrute 570
 impaired 501 impaled 418
 imparadised 464
 impearl 504
 impediment 521

- impenetrable to star 587
 impertinence 555 implicit 541
 impotence 404
 impregn 464, 583
 impresses (n.) 565
 impurpled 439
 in (=on) 465 in act 581
 in bliss 499
 in counterview 594
 in degree 558
 in fact of arms 403
 in few (words) 592
 in himself collected 581 in plain 583
 in pleasure 557
 in power 605
 in procinct 508
 in spirit 628
 in station 603
 in the air 478
 in the dark 448
 in their course 501 in their triple degrees 504 in utmost longitude 464 in vain 442
 incarnate 570
 incense...fuming 548 incentive reed (match) 521 inclinable 583 inclined 622
 incomposed 427
 incorporate 611 incredible how swift 466
 incumbent 376
 Ind (India) 400 indecent 523
 indented 576
 Indian fig 588
 Indian mount 399
 indirect 635
 individual 464, 500
 inducing 518
 indulgences 444
 inexorably 402
 infamed 583
 infant blood 419
 infantry 391
 infer 534 informed 447
 inhabit lax 536 inoffensive 490, 554, 597
 insensate 526 insinuating 462
 inspired 488, 611
 instinct 425, 633
 Intelligence 554 intend 410
 Intercessor 436, 592 intercourse 594
 internal Man 582 interpreter 533
 interrupt (p. p.) 434 interval (of battle) 511 into what...from what 373 intrenched 394
 inured 405 inventions 534
 invest 376, 430, 542
 invisible...beheld visibly 524 involved 376, 540
 inwards 630
 Iris 621
 iron...mould 522 irreverent son (Ham) 644
 irriguous 459
 Isis 388
 Ispahán (Isfahan) 626
 Israel 649
 Ithuriel 470
 jaculation 523
 jangling noise 643
 Japhet 468
 jar not with 504
 Javan 389
 jointed armour 543
 Jordan 646
 Joshua 650
 jostled 393
 Jove, bird of, 620
 joy and tidings 598
 just (=righteous) 536
 just array 603
 ken 371, 372
 kick the beam 475
 kind (n.) 543
 kindest 489

- King of Glory 537
 kingly crown 420
 knots 459
 know to know no more 469 knowledge within bounds 534
 Ksar 626
- labouring moon 420
 labouring (=cultivating) 641
 Laertes' son 575
 Lahore 625 laid (=stilled) 375
 landskip 455
 Lapland witches 419
 lapsed 435, 603
 larboard 427
 last (=at last) 527
 last (=worst) 587
 late (adv.) 640
 lateral 609
 lawn 459
 lazar-house 630
 lead on (a dance) 460 least...last 437
 lee 376
 Lemnos 397
 leper (Naaman) 388
 Lethé 414
 Leucothea 619
 Levant 609
 levelled west 542
 Leviathan 376, 543
 levied (=raised) 424
 levy war 411, 621
 lewd 457
 lewdly 512
 libbard 545
 Libecchio 609
 Libya 657
 Lichas 413 lightning 503
 like a mist 571
 like a tower 393
 likest 573
 limber 545
 limbo 444, 616
 liminary 473
 lineaments 486, 545
 liquid fire 376
 liquid texture 516
- list (vb) 419, 470
 listed 639
 livery 466, 545
 living death 611 living God 644
 living sapphire 428, 466
 locks (=foliage) 614 long choosing and beginning late 565 long were to tell 601
 longitude 446, 464, 542
 loosely 544
 loquacious (Eve) 592
 lore 422
 lower stair 445
 Lucifer 481, 534, 535
 lute 480
 luxury 636
- mace 596
 Mæonides 432
 Magellan 607 magnanimous 547
 magnificence 407
 Maia's son 487
 mail 487, 517
 main (=land) 524
 main (=sea) 594
 male light (of the sun) 554
 Mammon 394, 406
 mane 546
 manifold in sin 590
 manna 403
 mantling 544
 mantling vine 459
 manuring (=cultivation) 466
 manuring (=tending) 616
 marasmus 630
 marble air 446
 marish 657
 marle 379
 Marocco 627
 marshal 565
 mask (Masque) 395, 469, 487, 621 mastery 424
 material mould 450
 maugre 436, 567
 me, me 436, 611
 me miserable! 454
 me...remains 566

- meagre 594
 meath 490
 Mediator 591
 Medusa 416, 602
 Megæra 603
 Melinda 626
 mellifluous dews 492
 Memnonian palace 597
 Memphian 381, 395
 mental sight 629
 Mercury 487 mercy-seat 615
 mere serpent 574
 merit 437
 Michael 509, 617
 middle air 390
 middle darkness 430 middle shore 489 might of Gabriel 516
 milky 488
 mind (vb) 573
 minim 545
 ministering...minstrelsy 512 mirror (the Moon) 542 miserable of happy 610
 Misery 563 misrule 540
 mixed dance 469
 Mogul 625
 mole 597
 Moloch 383
 Mombaza 626 moment 410, 513, 590
 Montezume 628 mood 391
 moon-struck madness 630
 more pleasant 574
 more unexpert 401
 more wakeful than to 618 morning planet 542
 mortal 368, 422, 435, 556 mortal passage 624
 Moscow 626 mother (Earth) 540
 mother of all mankind 491 motion 404, 405
 motioned 571
 mould 403, 450, 463, 522, 542, 576 mouth of Hell 642
 Mozambic 4:6
 much revolving 453
 Mulciber 397
 must (=new wine) 490
 my mother's lap 611
 mysterious 561, 592
 mysteriously 444
 naphtha 396
 nard 487, 488
 narrow 569
 nathless 379
 native 387, 455, 622
 nativity 520
 Nature 423, 424
 Nebo 384 necessity ("the tyrant's plea") 463 nectar 492, 500
 nectarous 515
 need (vb) 438
 Negus 626
 neither...and 637
 nether ocean 549
 new part puts on 581
 nice 459, 492, 557
 nicest 522
 night comes not there 501 night-founded 376 night-hag 419
 nightingale 477, 544
 nightly 431, 532, 564
 Nimrod 641, 642
 nine (a significant number) 371,
 418, 527
 Niphates 452
 Nisroch 519
 nitre 425
 nitrous 520
 no detriment 599
 no equal 513
 no more of talk 563
 nocturnal and diurnal rhomb 553 none (emphatic by position) 467, 496, 542, 634
 nor did they not 381
 nor more 475
 nor sometimes forget 431
 nor...wanted they 480
 nor wants 490
 north-wind 411
 Norumbega 608

- Norwegian pine 379
 not mystic 575
 not noxious 546
 not obvious 559
 not the lowest end 572 not unconform to 484
 not unvisited 409
 not without 482, 583 notion 536
 Notus 608 numbered 513, 550
 numberless 552
 numbers (measures) 432, 447 numerous 480
 nursery 550

 O for 452
 Ob 568
 obdurate 371
 obdured 414
 obey to 381 object (vb) 472 oblige 585
 oblivious pool 378
 obnoxious 571 obscene 384 obscure 403
 obscure (n.) 409
 obsequious 508
 observed 393, 600 obtain 445
 obvious 510, 559, 592, 624
 Ocean Isles 463 ocean-stream 376 odds 464, 584, 599
 Echalia 413
 o'erwatched 407
 of (=after) 455, 579, 610, 616, 646 of force 374
 of future 519
 of grace 614
 of incorrupt 616
 of late 589 of mute 579
 of the first 501 of us...determine 621
 offend 375, 519 officiate 550
 officious 552, 569
 old 530

 Olympian hill 529
 Olympias 577
 Olympus 390
 omnific 537
 on fret 548
 on smooth (sea) 543 on this side 644
 one (emphatic) 464
 one root (Adam) 409
 opacous 440, 550
 operation 556
 Ophion 604
 Ophir 627
 Ophiuchus 421
 Ophiusa 603
 opiate rod 619
 Ops 605
 optic glass 378
 optic tube 447
 or...or 560, 572
 oracle 399
 orb 430, 466, 481, 499, 539, 569
 orb in orb 551
 orbed 521
 orbicular 451, 599
 orc 639
 Orcus 426
 order from disorder 450
 Orders of Heavenly beings 499
 Oread 573
 Oreb 368, 369, 617
 organ 548
 orgies 385
 orient 391, 476
 original (n.) 409, 570
 original (sin) 586
 Orion 380
 orisons 480
 Ormus 400
 Orus 388
 Osiris 388
 other...other 454, 612
 other self 558, 592
 other suns 554
 ought...admire 551
 ounce 462, 545
 our general ancestor (Adam) 466 owe 589

 pain 371

- painted wings 544
 pale (n.) 454
 Pales 573
 palm-tree 555
 palpable darkness 647
 palpable obscure 409
 pampered boughs 483
 Pan 459
 Pandemonium 397, 599
 Pandora 467, 468
 Paneas 445
 Panim 398
 panoply 525
 Paquin 625
 Paradise 454, 455, 458, 568
 Paradise of Fools 441, 444, 616
 paragoned 599, 600
 paramount 411
 parch 415, 657
 pardons 444
 parle 514
 parsimonious (ant) 545 part (in music) 439 part (stage-term) 592
 partial 413 participate 557 pass 591
 passed 436
 passion 394, 454
 pastoral reed 618
 paths indirect 635
 patron 436, 473 pavilion 426, 501 pavilioned 621
 peace is despaired 394
 peal (of the last trumpet) 437 pearly grain 492 peculiar (n.) 542 peculiar nation 644
 peer 371
 peerage 393
 Pegasus 530
 Pelorus 376
 pendent by subtle magic 396
 pendent world 429
 pendulous 474
 pennon 424, 544
 Peor 385
 perfidious 381
 period (end) 654
 permissive 601
 permit to Heaven 632
 pernicious 378, 521
 perplexed 457
 persevere 549, 562 persisting 435
 person 592
 pervert 457
 Petsora 595
 phalanx 473
 philosopher 447
 Phineus 432
 Phlegethon 414
 Phlegra 392
 phoenix 485
 phrenzy 630
 pilaster 396
 pilot 376
 pine (trans. vb) 464, 630, 643
 pioner 394
 pitchy cloud of locusts 381 place or refuge 569
 plain (flat) 556
 planet 547, 552
 plat (plot) 576
 platane 464
 plate 517
 pledge 422
 Pleiades 542 points (laces) 366
 poise 424
 pole 418, 531
 Pomona 491, 573
 pomp 547, 550
 ponder 475
 pontifical 597
 Pontus 489
 port (=bearing) 472, 615
 port (=gate) 470
 ported spears 473
 possess 464, 505, 605 poured 536
 powdered with stars 547
 powers 375
 pravity 649 precede 605
 precious bane 395
 precious things (stones, metals)
     448 prescript 648

- pretence 422, 519
 pretend 366
 pretended to 612
 pretending...commanded 504 prevent 411, 613
 prevention 511
 prime (= chief) 389, 410, 449, 466 prime (= daybreak) 476
 prime orb 466
 Prince of air 653
 Prince of Darkness 599
 Princedoms 437 process 536
 procinct 508
 prodigious 416, 636
 proem 578
 proffer 410
 profluent stream 653
 progeny of light 499 prone 558
 proof 491
 proper 402, 496
 prophecy (= prophets) 650
 Prosérpin, Prosérpina 460, 574 prostrate 527
 Proteus 448 provision 580 public reason 463
 punctual 550
 Punic coast 489
 purchase 604
 purged 538, 629
 purlieu 422, 463
 purple (vb) 532
 purple (= lustrous) 469 purpose 462, 556
 pursue 370, 406 put to try 472
 pygmean race 399
 Python 603
- quadrature 599
 quaternion 483
 quell 650
 quenched 430
 Quiloa 626
 quit 453
- Rabba 383
- races and games 565
 racking whirlwinds 404
 Ramiel 518
 rampant 545
 ramped 462 ran purple 387
 ranged 412
 rank (n.) 455
 rank (trans. vb) 623
 Raphael 484
 rapt 444, 531
 rapture 533
 rare (= here and there) 545 rare (= seldom achieved) 430 rare (= thin) 425 ravenous fowl 594
 realtà 511
 rear (vb) 376 reason 569
 rebel king (Jeroboam) 388 recess 399
 recline (= reclining) 462 recollect 390, 576 recommend 462
 recorder 391
 recure 652
 red right hand 404
 redound 423, 533, 610
 reduce 526, 600, 610
 regal ornament 486
 regard (n.) 445, 466 regency 504
 region 446, 544, 617
 reign 391
 relation 496, 555
 religions 382
 reliques 444
 reluctance 408, 614 reluctant 509, 602
 remiss 519, 557
 remorse 394, 497, 617
 rend 647
 renew (intrans. vb) 556 repaired 469
 repealed 533
 repeat (n.) 515
 represent 479
 reptile 543 resolve 550 retained 579

- retinue 490
 retire (n.) 622
 retorted 507
 returns him 472
 reverend sire (Noah) 637 revolutions 416
 revolving 453
 Rhene 382
 Rhodope 532
 rhomb 553
 rib (Adam's) 558, 559, 612 ribs of gold 395 ride the air 412 ridge 513
 right reason 509, 643
 rime 367
 Rimmon 388
 rined 490 riot 602
 river-dragon 647
 river-horse 545 road of Heaven 473
 robe of righteousness 594 roll 509 romance 393 room 437
 root 581
 rosy hand of Morn 508 rosy steps of Morn 475
 roving the field 579
 rubied nectar 500
 ruby 447
 rue (herb) 629
 ruin (n.) 371 ruin (vb) 436
 ruining 527 run 534, 542
- Sabæan 456
 Sabbath-evening 555
 sacred 431, 569, 571 sacred and devote 435 sad 479, 521
 sad demeanour meek 619 safe 584 safe arrive 435
 sagacious of 595
 saints 437, 442, 535, 647
 Samarchand 625
 Samoed shore 608
- Samos 485
 Sanctities 433
 sanctity of reason 546
 sapphire fount 458
 sapphire throne 525
 Sarra 621
 Satan 372, 435, 501 savage 457
 savour 586 scale 495, 561
 scaled 445
 scales 474, 475
 Scales (sign of Zodiac) 474, 607 scandal 385
 scathed 394
 science 582
 sciential 584
 scope 403
 Scorpion sign 474
 scribbled o'er 551
 scull 543
 Scylla 427
 scythe of Time 605
 sdeined 453
 seal (vb) 473
 seasons 466, 548, 607 second Eve 491, 593
 seconded 598
 secret 368, 423
 secret cloud 590
 secretest 594
 sect 512
 secular power 654 secure (adj.) 457, 484, 521, 573, 620 secure of 470 securely 511
 sedentary Earth 550 sedge 380 select 638
 Seleucia 458
 self-balanced (Earth) 538 self-opened (gate of Heaven) 484
 seneshal 566
 Senir 646
 Sennaar 442 sense 569
 sensible (n.) 407 sentence 401, 569
 senteries 410

- seraph 453, 507
 Seraphim 439
 Serapis 396
 Serbonis (lake of) 415
 serenate 469
 serpent (=serpentine) 541
 Serralliona 609
 serried 391, 522
 servant of God 508
 servility (=slaves) 512 servitude (=slaves) 645 several 538
 sewer 566 shade 594 shadow 563
 shaggy hill 458, 523
 shallow 578
 Shame 586 shape 471
 shared (cut) 515
 shattering 614
 shave 417
 shoaling 595
 shook his throne 373 shroud 614
 shrub unfumed 490
 sideral 608
 Sidon 386
 sighs...mute 616
 sign (of the Zodiac) 474
 Siloa's brook 369
 Sin and Death 418, 420, 563, 594, 597
 Sinæan 625
 Sinai 368, 369
 single imperfection 558 sinister 612
 sinned thy sin 629
 Sirocco 609
 Sittim 385
 skill 560
 sky-tinctured grain 487
 Sleep (personified) 534 slime 595, 597
 slip (=let slip) 375 sluiced 395
 small infantry (= the pygmies) 391 smallest lineaments exact 545 smooth 387 smooth (n.) 543
 smooth sliding 556
 so (completing a simile) 422, 441, 456, 541, 578, 595
 so dearly 437
 soar 369, 530
 sociable spirit (Raphael) 484
 Sofala 627
 soft-ebbing 541
 Soldan 398
 sole bird (the Phœnix) 486 sole command 434
 sole propriety 469
 sole wonder 578
 solemn 544, 651
 solemn days 500
 solitude 532
 some say 604
 son of despite 571
 sons of Belial 389 sons of God 494
 Sophi 600
 sord 629
 sort 557
 sottish 388
 soul (=creatures) 543
 sound (=strait) 416
 south-wind 637
 sovran 377
 sowed 476
 spares to 422
 speculation 656 speed (vb) 590
 speed...spiritual 552 sphere 551
 spinning 554
 spires 577
 Spirit of God 538 spirited 451, 580
 spiritous 520
 sport 444
 spots (in the moon) 492, 553
 spring (thicket) 571 spun out 538
 squadroned 651
 squared regiment 397 stabled 637
 star of evening 534 starry 544
 starry sphere 439

- starve 416
 starved 469
 state (=canopy) 600
 state (=stately bearing) 487, 622
 States 409 station 410, 535, 547, 603, 656 stay (for) 464
 steadfast Earth 424 steering 598 stemming 418 still 592
 still erect 573
 still to seek 555
 stole (p. p.) 468
 stony (n.) 615
 stood (to pray) 468, 615 stood at my head 556 stood fixed 396 stood for 510
 stooped 557, 620
 stop (musical) 548
 store 442, 488
 straitened 398
 strike (=to blast) 599
 strook 404
 strucken 587
 study 373
 study household good 571 stupendous 598
 Stygian flood 376
 Stygian pool 430
 style 408
 Styx 414
 subject (vb) 561
 subject for heroic song 565 subjected 658
 subjection 560
 sublime 412, 433, 526, 543, 603
 sublimed 376, 495
 sublunar vault 470
 submit 556
 suborned 573 subscribed 619 success 366, 401, 512 successful hope 374
 succinct 449 suffer...do 405 suffice 374
 suggestion 434, 569
 Sultan 626
 sum of things 523
 summed their pens 543 sung triumph 528
 sunk 568 superstitions 654
 supplanted 602
 supreme 405
 surcharged 422
 Sus, Susa 597, 627
 suspend 524
 suspended 413
 suspense 522
 swage 391
 swelling gourd 541 swim 586, 635
 sword of Michael 407, 513
 sword-law 636
 sylvan scene 455
 Sylvanus 467
 symphony 396, 439, 480, 634 synod 409, 512, 616
 Syrtis 425 tabernacle 501, 539
 talked 443
 Tantalus 416
 Tarsus 375
 Tartarean 402
 tartareous 538
 Tartarus 509
 Tauris 600
 Taurus 398
 tedded grass 576
 teemed 545
 Temir 625
 temper (=a thing tempered) 378, 470 temper (=temperament) 405 temper (vb) 422
 temperate vapours bland 476
 tempering 530
 tempt 409
 tempted...attempt 394
 tendance 574
 tended 476
 tenfold adamant 513
 tents of wickedness 634
 tepid 543
 Ternate 417
 terrestrial mould 576

- texture 516
 Thammuz 386
 Thamyris 431
 that (= so that) 422, 423 that (= the well-known) 399, 443, 460 that first moved 443 that hill 625
 that shepherd 369
 that stone 447
 the great mother (Earth) 540
 the only sound 476
 the rest (= for the rest) 581
 Thebes 392
 then...when 406, 452, 500
 there be who 511
 this habitable 554
 those (= the well-known) 379 thought not much 593
 Thracian 532
 Thrascias 608
 three different motions (of the Earth) 552 thrice 394
 throned powers 374
 through all numbers absolute 558
 Thunderer 401 thundering 383
 thus much 472
 thwart 465, 553, 614
 thy weaker (Eve) 529
 Thyestean 608
 tiar 449
 Tidore 417
 tilth 629
 tilting furniture 565
 timorous and slothful 403
 tintured 487
 tine 614
 tinsel trappings 565
 tire 523
 Tiresias 432
 Titan 390
 to (= agreeably to) 574 to (= to the best of) 408 to admiration 584 to death devote 585
 to do...rites 385
 to drowse charmed 618 to me (= in my opinion) 519 to the ages 606
 to the shield 470
 to the spear 470
 Tobias 456, 484
 too long (to tell) 442 too mean pretence 519 too secure 620
 took 413 took alarm 521
 top of speculation 656
 torturing hour 402
 tour 620
 towered structure high 396 towering 486
 toy 586
 tragic (notes) 563 training 522
 trains 635
 translated saints 442
 transmigration 594
 transverse 444, 633
 travelled steps 444 traverse 391
 Tree of Life 457
 Tree of prohibition 581
 Tremisen 628
 trepidation talked 443
 triform 451
 Trinacria 419
 triple degrees 504
 triumph (n.) 636
 triumph (vb) 374
 triumphed (= triumphed over) 603
 triumphing 438, 653 triumphs (= public shows) 637 troll 634
 try 599
 tube 447
 tuft 541
 tun 471
 Turchestan-born 626
 turret (adj.) 578
 Tuscan artist 378
 twinned 643
 two-handed sword 513
 Typhcean 412
 Typhon 375, 376 tyranny 374, 401
 unapparent Deep 534

- uncoloured 483
 unconform 484
 uncouth 409, 479, 517, 555, 601
 unculled 630
 understood 394, 598, 612
 undying worm 524
 unenvied 401
 unessential Night 410
 unformed 537
 unfounded 422
 unfumed 490
 unhide-bound 605
 unison 548
 unity 558
 universal Dame 579
 unkindly 442, 586
 unminded 598
 unnumbered 424, 544
 unobnoxious 518
 unoriginal 601
 unperceived 450
 unprevented 436
 unreal Deep 601
 unreined 530
 unremoved 474
 unproved 464
 unsleeping 501 unspoiled 628
 unsucceeded 506
 unsuspect 583
 untamed 408
 unweeting 598
 unwiser 468
 up or down 446
 upbraided 453
 upon her centre poised 497 upright (stature of man) 546
 Ūr 645
 Urania 530
 urge 372 urged home 523
 Uriel 449, 517, 567
 Urim 525, 526
 urn 542
 us dispossessed 535
 Uther's son 393
 utmost isles 390
 utter 524
 utter darkness (of Hell) 372, 430, 500 uttermost convex 540
 Uzziel 470
 vain empires 409
 Valdarno 379
 vales of Heaven 381
 Vallombrosa 379, 380
 valour 636
 van (=vanguard) 412, 511
 vans (=wings) 424
 vapour 405, 657
 various 510
 varnished...with 411 vast abrupt 409
 Venus 480, 534, 542
 verdant Isles 562
 Vertumnus 573
 vexed 380, 598
 vicissitude 508, 541 view 459
 viewless 444
 vigilance (=guards) 465 violent and void 454
 virgin 572
 virtue 381, 447, 457, 491, 524, 538, 599, 636
 virtue-proof 491
 virtuous 583
 visible diurnal sphere 531 vision 624, 644 vision beatific 395, 433, 500 visitation 623
 visual ray 449 vital virtue 538
 void 430, 454 void of pain 405 void profound 410
 volant touch 632
 vollied 472
 volūbil 466
 voluble 574
 voluminous 419
 vouched 478
 wafted 444
 wafting 653
 wakeful bird 432
 wander (trans. vb) 458, 637 wandering fire 481, 580 want 534

wanton 462 wants not 407
 war unproclaimed 621
 warping 382
 was flown 546 was run 516
 waste 421
 waste wide 595
 wasteful 426, 537
 watch (vb) 534
 watch (=watchmen) 403
 waved 543
 weary (vb) 623 wedge 544 went 556
 were long to tell 389 wert 430
 what (=whatsoever) 484
 what is more 555
 what obeys reason is free 573
 what rests? 590
 what time 371
 whatever 472
 wheel of day and night 553
 when on a day 497
 whenas 571 whip of scorpions 421
 white (friars) 443
 who first, who last 382 wide (of the mark) 551 wide Ethiopian 417
 wide interrupt 434
 wide...wasteful 426

wide-encroaching 604 wild (of the mark) 585 wild Desert 647 wilderness 572
 wing (n.) 430, 530, 567 wing (trans. vb) 544
 winnow 485
 with a vengeance 457 with gust 603
 within the wind 514
 without (=outside) 611
 witness (vb) 371, 389, 483, 548 won (=dwell) 545
 won audience 582 won from the...infinite 430 wont 398, 511
 wooed...won 559
 Word 435, 439, 506
 worm 545, 587
 wrack 474
 wreak...his loss 452

Xerxes 597

ye (=you, obj.) 463, 582
 yeangling 440
 your fill 496

zenith 598
 Zephon 470
 Zephyr 609
 zodiac 622
 Zophiel 521

II. GENERAL INDEX TO NOTES AND APPENDIX.

- absolute construction, instances of, 374, 391, 432, 433, 438, 466, 484, 535, 557
- abstract words used in a concrete sense 378, 433, 465, 470, 504, 512, 533, 530, 550, 574, 613, 623, 645, 650
- Abyssinian princes, tradition about, 461
- accent, throwing back of, in disyllabic adjectives 405
- accentuation, Latin, 466, 612, 617
- Addison, remarks of, on Paradise Lost, 408, 409, 434, 440, 453, 475, 477, 484, 488, 492, 508, 522, 523, 524, 552, 563, 583, 594, 597, 658, 686, 690
- adjectival use of names 442
- adjectives used as nouns 402, 407, 432, 579, 615
- adverb used as a verb 571
- alchemists, allusion to, 447, 448, 493
- allegory of Sin and Death 418, 420, 547, 594
- alliteration, instances of, 410, 418, 426, 433, 537, 540, 545, 569, 580, 583, 585, 595, 602, 603
- Ammon, legend of, 685, 686
- anacoluthon 373, 404
- Angels, representation of, 398, 399, 681, 682; changes in the fallen angels 515, 570
- apostate angels and gods of heathenism, identification of, 382, 516, 604
- architecture of the Renaissance 395, 396
- Arianism 439, 499, 558
- Ariosto, his description of the Limbo of Vanity, 441; other references to 370, 380, 415, 520, 604, 634, 635, 677, 678
- Aristotle's theory of ether, reference to, 451
- Arthurian legend 392, 393, 565
- Aspramont 677
- assonance 398, 423, 452, 537, 602, 603
- astrological terms 599, 606, 691, 692
- astronomy, its great attraction for Milton, 549
- autumnal leaves, a multitude compared to, 379
- Babel, Tower of, reference to, 642, 643
- baptism, Milton's view as to, 653
- barbarians, their invasions of the south, 382
- Barrow, Samuel, author of commendatory verses on Paradise Lost, 365
- bathos 491

- battle-scenes modelled on Homer 373, 393, 397, 415, 416, 425, 428, 430, 432, 433, 435, 441, 447, 450, 452, 453, 455, 456, 458, 464, 494, 495, 496, 497, 499, 504, 506, 509, 512, 517, 528, 530, 532, 542, 544, 553, 555, 560, 576, 577, 602, 607, 612, 618, 637, 639, 642, 643, 654, 666, 669, 680, 687
 bees, common belief as to, 546
 Bentley, two of his emendations usually adopted, 541, 545
 bird of Paradise 366
 birds, migration of, 544
 blank verse, on the use of, 367 blindness, Milton's description of his, 682, 683
 Bunyan's Holy War, compared with Paradise Lost, 401, 520
 Burke, quotes Milton, 415, 453, 454, 461, 580, 596
 Cælum Stellatum 443, 446
 cannon invented in Hell 520 celibacy of priests, allusion to, 469 ceremonies and ritual in worship, Milton's dislike of, 382, 468, 655
 Chaos, palace of, 425, 426
 Charles II., court of, probable allusions to, 389, 469, 638
 Chinese carriages with sails 440, 441
 Church, attacks on the, 457, 480, 651, 654
 Civil War, probable reminiscences of, 411, 471, 520 classical epics, summary of the themes of, 563, 564 classical mythology referred to as fables or dreams 375, 533 climate, supposed influence of cold, 566, 567
 Collins and Milton 455, 462, 487, 525, 625, 633 colloquialism 492, 610
 comets, superstition as to, 421 comparative and superlative constructions, combination of, 462 Copernican system 465, 466, 549 ff.
 cosmology of Paradise Lost 659-66 crucifixion 652
 Damasco 678
 Dante illustrations 370, 371, 372, 373, 393, 397, 415, 416, 425, 428, 430, 432, 433, 435, 441, 447, 450, 452, 453, 455, 456, 458, 464, 494, 495, 496, 497, 499, 504, 506, 509, 512, 517, 528, 530, 532, 542, 544, 553, 555, 560, 576, 577, 602, 607, 612, 618, 637, 639, 642, 643, 654, 666, 669, 680, 687
 Dead Sea 385; fruit 603 deities of heathenism and the apostate angels, identification of, 382, 516, 604, 672-74 descriptions, where intentionally vague, 420, 474 deterioration in the physical universe 606 dis- (negative prefix), compounds with, frequent use of, 641
 Drummond of Hawthornden and Milton 481; illustrations from 423, 428, 439, 491, 530, 550, 553, 554, 576, 606, 631, 687
 Dryden and Milton 366, 367, 376, 471, 548, 601, 632, 683, 690
-ean, Milton's scansion of the termination, 608 early rising 571, 576 earthquakes, notion concerning the cause of, 376, 512
 East Indiamen 417
 eclipses supposed to be of evil omen 393, 620
 Eden, position of, 457, 458
 Egyptian mythology 388 emphasis, Milton's favourite form of, 405, 436, 507 epanadiplosis, see verbal repetition episodic description 496, 497
 ether, definition of, 451
 Euripides, resemblances to, 372, 478, 613 fire, supposed origin of, on Earth, 614 flight, Milton's favourite metaphor of, 369, 430, 530, 567
 Florence, see Italy
 Fontarabbia 679, 680

- freedom associated with reason
434, 496, 573, 643
- gardens, Milton's love of, 576
- Geoffrey of Monmouth 392
- geography, illustration of Milton's accuracy in, 683, 684
- golden apples of the Hesperides
446, 459, 562
- golden chain, Homer's, 428
- Gray, imitations of Milton, 371,
390, 393, 397, 402, 416, 426,
466, 492, 523, 571, 589, 630, 683
- Greek and Latin idioms 373, 374,
381, 391, 397, 409, 430, 431,
445, 446, 455, 462, 475, 501,
516, 535, 546, 558, 583, 618
- Grotius' Adamus Exul 377, 549, 583, 610
- Guardian Angels 427
- heavenly bodies, views as to their being inhabited 442, 548, 553, 569
- Hebrew poetry, Milton's preference of, 431
- Hell, Milton's picture of, 402, 414-16
- hendiadys 598
- "heroic," Milton's description of,
Paradise Lost, 690, 691
- Hierarchies of Heavenly beings
680-82
- high-priesthood, allusion to the struggle for the, 650, 651
- humours in old physiology 632
- hypallage 444
- hypocrisy 450
- Imaus, see geography
- impersonal construction 490, 516,
594
- imputed righteousness, doctrine of, 437
- inversion of order of words 376,
396, 397, 432, 476, 513, 531,
537, 556, 574, 587, 592, 619, 648
- inversion of rhythm 587
- irony, examples of, 522, 527, 546
- Italy, Milton's stay in, 378, 379, 380, 445
- ive, passive use of, in adjectives
601
- jingles, see word-play
- Johnson, comments on Milton,
398, 408, 431, 460, 461, 479,
515, 517, 531, 532, 565, 566,
597, 621, 624, 691
- Latinisms 391, 397, 402, 410, 426,
436, 445, 468, 484, 509, 511,
518, 546, 558, 598
- Lauder, William, attacks on Milton, 365, 377, 378, 610
- legal metaphors 436, 605
- liberty, Milton and, 406, 638, 643
- Licenser for the Press 393
- light, passages on, 429, 430, 538, 539
- lute, in Milton's time, 480
- Marlowe and Milton 377, 501,
502, 663
- Marvell and Milton 365, 366,
381, 413, 447, 460, 477, 532,
632, 657
- matter and spirit, connection between, 492
- meiosis 409, 431, 482
- middle air, theory of, 674-76
- Milton, his sight, 430, 531, 629,
682, 683; person 461; hair
461; fondness of twilight 466; favourite classical authors 478,
577; humour 522; favourite season for composing 567; early rising 571, 576; London home in youth 575; austere life 631, 632; health 632
- monachism, allusion to, 469
- monarchy, Milton's dislike of, 641
- monosyllables, frequent use of, 416, 546
- Montalban 677, 678
- moon, supposed to be affected by magic 420; whether inhabited 442, 553, 554; theory as to spots
of, 492

- Muse, invocation of the, 368, 529
 music, Milton's love of, 391 music of the spheres 482, 500 musical terms, accurate use of, 548, 557, 633
- Nature, Milton's love of, 466, 576 night, Milton inspired at, 431, 564 nightingale, Milton's fondness of, 477 north regarded as the dominion of evil spirits 502, 503, 510
- omens or portents 559, 583, 620 opposition of planets 514 organ, Milton's favourite instrument 395, 632
 original sin 586
 oxymoron 372, 395, 406, 439, 462, 524, 582
- pagan mythology and Hebrew story, combination of, 402 pain, the fallen angels liable to, 515
 Paradise, position of, 454, 455, 638 paronomasia, see word-play participles, abbreviation of, 560 personal and contemporary allusions 503, 507, 508, 509, 512, 529, 531, 532, 564, 583, 589, 613, 621, 632, 635, 636, 638, 641, 655 personification, instances of, 474, 514, 526 philosophical and theological views 494
 Phoenix, legend of, 485, 486 planets, evil influence of, 514, 599 play on words, see word-play
 Pope, imitations of or resemblances to Milton, 371, 372, 385, 395, 399, 401, 426, 427, 442, 453, 466, 470, 474, 476, 477, 487, 495, 515, 528, 529, 538, 542, 544, 617, 618, 621, 622, 624, 629, 584
 portents, see omens precious stones, supposed origin of, 448 predestination, doctrine of, 435, 496 preposition, omission of, 410, 637
 Primum Mobile 440, 443, 445, 446, 553 proper names, enumeration of, 625, 676-80 proverbialisms 559, 591, 611
 Ptolemaic system 443, 465, 466, 549 ff., 688-90
 quibbles, see word-play
- reason, discursive or intuitive, 495, 496 republicanism 490, 546, 641 rivers of Hell 414
 Roman Catholic Church, Milton's attitude towards, 399, 441, 443, 444, 597, 598
- Sandys' Travels, Milton's obligations to, 383, 384, 646
 Satan and Prometheus 473
 Satan, character of Milton's, 667-71 scale of Nature, Milton's view of, 494-96 season, only one before the Fall, 459, 542, 607
sz-, avoidance of, in proper names 369, 383, 445
 Shakespeare, Milton's imitations of or resemblances to, 375, 377, 399, 404, 412, 427, 437, 463, 474, 477, 483, 493, 505, 514, 526, 543, 550, 559, 572, 576, 578, 581, 591, 605, 619, 623, 631, 636, 644, 658
 sibilant 398, 546, 580, 602
 Signatures, doctrine of, 629
 signs, see omens similes, peculiar features of Milton's, 411, 417, 440, 471 singular verb used with two subjects 374, 402 soliloquies, use of, in epic poetry, 511
 Spenser parallels 373, 378, 402, 418, 420, 422, 426, 439, 454,

- 476, 493, 497, 498, 499, 503,
504, 509, 515, 520, 522, 554,
561, 565, 574, 575, 586, 587,
635, 661, 666, 680, 681, 686,
687
- spiritual beings, their ability to distend or contract 386, 398, 473, 522
- Stoics, reference to, 377, 413, 414
- Sylvester's Du Bartas, illustrations from, 567, 600, 614, 643,
646, 647, 657, 676, 687
- Tasso, references to, 367, 379,
415, 420, 421, 465, 485, 528,
537, 625, 628, 657, 686
- temperate life, praises of a, 631, 632
- Tennyson, comments on or resemblances to Paradise Lost,
384, 393, 395, 396, 417, 423,
424, 462, 467, 471, 484, 486,
491, 504, 515, 518, 521, 526,
537, 542, 546, 559, 576, 617,
631, 632, 634, 685, 688
- theological views 494
- Thomson (Seasons) and Milton
367, 378, 430, 476, 480, 483,
485, 536, 543, 576, 589, 633,
637, 684, 686
- Time as the measure of motion 497, 498
- Tobit, Book of, 456, 484, 493,
517, 533
- transformed serpents 577, 602
- Trebizond, fame of, in Middle Ages, 678, 679
- tyranny, Milton's hatred of, 401, 463
- Universe, change in, after the Fall, 606
- Urania, Milton's name for the
Heavenly Muse, 686-88
- Vallombrosa 379, 380, 455
- verb used as noun 494, 571
- verbal repetition 466, 489, 531, 615
- verbs of saying, omission of, 475,
478
- visions, belief as to, 644, 656
- woman's position and relation to man, Milton's conception of,
461, 493, 560, 573, 584, 589,
613, 635
- word-play, quibbles, jingles, &c.
386, 394, 435, 463, 464, 488,
506, 512, 522, 523, 558, 563,
572, 581, 586, 592, 612, 614,
623, 635, 643, 652
- Wordsworth and Milton 478,
487, 499, 507, 515, 531, 532,
554, 561, 581, 620, 688
- zeugma 389, 556, 574

THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

DATE DUE

DEC 20 1988

BOUND

AUG 24 1950

3 9015 01148 1044

UNIV. OF MICH
LIB

DO NOT REMOVE OR MUTILATE CARD

